FROM ITS Foundation to the Present Time:

CONTAINING,

I. The original Constitution of London: The ancient and present State of its several Wards, Churches, Parishes, Liberties, and Districts: Accounts of all the Religious Foundations in London and its Suburbs, before the Reformation: The Names of all the Streets, Squares, Courts, Lanes, &c. within the City and Suburbs: With curious Calculations touching the Number of its Inhabitants; and Parallels between London and many of the most celebrated ancient and modern Cities; whereby it will appear that the Inhabitants of London, at present, are almost equal in Number to those of the Cities of Paris, Amsterdam, and Rome together, and superior in Number to any one City in the World.

II. Historical and particular Accounts of the City Governments, Ecclesiastical, Civil, and Military, in all their Branches: With the several Charters, rendered into English; wherein are set forth their many great and valuable Privileges, Immunities, and numerous Benefactions.

III. History of the several Incorporations of Merchants and Traders; shewing the Institutions of their respective Companies; with their ancient Rights, Privileges, and Coats of Arms.

IV. Description of the present State of Learning, and of the Colleges, Schools, Inns of Court, Common-Pleas, King's-Bench, Chancery, Exchequer, High Court of Parliament, &c.

V. Full and particular Accounts of all the Hospitals, Alms-houses, and other Charitable Foundations, within the City and the Parts adjacent.

VI. The ancient and present State of the Tower, and of the Curiosities therein contained; with a Description of the British Museum.

CHAP. I.

The Situation, Extent, Number of Houses, and Division into eight general Parts.

THE Reader in the first Volume of this Work is presented with the Annals of this antient, rich and powerful City: In which he may find a complete Collection of all its Charters and Privileges, granted, from Time to Time, by the Kings and Parliaments of this Nation, and of all the material publick Transactions relating to and performed by the Citizens, from the Foundation of the City to the present Time. I shall now proceed to the descriptive Part of this great Work; and, in the Plan or Survey of this Metropolis, lay before you the advantageous Situation thereof for Health, Commerce, &c. its Extent, Populousness, Division, Antiquities and present State.

VOL. II. NUMB. LXI.

London, the most populous and opulent City and Emporium upon Earth, the Metropolis of Great-Britain, and the Chamber of its Monarch, is delightfully situate upon a gentle and beautiful Eminence, on the Northern Bank of the noble and incomparable River Thames; in the Latitude of fifty-one Degrees and thirty-two Minutes, and Longitude of eighteen Degrees and thirty-thirty-six Minutes; at a Place where that River in the Vale is cast into a Crescen or Half-Moon; so that each Part may enjoy the Benefit thereof, and yet not be far distant from each other: About sixty Miles distant from the Sea, and therefore not in Danger of being surprized by the Fleets of foreign Enemies; nor is it annoyed by the moist Vapours of the Sea; yet it is near enough to have Ships of the greatest Burthen brought into its very Bosom, by the Help of the Tide, every twelve Hours. On the North Side it is very much sheltered from the cold Winds by Hampstead, Highbgate, and the rising Grounds of Islington; but lies open to the more kindly West.

Its Situation is pleasant, profitable and healthy.

See p. 109. It was formerly thought to contribute much to the Preservation of the healthy and good Air of the City, that nothing was burnt in it but Wood and Charcoal, even in Trades that used great Quantities of Firing: For this End also,

See p. 130. Provision was formerly made against Stinks and annoying Smells, arising from killing Beasts in the City; which was once thought to have occasioned a grievous Plague there, in the Reign of Edward III, who, to prevent the like Infection, sent his Command, about the Year 1361, to the Mayor and Sheriffs, to suffer no Butcher to kill his Cattle nearer the City than Stratford, or Knightsbridge. This is not observed now; nor indeed seems it necessary since the new Building of London; for the Streets, Lanes, &c. being wider, the Air is not so much pent up, nor consequently so liable to Infection, as before; besides, the Markets are now removed out of the Streets, made commodious, and have proper Methods taken to keep them clean: And being built on a Gravel and Loamy Soil, it not only contributes much to the Health of the Citizens, but likewise to the Strength of their Houses, by supporting the most ponderous Superstructures.

The pleasant, profitable, and healthful Situation of this City, in respect of the River, the rising Ground and, the Soil, (all so advantageous) is finely described by one of our Poets; where his Muse is brought in thus speaking upon the Sight of London:

Drayton's Polyalbion.

At thy great Builder's Wit,
Who is, but wonder may?
Nay, of his Wisdom thus Ensuing Times shall say;
O more than mortal Man,
That did this Town begin,
Whose Knowledge found the Place
So fit to set it in,
What God, or Heavenly Power,
Was harbour'd in thy Breast? &c.
Built on a rising Bank,
Within a Vale to stand;
And, for thy healthful Soil,
Chose Gravel mixt with Sand;
And where fair Thames his Course
Into a Crescent casts,
(That forced by his Tides,
As still by her he hastes,
He might his surging Waves Into her Bosom send)
Because too far in Length
His Town should not extend:

And to the North and South,
Upon an equal Reach,
Two Hills their even Banks
Do somewhat seem to stretch,
The two extremer Winds
From hurting it to let;
And only level lies,
Upon the Rise and Set.
Of all this goodly Isle,
Where breathes most chearful Air,
And every Way thereto
The Ways most smooth and fair;
As in the fittest Place,
By Man that could be thought,
To which by Land or Sea
Provision might be brought:
And such a Road for Ships
Scarce all the World commands,
As is the goodly Thames,
Near where Brute's City stands.

And yet this was written at a Time when the Buildings were composed of a Congestion of mishapen and extravagant wooden Houses, of Streets narrow and incommodious in the very Center and busiest Places of Intercourse, and when its bad and uneven Pavement made it dangerous to walk, and the Spouts and Gutters over Head made it impassable in a rainy Day. What would the Poet have added to the Encomium, or how would he have been able to find Words sufficient to sing the Praise of London, had he lived in these Days of its Exaltation, and continual Improvement, both as to Beauty and Extent, as well as to Trade and Navigation?

However, it must not be concealed what a certain Author of good Repute writes: "I will infer, that if this goodly City justly challenges what is her Due, and merits all that can be said to reinforce her Praises, and give her Title; she is to be relieved from that which renders her less healthy, really offends her, and which darkens and eclipses all her other Attributes. And what is all this, but that hellish and dismal Cloud of SEA-COALE? which is not onely perpetually imminent over her Head; for as the Poet,

Sir John
Evelyn's Fumifugium.

"Conditur in tenebris altum caligine Cælum;

"but so universally mixed with the otherwise wholesome and excellent Aer, that her Inhabitants breathe nothing but an impure and thick Mist, accompanied with a fuliginous and filthy Vapour, which renders them obnoxious to a thousand Inconveniences, corrupting the Lungs, and disordering the entire Habits of their Bodies; so that Catarrhs, Phthisicks, Coughs and Consumptions rage more in this one City, than in the whole Earth besides.

"I shall not here much descant upon the Nature of Smokes, and other Exhalations from Things burnt, which have obtain'd their severall Epithets according to the Quality of the Matter consumed, because they are generally accounted noxious and unwholesome; and I would not have it thought, that I do here Fumos vendere, as the Word is, or blot Paper with insignificant Remarks: It was yet
"haply

“haply no inept Derivation of that Critick, who “took our Engliſh, or rather Saxon, Appellative
 “from the Greek Word σπύχω corrumpo and exuro,
 “as moſt agreeable to its deſtructive Effects,
 “eſpecially of what we do here ſo much declaim “againſt; ſince it is certain, that of all the com“mon and familiar Materials which emit it, the “immoderate Uſe of, and Indulgence to Sea- “coale alone in the City of London, expoſes it to “one of the ſowleſt Inconveniencies and Re-“proches, that can poſſibly befall ſo noble, and, “otherwiſe, incomparable City: And that not
 “from the culinary Fires, which for being weak,
 “and leſſe often fed below, is with ſuch Eaſe “diſpell’d and ſcatter’d above, as it is hardly “at all diſcernible; but from ſome few par“ticular Tunnells and Iſſues, belonging only “to Brewers, Diers, Lime-burners, Salt and “Sope-boylers, and ſome other private Trades;
 “one of whoſe Spiracles alone does manifeſtly “infect the Aer more than all the Chimnies of “London put together beſides. And that this is “not the leaſt Hyperbolie, let the beſt Judges de“cide it, which I take to be our Senſes. Whilſt “theſe are belching it forth their footy Jaws, the “City of London reſembles the Face rather of “Mount Aetna, the Court of Vulcan, Stromboli, “or the Suburbs of Hell, than an Aſſembly of “rational Creatures, and the Imperial Seat of “our incomparable Monarch. For when in all “other Places the Aer is moſt ſerene and pure, it “is here eclips’d with ſuch a Cloud of Sul“phure, as the Sun itſelf, which gives Day to “all the World beſides, is hardly able to pene“trate and impart it here; and the weary “Traveller, at many Miles Diſtance, ſooner “ſmells, than ſees the City, to which he re“pairs. This is that pernicious Smoake which “ſullyes all her Glory, ſuperinducing a footy
 “Cruff or Furr upon all that it lights, ſpoyl“ing the Moveables, tarniſhing the Plate, Gild“ings and Furniture, and corroding the very “Iron Bars and hardeſt Stones with thoſe
 “piercing and acrimonious Spirits which accom“pany its Sulphure; and executing more in one “Year, than, expoſed to the pure Aer of the “Country, it could effect in ſome hundreds:

——— piceaque gravatum
Fædat nube diem.

“It is this horrid Smoake which obſcures
 “our Churches, and makes our Palaces look “old, which fouls our Clothes, and corrupts
 “the Waters; ſo as the very Rain, and refresh“ing Dews which fall in the ſeveral Seasons, “precipitate this impure Vapour, which, with “its black and tenacious Quality, ſpots and “contaminates whatſoever is expoſ’d to it:

——— Calidoque involvitur undique fumo.

“It is this which ſcatters and ſtrews about “theſe black and ſmuttery Atomes upon all Things “where it comes, inſinuating itſelf into our “very ſecret Cabinets, and moſt precious Repo- “sitories: Finally, it is this which diffuſes and “ſpreads a Yellowneſſe upon our choyceſt “Pictures and Hangings: Which does this “Miſchief at home; is avertus to Fowls, and “kills our Bees and Flowers abroad, ſuffering

“nothing in our Gardens to bud, diſplay them“ſelves, or ripen; ſo as our Anemonies, and “many other choyceſt Flowers, will by no In-“duſtry be made to blow in London, or the “Precincts of it, unleſſe they be raiſed on “a Hot-bed, and govern’d with extraordinary “Artifice to accelerate their Springing; im“parting a bitter, and ungrateful Taſte to thoſe “few wretched Fruits, which, never arriving to “their deſired Maturity, ſeem, like the Ap- “ples of Sodome, to fall even to Duſt, when “they are but touched. Not therefore to be “forgotten is that, which was by many ob“ſerv’d, that in the Year when New caſtle was “beſieg’d and blocked up in our late Wars, ſo
 “as, through the great Dearth and Scarcity “of Coales, thoſe fumous Works many of “them were either left off, or ſpent but few “Coales in Compariſon to what they now uſe; “divers Gardens and Orchards, planted even in “the very Heart of London, (as in particular
 “my Lord Marqueſſe of Hertford’s in the Strand, “my Lord Bridgewater’s, and ſome others about “Barbican) were obſerved to bear ſuch plentiful
 “and infinite Quantities of Fruits, as they ne“ver produced the like either before or ſince,
 “to their great Aſtoniſhment: But it was by “the Owners rightly imputed to the Penury of “Coales, and the little Smoake which they “took Notice to infect them that Year: For “there is a Virtue in the Aer to penetrate, “alter, nourish, yea, and to multiply Plants
 “and Fruits, without which no Vegetable could “poſſibly thrive: But as the Poet,

Aret ager: vitio moriens fitit æris herba:

“So it was not ill ſaid by Paracelſus, That of “all Things Aer only could be truly affirm’d “to have Life, ſeeing to all Things it gave “Life: Argument ſufficient to demonſtrate,
 “how prejudicial it is to the Bodies of Men;
 “for that can never be Aer fit for them to “breathe in, where nor Fruits, nor Flowers do “ripen, or come to a ſeaſonable Perfection.

“Newcaſtle-Cole, as an expert Physician affirms “cauſeth Conſumptions, Phthiſicks, and the Indiſ-“poſition of the Lungs, not only by the ſuffo-“cating Abundance of Smoake, but alſo by its “Virulency: For all ſubterrany Fuell hath a kind “of virulent or arſenical Vapour riſing from it;
 “which, as it ſpeedily deſtroys thoſe who dig
 “it in the Mines, ſo does it by little and little “theſe who uſe it here above them: Therefore “theſe Diſeaſes (ſaith this Doctor) moſt afflict
 “about London, where the very Iron is ſooner “conſum’d by the Smoake thereof, than where
 “this Fire is not uſed.

“This Coale, ſays Sir Kenelme Digby, flies “abroad, fowling the Clothes that are expoſ’d
 “a-drying upon the Hedges; and in the Spring“time beſoots all the Leaves, ſo as there is “nothing free from its univerſal Contamina“tion; and it is for this, that the Bleachers about “Harlem prohibit by an expreſs Law (as I am “told) the Uſe of theſe Coales, for ſome Miles
 “about Town; and how curious the Diers and “Weavers of Dammask and other precious “Silks are at Florence of the leaſt Ingreſſe of “any ſmoaky Vapour, whilſt their Looms are at “work, ciousneſs of “work, I shew upon some other Occasion.

 “But in the mean Time, being thus incorporated “with the very Aer, which ministers to the “necessary Respiration of our Lungs, the Inha- “bitants of London, and such as frequent it, find “it in all their Expektorations; the Spittle, and “other Excrements which proceed from them,
 “being for the most Part of a blackish and fu“liginous Colour: Besides, this acrimonious Soot “produces another sad Effect, by rendring the “People obnoxious to Inflammations, and “comes (in Time) to exulcerate the Lungs;
 “which is a Mischief so incurable, that it carries “away Multitudes by languishing and deep “Consumptions, as the Bills of Mortality do “weekly inform us: And these are those “Endemii Morbi, vernaculous and proper to “London. So corrosive is this Smoake about the “City, that, if one would hang up Gammons of “Bacon, Beefe, or other Flesh, to fume, and pre“pare it in the Chimnies, as the good House-Wives
 “do in the Country, where they make use of “sweeter Fuell, it will so mummifie, dry up, “waste and burn it, that it suddenly crumbles “away, consumes, and comes to nothing.

“The Consequences then of all this is, that “(as was said) almost one Half of them who “perish in London, dye of phthical and pulmo- “nic Distempers; that the Inhabitants are never “free from Coughs and importunate Rheumatisms, “spitting of impostumated and corrupt Matter:
 “For Remedy whereof, there is none so infalli“ble, as that, in Time, the Patient change his “Aer, and remove into the Country: Such as “repair to Paris (where it is excellent) and other “like Places, perfectly recovering of their Health; “which is a Demonstration sufficient to confirm “what we have asserted, concerning the Pernici“ousness of that about this City, produc’d
 “only from this exitial and intolerable Accident.

How to be remedied.

“The Remedy which I would propose, requires “only the Removal of such Trades as are manifest “Nuisances to the City, which I would have “placed at farther Distances; especially, such “as in their Works and Fournaces use great “Quantities of Sea-coale, the sole and only Cause
 “of those prodigious Clouds of Smoake, which “so universally and so fatally infect the Aer,
 “and would in no City of Europe be permit“ted, where Men had either respect to Health
 “or Ornament. Such we named to be Brewers, “Diers, Sope and Salt-boilers, Lime-burners, and “thelike: These I affirm, together with some few “others of the same Classe, removed at compe“tent Distance, would produce so considerable “(though but partial) a Cure, as Men would “even be found to breath a new Life as it were,
 “as well as London appear a new City, delivered “from that which alone renders it one of the “most pernicious and insupportable Abodes in
 “the World, as subjecting her Inhabitants to so “infamous an Aer, otherwise sweet and very “healthful: For (as we said) the culinary “Fires (and which Charking would greatly re“form) contribute little or nothing, in Com“parison to these foul-mouth’d Issues, and “Curles of Smoake, which (as the Poet has it)
 “do Cælum subtexere fumo, and draw a fable Cur“tain over Heaven. Let any Man observe it “upon a Sunday, or such Time as these Spira- “cles cease, that the Fires are generally extin“guished, and he shall sensibly conclude, by

 “the Clearness of the Skie, and universal Sere“nity of the Aer about it, that all the Chimnies
 “in London do not darken and poyson it so “much, as one or two of those Tunnels of “Smoake; and that because the most imper“ceptible Transpirations, which they send forth,
 “are ventilated, and dispersed with the least “Breath which is stirring: Whereas the Columns “Clouds of Smoake, which are belched forth
 “from the sooty Throates of those Works, are “so thick, and plentiful, that rushing out with “great Impetuosity, they are capable even
 “to resist the fiercest Winds, and, being ex“tremely furcharg’d with a fuliginous Body, “fall down upon the City, before they can be “dissipated, as the more thin and weak is; so as “two or three of these fumid Vortices are able “to whirle it about the whole City, rendring
 “it in a few Moments like the Picture of “Troy sacked by the Greeks, or the Approaches
 “of Mount Hecla.

“I propose therefore, that by an Act of this “present Parliament this infernal Nuisance be “reformed; enjoyning, that all those Works be “removed five or six Miles distant from London
 “below the River of Thames; I say, five or six “Miles, or at the least so far as to stand behind
 “that Promontory jutting out, and securing Green- “wich from the pestilent Aer of Plumstead “Marshes: Because, being placed at any lesser “Interval beneath the City, it would not only “prodigiously infect that his Majesty’s Royal “Seat, and (as Barclay calls it) pervetusta Regum “Britannicorum Domus; but during our nine “Months Etesians (for so we may justly name
 “our tedious Western Winds) utterly darken
 “and confound one of the most princely and “magnificent Prospects that the World has to “shew: Whereas, being seated behind that “Mountain, and which seems to have been “thus industriously elevated, no Winds,
 “or other Accident whatever, can force it “through that solid Obstacle: And I am per“swaded, that the Heat of these Works, mixing
 “with the too cold and uliginous Vapours
 “which perpetually ascend from these fenny “Grounds, might be a Means of rendring that “Aer far more healthy then now it is; because “it seems to stand in need of some powerful “Drier; but which London, by reason of its ex“cellent Scituation, does not at all require.”

This was written and presented by the Author to his Majesty in 1661, the Year after his Restoration; and if his Plan for Rebuilding the City after the Fire had been executed, Sir John had provided an effectual Means to relieve the Citizens from the Nuisance complained of, as may be seen on Page 449. But the Legislature not entering into the Merits of this Complaint, at the Rebuilding of the City, the Brewers,
 &c. not only have encreased the Quantity and Number of their Fires; but the Author of Scelera Aquarum, a noted Physician in 1701, informs us of another Evil brought by them upon this Metropolis from the contrary Elements.

“ It

“ It is most certain, That London is situated “ on a wicked Bottom of Earth, called Blue
 “ Clay : This Bottom, in many contiguous tho’ “ separated Beds, extends itself round the “ Metropolis, and Lines of Communication,
 “ some Miles in Circumference, and reacheth
 “ likewise downwards to an enormous Depth “ towards the Center. For the Boarings that “ have been frequently made by the Brewer in “ quest of the impregnated Water, [called “ Spring-Liquor] have been mostly attempted “ to thirty and forty Fathom Depth without “ Success.

“ The Interstices betwixt the clayey Strata “ generally consist of Gravel and Sand, and some“ times give leave to the Surface and Center “ Springs to meet one the other in their Circula“ tion through the Bowels of the Earth.

“ As all Sorts of Clay are found, by the Ex“ perience and Observations of Country-Farmers
 “ and Brewers, to abound with a Juice or “ Salt of an esurine acid Nature and Quality,
 “ which vitiates all the Fruits of the Earth, ex“ cept it be first sweetened and sheathed by “ Chalk, both crude, and calcined into Lime;
 “ so this blue Kind of Glebe, being more “ scelerous and corrosive than all the other,
 “ maleficates equally Air and Water, and ren“ ders all the stagnate Waters of the Neighbour“ hood esurine to a very high Degree.

“ And here it is, that the Bounty of Nature “ hath made itself remarkable to the Eye, in “ burying this Bottom of Clay near twenty “ Feet in Depth under Ground, and besides “ covering it over and over with repeated “ Strata of different kinds of Moulds, towards “ the gravelly Surface of the Earth, lest the “ Atmosphere should be invaded, and the “ ambient Air we aspire should be thereby “ exasperated, and rendered catarrhus, through
 “ the corrosive Effluvia sent up from below.
 “ So that ’till about one hundred and fifty Years “ ago, that an endless Number of Perforations “ began to be made by the common Brewer
 “ into the subterranean World, the City “ enjoyed its native State of Health, and was “ entirely free from Coughs, and Catarrhs, Pe“ riodical Fevers, vulgarly called Agues, and, in “ a Word, from all the symptomatical Branches
 “ of the Scorbute hitherto enumerated.

“ And here it may be observed by the bye,
 “ that the acrid Effluvia sent up from the “ clayey Bottom, by reason of their volatile “ Nature, do little Harm in the Summer Sea“ son. But during the Rigor of Winter, whilst “ they are weighed down and reverberated “ back towards the Basis of the Atmosphere by “ the Fogs and Frosts, then I may say it is, and “ not till then, that they begin to bite even Per“ sons adult, but more especially the unseasoned “ Bodies of Children and Foreigners.

“ In short, the Scelus Aquæ & Locæ, here insited
 “ on, slept for a long Succession of Ages, out “ of Harms Way, in the Bowels of the subterra“ nean World. And besides the corrosive Wa“ ters were not employed either in Bread, or “ potable Liquors, extracted forth of Malt :
 “ And as I may add, they were only made “ use of for clearing of the Sight, and for eat“ ing away the Kells and Cataracts off of dim “ Eyes.

“ But about the Accession of Queen Elizabeth
 “ to the Crown, (as I am well informed) Clay-“ Waters began to grow into Credit with such as “ brewed and baked for Sale, as a most powerful “ Menstruum for extracting the Tincture out
 “ of Malt : And at that Period of Time it “ was, that the Waters of DATC were carted
 “ from Hogsdon to the several Brew-Houses in “ the Metropolis, at eight hundred Pounds per “ Annum Expence. And at the same Time a “ World of Wells were made, and Pumps “ erected in every Corner of City and Suburbs.

“ In a Word, the Scelus Aquæ & Locæ now “ spoken of, that is to say, the acrid Nature
 “ and esurine Quality of the stagnate Waters
 “ in and about this City is sufficiently evinced
 “ a posteriori from the ill-natured Effects thereof
 “ in all domestick Uses : First, In ditching
 “ and chapping of the Hands and Face; 2dly,
 “ From coagulating of Alcalous Fluids, both “ Soap and Barm; 3dly, From hardening of “ Peas, and reddening of Bacon, and all Flesh-“ Meats, if boiled therein; which the Lord
 “ Bacon enumerates amongst ill Signs and Dia-“ gnosticks of Infalubrity; 4thly, From the kill“ ing of Flowers, and destroying all manner “ of Garden-Stuff, unless the acid Salt be first “ evaporated by open Airings and Insolation,
 “ on the Surface of the Earth, as was practised
 “ by the Antients, and is likewise put in practice
 “ by Gardeners to this Day.

“ I had almost forgot to add here, that the “ prodigious Bottom of Clay now spoken of “ extends itself from the Metropolis, all along “ the Banks of the River Thames, into the “ Marshes and Flats of Essex, which vitiates “ both Air and Water in the Hundreds to a “ very high Degree; whereby the Foundation “ hath been laid of such chronical Fevers and “ scorbutick Agues, as incessantly reign in the “ Districts of Dench and Rocheport. In a Word,
 “ the Thames is also vitiated by Dyers, &c. So “ that no Water is fit for Bread, save the New “ River.”

London is not more happily situate in respect to Health and Commerce, than it is for many other great Advantages; a few of which I shall just mention.

Other Advantages.

For the Convenience of Building, we have Plenty of divers Sorts of Materials at hand, having seen in several Parts of the Suburbs (where new Buildings were lately erected) Clay dug up, made into Bricks, and built into Houses, upon the Spot from whence they were taken : With which Matter the neighbouring Fields not only plentifully abound, but likewise with Abundance of choice Gravel, which not only serves to make our beautiful Terras-Walks in Gardens, but also to repair the Highways; which is of infinite Advantage to the Commerce of this vast City. Besides, in the Neighbourhood there’s great Plenty of Chalk, which abundantly supplies London and the vicinal Parts with Mortar, Whiting, and rich Manure; but Wood and Stones being scarce, those Defects are amply supplied by Water-Carriage. And for Firing, it probably surpasses all other great Cities upon Earth for Plenty; for a private Family can, for about the Charge of seven Pounds, supply itself with Fuel sufficient to keep two good Fires in Winter, and that of the Kitchen in Summer, notwithstanding the great Duty upon Pit-Coals: Whereas the Inhabitants of most other great Cities abroad cannot keep such Fires for quadruple the Sum; wherefore many of their Poor in a rigorous Season perish for Want of that great Necessary of Life. And as for Water, the secondary Cause of all Things, 'tis allowed by the best Judges, that it far exceeds all other Cities; for so it abounds with that precious Element, that there's scarce a House, which has it not brought into it by leaden Pipes.

Other great Advantages, accruing to the Citizens in Point of Situation, are the Plenty and Variety of Mineral Waters, wherewith the Neighbourhood of the City abounds; the great Store of Fish continually produced by the genial River Thames; the prodigious Quantity of Garden-stuff, furnished by the adjacent Gardens; and vast Loads of Grass, wherewith the neighbouring Fields are burdened: For this great City is incircled with an infinite Number of fine Kitchen-Gardens, delightful Plains, and beautiful Elevations, covered with a perpetual Verdure, which form an agreeable Variety of pleasant and beautiful Objects, enriched with an incredible Number of great and stately Villages, adorned with the magnificent Country-Houses of the Citizens; several of which Villages separately taken (to my own Knowledge) excel the Capital Cities of three or four sovereign Princes abroad put together, both in Number of Houses and Inhabitants: Two of which (exclusive of many others from three to near six hundred Houses) I shall only mention, viz. Deptford and Greenwich; the former containing eighteen hundred and twenty Houses, and the latter thirteen hundred and forty-one: All Things considered, it may justly be said, that this Spot seems, as if pointed out by the All-wise Author of Nature, as a Scite worthy of so great and incomparable a City, and its antient Name of Augusta; and to take it in its present Extent, this antient City has ingulphed one City, one Borough, and forty-three Villages, viz. the City of Westminster, the Borough of Southwark, and the Villages of Mora, Finbury, Wenlaxbarn, Clerkenwell, Islington, Hoxton, Shoreditch, Nortonfalgate, the Spital, White-chapel, Mile-End New-Town, Mile-End Old-Town, Stepney, Poplar, Limehouse, Ratcliff, Shadwell, Wapping, Stepney, East Smithfield, the Hermitage, St. Catharine's, the Minories, St. Clements-Danes, the Strand, Charing-cross, St. James's, Knights-Bridge, Soho, St. Giles's in the Fields, Bloomsbury, Portpool, Saffron-Hill, Holborn, Vaux-Hall, Lambeth, Lambeth-Marsh, Kennington, Newington-Buts, Bermondsey, the Grange, Horsleydown and Rotherhithe.

On the twenty-second of May, Anno 1732, I measured the Length and Breadth of this City and Suburbs in three different Parts by a Perambulator; when I found its Length from the upper End of Knights-Bridge in the West, to Robin-Hood-Lane, at the lower End of Poplar, in the East, to be seven Miles, four Furlongs, and thirty-two Poles, or seven Miles and a Half and one hundred and seventy-six Yards;

viz. from the West End of Knights-Bridge to Clarges-Street in Hyde-Park Road, one Mile; to three Doors West of James-Street, Long-Acre, one Mile; to the North East Corner at Holborn-Bridge, one Mile; to two Doors West of Leadenball-Gate in Leadenball-Street, one Mile; to a Stile in Stepney Fields, South of White-Chapel Mount, one Mile; to the Blue Anchor, East of Stepney Church, one Mile; to two Doors East of the Horse at Poplar, one Mile; and thence to the End of Robin-Hood-Lane, four Furlongs and thirty-two Poles.

And from thence coasting as near the River Thames as I could Westward, the City and Suburbs measured from Robin-Hood-Lane to Peterborough-House, at the South End of Mill-Bank-Row, above the Horse-Ferry at Westminster, six Miles, seven Furlongs, and twenty-four Poles, or six Miles and three Quarters, and three hundred and fifty-two Yards; viz. from Robin-Hood-Lane, to two Doors East of Lime-House Corner, one Mile; to Griffin-Street in Lower Shadwell, one Mile; to two Doors East of the Hermitage-Bridge, one Mile; to three Doors East of St. Laurence Pultney-Lane, in Canon-Street, one Mile; to Ram-Ally, opposite Fetter-Lane in Fleet-Street, one Mile; to three Doors North of the Admiralty-Office at Whitehall, one Mile; and from thence to Peterborough-House afore said, seven Furlongs and twenty-four Poles.

And in Breadth, from the upper End of Camberwell Road in Newington-Buts, to the North End of Jeffrey's Alms-houses in Kingsland Road, three Miles and thirty-one Poles, or three Miles and one hundred and seventy Yards and a Half; viz. from the upper End of the said Camberwell Road, to four Doors South of the White-Hart Inn in the Borough of Southwark, one Mile; to two Doors South of Devonshire-Street, without Bishopsgate, one Mile; to No 5. in Harwarr's Alms-Houses in Kingsland Road, one Mile; and from thence to the North End of the said Jeffrey's Alms-Houses, thirty-one Poles.

In measuring the Lengths and Breadths of the City and Suburbs, I took special Care to have the Wheel carried in divers Places, where I could not pass straight along, to prevent any Addition from being made either to the Length or Breadth thereof, by Northing or Southing, Easting or Westing.

The Number of Houses in this great Metropolis has been as wildly and falsely represented, as perhaps that of any other City whatsoever: A few Instances of which I shall, for the Information of the Reader, insert in this Place.

Sir William Petty, by a Certificate said to be received from the Hearth-Office, about the Year 1685, makes the Number of Houses then within the Bill of Mortality to amount to 105,315. And the Author of The New View of London, published Anno 1708, computes them at 106,888. Both Present States of Great-Britain have, for many Years, reckoned them at 120,000. But the Author of that called Chamberlain's, outstripping all the rest, has inconsiderately run them up to 150,000. And by a Book lately published, which from its Title of New Remarks, or a Survey of the Cities of London and Westminster, by the Company of Parish-Clerks, Present Extent of Buildings.

An actual Survey of its Length in 1732.

Clerks, the Publick might reasonably have expected an accurate Account thereof; but, instead of that, it contains the Reverse; for in some Parishes about double the Number of Houses is reckoned, and in others not a third of what they contain; and in divers none are accounted for. However, a late Plagiary and pretended Surveyor of London has glutted himself therewith, to the no small Imposition on his Reader.

But what is still more surprizing, is, that the Account of the Number of Houses taken by the Beadles of the several Wards of this City in the Year 1725, preparatory to a Petition to be presented to Parliament for regulating the Elections of the City Magistrates, Members of Parliament, &c. is not a little defective in several of the great Wards: I shall only instance that of Bishopsgate without, which wants two hundred and seventy Houses of its genuine Number, which I discovered upon comparing that Account with the Parish-Books of St. Botolph Bishopsgate, which contains all Parts of the Ward without.

In Consideration of the Premises, I shall, for the Information of the Reader, present him with a double Account of the Number of Houses within the Bill of Mortality. The first of which, amounting to eighty-five thousand eight hundred and five, is the Number total of the several Accounts of Houses mentioned in the respective Parishes, &c. in this Book, which I carefully took myself from the Books of all the said Parishes, Precincts and Liberties within the City of London and Bill of Mortality, except the Parishes of St. Bride, and St. George, Ratcliff-highway, which I received from the Vestry-Clerks of those Parishes.

And in the last Account, which is an actual Survey, made in the Years 1725 and 1726, are not only contained the Names and Numbers of all the Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c. that were in this City and Suburbs at that Time; but the Names of those since erected are added; to which is subjoined the Number of Houses therein contained; whereby the Survey is brought down to the first of February, Anno 1737. By which the Cities of London and Westminster, Borough of Southwark, and Parts contiguous, are divided into eight distinct Parts.

Division of the Bill of Mortality into eight Parts.

First.

The First Division contains all the Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c. within the Wall of the City, including the Tower and Bridge of London; wherein are contained the following Numbers of Houses, Brewhouses, Inns, Taverns, Coffeehouses, Bakers, Butchers, Cheefemongers, Fishmongers, Poulterers, Alehouses, Herbsfalls and Brandyshops.

The

The above-mentioned Survey contains not only an Account of all the Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c. within the Bill of Mortality, but likewise the Number of Houses, Brewhouses, Inns, Taverns, &c. in each of the said Streets, &c. respectively: But, considering that the inserting them particularly would greatly swell the present Work, I shall, for the Ease of the Reader, (notwithstanding the incredible Pains I was at for above the Space of eleven Months in taking the said Accounts) content myself with inserting only the Names of the said Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c.

But, before I proceed, I think 'twill be necessary to acquaint the Reader, that the great Difference in the Names and Numbers of the Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c. in the following Account, from those published by others, is owing to the obsolete Names in theirs, and the Want of Pains in taking the same; whereas my Account contains the several Appellations they went by (in 1732) when I made the Survey; and the Increase of Number is the Effect of an unwearied Application when I took the same. And it is observable, that the Names of many of the inferior Places, viz. Alleys, Rents, Yards, &c. are in a continual Fluctuation; for many of them change their Names as often as they do their Owners, or the Signs that hang in the Streets before them; and sometimes by the Death or Removal of the principal Inhabitants, who have, and still do give Denomination to many such Places of small Note, during their Residence therein; insomuch that, if an annual Account of the Names of such Places were to be taken, there would appear a great Alteration in so short a Time, especially if we consider that many of the said small Places go by divers Names at the same Time.

An Account of all the Alleys, Banks, Bridges, Buildings, Buries, Clofes, Corners, Courts, Ditches, Docks, Entries, Gardens, Greens, Grounds, Mewses, Passages, Rents, Roads, Rows, Squares, Streets, Yards, &c. within the City of London, and Suburbs thereof, alphabetically digested.

N. B. As I have divided the City and Suburbs into the Eight Divisions above-mentioned, I have added their proper Numbers to the several Alleys, &c. to shew the Parts of the Town wherein they lie.

The Sum Total of all the Streets, Squares, Lanes, &c. above specified; together with the Numbers Total of all the Brew-houses, Inns, Taverns, Coffee-houses, Bakers, Butchers, Cheesemongers, Fishmongers, Poulterers, Alehouses, Herbstalls and Brandyshops therein contained.

The Number of Houses within the City of London and Bill of Mortality appearing in this Account to be Ninety-five thousand Nine hundred and Sixty-eight, I am fully persuaded, that after the strictest Inquiry, they will not be found to amount to more, notwithstanding the numerous conjectural Accounts to the contrary.

Wine-Office Acc. Besides the Free Vintners of this City, which are included in the above-mentioned Number of Taverns, there were in the Year 1728 Eleven hundred and Forty-eight other Houses within the Bill of Mortality that sold Wine by Retail, as appear'd by the Account of Wine Licences then extant, which I receiv'd, by Order of the Honourable Board of Commissioners of the Wine Licences, from their Secretary Mr. Nicol.

After so positive a Declaration as the above-mention'd, of my having taken the Number of Houses in each Parish, Precinct and Liberty (exclusive of Two) from their respective Books, the Reader may justly be surpriz'd, by my Survey, to find, that they are increas'd to a much greater Number than the said Books contain; 'twill therefore be necessary to acquaint him, that many Landlords of small Places, paying all Taxes for the same, they are in the Publick Books only reckon'd as so many single Houses, though each of them contains divers.

Beadles Report. And that the Ninety-five thousand Nine hundred and Sixty-eight Houses aforesaid is the full Number within the Bill of Mortality, I think is in a great measure corroborated by the Reports of the Beadles of the Number of Houses taken by them in the several Wards of this City in the Year 1725, when they amounted to Nineteen thousand One hundred and Forty-eight: But that Account not being so carefully taken as it ought, the Numbers defective in several of the great Wards amount to Four hundred and One Houses. And as the Liberties of the Tower of London, St. James's Duke's Place, St. Anne's Blackfriars, St. Bartholomew's the Great, St. Bartholomew's the Less, St. Martin's le Grand, Whitefriars and Bridewell Precinct have no Suffrage in the City Elections, (Blackfriars being since taken into the Freedom) they are precluded the Beadles Lifts, but as they are all within the City and Liberty thereof, they must not be excluded this Account; therefore their several Numbers of Houses making Sixteen hundred and Ninety-six, and that of the defective Number of Four hundred and One in the Wards aforesaid, being added to the Beadles Account, the Number Total of all the Houses within the City and Liberty of London will then appear to be Twenty-one thousand Two hundred and Forty-five; (that which has increas'd the Number of Houses within the City and Liberty of London in the Sum Total of the Parishes to Twenty-four thousand Two hundred and Sixty, is owing to my having added East-Smithfield Liberty, St. Catherine's, &c. as having formerly belong'd to the Ward of Portsoken) which, by the Bill of Mortality, appears to be much above a Fifth Part of the City and Suburbs: This of itself is sufficient to demonstrate, that the Number of Houses within the Bill of Mortality cannot be greater than as above specified.

Having discover'd the Number of Houses in this great City and Suburbs; I shall now attempt, not only to shew their constructive Value, but likewise the annual Amount of their Rents.

The Number of Houses within the Bill of Mortality, at present insur'd in the Hand in Hand Fire Office, amounting to 42676, the same are insur'd at 9,231,400*l.* and the Number within the said District, in the Westminster Fire Office, being 7852, they are insur'd at 2,059,121*l.* which makes the Number of Houses 50528, and the Sum insur'd thereon 11,290,521*l.* I endeavour'd to obtain Accounts from the other Fire Offices, but not succeeding, I shall, by the Help of the above, attempt to shew the constructive Value of all the Houses within the Bill of Mortality.

But first, 'twill be necessary to acquaint the Reader, that the several Fire Offices, to prevent their being impos'd upon, insure (at most) only Three Fourths of the Value of each House; which Fourth Part uninsur'd being added to the aforesaid Sum, 'twill increase the same to 15,054,028*l.* which is the constructive Value of all the said Houses. But as the Number Total of all the Houses within the Bill of Mortality amount to Ninety-five thousand Nine hundred and Sixty-eight; the Value of the said Houses, according to the aforesaid Method of Calculation, must amount to the Sum of Twenty-eight millions, Five hundred and Ninety-two thousand, Four hundred and Sixty-three Pounds, Sixteen Shillings and Ten Pence Half-penny.

And, in order to come at the Amount of the Rents of the said Houses, I shall compare a certain Number thereof in the chief Parts of the City, where the Rents are highest, with a like Number in the meanest Parts of the Suburbs, where the Rents are lowest; which is in the Liberty of East Smithfield, in the Parish of St. Botolph Aldgate. But that Liberty containing Fourteen hundred and Thirty Houses, I shall only insert such a Part thereof, as shall answer to the Number of Houses in the subjoin'd Wards: Which I shall deduct after this Manner:

The Number of Houses in East Smithfield Liberty, as already hinted, being 1430, and the Rents thereof 6337*l.* 7*s.* 10*d.* per Ann. which, at a Medium, is Four Pounds Eight Shillings and Seven-pence Half-penny each; therefore the Rents of 1155 of the said Houses must amount to 5118*l.* 1*s.* 10½*d.* by the Year; which being added

Their annual Rents.
Rec. Hand Office.
Rec. West. Office.

added to the Sum Total of the Rents of the said Wards, and the Aggregate thereof divided, it will appear, that the Rent of each House within the Bill of Mortality, upon a Medium, amounts to 26 l. 2 s. 11 d. per Annum.

	Houses.	Rents.
Cheap Ward — — —	362	17286	0	00
Cornhill Ward — — —	247	13912	0	00
Langbourn Ward — — —	546	24081	0	00
Part of East Smithfield Li- berty — — — }	1155	5118	1	10½
Sum Total — — —	2310	60397	1	10½
Rent of each House, at a Medium, per Annum }		26	2	11

As by this Table it appears, that the Rents of the Houses within this City and Suburbs, at a Medium, amount to the yearly Rent of 26 l. 2 s. 11 d. each; therefore, as the Number of Houses within the Bill of Mortality is Ninety-five thousand Nine hundred and Sixty-eight, the Rents of the Whole must be Two millions, Five hundred and Nine thousand, One hundred and Sixty Pounds Three Shillings and Seven Pence per Annum. But as the Rents have of late fallen in several Parts of the said Wards, I shall fix the Medium of the annual Rents of Houses in this City and Suburbs at Twenty Pounds each; whereby the Sum Total will appear to be One million Nine hundred and Nineteen thousand Three hundred and Eighty Pounds per Annum; which, I am of Opinion, is the lowest they can justly be put at.

CHAP. III.

Divers Accounts of the Bills of Mortality, shewing the great Increase of the City, with the Number of its Inhabitants.

AS I flatter myself, that I have, in the preceding Chapter, discover'd the Number of Houses in this great City and Suburbs, to the Satisfaction of the Reader; I shall now, by a Method entirely new, endeavour to find out the Number of their Inhabitants; both of which hitherto have been as wildly and falsely represented, as perhaps those of any other City whatsoever, and that by Men who ought to have known better.

Fitzsteph.
Descript.
nobil. Ci-
vit. Lond.

The First Mention I find of the Number of the Inhabitants of this Metropolis, is, by William Fitz-Stephens, a romantick Monk, who acquaints us, That the City of London, at a great Muster, in the Reign of King Stephen, sent into the Field, of her own Citizens, Sixty thousand Foot and Twenty thousand Horse. According to this Account, there must then have been in this City about treble the Number of Persons there were in it in the Year 1631, (as I shall hereafter make appear); whereas it may be justly question'd, whether the Number of Men, Women and Children in London, at that time, amounted to Fifty thousand.

A modern Author of the same Stamp, with equal Veracity, acquaints us, That in the Year 1636, (mistaken for 1631) King Charles the First commanded the Lord-Mayor to return to him the Number of Papists (likewise a Mistake, as I shall presently evince) and Strangers, then in the City and Liberty of London: Whereupon the Lord-Mayor took the Opportunity of numbering the People; at which Time he found the Inhabitants within the Jurisdiction, or Bars of the City, to amount to above Seven hundred thousand Souls: To which having added those in the Out-parts, according to his own ridiculous Imagination, he reckons the Whole at Fifteen hundred thousand Souls! which is about quadruple the Number calculated by an ingenious and judicious Author, in the same Year 1653.

Howell's
Londinop.

The Method I have chosen to make use of, in giving an Account of the present Number of the Inhabitants of this vast City, is, by the Bills of Mortality, and the Number of Inhabitants taken in the Year 1631; and by placing the former in vicenary Accounts, with their Totals and proper Mediums, intend to shew the gradual Increase of the City, since the Beginning of the Seventeenth Century; but more especially, from the Year 1636, when the last of the Out-Parishes in the Counties of Middlesex and Surrey were taken into the said Bills.

find the Number of Inhabitants.

But as neither the Parish Clerks Account, or that published by Mr. Graunt, take any notice of the First Bill of Mortality publish'd in this City, for the Year 1562, nor of those for the Years 1593, and 1603, I shall supply those Defects from the great and valuable Library of Sir Hans Sloane, Baronet.

In the Year 1562, a grievous Pestilence raged in this City; therefore, in order to know the Increase and Decrease of the same, 'twas judg'd necessary to take an Account of the Number of Burials; which being the First of the Kind that ever was taken in London, it commenc'd on the first of January, Anno 1562, and ended the last of December 1563; whereby it appears that the Number Total buried within the City and Suburbs in that Year, amounted to 23,630, whereof of the Plague 20,136.

Ex Bibl.
Sir Hans Sloane.

By the Bill of Mortality, beginning the 21st of December, Anno 1592, and ending the 22d of December 1593, there died 25,886, whereof of the Plague 15,003.

Ibid.

And by the Bill of Mortality, which commenc'd the 17th of December, Anno 1602, and ended December 1603, there died 42,042, whereof of the Plague 36,269.

Ibid.

Before I proceed, I shall, by way of Introduction, insert a short Extract from the Register belonging to the Company of Parish Clerks, which gives an Account of the Rise, Growth and Progress of the Bill of Mortality, shewing its several Gradations before it attain'd to its present State.

"The Weekly Bills of Mortality took their Original and Commencement the one and twentieth Day of December, Anno 1592, being a Year in Part of which was a very great Pestilence, which continued until the Eighteenth Day of December 1595; in which Year the Plague cea“sing, they were discontinued, and laid aside as “useless, until the One and Twentieth of De- “cember, Anno 1603; and although a particular “or weekly Accompt was then taken, yet the “same was not made publick, but a general or “whole Year’s Accompt thereof given as follow“eth.

“A brief Report of all the Christenings and “Burials within the City of London and Liberties “thereof, for one whole Year past, that is to say,
“from Thursday at Noon the One and Twentieth “of December 1592, unto the Twentieth Day of “December, Anno 1593, have been buried in all, “Seventeen thousand Eight hundred and Forty-“four, whereof have died of the Plague Ten “thousand Six hundred and Sixty-two. Chri“sten’d this Year, Four thousand and Twenty-“one. Parishes clear of the Plague, None.

“In the Year 1594, the particular or weekly “Accompt of Christenings and Burials was first “made publick, as also the general or yearly “Accompt until the aforesaid Year 1595, in “which they were discontinu’d as aforesaid; but “here note, that the Bill of Mortality, now in its “Infancy, consisted but of One hundred and “Nine Parishes, which Parishes were then only “alphabetically set down, without making any “Distinction of any of the Out-Parishes from “those within the Walls; whereas it now com“prehends One hundred and Thirty-two Pa“rishes, and distinguishes them by the Four Di“visions of the Ninety-seven, Sixteen, Fourteen “and Five Parishes, as by the present Bills may “appear.

“The Parishes that were then exempted were “these, viz. in the Ninety-seven Parishes, wanted
“St. James’s Duke’s Place; in the Sixteen Parishes, “wanted St. Bartholomew the Great, Bridewell “Precinct, and Trinity in the Minories; which “Four (I conceive) being all Precincts, came “not into the Bill. The now Fourteen and Five “were then wholly exempt.

“Now to let you know by what Degrees the “Bills came to what they now are, note, that in “the Year 1604 were added to the Hundred and “Nine Parishes these under-named; to the Thir“teen, the Three said to be wanting, making up “their Number Sixteen, and these Eight, name“ly, St. Clement’s Danes, St. Giles’s in the Fields, “St. James’s Clerkenwell, St. Katharine Tower, St.
“Leonard Shoreditch, St. Mary Whitechapel, St.
“Mary Magdalen Bermondsey, and St. Martin’s in

“In the Year 1606 was added to these Eight
“the Parish of St. Mary Savoy; and in the Year “1647 to them was likewise added St. Paul’s “Covent Garden, making up the Number of the “Ten Out-Parishes.

“The Bills having now gained Reputation,
“the Company obtain’d a Decree or Act, under “the Seal of the High Commission Court or Star

“their Hall, for printing the Weekly and Gene“ral Bills within the City of London and Liberties “thereof, and the Nine Out-Parishes, bearing

“den should each of them have the keeping of a “Key to the Press-Room Door, and that from “thenceforth the weekly Reports of Christenings
“within the Limits aforesaid should be printed
“with the Number of Burials against every Pa“rish, which till that Time was not done.

“In the Year 1626, the Parish or Precinct of “St. James’s Duke’s Place was added to the Nine“ty-six, now Ninety-seven, Parishes within the “Walls; all which Parishes, ever since their se“veral Additions, and the other ever since the “Year of our Lord 1604, brought to the Com“pany of Parish Clerks, not only an Accompt of “all the Christenings and Burials, but also an “Accompt of all the Diseases and Casualties, al“though no such Accompt was publish’d to the “World till the Year of our Lord 1629; in “which Year two Sorts of Bills were printed, one “Sort with the Diseases and Casualties on the “Backside, and the other without. In which “Year also was added the City of Westminster, “which brought in only the Number of the “Christenings, Burials and Plague, without ta“king notice of, or specifying, any of the Dis“eases or Casualties.

“And in the Year 1636, the Parishes of Hack- “ney, Islington, Lambeth, Newington, Rotherhithe
“and Stepney were added, which likewise brought “in the Reports of the Christenings, Burials and “Plague in Manner and Form as the City of “Westminster before is said to do, so that now the “Bill consisted (by the aforesaid several Additi“ons) of One hundred and Thirty Parishes.

“In the Year 1660, the Bills were new mo“delled, and an Accompt of the several Diseases
“and Casualties in the whole Hundred and Thir“ty Parishes was brought in, and the then “Twelve Parishes lying in Middlesex and Surrey
“were made a Division in the aforesaid Bill by “themselves, and the Five Parishes within the “City and Liberty of Westminster were made a “Division by themselves, whereas before they “were intermix’d with each other.

“In the Year 1670, the Parish of St. Paul’s “Shadwell (heretofore Part of the Parish of Step- “ney, and a Chapel of Ease to the same) as also “in the Year 1671, the Parish of Christ-Church
“in Surrey, heretofore Part of the Parish of St.
“Saviour’s Southwark, (both of which were made “Parochial by Act of Parliament) were added to “the Twelve Out-Parishes in Middlesex and Sur- “rey, which makes up the Number of the Pa“rishes One hundred and Thirty-two, as in the “present Bills of the Year 1681.”

On the Fourteenth of July, Anno 1685, the Bill Mort.
Parish of St. James’s Westminster was taken into the Bill, as was also that of St. Anne’s Westminster on the Sixth of April 1686, and likewise that of St. John at Wapping on the Seventeenth of April 1694.

On the Twenty-eighth of June 1726, St. Mary Ibid.
le Strand was brought into the Bill of Mortality, as was also that of St. George Hanover Square on the seventh of October 1729, and likewise that of St. Peter ad Vincula in the Tower of London on the sixteenth of December following, together with the Parishes of Christ-Church Spitalfields, St. George Ratcliff.

Ratcliff-Highway, and St. George the Martyr in Queen's Square: But a Contest arising between the Inhabitants of the Tower Liberty without and those within the Tower, whether the Church of St. Peter ad Vincula was Parochial or not, the Merits thereof were try'd in the Court of King's-Bench at Westminster in the Year 1730, when it was determin'd in the Negative, which occasion'd its being left out of the Bill of Mortality soon after.

On the twenty-second of September, Anno 1730, the Parish of St. Anne's Limehouse was added to the aforesaid Bill, as on the thirteenth of April and third of August in the Year 1731 were those of St. George Bloomsbury and St. John the Evangelist at Westminster, as were likewise the Parishes of St. John in Southwark and St. Luke in Old-street on the twenty-first of August and twenty-seventh of November 1733, and of St. Matthew, Bethnal-Green, in 1744; which makes the present Number of Parishes in the Bill of Mortality amount to one hundred and forty-six.

The above-mention'd Register belonging to the Company of Parish Clerks, commencing only in the Year 1664, the first Part thereof being lost, the Company are of Opinion, that the same was lent to Mr. Graunt, to enable him to write his Natural and Political Observations, but by some Accident never return'd. Besides, by the unpardonable Omissions of the Company's Clerk, there's a Chasm in the third Volume of their Register, from the second of November, Anno 1698, to the sixteenth of December 1701; both of which Defects I supply'd from the said Graunt's Natural and Political Observations, and the Bills of Mortality in the Library of the above-nam'd Sir Hans Sloane, as I likewise did from the said Bills supply the defective Accounts of Christenings in the Years 1664 and 1665.

In this Place 'twill be necessary to acquaint the Reader, that the two weekly Bills of Mortality above-mention'd did not long subsist; for that which contained the Diseases and Casualties being laid down about the Year 1660, both Accounts were printed in one Bill. However, the said Bills in Writings and Discourse are still made to subsist, by ignorantly reckoning the yearly Bill for one, whereas 'tis only a Recapitulation of the weekly. This Mistake may in some measure be owing to the several Acts of Parliament relating to the City and Suburbs, wherein the Plural is erroneously used instead of the Singular, viz. Bills, in place of Bill of Mortality.

The following Accounts of the Numbers total of the Christenings and Burials, as specified in all the Bills of Mortality hitherto published (exclufive of those above-mention'd) I have digested into Vicenary Accounts, with their Totals and proper Mediums: The Reader, by comparing the last of which, will at once perceive (allowing for the Plague) the gradual Increase of the Number of Inhabitants within the Bill of Mortality during the Time therein contained.

And for the Reader's greater Ease, 'twill be necessary to acquaint him, That the first Column of the three first Vicenary Accounts contains the Years; the second, third and fourth, the Numbers of Burials in the Ninety-seven Parishes within the Wall of the City, the Sixteen in the Liberty without, and those of the Out-Parishes in Middlesex and Surrey; the fifth and sixth, the Numbers of Persons that died of common Distempers, and the Plague; and the seventh and eighth, the Numbers total of the Christenings and Burials within the then Bills of Mortality in each of the said Years.

And the fourth, fifth and sixth Vicenary Accounts contain the Years, together with the Accounts of Christenings and Burials in each of the said Years, as specified in the present Bill of Mortality; but no Person in this City having died of the Plague since the Year 1679, I have in the fourth, fifth and sixth Vicenary Accounts, left out the Column of common Distempers; but that of the Plague in the fifth and sixth not being conveniently to be done, the same is continu'd with Cyphers.

Before I proceed, I think it will not be amiss in this Place to take notice of an Opinion lately started, That the Inhabitants of this City and Suburbs are greatly decreased since the Execution of the fatal South-Sea Scheme in the Year 1720.

To rectify this Mistake, I shall subjoin the Numbers total of all the Christenings and Burials contain'd in the Bills of Mortality for the Term of seventeen Years immediately preceding that unhappy Period, as I shall likewise those for the same Term of Years since that Time.

The first seventeen Years Account, from the Year 1703, to that of 1721, both exclusive.

The Reader, by comparing the Mediums of the last Account with those of the first, will perceive that the Christenings since the Year 1720 are increas'd 1309, and the Burials 3809; which shews, instead of a Decrease, that the Number of the Inhabitants of this City and Suburbs are greatly increased in that short Space of Time.

The Bill of Mortality of the City of London is certainly one of the most defective of its Kind, none being mention'd therein but such as are buried in Parochial Cemeteries, Precincts and Liberties; by which means many Burial Grounds belonging to the Church of England (such as St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, the Temple Church, St. Peter's ad Vincula, the Rolls and Lincoln's-Inn Chapels, the Charter-House, and divers others belonging to Hospitals) are not only precluded the same, but likewise those belonging to Dissenters of all Denominations, together with all those that are buried from within the Bill of Mortality in the several circumjacent Parishes; whereby the Number of Persons that die within this City and Suburbs is greatly diminished, to the no small lessening the Grandeur of London in the Eyes of the World, in respect to the Number of its Inhabitants!

Considering the Premises, and for the better enabling me to calculate the Number of the Inhabitants of this City, I found myself indispensably obliged to have recourse to the several Registers belonging to the under-mention'd Burial Grounds, where in all Places (tho' in many with great Difficulty) I succeeded, by getting an Account of the Number of Persons buried in each thereof, from all Parts within the Bill of Mortality in the Year 1729, except the Presbyterians great Burial Ground in Bunhill-Fields, where the Lessee, out of a selfish View, would not discover the vast Number buried there in the said Year, other than that I might safely insert one for every Day of the Year. This obstinate Refusal put me upon inquiring inquiring of John Smith, the Grave-digger, who assur'd me, that though he kept no Register, yet in the Course of his long Service he had made such Observations, that he was sure they buried annually between seven and eight hundred; but lest I should exceed the Number, I have chosen only to insert five hundred for the aforesaid Year; which, according to the Opinions of divers of the most eminent Undertakers I apply'd to, is much too few.

A Collection of the Numbers of Persons buried in and from the City and Suburbs of London in the Year 1729, not taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality.

Notwithstanding this great Number of Burials not taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality, I am persuaded there die annually a considerable Number more, which I think is not to be question'd, considering the great Number of above twenty-one thousand Sailors which belong to this City; for whom (tho' generally one half of them are abroad) I have only reckon'd those that died out of the small Number of Seamen employ'd in foreign Parts by the East-India Company as afore-said; and besides those interr'd in the Cemeteries above-mentioned, I have for divers Years observed, that the Number of Persons carried from London to be inhum'd in other Parts of the Country, is greater than that of those brought from all other Places in the Kingdom to be buried in this City and Suburbs.

Rec.
Guild.
Privy Council's Queries to the Lord-
Mayor.

The Government, from divers Causes, being apprehensive of an approaching Dearth, the Privy Council, on the 30th of June, Anno 1631, wrote to Sir Robert Duncy, Lord-Mayor of this City, and requir'd an Answer to the following Queries:

Rush Col.
vol. 2. p. 1.

- “ 1. What Number of Mouths are esteemed to “ be in the City of London and the Liberty?
- “ 2. What Proportion of Corn will suffice to “ feed that Number by the Month?
- “ 3. What Places are provided to conserve “ that Corn?
- “ 4. When the City intends to make their Pro“ vision?
- “ 5. What Course the City takes to have the “ Provision well conserved against the Time of “ Scarcity?
- “ 6. What Stock of Money they provide for “ that Purpose; and who shall be the Providers?”

People in
numbered.

In Obedience to this Order, the Lord-Mayor, by virtue of his Precepts, obtained Certificates of the Number of People in each Ward; and, on the 6th of December following, returned for Answer, That, upon a strict Inquiry, it did appear, that the Number of Men, Women, and Children, within the City and Liberties of London, amounted to one hundred and thirty thousand two hundred and eighty, as appears by the Copy of his Answer in the Archives at Guildhall.

But this general Account, differing from that particular one published by Mr. Graunt, (which I suppose he had from the original Certificates in Guildhall, now lost) the Difference of twelve more therein contained, I take to be owing to a Mistake in adding up the several Numbers; for which Reason I shall keep to Graunt's Account, as more accurately expressing the Number of People in each Ward.

An Account of the Numbers of Men, Women and Children, returned by Certificates from the several Wards, &c. of London, to the Lord-Mayor, in the Year 1631.

By the present Method of Calculation, I am obliged to castrate the Wards of Farringdon without, Cripplegate without, Bridge without, Portoken, the Parishes of St. Bartholomew the Great and Less, and the Ward of Aldersgate both within and without; because no separate Return was made for the last, whereby to distinguish the Number of the Inhabitants in the inner, from the outer Part of the Ward; for this, like all the other Out-Wards, except that of Bishopsgate, has a foreign Liberty annexed to it; by which, and the Loss of the Parish Register of St. Botolph, Aldersgate, of that Time, I am rendered unable to distinguish between the Number of Persons interred from the City-part of the Parish, (which composes the Out-part of the Ward) from that of the Glass-house Liberty in the County of Middlesex, where the Inhabitants were not numbered.

Observations thereon.

This Difficulty I shall attempt to remove, by endeavouring to discover the Number of Inhabitants which were then in the Ward within, and to separate the same from the rest of the Inhabitants of the ninety-seven Parishes: For the accomplishing of which, I shall attempt to find out the Number of Houses then within the City Wall, and also that of the Houses in the Ward of Aldersgate within.

The Number of Houses within the City Wall, before the late dreadful Conflagration Anno 1666, has by some been computed at fifteen thousand, and by others at more, or less; but as those Computations are merely conjectural, I am of Opinion, that they were not then more numerous than they are at present; for though the Scites of many Houses were forced to make way for enlarging the Streets after the said destructive Fire, yet not only divers new Streets have been since erected, viz, King-street, Queen-street, Prince's-street, and Cullum-street; but likewise many Courts, Alleys, Yards, &c. upon Places entirely void before that fatal Period; which makes me conclude, that the Houses in the City at present, consisting of about twelve thousand, is a Number answerable to that which was in it before the late dismal Catastrophe.

By admitting this Number, it will, by the Bill of Mortality of the Year 1631, appear, that there died, in the said twelve thousand Houses, two thousand four hundred and fifty-nine Persons of common Distempers; and of the Plague, ninety-seven; out of which I compute, that three would have died of common Distempers, which being added to the above Number, the Sum Total of Persons that died, and would have died (had there been no Pestilence at that Time) of common Distempers in the twelve thousand Houses within the City Wall in the said Year, will appear to be two thousand four hundred and sixty-two.

But as, by my aforesaid additional Account of Burials Anno 1729, there appears to have died within the City and Suburbs of London three thousand and thirty-eight Persons not taken notice of in the Parish Clerks Account, a Number proportionable, not inserted in the Bill of Mortality, must have died in that District in the Year 1631.

This Defect I shall supply after the same Manner I have done that of the said Year 1729. But, as in the Year 1631 there were no Burial Grounds within this City or Suburbs belonging to Dissenters, I shall only reckon a Number proportionable to that which died in the said District Anno 1729, and were buried in the several Extraparochial Church Cemeteries and circumjacent Parish Burial Places, not mentioned in the Bill of Mortality.

By an Abstract from the above-specified additional Account of Burials Anno 1729, it appears that there died in this City and Suburbs in the said Year one thousand seven hundred and eighteen Persons, that were buried in the aforesaid Extraparochial Church Cemeteries and circumjacent Parish Burial Places, not taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality.

And as by the said Bill of Mortality there appears to have been buried in the ninety-seven Parishes within the City Wall in the Year 1631, two thousand four hundred and sixty-two Persons; so the Number that died in the same District in the said Year, (and was buried in the Cemeteries and Places aforesaid, without being taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality) according to the Proportion of the additional Number Anno 1729, must be one hundred and forty-two; which being added to the above Sum, the Number of Persons that died in the twelve thousand Houses within the City Wall in the said Year, 1631, will appear to be two thousand six hundred and four; therefore a proportionable Number of fifty-three must have died in two hundred and forty-eight, which I suppose to have been the Number of Houses then in the Ward of Aldersgate within, as there are therein at present.

The said Number of fifty-three being deducted from the above-mentioned Sum Total of Persons that died in the ninety-seven Parishes within the City Wall in the Year 1631, the remaining Number will be two thousand five hundred and fifty-one, which is the stated Number of Persons that died in all the other Wards within the City Wall; whereby the Ward of Aldersgate within, and its Inhabitants, are wholly excluded from having any Share in the following Calculation.

Having paved the Way for discovering the Number of the Inhabitants of this great City, I shall subjoin an Account of the castrated Wards, with the respective Numbers of Inhabitants they contained in the Year 1631, as already specified. But no Distinction being made in the Return between the Inner and Outer Parts of Bishopsgate Ward, I was obliged to include the whole; and by the Loss of the first Part of the Parish Clerks Register, and Graunt's not distinguishing between the Parish of St. Botolph and the other Parishes of the said Ward, I was at a loss how to come at the Number of Persons buried therein, till I had recourse to the Parish Register, from which I took the Number of Persons interred there in the several Years of the first here under-specified Novenary Account, as will quickly appear; and as the Parish of St. Botolph consists only of the Out-part of Bishopsgate Ward, it answers my present Purpose in all Respects, as if the Parts had not been confounded.

And for a greater Certainty in calculating the present Number of the Inhabitants of this great City, I shall form two Novenary Accounts of Burials; the first whereof (to prevent an Advantage by an Increase of the Number of Citizens, by inserting the eight Years immediately following that of 1631) shall be composed of the Year 1631, (wherein the Number of the Inhabitants of the City ty was taken as aforefaid) the four Years immediately preceding the fame, and the four fubfequent thereto.

This Account will confift of five Columns, the firft whereof will contain the Years which form the Novenary; the fecond, the Numbers of Perfons that were buried in the caftated Wards; the third, thofe that were buried in the Parifh of St. Botolph Bifhopsgate; the fourth, the additional Numbers of Perfons that were buried in the Extraparochial Cemeteries and neighbouring Parifhes, not taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality; and the fifth, the Numbers Total, with their proper Medium.

The fecond Novenary Account will likewise be compofed of five Columns; the firft whereof will comprife the Years of the Novenary; the fecond, the Numbers of Perfons buried according to the Bill of Mortality; the third, the Numbers of Perfons buried in the Parifh of St. George Hanover-Square, not inferted in the faid Bill of Mortality; the fourth, the additional Numbers of Perfons that died in the City and Suburbs, not taken notice of in the Parifh Clerks Account; and the fifth, the Numbers Total, with their proper Medium.

Before I proceed, it will be neceffary to pre-mife a few Things for the better understanding the following Novenary Accounts.

As by an Abftract from my additional Account of Burials in the Year 1729, there appears to have died in the City and Suburbs of London one thoufand feven hundred and eighteen Perfons, not taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality, a Number proportionable muft have died in the above-named Wards and Parifh in each Year of the firft Novenary Account. Therefore, as it appears in the faid Novenary Account, that in the Year 1631 there were buried in the faid Wards and Parifh (exclusive of the caftated Plague Number above-mentioned) two thoufand fix hundred and eighty-one Perfons; according to the Bill of Mortality and the Parifh Register of St. Botolph Bifhopsgate; the additional Number of Burials, not taken notice of in the faid Bill of Mortality, muft have amounted to one hundred and fifty-four; according to which, an additional Number in proportion muft have died in each of the other Years of the faid Novenary Account, as will prefently appear.

In the Parifh of St. George Hanover-Square, a much greater Number of Perfons is buried, than inferted in the Bill of Mortality, for which the Parifh Clerk can beft affign a Reason; and confidering that the Number concealed immediately belongs to, and ought to be inferted in the faid Bill of Mortality, I fhall therefore redrefs this unjuftifiable Practice from the Parifh Register for the Time of the fecond Novenary Account: But as the Number in the Bill of Mortality faid to be buried in this Parifh Anno 1730, exceeds that of the Parifh Register by eighteen, I fhall fubtract the Surplus of this Year from 548, the concealed Number of the preceeding, and, by dividing the remaining Part, fhall give to each of the faid Years 265 of the fame.

As in the above-fpecified additional Account of Burials in the Year 1729, there appears to have died in this City and Suburbs three thoufand and thirty-eight Perfons, more than taken notice of in the Bill of Mortality; an additional Number in proportion to it muft have died in each of the other Years of the fecond Novenary Account, as will prefently appear.

During the Time of this Novenary Account, four hundred and fifty-one Perfons died of the Plague in the Wards and Parifh therein mention'd, three and a half of whom (as already obferved) I compute would have died of common Diftempers out of each hundred; which amounting to fixteen, I have included the fame in the general Total aforefaid; from which having deducted fifty-three for the Exclufion of the Ward of Aldersgate within, 'tis thereby reduced to 26784; the Medium of which being 2976, is the Number of Perfons that died out of the 73126 Inhabitants of the twenty-two Wards above fpecified.

As it appears that the Number of two thoufand nine hundred and feventy-fix Perfons, the Medium of the firft Novenary Account, died out of feventy-three thoufand one hundred and twenty-fix, the Inhabitants of the aforefaid twenty-two Wards; fo the Number of twenty-nine thoufand five hundred and forty-two, the Medium of the fecond Novenary Account, muft have died out of feven hundred and twenty-five thoufand nine hundred and three, which is the prefent Number of the Inhabitants of the great and opulent City of London.

This Number of the Inhabitants of the City and Suburbs of London almoft agrees with that of the Parifh of St. Giles's in the Fields, taken in the Year 1711, by Order of the Commissioners for building fifty new Churches within the Bill of Mortality; by which Account it appears, that the faid Parifh contained two thoufand nine hundred and ninety-nine Houfes, which were inhabited habited by twenty thousand nine hundred and ninety-three Persons, which is just seven to each House. But as there are other Parishes in the Suburbs of London, where the like Number of Houses contain more People than the above, I think it will not be controverted, that the seven hundred and twenty-five thousand nine hundred and three Persons aforesaid, calculated to be the present Number of the Inhabitants of this City and Suburbs, is as near as can be reckoned, without numbering the People.

Having the Bills of Mortality now before me, I think it will not be amiss (though foreign to the Work in hand) to undeceive the Publick in three Particulars.

1. Much the greatest Part of Mankind are of Opinion, that there are two Females to one Male of the human Species; but that this is a palpable Error, is manifest from the Accounts of Christenings and Burials specified in the Bills of Mortality, from the Year 1657, to that of 1738: During which Time of eighty Years, there appears to have been christened six hundred and nineteen thousand one hundred and eighty-seven Males; and five hundred eighty-five thousand three hundred and thirty-four Females; and buried nine hundred ninety-four thousand six hundred and fifty-six Males; and Females, nine hundred sixty-five thousand two hundred and ninety-eight; which in the Christenings amount to thirty-three thousand eight hundred and fifty-three more Males than Females, which is Five and a Half per Cent. in favour of the former; and in the Burials, twenty-nine thousand three hundred and fifty-eight, which is likewise Three per Cent. in favour of the Males. This is a double Demonstration, that there are considerably more Males than Females.

This Majority in Favour of the Males is by our Naturalists said to be designed by Nature for the Support of that Part of the human Species, which is more liable to be destroyed by War than the other. But as War is only casual, and not perpetual, I am of Opinion, that this supernumerary Supply is designed by Nature as a constant Remedy against incessant Contingencies, which the Males are more obnoxious to, both by Land and Water, than the Females; therefore a continual supernumerary Supply is very necessary.

2. It is likewise generally believed, that not one Person in a thousand lives to the Age of seventy or eighty.

That this is an idle Notion, I shall demonstrate from the Bills of Mortality, by an Account of the Numbers of Persons of all Ages that died within the District of the said Bill, as specified in the following Decenary Account, together with their Numbers Totals and proper Mediums, with the Number that died out of each Hundred of the Ages therein mentioned.

The Reader may, in this Decenary Account, observe, that the long prevailing Notion above-mentioned is entirely destroyed by a Demonstration, that about Four in the Hundred live till between seventy and eighty Years of Age, above Two in the Hundred till between eighty and ninety, and near One in Two hundred to upwards of ninety.

3. It is also the common Opinion, that the Dissenters of all Denominations, together with the French Calvinists, Lutherans, Greeks, Papists, Jews, &c. in this City and Suburbs, are equal in Number to the Members of the established Church: That this is a very great Error, I shall presently make appear.

By the Medium of the second Novenary Account above-specified, there appears to have been buried within the City and Suburbs of London, and the Parishes circumjacent, twenty-nine thousand five hundred and forty-two Persons; of which, in the Year 1729, according to my additional Account of Burials, only one thousand two hundred and thirty were interred in the several Cemeteries belonging to the Dissenters and Foreigners; but as great Numbers of the said People are buried in Parochial Burial Grounds, I shall endeavour to come as near the Number of the same as I can, by the following Method of Calculation.

As the Meeting-houses of the several Denominations within the City and Suburbs of London, both British and Foreign, amount to one hundred and forty-six, I shall put them all upon the Foot of those of the Quakers, (of whose Funerals we have a very exact and faithful Account) which being twelve in Number, there died out of the People belonging to the same, in the Year 1729, as already mentioned, two hundred and forty-six Persons, which is just twenty and a Half out of each Congregation; which being multiplied by one hundred and forty-six (the Number of Meeting-houses and foreign Chapels within the Bill of Mortality) the Sum Total will be two thousand nine hundred and twenty.

Quak.
Gen. Re-
gist.

But lest it should be objected, that six of the Quakers Places of Worship are but Half-Meetings, by their being used only once on a Sunday; I shall therefore reduce the Number of their Congregations to Nine, which I imagine will thereby be rendered more numerous than the other Meetings at a Medium. This Opinion will be much corroborated, if we consider the many small Congregations belonging to other Dissenters, and to divers foreign Churches.

By this Concession, the Number of Persons that will then be said to die out of each of the said 146 Congregations will be twenty-seven, which in the whole will amount to three thousand nine hundred and forty-two. This Number being far short of 14771, the Moiety of 29542, the Medium of the Burials of this City and Suburbs during the Time of the second Novenary Account above specified, it does thereby appear, that the Dissenters, &c. above-mentioned, instead of being equal in Number to the Members of the Established Church, are only as One to Seven and a Half of the same.

CHAP. IV.

Certain Parallels between London and divers other great Cities, both antient and modern.

AS I have in the preceding Account endeavoured to discover the Numbers of the Houses and Inhabitants of this great City, I shall now attempt to draw divers Parallels between it and some of the most celebrated Cities, both antient and modern; and in regard to Antiquity, shall begin with the most antient.

A Parallel between London and Nineveh.
Diod. Sic. Hist. Lib.

Nineveh, the celebrated Capital of the Assyrian Empire, was founded by Ninus, and inclosed with a mighty Wall, of four hundred and eighty Furlongs, or sixty English Miles, in Circumference, of the Height of one hundred Feet, and of such a prodigious Thickness, that three Chariots could commodiously drive a-breast on the Top thereof: And as an Embellishment to this magnificent Structure, it was adorned with fifteen hundred Towers, of the Altitude of two hundred Feet each; but the same being built in the Form of a Parallelogram, it did not inclose so great a Quantity of Ground as the Wall of the City of Babylon, tho' of the same Extent.

Ibid.

That this City was built with hollow Squares, like that of Babylon, is manifest, by Nebuchadnezzar's having taken his Plan therefrom for the rebuilding of that City: But a greater Instance thereof, is, the long and vigorous Defence it made against Arbaces, the Mede, who besieged it closely for the Space of two Years; and, without a constant Supply of Corn and other Necessaries growing therein, it could not possibly have held out so long, considering the vast Number of its Inhabitants, which from Scripture appear to have been very great; for, according to the Prophet Jonah, it contained more than one hundred and twenty thousand Persons that could not distinguish between their Right and Left Hands, that is, were incapable of providing for themselves.

Jonah. c. iv. ver. 11.

This vast indefinite Number of helpless Infants I shall compute at one hundred and thirty thousand; and, according to the modern Method of Calculation, shall reckon the same to have been three Tenths of the Inhabitants of that great City; whereby the Number of its Citizens will appear to have amounted to four hundred and three thousand; which is 322903 less than that of London.

Babylon, the renowned Metropolis of the Chaldean Monarchy, was founded by Semiramis; or, according to some, by Belus, the Father of Ninus, and Father-in-Law to Semiramis. Be that as it will, it was greatly enlarged by Nebuchadnezzar, who, converting the same into a square Form, inclosed it with a stupendous Wall, each Side of which being one hundred and twenty Furlongs in Length, made the whole Inclosure sixty English Miles in Circumference. This wonderful Wall, which was three hundred and fifty Feet in Height, and eighty-seven in Thickness, was adorned with two hundred and fifty stately Towers; and in each Side thereof were twenty-five Brazen Gates, equidistant; from which, in right Lines, ran so many Streets, traversing each other, to their adverse Gates; so that the whole Number of Streets were just fifty, of the Breadth of one hundred and fifty Feet each, which formed six hundred and seventy-six Squares; and within the Wall on each Side, at the Distance of two hundred Feet, were the exterior Rows of Houses, fronting the Wall on all Sides; those Spaces, each of two hundred Feet wide, together with the Breadth of the Streets, occupied eight thousand seven hundred Feet; whereby is shewn, that the Space left for each Square was a Quadrate of two thousand eight hundred and eighty-six Feet on all Sides; the Houses whereof fronted the Streets, and the internal Spaces, or Squares, were employed in Agriculture, the Produce of which was a constant Supply to the Citizens, and of great Service to them during a Siege, especially that by Cyrus, wherein they so long and gallantly withstood the numerous and desperate Attacks of that potent Prince.

The Houses, which bounded those spacious Squares, were not, according to the European Manner, contiguous; but stood at a considerable Distance, tho' not, as by some imagined, for preventing the Danger of Fire, but for a free Circulation of Air in that hot Climate: And considering the stupendous and surprizing Publick Structures in and about this City, such as its prodigious Wall; the wonderful Temple of Belus, the vast Tower of which, according to Bochartus, was that erected at the Confusion of Languages, as mentioned in Scripture; the old and new Palaces; and the amazing hanging Gardens; which together took up the Space of fifteen of the aforesaid Squares: From the Grandeur and Magnificence of these stupendous Works (which is none of my Business to describe), we may reasonably conclude, that the private Buildings were answerable to the Publick. Therefore I am of Opinion, that the Citizens Houses may justly be supposed, at a Medium, to have been fifty Feet in Front, and the Spaces intermediate of the same Dimensions.

But

But lest I should exceed in Number, I shall only reckon them at half the Extent, and the interjacent Spaces at the same Proportion; according to which, the four Fronts of each Square must have contained two hundred and thirty-two Houses; which being multiplied by 676, the Number of the said Squares, the Total will appear to be 156832, provided all the said Squares had been built; but that they were not, is manifest, by a celebrated Author, who tells us, that upon Alexander the Great's Arrival at Babylon, there were only eighty Furlongs of the City built (the other Part, being employed in Agriculture, was plowed and sown); this I shall in the most favourable Sense take to be meant Furlongs square; and the same being multiplied by 80, it will appear there were only six thousand four hundred square Furlongs built upon; whereas the City consisted of fourteen thousand four hundred; and the former being only two and a Quarter of the latter, shews, that the Number of Houses thereon erected, only amounted to sixty-nine thousand seven hundred and three, each of which I shall reckon to have contained seven Persons, (which is about the same Number reckoned to those of London, tho' a maritime City) which in the whole will amount to four hundred and eighty-seven thousand nine hundred and twenty-one; which is two hundred and thirty-seven thousand nine hundred and eighty-two less than the City of London at present does contain: Whereby is shewn, that Nineveh and Babylon, the greatest and most celebrated Cities of Antiquity, and the Capitals of two of the most renowned Empires, only contained one hundred sixty-five thousand and eighteen Inhabitants more than the the City of London alone.

The next City I shall inquire into, in respect to its Magnitude and Number of Inhabitants, is Jerusalem, once the Capital and Royal Seat of the Kings of Judea, whose King Jehosaphat is said to have kept one million one hundred and sixty thousand mighty Men of Valour, who always attended upon him in Jerusalem, besides his other Forces, which garrisoned all the other Fortresses of the Kingdom!

That this is a Mistake occasioned by some illiterate Transcriber, I think, will not be denied by any who has the least Regard for the Honour of the Sacred Scriptures, for the following Reasons:

xxiv. v. 9.

I. When David, King of Israel, numbered the People about a Century before, all the Men of the twelve Tribes, that were capable of bearing Arms, were found to amount to no more than one Million three hundred thousand, which is only one hundred and forty thousand more, than those said to be in Jerusalem, the Capital City of one of the Tribes only, about an Age after.

II. By the best Accounts we have of the Number of the Roman Forces in the Reign of Augustus, they consisted of twenty-three Legions, composed of one hundred sixty-seven thousand five hundred Men; but this Number, including the Auxiliaries, was afterwards increased to five hundred and eleven thousand two hundred and thirty-two. And the greatest Number that appears ever to have been mustered by the mighty Romans, only amounted to seven hundred thousand Foot, and seventy thousand Horse. Whereas, if Jehosaphat's Troops in the Country be added to those in the City, I think I may venture to call them about double the Number of those kept by the Masters of the World, at the Height of their Empire; to whose Dominions, the small Kingdom of Judea was but as a Hand's Breadth. And even when the Romans were in Possession of the same, they kept not above five hundred and eleven thousand two hundred and thirty-two, as above-mentioned.

Polyb.
Gen. Hist.

III. Perhaps it may be alledged, that the afore-said prodigious Number of Troops consisted of all the defensible Males in Jerusalem: If this should be granted, it would be equally amazing; for, by adding a just Proportion of old Men, Women and Children thereto, it would amount to more Millions than Half the People of England: Whereas, according to the Description of the Kingdom of Judea, by Hecateus, who made some curious Observations thereon, it was to England, only as one to eleven. And considering the mountainous Nature of that Country, it cannot reasonably be supposed to have contained one Fifth of the People that England does.

Josephus, speaking of the Siege of Jerusalem by Titus the Son of Vespasian, tells us, that the Number of People shut up therein by the Romans, amounted to two Millions five hundred and fifty-six thousand! If this Account should be admitted, it must then be acknowledged, that this prodigious Multitude not only consisted of all the Inhabitants of Jerusalem; but likewise of the collective Body of the Jewish Nation, assembled from all Parts of the Kingdom of Judea and the neighbouring Nations, who, according to their Law, were met at this time to celebrate the anniversary Feast of the Passover.

That this Relation can be true, I think, is impossible; for without mentioning the Impossibility of laying in a Stock of Provisions sufficient to support such an immense Multitude during a Siege, they could not possibly be lodged in so small a City, where the Houses, according to the Oriental Manner of Construction, were generally but one Story high: Therefore my Author, before the Publication of so monstrous an Account, ought first to have considered, that Jerusalem, according to Mensuration, as related by himself, was, in English Measure, only four Miles and two hundred and twenty Yards in Circumference; and that the same was not only surrounded with a treble Wall, but it likewise contained the Mounts Moriab and Sion; on the former was situate the Temple, and on the latter the Palace of David, which, together with divers craggy Rocks and vast Declivities, occupied a considerable Part of the inclosed Ground. And had the City been a Flat of a Mile square, (which it was far short of) it would only have afforded about a square Yard of Ground for each Person of the immense Number aforesaid to have stood upon. This of itself is not only sufficient to shew the Absurdity and Falsity of Josephus's Account, but likewise to confirm that of Hecateus, wherein is shewn, that the Number of the Inhabitants of Jerusalem only amounted to one hundred and fifty thousand; a very great Number for a Place, which by its Situation was rendered dered destitute both of Manufactures and Commerce; for the Citizens chiefly depending upon the Altar, supported themselves by entertaining those that came to sacrifice!

By what has been said of the City of Jerusalem, it does appear, that the Number of its Inhabitants only amounted to about one Fifth of those of the City of London.

A Parallel between London and Anti-ent Rome.

Rome, once the Mistress of the Universe, was a very large and stately City, but in respect to its Magnitude, at the Height of its Empire, divers Authors have been egregiously misled, by a palpable Mistake committed by Vopiscus, who asserts, that the Wall, wherewith the Emperor Aurelian encompassed Rome, was fifty Miles in Circumference. But that the present Wall is the utmost Boundary the City of Rome ever had, I imagine, will appear by its being built before the Reign of Aurelian; for that Prince only made an Addition thereto, by inclosing the Campus Martius, and Transiberine Region or Ward: This Extension of the Wall was by virtue of a Law, whereby every Emperor that enlarged the Bounds of the Empire, was empowered to enlarge those of the City, by extending its Wall, as was formerly done by Augustus, Nero, and Trajan. And as the City and Empire of Rome were at their utmost Extent in the Reign of Aurelian; I therefore conclude, that if there had been any other Suburb contiguous to the Wall, the said Emperor would, in all Probability, have inclosed the same, as well as the above-mentioned, after whose Reign, both City and Empire gradually decreased.

In the Reign of Honorius, about an hundred and fifty Years after the Demise of Aurelian, Alarich the Goth, by a treble Siege and Reduction of Rome, having greatly indamaged the Walls of the City, they were soon after repaired by Honorius, as appears by several Inscriptions and other Monuments; which manifestly shew the present Wall to be the same that stood in the Time of Aurelian, which is confirmed by most of our Historians and Antiquaries; and yet this antient Wall, with all its Meanders, is not thirteen Miles in Circumference; and, excluding the Sinuosities of the same, the City is not above ten Miles in Circuit. Besides, if the antient Wall of Rome had been fifty Miles in Extent, it must have extended itself many Miles beyond the present, in which Space it must have inclosed a great Number of Publick Edifices: But that ever the Vestigia of any such Structures were there discovered, is more than I can learn. Whereas, within the present Wall, the Sites of the Fora Civilia and Fora Venalia, &c. are well known, and the Remains of many of the most celebrated and magnificent Edifices still appear.

Lipfii Rom. illustr.

Many Methods are used to make the antient City of Rome appear to have been of a vast Magnitude, but none I imagine so ridiculous as that of Helio-gabalus; who commanded all the Cobwebs within the City to be gathered together, which being weighed, amounted to ten thousand Pounds in Weight: If this should be admitted to answer the End it was brought for, it would be no difficult Matter to prove, that antient Rome was above fifty Times bigger than London; for 'tis much to be questioned, whether, after the strictest Search, two hundred Weight of Cobwebs could be found in this vast City. But this, instead of serving what it was brought for, tends only to shew the Poverty and Nastiness of the Romans; which is confirmed by Plautus, who tells us, that the antient Romans were for many Ages so poor, that they lived upon Pap.

Plaut. in Most. Act. 3. Scen. 2.

Two Authors have racked their Brains for the Inlargement of Old Rome, but to very little Purpose: The former says, 'Tis plain that the City of Rome was double, one part walled, and the other not, and being full of Houses, it incircled the former on all Sides, making the Circumference of the whole forty-two Miles; and that afterwards the Emperor Aurelian so extended the Wall, that the City was near fifty Miles in Compass; to which many of our Authors have implicitly assented, without giving themselves the Trouble of inquiring into the Truth of this Assertion. However, my Author further adds, that hitherto we have seen a double Rome; but it seems there was a Third without Inclosure, composed of divers Towns, joined by the intermediate Houses. Here he seems to have strained his Author's Meaning, whom I take to signify, that Rome, like London, was surrounded by a Number of Villages, with straggling Houses leading thither, and not an additional Suburb, where the Buildings were contiguous. Be that as it will, according to his Method of Computation, the City of Rome must have been, at least, one hundred Miles in Compass; yet without any other Foundation, than the Fertility of his own Invention; for the Author on whom he depends acquaints us, that in the Reign of Vespasian the Number of Streets in the City of Rome only amounted to two hundred and sixty-five, which are, by Publius Victor, increased to four hundred and twenty-four; a Number very improper to compose a City of one hundred Miles in Circumference! whereas there's above twelve times the Number in London, tho' not a twentieth Part so big as the fictitious Magnitude of antient Rome.

Lipfii Rom. illustr.

Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. 3. cap. 5.

Ibid. Pub. Vict. de Region. Rom.

And the latter, with the most amazing Assurance, tells us, that including the Suburbs of antient Rome, it was eighteen times bigger than the Cities of London and Paris put together; and if he should add the Tractus Tiberinus, it would then be above twenty times the Dimensions of both. But this Author having just before unluckily acquainted us, that the Transiberine Part of Rome was only three Miles in Circumference, which he having unhappily forgot, has occasioned his making a new and absurd Declaration, that the said small Tract of two Miles in Length, including the Sinuosities of the Wall, otherwise, were longest, not a Mile and a Half, and about a Mile in Depth, but being of a triangular Form, does not contain a Quantity of Ground answerable to its Length and Depth: This is the Spot of Ground by our judicious Author said to be above twice as big as the Cities of London and Paris.

Voss. vari. Observat.

A little further his Head seems to be quite turned, by asserting, that modern Rome does not contain the two hundredth Part of the antient, notwithstanding his having admitted, that excluding the Windings of the Wall, the present City of Rome is but ten Miles in Circuit. Therefore,

con-

considering the many Inconsistencies and Absurdities of those Authors, I am of Opinion, that, instead of a further Answer, 'twill be sufficient to remind them, that Tusculum, Tully's Country Seat, &c. were at the same Distance from antient Rome, as they are from the modern.

As Authors disagree in respect to the Dimensions of antient Rome, so do they likewise in regard to the Number of its Streets and Houses, tho' not so widely. By Pliny they are reckoned at two hundred and sixty-five; by some at two hundred and ninety-four; and by Publius Victor, already named, at four hundred and twenty-four; and the Number of Houses at forty-one, forty, and forty-six thousand, and the highest at forty-seven thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven; which consisted of forty-five thousand nine hundred and forty-six Insulae, or small Houses, and nineteen hundred and thirty-one Domus's, or Palaces, (a very great Number, considering the numerous Edifices, magnificent publick Structures, and void Spaces between the several Houses of the City) which we are told rather resembled small Towns than Palaces, each of which having contained a Theatre, Portico's, Seats of Justice, Temples, Wells and Bathing-Places. But that of Nero excelling all the rest in Magnitude, its stately Galleries, of three Rows of Pillars each, were a Mile in Length; it contained divers Fields of Arable Land, Meadows and Vineyards, Woods stocked with a Variety of tame and wild Beasts, and a great Lake, resembling a Sea, incircled with Houses, representing a City.

Besides these Palaces, there were in Rome a great Number of sumptuous publick Structures, viz. Temples for the Celebration of Religious Worship, Theatres, and Amphitheatres, for Stage-plays; Circo's, for the Solemnization of divers Sorts of Games; Naumachiae, for the Representation of naval Engagements; Odeums, for the Rehearsal of musical Entertainments; Stadia, for the running of Men and Horses; Xysti, for Wrestlers to exercise in; and Curiae, both Religious and Civil, the former for regulating the Rites belonging to Divine Worship in, and the latter for publick Conventions, viz. Senacula, where the Senate assembled, to give Audience to Ambassadors; Basilicae, for Courts of Judicature, &c. The Fora were of two Sorts, Civilia and Venalia; the first for Courts of Justice, and the last for Publick Markets; together with a great Number of Portico's, Triumphal Arches, Colossus's, Columns, Obelisks, Pyramids, Trophies, Bagnio's, Aqueducts, Cloacae, Publick Gardens, Ways, Walks, Camps and Fields.

Considering the great Variety of these Publick Edifices, and that there were a Multiplicity of each, I am of Opinion, they must have occupied above two Thirds of the Area of the City.

As Authors have widely differed, in respect to the Dimensions and Number of Streets in antient Rome, so have they no less (especially our own) fallen into a gross Mistake, in regard to the Number of its Inhabitants, by not making a proper Distinction between the thirty-one Rustick Tribes, that inhabited the circumjacent Countries, and the four Urbanick Tribes that dwelt in the City; which being confounded, are all generally taken for Inhabitants of the City, which has occasioned infinite Blunders among Historians in that respect; all having been unjustly reckoned for Inhabitants of the City, that were mustered at the Lustra, or general Reviews; which, at first, were all the defensible Men of the thirty-five Tribes, that constituted the Roman State, who, as they enlarged their Dominions, admitted whole Cities, States and Nations into the Freedom of their City, whereby they were intitled to the Appellation of Romans (tho' at the Distance of many hundreds of Miles); by which most Authors have been led into an Opinion, that when so many Millions were mustered at a Lustrum, they were all Inhabitants of the City of Rome; which is acknowledged by one of the greatest Magnifiers of that City; who says, that the Lustra only shewed the Grandeur of the Empire, and not of the City: And soon after adds, That it is evident, that no Mention is made by any Historian of the Number of Inhabitants in the City of Rome, since the Account thereof taken by Julius Caesar, wherein they appear to have been only one hundred and fifty thousand, to which they were reduced by the Civil War; whereas before they amounted to three hundred and twenty thousand. However, a modern Author will not allow, that Rome at any Time ever had above three hundred thousand Inhabitants: Tho' one of our own Writers, upon the Authority of Cheveraux, has allowed it a Million, without considering any thing relating to that City, other than its imaginary Dimensions. And if we can depend upon what is asserted by some Authors, that the City of Athens was as big as that of Rome, and Alexandria bigger; then we may justly conclude, that Rome, in its utmost Extent, did not contain near the Number of People that London does; which I shall endeavour presently to evince.

The City of Rome, at its utmost Extent, according to the largest Account, contained only forty-seven thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven Houses; among which were nineteen hundred and thirty-one Domus's, or Palaces; and Insulae, or small Houses, forty-five thousand nine hundred and thirty-one; to the first of which I shall allow one hundred Persons each, which I imagine to be a Number sufficient, notwithstanding the wild and ridiculous Account published by a certain Author, of the vast Number of Domesticks belonging to some of the Roman Nobility; which is absurd to imagine, seeing the antient Romans were more parsimonious than the modern Europeans; however, 'tis rare to find a Person of Quality among us, tho' possessed of an Estate of thirty thousand Pounds per Annum, that keeps above fifty Domesticks; this Number of one hundred Persons to each of the aforesaid Palaces, makes the Number Total amount to one hundred and ninety-three thousand one hundred. And the last being only one Room high, it cannot be supposed they contained many Inhabitants: However, as a Favour, I shall allow eight Persons to each House, which is more than those of London contain, tho' above thrice their Altitude; the Sum Total of which making three hundred sixty-seven thousand four hundred and forty-eight, the same being added to that of the Palaces, 'twill, by this Method of Calculation, appear, that the Inhabitants of antient Rome only amounted to five hundred and sixty thousand five hundred and forty-eight; which is one hundred sixty-five thousand three hundred and fifty-five less than the Inhabitants of London amount to.

But that the antient City of Rome could not have so many Inhabitants as I have granted it, I imagine, is demonstrable from its having only had nine or ten Markets; the principal of which were, the Boarium, or Beef Market; the Suarium, for Pork; the Pistorium, for Bread; the Piscarium, for Fish; the Olitorium, for Herbs; and the Cupedinarium, for Delicacies; and three hundred and twenty-nine Ovens; than which, I am of Opinion, nothing can more effectually demonstrate the small Number of the Inhabitants of that celebrated Capital, or more potently corroborate the Opinion of a learned and ingenious Foreigner, that Rome never had at any Time three hundred thousand Citizens, that inhabited the same.

By what has been said, it may be observed, that as the City of London contains above treble the Number both of Markets and Ovens that antient Rome did; so may it reasonably be supposed to have contained a proportionable Number of People. Besides, from the unhappy Situation of Rome, upon so pitiful a River, it cannot be supposed to have had any considerable Commerce to invite Strangers to settle therein; which, of all Things, contributes the most towards enriching a City with Inhabitants; as in a particular manner is manifest in the City of London, which, for ought yet appears, never had its Equal for Opulency, and Number of Inhabitants, tho' not the Metropolis of an overgrown Monarchy. Whereas the antient Romans had little else to invite Strangers to their Capital, than the Grandeur of their Court, pompous Shews, and other publick Diversions; who, after having fatiated themselves therewith, returned to their respective Countries.

Alexandria in Egypt, founded by Alexander the Great, was a very large and populous City, which, according to a celebrated Author, contained above three hundred thousand Freemen, besides Slaves; whereby he was induced to call it the most populous of all Cities: And if we allow the Slaves to have been equal in Number to the Free, (which cannot reasonably be supposed) it will nevertheless appear, that the City of London contains one hundred and twenty-five thousand nine hundred and three Inhabitants more than that of Alexandria.

Moscow.

Moscow, the Metropolis of the Russian Empire, by the best Accounts, is ten English Miles in Circumference, and in its greatest Prosperity contained about forty thousand Houses; three thousand whereof being of Stone, the rest were despicable wooden Hovels, of one, or at most two Stories high. But this City being deprived of the Nobility and Persons of Distinction, by the Court's Removal to St. Petersburg, and of its Buildings by frequent Fires, it is very much reduced, inasmuch that its Houses at present (1738) are said not to amount to thirty-five thousand.

And as Moscow is a Place of little Trade, and few or no Manufactures, its mean Cottages cannot be supposed to be high rented, therefore not crowded with Lodgers; and almost every Family having its own House, it can't be very populous; however, as a Favour, I shall allow seven Persons to each House; (which is about the same Number contained in those of London) whereby the Inhabitants of that City will amount to two hundred and forty-five thousand, which, I think, is a Number too great for a Place in its mean Condition.

Notwithstanding the numerous Accounts published of Constantinople, the capital City of the Turkish Empire, we are still in the dark in respect to the Number of its Houses and Inhabitants. However, by the best Accounts, we are told, that it is about twelve Miles in Circumference, and four Miles and a Half in Length, one Half whereof being about the Breadth of a Mile, and the other about a Mile and a Half. But this Space, far from being filled with Streets and Houses, the vast Seraglio, or Imperial Palace, with its spacious Gardens, occupy a Spot of four Miles in Circumference of the same; which, together with the great and numerous Palaces of the Nobility, their extensive Gardens, and many void Places throughout the whole, are thought to take up one Half of the City.

And considering the mean wooden Buildings of the Citizens (besides their numerous Gardens) of one, or at most two Stories high, they must require Sites double in Dimensions to those of London, for Conveniencies to transact their Affairs in. Therefore I am of Opinion, that the Number of Houses in this City do not exceed that of Moscow: But lest it should, I shall not only allow it to contain sixty thousand, (which is twenty-five thousand more) but likewise seven Persons to each House, which is about the Number contained in those of London. By which it will appear, that the Inhabitants of the City of Constantinople amount to four hundred and twenty thousand, which is about seventeen thousand five hundred short of the Inhabitants of the City of Paris, (notwithstanding my having allowed it above double the Number of Houses); which corroborates the Sentiments of French Travellers, that Constantinople is not so populous as Paris. However, by this Account, and that of Moscow, 'tis manifest, that the City of London contains sixty thousand nine hundred and three Inhabitants more than those two Cities put together.

The City commonly called Grand Cairo, the Capital of the Kingdom of Egypt, has been more wildly and falsely represented in respect to its Dimensions, and Number of Inhabitants, than any other City that I can learn; especially in a very absurd Account thereof said to be written by Sir Henry Blunt, than which a viler Piece of Imposture never appeared; for the wicked Author has not only extended the Dimensions of this City to quadruple its Bounds, but likewise the Number of its Streets (besides Lanes, &c.) to twenty-four thousand, which I am of Opinion is more than ever were in twenty of the greatest Cities that ever flourished. And the Number of Mosques or Temples therein, said by him to amount to thirty-five thousand, is probably not far short of the Number of its Houses. This monstrous Relation has given Occasion to many thousands to talk of Cairo in a very romantick Manner.

Sandys's Travels.

By as good an Account as perhaps is extant of Cairo, it is said to be about eleven Miles in Circumference; but the Houses, Gardens and Orchards therein being of a great Extent, and the City, since it was brought under the Turkish Yoke by Selymus, in the Year 1517, deprived of its Court and Commerce, it cannot reasonably be supposed to excel Constantinople, the capital City of the Turkish Empire, either in Number of Houses or Inhabitants, considering the vast Advantages it has over Cairo in all respects. I am therefore of Opinion, that its Inhabitants cannot amount to three hundred thousand, and that the fabulous Accounts published thereof are chiefly the Effects of Indolence in Travellers that have been there. Therefore, without doing the least Injustice to Cairo, I think, I may venture to reckon the Number of the Inhabitants of the City of London double to that of it.

A Parallel between London
and Pekin.

Duhalde.
Descript.
China.
Le Comte.

Chin.

Pekin, the capital City of the Empire of China, is fifty-two Chinese Lys (which make about fifteen English Miles and a Half) in Circumference, as measured by Command of the Emperor in the Year 1690. The accomplishing of this Mensuration has justly exposed the Ignorance of the Popish Missionaries, who for many Years imposed upon the Europeans their absurd and ridiculous Notions of this City's being fifty or sixty Miles in Circuit; and at the same Time with the greatest Assurance told us, that it contained many Millions of People.

Ibid.

A certain Author is at a loss how to account for the great Number of Inhabitants of this City, other than by the great Crowds of People and numerous Carriages wherewith the Streets are continually pestered, than which nothing can be more deceitful; which he soon became sensible of, by telling us, that it is the Custom of China for most Sorts of Artificers to work in their Customers Houses; therefore many Trades, such as Taylors, Weavers, Shoemakers, and even Smiths, carry their Anvils, and other necessary Implements, along with them, and incessantly cry their several Trades about the Streets from Morning till Night.

Ibid.

And there being no navigable River in the Neighbourhood of Pekin, Provisions and Merchandizes of all Sorts are daily carried thither from all Parts, by vast Numbers of Land Carriages, such as Waggons, Carts, Camels, and other Beasts of Burden; which, together with the great Number of Persons of Distinction, who never go abroad but on Horseback or in Chairs, and the Mandarins, or Nobility, attended by their numerous Domesticks, form a kind of Procession in the Streets; and the Princes of the Blood never go out without being attended by a Troop of Horse. These Things duly considered, it will not seem strange, that the Streets of Pekin are more crowded than those of the European Cities; nor, by such deceitful Appearances, that most People are led into a Belief, that the Inhabitants of great and populous Cities amount to many times the Number they really are; and even Persons of Learning and Distinction frequently talk of as many Millions being in a great City, as there are hundreds of thousands within the same.

This is the Case of the City under Consideration, the Number of the Inhabitants of which has been as grossly exaggerated as that of antient Rome, which is chiefly owing to its large Dimensions, and the Crowds of People above-mentioned.

And tho' my Author supposes the City of Paris to be quadrangular, he nevertheless allows that of Pekin to be four times its Dimensions; and tho' he admits that the Number of Lodging-Rooms in Paris exceed that of Pekin, he is yet of Opinion that Pekin contains two Millions of Inhabitants, and Paris but one. But, instead of Pekin's having any such Number, I shall endeavour to shew, that it does not contain so many Inhabitants as the City of London.

The City of Pekin, before the Tartar Conquest, was an exact Square; but the Conquerors, possessing themselves thereof, expelled the Chinese Inhabitants, who, contiguous to the Wall without, erected for themselves a new City, which, with the old, making an irregular Figure, (tho' nearest that of a Parallelogram) renders the true Dimensions thereof difficult to be known: This in some measure obstructing my Design, I shall endeavour to remove the same, by restoring the City (to its no small Advantage in Dimensions) to its antient quadrangular State; whereby each Side of the united City will appear to be three English Miles three Quarters and two hundred and sixty-four Yards in Length; and the whole Inclosure, as above-mentioned, fifteen Miles and about a Half, or fifteen Miles one thousand and fifty-six Yards.

Having fixed the exterior Bounds of Pekin, I shall now take notice of some of its interior Parts, in order to discover the Number of its Houses and Inhabitants.

The Imperial Palace, with its vast Courts and spacious Gardens, is near four English Miles in Circumference; the great Magazines of Rice occupy a very large Space; the numerous Courts of Houses wherein Candidates for the Degrees of a Doctor are examined, the great Squares within the City Gates, that are capacious enough to have five hundred Men drawn up in Order of Battle in each of them, and the large and numerous void Spaces in the Tartar City, are thought to occupy a Third of the Area of the City. And if to these we add the vast Space taken up by the great and numerous Palaces of the Mandarins, and their extensive Gardens, they will be found to take up above one Third of the City of Pekin.

And without mentioning the vast Space taken up by the Streets of Pekin, of one hundred and twenty Feet broad, or the great Inlargement of the City by my reducing it from the Form of a Parallelogram to that of a Square, I shall only take notice, that as the Houses of Pekin are but one Room, or one Story high, (nor dares the greatest Nobleman of the Empire erect one higher) the Inhabitants thereof must require as much Room to transact their Affairs in as those of London; and as such Conveniences cannot be had in Height, they must in Extent; therefore, as the Houses of Pekin are only one Story, and those of London, at a Medium, above three, the former must occupy above treble the Space taken up by the latter; latter ; which shews, that the whole Area of the City of Pekin is required to contain a Number of Houses equal to that of London.

Ibid.

Chin.

But, as it has been said, that the third Part of Pekin is taken up by the Imperial Palaces, &c. above-mentioned, it cannot contain so many Houses by one Third as London; therefore, as the Houses of this City and Suburbs amount to ninety-five thousand nine hundred and sixty-nine, those of Pekin must only amount to sixty-three thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight. But as the Imperial Palace is said to contain a Number of Houses (for the Residence of the Emperor's Domesticks and Artificers) resembling a little Town, I shall allow the same to amount to five thousand, which, instead of a little, would make a large Town; I shall also allow the Candidates Houses for the Degree of a Doctor to have amounted to the like Number of five thousand; which being added to those of the Citizens, the Number Total of Houses in the City of Pekin will appear to be seventy-three thousand nine hundred and seventy-eight; to each of which I shall allow seven Persons (which is about the Number contained in those of London); by which it will appear, that the Inhabitants of Pekin amount to five hundred and seventeen thousand eight hundred and forty-six; which being eighty thousand three hundred and sixty-eight more than those of the City of Paris, the Opinion of the French Travellers is thereby confirmed, that it contains more People than the Metropolis of France; and whereby is likewise shewn, that the Inhabitants of the City of London amount to two hundred and eight thousand and fifty-seven more than those of the City of Pekin.

By what has been said, I think it will, to every impartial Reader, appear, that the City of Pekin cannot have near the Number of Houses or Inhabitants that the City of London has, more especially if we consider, that Pekin is not near treble the Dimensions of London.

A Parallel between London and Paris.

As it has been long disputed, whether the City of London, or that of Paris, be the bigger, or more populous; I have, to put an End to that Controversy, obtained the Bills of Mortality of the latter, for divers Years. But, before I enter upon the Parallel, I shall premise a few things concerning that City.

Divers Authors, that have written of Paris, have been so wildly profuse of their extravagant Encomiums on that City, that they have bedawbed it with the most undeserved Epithets, viz. The Epitome of the World, the Queen of Cities, &c. which has made them so far forget themselves, as to stick at nothing for the Support of those vain and airy Imaginations; and one of whom, (not to be out-done by his Brethren) when telling us, that the City of Paris consists of twenty-eight thousand Houses, which contain eight hundred thousand Inhabitants, he immediately adds, That there are kept in that City about one hundred thousand Horses, and twenty thousand Coaches: Whereas it would be no difficult Matter to make it appear, that there are not fifteen thousand Horses, or two thousand Persons that keep Coaches in Paris.

Trait. de Police.

Brice Description. Paris.

Another Author, who in the Year 1725 wrote a Comparison between the Cities of Paris and London, acquaints us, that upon his comparing the Plans of the said Cities, he found the former to be one twentieth Part bigger than the latter. Yet, notwithstanding the great Defects in the Plan of London, that Assertion has been refuted by the ingenious Mr. Daval. Therefore I shall only observe, that that Part of Paris, on the West Side the River Seine, is by the vast Expansion of the Cours, or Rampart, made to answer in Dimensions to that on the East Side of the said River; whereas there is inclosed within the said Rampart, from the River below the City to the Royal Observatory, and thence to the Cantiers de Bois, by the River above the City, a great Number of spacious Fields, with the large Gardens of Luxemburg, together with all those of the numerous Convents on that Side; which being excluded that Part properly called the City, there will be but little left on that Side to go under that Denomination, in respect to the castrated Parts.

By the Plan of Paris, published in the Year 1717, it appears, that from the Extremity of the Fauxbourg St. Honore, to that of St. Antoine, that City, with its Suburbs, is two thousand five hundred and twenty-five Toises in Length; eight hundred twenty-nine and a Half whereof making an English Mile, 'tis thereby manifest, that the utmost Extent of the City of Paris is only three English Miles, seventy-seven Yards, three Inches and a Quarter: Whereas the City of London, with its Suburbs, where shortest, is six Miles, three Quarters, two hundred and ninety-one Yards; which is three Quarters of a Mile, one hundred and thirty-five Yards, thirty-one Inches and a Half, more than double the Length of Paris. And London, were broadest, is three Miles, one hundred and seventy Yards and a Half; which is ninety-two Yards and thirty-four Inches broader than Paris is in Length.

And excluding all Fields, Gardens, Publick Walks, and other void Places in both Cities, I am persuaded it will then appear, that the Streets and Houses of London stand upon double the Quantity of Ground than those of Paris. Nor can it well be otherwise, considering the vast Majority of Inhabitants in favour of London, and the Houses of which being much lower, are not crowded like Hospitals, as those of Paris are; therefore they require a much greater Extent, especially considering, that their Number is about three and a half to one, according to Brice's Account of Paris.

Some Authors have objected, that the Bounds of London are extended far beyond what they ought to be, and wherein are included divers Villages at a considerable Distance, with no other View, as they imagine, than the aggrandizing of the City; wherefore I think myself obliged to acquaint all those that are of that Opinion, that Hackney is the only Parish that ought not to be added, as lying at too great a Distance: But the other Places objected against, viz. Stepney, Lambeth, Newington and Rotterbith, being all contiguous, they as justly belong to the Bill of Mortality, as any Parish in the Centre of the City. Therefore I think it will not be amiss to remind those Being informed, that a vast Number of Cattle were killed in London, that never were at Smithfield Market, I judged it necessary to inform myself concerning the same after the best Manner I could; to which end I applied to Joseph Collier, a Salesman, William Collier, a wholesale Beef-Butcher, and Ingles Prescott, a wholesale Mutton-Butcher, all of Whitechapel, (and the most eminent of their several Professions) who, from their own great Dealings, (the last of which, at a Medium, kills upwards of twelve thousand Sheep yearly) and general Knowledge of Business, after consulting their Books, unanimously assured me, that by the great Numbers of Beasts and Sheep bought by themselves and other wholesale London Butchers, in the neighbouring Markets of Ingerstone, Witham, Tunbridge, Westerham, Sevenoakes, Tower-Maldon, Southall, Hounslow, Layton-Buzzard, St. Ives, Finchley, and Thame; and at Fairs, in the Counties of Northampton, Cambridge and Norfolk; together with the numerous Herds bought on the Roads of Grafiers; and the great Number of Carcasses of Sheep, brought to Town by Country Butchers; all of which, they are of Opinion, amount to above a Third more than those sold in Smithfield, Mile-end and Knights-bridge Markets: However, I shall only insert a Third thereof, which being added to the Clerk of the Market's Account, it will appear, that the Number Total of Beasts killed in the City of London and Suburbs, in the said Year, did amount to ninety-eight thousand two hundred and forty-four; and the Sheep and Lambs killed in, and brought to the City in Carcasses, to seven hundred and eleven thousand one hundred and twenty-three. And if the large Dimensions of these Beasts and Sheep were examined into, their Carcasses would be found to weigh above a Third more than those of the same Species in most other Countries.

The Number of Calves sold in Smithfield Market is so very inconsiderable, as not to deserve mentioning; for most of the Calves that are killed in the City and Suburbs are bought in the Country: But much the greater Part being killed without the Bill of Mortality, and sold in the Markets of London, I applied to Mr. White, the chief Salesman in that Way, for an Account thereof; who, from his Books, not only generously gave me an Account of ten thousand nine hundred and fifty-two, sold by himself in Newgate Market in the Year 1731, but likewise told me, that was about a Fifth of those annually sold in the said Market; which amounting to fifty-four thousand seven hundred and sixty, he was of Opinion they were not far short of those fold in Leadenball Market; for which Reason I shall venture to reckon them at sixty thousand per Annum. And as he thinks there are not many fold, in a wholesale Way, in all the other Markets within this City and Suburbs, I shall only reckon them at twenty thousand; and all those killed within the District of the Bill of Mortality, at sixty thousand; by which the Number of Calves, consumed in the City and Suburbs of London, will amount to about one hundred and ninety-four thousand seven hundred and sixty.

Of Hogs.

The Number of Hogs fold in Smithfield Market, being not much more considerable than that of the Calves, occasioned my applying to two of the most eminent Salesmen in that Way; whose Dealings being so amazingly great, I could not have given the least Credit thereto, had I not had the Accounts thereof from their respective Books. I shall here subjoin the monthly Accounts of Sales, as transacted by those two exceeding great Dealers in the Year 1731.

Mr. Odell not only generously granted me an Account of his own Sales, but likewise, to the best of his Knowledge, the several Numbers of Hogs fold in the same Year by petty Salesmen, viz. By Mr. Crooks, about 6500; by Mr. Thompson, about 6500; by John Odell, about 2500; and by all other Salesmen and Jobbers in that Way, about 20000; and about 40000, for the vast Quantities of Bacon, brought from all Parts of the Kingdom to the City. By which the Number Total of Swine, annually consumed within the Bill of Mortality, amounts to one hundred and eighty-six thousand nine hundred and thirty-two.

Of Pigs.

And to come at the Number of Sucking Pigs consumed in this great City, I applied to the principal Dealers in each of the Markets where they are fold; when William Heming, by his own Dealings, and the best Information he could obtain of others, acquainted me, that the Number of Pigs fold in Leadenball Market in the Year 1732 amounted to about 16000: Sold in the same Year in Newgate Market about 11500, from Philip Bliss: In Honey-Lane Market about 2000, from Richard Jeyes: In the Borough Market about 500, from John Smith: In Clare Market about 8500, from James Marlow: And in St. James's Market about 8000, from William Coomes. Besides, there are a small Number fold in the lesser Markets, which, together with those fold at Inns, and sent as Presents to Friends, I shall, according to the Opinion of the afore said Dealers, reckon at 5000 per Annum; which makes the Number of Sucking Pigs annually consumed in this City amount to fifty-two thousand.

By the Toll-Books of Billingsgate Market it does appear, that in the Year 1729 there arrived there nine hundred and ninety-one Oyster Boats; fifty whereof, as measured by the City Meters, contained five thousand nine hundred and seventy-six Bushels; therefore the whole must have contained one hundred and fifteen thousand five hundred and thirty-six Bushels.

And in the same Year, from the twenty-sixth of May (the Beginning of the Mackarel Season) to the sixth of July, the End thereof, there arrived at Billingsgate five hundred and eighty-nine Boats, which, at a Medium, carry about two Lafts and a Half each, each Laft containing ten thousand; it thereby appears, that the Number of Mackarel brought to this City in that Season amounted to fourteen Millions seven hundred and forty thousand.

And in the same Year there arrived at the said Market thirteen hundred and ninety-eight small Boats, with Cod, Haddocks, Whittings, and other Sea Fish; besides the great Quantity of River Fish sold by the Fishermen above the Bridge, and the vast Quantities of Sea and River Fish brought from many Parts of the Kingdom; without mentioning the great Quantity of Salt Fish imported from all Parts.

The Accounts I received from the Custom-house of the several Quantities of Butter and Cheese imported to this City being very defective, occasioned my applying to John Newman, Receiver of all the Freights for the several Masters of Ships concerned in that Trade; from whom I received the following Accounts, viz. Butter imported from York, Hull, Scarborough and Stockton, from the 25th of March, Anno 1729, to the 25th of March, Anno 1730, one hundred and fourteen thousand nine hundred and thirty-seven Firkins; from Newcastle upon Tyne, fifteen thousand seven hundred and five Firkins; and from the County of Suffolk, fifty-six thousand seven hundred and three Firkins.

And in order to obtain an Account of the Quantity of Cambridge Butter brought to this City by Land Carriage, I applied to Mr. Abraham Daking, (who undoubtedly is the greatest Dealer in Butter and Cheese in this Kingdom, and probably in the Universe; for by his Books it appears, that he sold in the Year 1733 forty thousand five hundred and sixty-six Firkins of Butter, and near the same Value in Cheese) who generously wrote to the several Persons in the Country that forward the same to London, who, in Answer to his Request, sent up their several Accounts for the Year 1732; whereby it appears, that from Christmas 1731, to Christmas 1732, they sent to London seventy-four thousand nine hundred and eighteen Firkins: And, according to Mr. Daking's Opinion, the Butter brought to this City by Land Carriage from all other Parts of the Kingdom must amount to, at least, thirty thousand Firkins; which makes the whole amount to two hundred and ninety-two thousand two hundred and sixty-three Firkins; which being reduced to Pounds, the same will appear to be sixteen millions three hundred and sixty-six thousand seven hundred and twenty-eight Pounds.

Receiver's Account.
Of Cheese. By Mr. Newman the Receiver's Account of Freight, the Quantity of Cheshire Cheese imported to this City, from the 25th of March 1729, to the 25th of March 1730, amounts to five thousand seven hundred and sixty-six Tons: Thin Cheese from Hull and Gainsborough, fourteen hundred and seven Tons; from Suffolk, nine hundred and eighty-five Tons; and from Newbury, Abington, &c. by Barge, two thousand three hundred and seventy-five Tons; together, ten thousand five hundred and thirty-three Tons, or twenty-one millions and sixty-six thousand Pounds.

Of Fowls. To pretend to give an Account of the infinite Number of Fowls consumed in this City, would be the Height of Presumption; it shall therefore suffice to acquaint the Reader, that although there were sold in Leadenhall, the great Fowl Market, on the two Days preceeding that of Michaelmas in the Year 1734, upwards of thirty-four thousand Geese; yet that vast Number was not sufficient to supply the Demands of the People.

Clerk Mark. Account.

Of Milk. By the great Use of Coffee, Tea and Chocolate, the Consumption of Milk is greatly decreased in this City and Suburbs; insomuch that there's not near Half the Number of Cows kept in the Neighbourhood of London as formerly: I shall therefore only reckon a Gallon per Week to each House, which being ninety-five thousand nine hundred and sixty-nine in Number, the Quantity of Milk annually used therein will amount to four millions nine hundred and ninety thousand three hundred and eighty-eight Gallons.

Of Gardens. As the prodigious Quantity of Garden-stuff, wherewith this vast City and Suburbs is supplied, cannot be come at; it shall suffice to acquaint the Reader, that by an Estimate made of the Gardens (some Years ago) which produce the same, they were found to contain upwards of twenty-seven thousand Acres; which, by this Time, is probably increased to thirty thousand, and upwards; especially if we take into the Computation the Number of Acres cropt with Beans, Peas, Collards, French Beans and Savoys by the Farmers.

Excise Provif. Book.
Beer, Ale and Small Beer. In the Year 1691, there were brewed by the common Brewers in the City and Suburbs of London, one million two hundred and twenty-two thousand seven hundred and sixty-four Barrels of Strong Beer and Ale, and eight hundred and sixty-five thousand eight hundred and thirty-one Barrels of Small Beer. But in the said Year the Duty upon Beer and Ale being doubled, it set a Number of private Brewers to Work, which so greatly affected the common Brewery, that in the Year 1695 the annual Quantity of Strong Beer and Ale was reduced to nine hundred and nine thousand two hundred and ninety-nine Barrels, and the Small Beer to eight hundred and thirteen thousand eight hundred and twenty-four Barrels.

And altho' the Number of Inhabitants within the Bill of Mortality since that Time is increased near one Fourth, yet the Quantity of Strong Beer and Ale brewed within this City and Suburbs in the Year 1724, was only increased to one million one hundred and seventy-two thousand four hundred and ninety-four Barrels, while the Small Beer was decreased to seven hundred and ninety-eight thousand four hundred and ninety-five Barrels; whereas, according to the antient State of the London Brewery, and the great Increase of the Inhabitants of this City, the Strong Beer and Ale brewed within the Bill of Mortality at present, by publick and private Brewers, ought to amount to one million five hundred and twenty-eight thousand four hundred and sixty-eight Barrels, and the Small Beer to one million seventy-four thousand two hundred and eighty-eight Barrels. But by the great Consumption of Brandy, and other pernicious Spirits, the London Brewery decreases daily; wherefore such a Quantity of Beer and Ale as aforesaid is not to be expected, notwithstanding the vast Consumption of Country Beer and Ale in the City from many Parts of the Kingdom.

In the Year 1728 there were imported into the Port of London, from divers Countries, the following Quantities of Wine; viz. From Portugal, eighteen thousand two hundred and eight Tons; from Spain, ten thousand two hundred and fifty-five; from France, eleven hundred and five; from Germany and Holland, four hundred and seventy-six: Together, thirty thousand and forty-four Tons.

Though Spirits cannot justly be deemed necessary Provisions, yet since they are become as it were Food and Raiment for the Profligate, I shall insert an Account of the several Quantities and Species thereof, that were imported to London in the Year 1733, together with those of the several Sorts that were distilled in this City and Suburbs in the Year 1727.

This prodigious Quantity of destructive Spirits demonstrates the excessive, scandalous and wicked Practice of Dram and Punch drinking, which is generally the Baue of all those that follow the same. However, these bewitching Liquors have so far got the Ascendant over their Votaries, that they strenuously plead in their Behalf, (to indulge themselves, and allure others to the like Practice) by urging, that many Men, who have been hard Drinkers for the Space of thirty or forty Years, enjoy a good State of Health, and are as vigorous at the Age of sixty or seventy Years, as those that have lived temperate.

That this is a very deceitful Plea, is manifest; for, instead of living in that Practice for so long a Term of Years, most are cut off in the Bloom of

of Youth ; therefore, to prevent People from being misled by such false and monstrous Allegations, 'twill be necessary to acquaint them, that all such who have lived in that debauched Way for many Years, are indebted to a vigorous Constitution, which, instead of bringing them to the Ages of sixty or seventy Years, oppressed with painful and loathsome Diseases, would probably, with good Management, have brought them in Health to the Age of a hundred and upwards.

By the following Septenary Account it will appear, that from Christmas to Christmas of the said Years, there were imported into the Port of London the several Quantities of Coals therein mentioned :

Of Candles

Remarks.

The Quantity of Candles made within the City and Suburbs of London in the Year 1727 amounted to eleven millions six hundred and forty-four thousand eight hundred and sixty-three Pounds. Besides which, great Quantities of Candles are imported and brought to London from many Parts of the Kingdom.

Most of the above-mentioned Provisions being of our own Product, the Citizens are therewith supplied in the greatest Plenty, and at such reasonable Rates, that it is much to be questioned, whether any other great City abounds with such an Affluence and Cheapness of all the Necessaries of Life (except Wine) as this does ; but especially in Fuel, whereby the meaner Sort, to their great Comfort, are enabled to keep good Fires in Winter, whilst others of the same Condition, in the great Cities of neighbouring Kingdoms, are forced to submit to a rigorous Season, at the Expence of many of their Lives.

Upon the whole, 'tis hard to know which is the most to be admired at, the prodigious Number of the Inhabitants of this great City, or the vast Plenty and Cheapness of Provisions wherewith they are supplied.

On what has been said concerning the Provisions wherewith this great City is supplied, I shall make an Observation or two for the Use of those who are chiefly interested therein.

Some Years ago I was of Opinion, that the excessive drinking of Tea would enhance the Price of Meat ; for many Gentlemen and Farmers, who used to feed Beasts for the London Market, have converted their Meadows into Pasture Grounds for feeding Cows, to make Butter for the Use of the Tea-Table, &c. But the excessive drinking of spirituous Liquors has so enervated the Stomachs of the Populace, as to render them incapable of performing the Offices of Digestion ; whereby the Appetite is so much depraved, that its Inclination to Food is much lessened, and the Consumption of Provisions greatly diminished ; which has occasioned Victuals, instead of rising, to fall in Price very considerably, (in the Year 1737) to the no small Loss of the Landed Interest.

But the most surprizing of all is, that the Nobility and Gentry in this City seem to have conspired the Destruction of the Landed Interest by the Ruin of their own Estates, in keeping their Servants (who are many thousands in Number) at Board-wages, by which they seemingly save Money for the present ; but their Domesticks, instead of a plentiful Table, as formerly, are reduced to take up with what they can get ; and having fallen into drinking spirituous Liquors, require but little Food.

This, tho' hitherto but little regarded, greatly contributes to the Reduction of the Consumption and Price of Victuals ; and if Care be not taken to redress these growing Evils, the Estates of this Kingdom will soon be reduced, both in their Rents and Value, to the great Loss of the Proprietors.

From these Calculations, which have rather increased than fallen in the last fifteen Years since the Publication of the first Edition of this Work, we may justly collect the extraordinary Populoufness of this great Metropolis, and that it far excels any other capital City in the known World, either antient or modern, in its Number of Houses and Inhabitants. In which Account it was necessary to write of the collective Buildings and Inhabitants of those Places ingulphed by this Capital. But in the following Chapter I shall confine my Survey to that Part only, contained within the City Walls and its Liberties, and which, at present, is divided into twenty-six Wards.

Of ALDERSGATE WARD. The Antiquity of Wards. The Bounds of Aldersgate Ward within and without. Number of Parishes, and Parish Churches. The antient and modern State of this Ward. Halls and other publick Buildings. The State of the Lying-in Hospital for married Women. The Liberty of St. Martin le Grand. Its Privileges, and some Observations thereon.

THO' I cannot ascertain the Time when this City was at first divided into Wards ; yet I am of Opinion, that the first Division thereof was not on the Account of Government ; but, rather, that London, like the other Cities and Towns of the Kingdom, was antiently held of the Saxon Kings and Nobility in Demesne, and whose several Properties therein, being so many Sokes or Liberties, were under the immediate Dominion of their respective Lords, who were the Governors or Wardens thereof ; whence, I imagine, arose the Saxon Appellation, Ward, which signifies a Quarter or District : This Opinion is not only corroborated by the Wards of Baynard's Castle, Farringdon, Coleman-Street, and Basinghall or Bassishaw's, still retaining the Names of their antient Proprietors, but

See p. 105. What the Number of Wards in this City at first was, does not appear upon Record; however, by the first Account we have thereof in the Year 1284, they appear to have been twenty-four; and in the Year 1393, the great Ward of Faringdon being very much increased both in Number of Houses and Inhabitants, it was by Parliament divided into the inward and outward Wards, whereby the Number was increased to

Roy. Char. twenty-five; and in the Year 1550, the Citizens
Lond. having purchased of King Edward the sixth the

See p. 242. Borough of Southwark, with divers Privileges thereunto belonging, they erected the same into a twenty-sixth Ward; but it seems, the Power granted them by Charter not proving sufficient to support their Title thereunto, by excluding the Justices of Peace for the County of Surrey from interfering in the Government thereof, it is therefore only a nominal Ward: However, it serves to dignify the Senior Alderman, called The Father of the City, who generally by his great Age is rendered unable to undergo the Fatigue of Business; therefore, as there is nothing to be done, 'tis a Post fit for one worn out with Age. However, I shall insert it among the Names of the rest, which at present are Aldersgate, Aldgate, Bassishaw, Billingsgate, Bishopsgate, Bread-Street, Bridge-ward-within, Bridge-ward-without, Broad-Street, Candlewick, Castle-Baynard, Cheap, Cordwainer, Coleman-Street, Cornhill, Cripplegate, Dowgate, Faringdon-within, Faringdon-without, Langbeurne, Lime-Street, Queenhithe, Portoken, Tower-Street, Wallbrook, and Vintry; tho' originally they were known by other Names; as before in Book I. Ch. xii.

These Wards containing the whole City and Liberty of London, I shall begin with Aldersgate Ward, and proceed alphabetically, describing the Bounds, Contents, and the several Antiquities and Curiosities contained in each of them.

Aldersgate Ward. Aldersgate Ward takes its Name from that North Gate of the City, and consists of divers Streets and Lanes, lying as well within the Gate and Wall, as without. And first, to speak of that Part within the Gate. The East Part thereof joins unto the West Part of Cripplegate Ward, in Engain-Lane, or Maiden-Lane. It begins on the North Side of that Lane, at Staining-Lane End, and runs up that Lane from Haberdashers Hall, to where St. Mary Staining Church stood; and by thence East; winding almost to Wood-Street, and West through Oat-Lane; and then by the South Side of Bacon-House to Noble-Street, and back again by Lilypot-Lane, (which is also of that Ward) to Maiden-Lane; so on that North Side, West to where St. John Zachary's Church stood, and to Foster-Lane.

Now on the South Side of Engain-Lane, or Maiden-Lane, is the West Side of Gutter-Lane, to Carey-Lane; and Carey-Lane it-self (which is of this

Vol. II. NUMB. LXV.

Ward) and back again into Engain-Lane, by the North Side of Goldsmiths Hall, to Foster-lane; and this is the East Wing of this Ward. Then is Foster-lane, almost wholly in this Ward, and begins in the South toward Cheapside, on the East, by the North Side of St. Foster's Church, and runs down North-West by the West End of Maiden-lane, by Lilypot-lane and Oat-lane, to Noble-street; and through that by Shelly-House, (of old Time so called, as belonging to the Shel-lies. For Sir Thomas Shelly, Knt. was Owner thereof in the 1st of Henry IV. It was afterwards called Bacon-House, because the same was new built by Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal under Queen Elizabeth.) Then down on that Side to where St. Olave's Church stood in Silver-street, at the North-West End of Noble-street.

In Foster-lane, this Ward begins on the West Side thereof, over-against the South-West Corner of St. Foster's Church, and runs down by where St. Leonard's Church stood, by Pope-lane End, and by St. Anne's-lane End; which Lane is also of this Ward. Here you enter the main Street called St. Martin's, which includes St. Martin on the East Side thereof, and so down on both Sides to Aldersgate; and these are the Bounds of this Ward within the Wall and Gate. See the Description of this Gate on p. 25.

Without the Gate. From the Gate it runs North to the Church, and then West up Little Britain, and so takes in Part of Town-Ditch and three Houses in Crown-Court in Long-Walk; and thence it goes North, and takes in a Corner of the New Hospital, lately built, where formerly stood Peterborough-House, and so comes to the Gate at Bartholomew-Close in Little-Britain on the West, and thence to Great Montague-Court, which is of this Ward, and both Sides of Little-Britain, and so it runs up the West Side of Aldersgate-street, taking in Part of Long-lane on both Sides of the Way, to Carthusian-street, taking the South Side thereof, it ends including the first Great House in Charterhouse-square to the Left. And this is the Western Bounds. The Eastern begins one House beyond the White Horse-Yard in Fan's-Alley, and runs down Pickax-street on the East to Barbican, Part of which is in this Ward; and so down Aldersgate-street to Jewin-street, Part of which is in this Ward; and from thence to the Gate. And these are the Bounds of Aldersgate Ward without.

In describing of this Ward, I shall take in the Liberty of St. Martins-le-Grand at the South End,

In the Freedom of the City of London is Foster-lane, a Place well-inhabited, chiefly by Silversmiths. The South End next unto Cheapside, that is, two Houses Northwards from St. Vedast, or Foster Church, is in the Ward of Faringdon within; and all the rest of the West Side is in the Liberty of St. Martin's-le-Grand, as far as Bell-court: So that only Part of the East Side is in this Ward. In this Lane are these Places: Adams-court; but small, seated over-against the Church. Priest's-court, or Alley, long and ordinary, with a Passage into Gutter-lane, through the Half-moon Tavern. Rose and Crown-court, good, with a Free-stone Pavement. Dark Entry, very ordinary, gives a Passage into

St. Martin's-le-Grand. On the North Side of this Entry, was seated the Parish Church of St. Leonard Foster-lane; which being consumed in the Fire of London, is not rebuilt, but the Parish united to Christ-church; and the Place where it stood is inclosed within a Wall, and serveth as a Burial-Place for the Inhabitants of the Parish.

Carey-lane falls into Gutter-lane, a Place of some Trade for Silversmiths. Bell-court, a large open Place, with good Houses, well inhabited, hath a Passage with a Free-stone Pavement into St. Martin's-le-Grand. Three-Crown-court, both small and ordinary, near Bell-court. Goldsmiths Hall, seated at the Corner of this Lane, turning into Maiden-lane, the back Part being in Gutter-lane; a handsome new Brick Building, with an open square Court within. Over-against this Hall is a large House, now made Use of for refining of Silver.

Maiden-lane, formerly Engain-lane, a handsome well built and inhabited Street; the East End falleth into Wood-street, but hath no more in this Ward than to Staining-lane. At the North-West Corner, over-against Goldsmiths Hall, stood the Parish Church of St. John Zachary, which since the dreadful Fire is not rebuilt; but the Parish united unto St. Anne's Aldersgate; and the Ground on which it stood, inclosed within a Wall, serving as a Burial-Place for the Parish.

Near this Church-yard, is a spacious House, with a large Court-yard, handsomely paved with Free-stone, formerly belonging to Sir Thomas Bludworth, Knt. Lord-Mayor, 1666, and since to Richard Levet, Esq; Son of Sir Richard Levet, Knt. Lord-Mayor in the Year 1700; in which House he kept his Mayoralty. But at present it is rebuilt and converted into an Office for the Union Insurance against Losses by Fire. On the same Side, but beyond Staining-lane, is seated Haberdashers Hall, a large Building, which is in Part of this Lane, but in Cripplegate Ward.

Staining-lane, the East Side, which joineth unto Haberdashers Hall, is in Cripplegate Ward. At the upper End of the Lane was the Church of St. Mary Staining, which Church is not rebuilt since the Fire of London; but the Parish united unto St. Michael Wood-street, and the Ground inclosed within a Wall, for the Burial of the Dead for the Parish.

Gutter-lane hath the West Side, from the Corner of Maiden-lane unto Carey-lane, in this Ward, and the East in Cripplegate Ward.

Noble-street, long, and indifferently well inhabited; the End next to Foster-lane being esteemed the best. In this Street are these Places of Note; Lillypot-lane, but ordinary; falls into Staining-lane, as doth Oat-lane also, but small. Betwixt these two Lanes is White-horse-court, open, but ordinary. Dolphin-court, small, seated opposite to Oat-lane. A little more Northwards, is Coachmakers-Hall, a handsome Building. Fitch's-court, a broad Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, and good Houses. At the Upper End is an old Timber House, where formerly Titchborn, some Time Alderman and Lord-Mayor, dwelt. This House strangely escaped burning in the dreadful Fire of London, when all the Houses round it were quite consumed. Hide's-court, but small.

Coach-makers
Hall.

St. Olave's Silver-street Church was seated on the North-West Corner of this Street; not rebuilt since its Burning in the great Fire of London; and the Parish is united to St. Alban's Wood-street.

St. Anne's-lane, a Place of some Trade, lieth betwixt Foster-lane, and St. Martin's-le-Grand, near Aldersgate. About the Middle of this Lane on the North Side, is St. Anne's-alley, having a Free-stone Pavement, which leadeth to St. Anne's Church, and from thence into Noble-street, severing the Church from the Church-yard. Since the Fire of London, in which it was consumed, it is rebuilt very handsome and neat, the Front facing Southward, all of rubbed Brick: To which is united the Parish of St. John Zachary, as before-mentioned.

Aldersgate-street, very spacious and long, and although the Buildings are old, and not uniform, yet many of them are very good, and well inhabited. This Street runs Northward unto the End of Barbican on the East Side, and Long-lane on the West, where Goswel-street begins. In this Street are a great many Alleys and Courts; and for the describing them, we shall begin at Aldersgate. Falcon and Castle-Inn, very large, and of a considerable Resort. In the Yard are several good Houses for private Families: And out of this Yard, is a Passage into Jewin-street, and another into Noble-street. Harrow-court, small and indifferent. Cooks Hall, seated over-against Little-Britain. Greyhound-court, mean and ordinary. Cock-and-bottle-court, poor and ordinary. Ball-alley, long, narrow, and ordinary. Golden-lion-court, well built, and inhabited on the North Side, the East Side being open and airy, with Gardens. Deputies-court, or Rose-and-rainbow-court, ordinary; but there have been, within a few Years, several new Buildings at the farther End of it. Nettleton-court, large, but ordinary Buildings. Maidenhead-court, large, but indifferently built, with a Passage into Crowders-well-alley; from whence one may go into Jewin-street, in Cripplegate Ward. George-Inn, formerly the Whitehart-Inn, very large, and convenient for the Reception of Coaches, Waggon, and Travelers. Trinity-court, open, but indifferently built. Westmoreland-alley, or the Paved-alley, as paved with Free-stone; the Passage leads through Westmoreland-court into Bartholomew-cloze. Angel-alley, large, and somewhat narrow towards the Upper End; where it has a Passage into Horn-alley, an open Place, very long, with low Buildings. About the Middle it has a Passage into Cockpit-yard, well built, which gives Entrance into Jewin-street; and that falls into Redcross-street, near St. Giles's Cripplegate Church; and this is a Street well built and inhabited: But of this Street there is no more in this Ward than Cockpit-yard, the rest and greatest Part being in Cripplegate Ward. Cradle-court, a handsome open Place, well built, with a Free-stone Pavement. Black-horse-alley, but small and ordinary. Black-horse-court, also small. Half-moon-court, a little open, but mean. Half-moon-alley, but narrow, has a Passage through the Half-moon Tavern into St. Bartholomew's-cloze. Tongue's-court, small, with old Buildings. Lauderdale-house, a large old Building, with a Free-stone Court before it. Hare-court, open for Carts;

Goldsmiths Hall, in Foster Lane.

Stationers Hall, near Paternoster Row.

Carts; at the Upper End it falls into Paul's-alley, and so into Redcross-street. Bell-Inn, of good Resort for Waggoners with Meal, &c.

Goswel-street begins at Barbican, where Aldersgate-street ends, and runs up to the Bars, in this Ward, and much farther Northward beyond Old-street. This Street is broad, but meanly built and inhabited, especially beyond the Bars. In this Street, within the Bars, are these Courts and Places of Note: Cock Inn has a good Trade, and is resorted unto by Waggoners that bring Meal, and other Goods. Devonshire-court contains two Courts, one within another, and both but small and ordinary. Red-lion Inn, of good Trade, and has a large Yard for Coach-Houses and Stabling. Through this Yard is a Passage into Charter-house-yard, and another into Long-lane. Beggars-lane, an open Passage into Charter-house-yard, and so to Smithfield-bars; and St. John's-street, a great Thoroughfare. Three-Cups Inn. White-horse-yard, a large open Place for Stabling and Coach-Houses, and has in it some Dwelling-Houses. Vine-yard, large, but of small Account, having old Houses, and some Parts not built. Fans-alley, just without the Bars, as to the Entrance, it is broad enough for Carts, and but indifferently built and inhabited, the South Side being in this Ward, and the other in the Liberty of St. Giles's Cripplegate. This Alley has a Passage into Bridgewater-street.

Barbican, a good large Street, comes out of the Upper End of Aldersgate-street, and runs up to Redcross-street; formerly a Place of good Trade for Salesmen and Brokers for Apparel, both old and new. The Part of this Street within the Ward is but little, viz. from the Corner next to Aldersgate-street, to White-lion-court on the North Side; which is but mean, and Fox-and-crown-court on the South Side, which is also but ordinary.

Long-lane, so called for its Length, coming out of Aldersgate-street against Barbican, and falls into West-smithfield. A Place also of antient Note for the Sale of Apparel, Linen, and Upholsterers Goods, both Second-hand and New, but chiefly for Old; but this Trade has left the Place for many Years: And the Houses at the East End are greatly decayed. This Lane has but little in this Ward, especially the South Side; and the North Side takes in the Red-lion Inn already spoken of.

Little-Britain comes out of Aldersgate-street, by St. Botolph's Aldersgate Church, and runs up to the Pump, and is very ruinous; there it opens into a broad Street, and turning Northward, runs up to Duck-lane, having another turning Passage to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. This Part of the Street is well built, and tho' much inhabited formerly by Booksellers, from the Pump to Duck-lane, who dealt chiefly in old Books, it is now much deserted, and has little Trade.

The Parish Church of St. Botolph's Aldersgate, seated at the End of this Street, next to Aldersgate-street, now repairing, was an old Building, and escaped the Fire of London, 1666.

In this Street of Little-Britain are these Courts and Places of Note. George-yard, ordinary. Cross-keys-court, a Place with good Buildings, and Gardens behind some of them. Redcross-alley, a small and ordinary Place. Carpenters-yard, an open Place, which has a Passage into Townditch, being an open Place belonging to Christ's Hospital, which has good Houses on the Side fronting the Hospital. Pelican-court, a large Place, with good Houses, well inhabited: At the Upper End it divides itself into two Courts, and both bear the same Name. On the West Side it has a Passage into Fryers-rents, which is but small and ordinary. Fryers-rents has a narrow Passage into a small and ordinary Court. Axe-yard, or Court, long and narrow, with good Houses at the Upper End. Great Montague-court, a good handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, well built and inhabited. Little Montague-court, but narrow, with a Free-stone Pavement.

There are to watch at Aldersgate, and other Stands in this Ward, every Night, one Constable, the Beadle, and 44 Watchmen. And in the Liberty of St. Martins-le-Grand, which is in this Ward, 12. In all 56.

The Jurymen, which are returned by the Wardmote Inquest, are to serve in the several Courts in the Guildhall in the Month of August.

This Ward hath an Alderman and two Deputies, one within the Gate, and one without, eight Common-Councilmen, eight Constables, nine Scavengers, nineteen Wardmote Inquest-Men, and a Beadle.

It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London, 7 l. and in the Exchequer, 6 l. 19 s.

The Alderman of this Ward (in 1755) is William Benn, Esq; who has passed the high Station of Lord-Mayor of this City: The Common Council are, John Underwood, Deputy, Samuel Read, Joseph Rose, Samuel Bates, Samuel Ballard, Deputy, Robert Henshaw, Richard Reiley, and William Tyler.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward.

Remarkable Things.

First, the CHURCHES, which before the Fire in 1666 were five; dedicated, 1. to St. John Zachary, situate at the Corner of Maiden-lane in Foster-lane; 2. St. Mary Staining, at the North End of Staining-lane; 3. St. Olave Silver-street, at the North-East Corner of Noble-street; 4. St. Anne Aldersgate, in St. Anne's-lane; and 5. St. Botolph, at the South-East Corner of Little-Britain, in Aldersgate-street; which five, at present, are reduced to two Churches only, viz. St. Botolph's and St. Anne's; of which hereafter in the Ecclesiastical State of this City.

Five Parishes.

Secondly, The HALLS; as,

(1.) Goldsmiths-hall, which is situate at the North-East Angle of Foster-lane. It was originally built by Sir Drew Barentin, about the Year 1407; and, since the Fire in 1666, is made a stately Structure of Brick and Stone, consisting of several handsome Apartments, and a spacious Hall, well finished, with Wainscot, &c.

Goldsmiths-hall.

(2.) Cooks-hall, situate on the East Side of Aldersgate-street, facing Little-Britain, an ancient Building, that escaped the Fire of London.

Cooks-hall.

(3.) Coachmakers, formerly Scrivener's-hall, in Noble-street.

Coach-makers-hall.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, Other publick Buildings; as,

Haberdasher's Alms-houses.

(1.) Ten Alms-houses, situate on the East Side of Staining-lane near Haberdashers-Hall, for ten poor People of that Company; founded by one Thomas Huntlow, Haberdasher, in 1539, and endowed with 8*d.* a Week, to be paid weekly on every Friday; which was augmented by Mr. Thomas Barns with 10*l.* per Annum more for ever.

London-
House.

(2.) London-House on the West Side of Aldersgate-street. It was antiently called Dorchester-House, and then Peter's or Petre's House, having been possessed by the Marquis of Dorchester, and afterwards by that antient and noble Family of the Lord Petre. After the Restoration, it was purchased for the Residence of the Bishop of London, and so called London-House. It is a very large, commodious and handsome Brick Building, with a neat Chapel annexed; but has been long deserted by the Prelates of this See: It is let out into divers Tenements and Warehouses.

Lying-in Hospital, or Shaftsbury-
House.

(3.) Thanet or Shaftsbury-House, on the East Side of Aldersgate-street, and somewhat nearer the Gate than the last mentioned, was originally built by the noble Family of the Earls of Thanet. It is now converted into an Hospital for Lying-in Married Women.

This was a most delightful fine Edifice, and was formerly the Residence of the Earls of Shaftsbury. An Edifice, says a judicious Author, that deserves a much better Situation, and greater Care to preserve it from the Injuries of Time: But the Politeness of the Town is so far removed from hence, that it is hardly possible this Fabric should be admired as it ought, or be kept in suitable Repair. Already (this Author wrote in 1736) it has been converted into a Tavern, and made to serve other mechanic Uses; insomuch that the judicious Spectator at once wonders how it came to be erected there, and laments its present Decay. At present this Palace is converted into an Hospital for Lying-in Women, a Use of publick Benefit, of which the Reader may depend on the following Account, published by Order of the President and Governors in the Year 1754.

London
Lying-in Hospital
founded.

The City of London Lying-in Hospital for Married Women, at Shaftsbury-House in Aldersgate-street, was instituted March 30, 1750.

Reasons for its Institution.

The good Effects of the many noble Institutions for training up Orphans, and other indigent Children, in the Knowledge and Practice of their Duty to God, and their Country; for relieving the industrious Poor, under the accidental Calamities of Sicknes, Lameness, or Lunacy; and for restraining, and, if possible, reclaiming the Dissolute and Debauched; together with the truly Christian Spirit of Benevolence, which at this Time so generally prevails amongst us, to the great Honour of this Age and Nation; were Inducements to several worthy Aldermen and Citizens of London, to establish a proper Provision for the Wives of poor Tradesmen or others labouring under the Terrors, Pains and Hazards of Child-birth, as the only Kind of Charity that appeared wanting in this populous and opulent City.

It cannot but greatly move our Compassion as Men, and deserve our Attention as Members of the Community, to reflect how many unhappy

Women, together with their tender Infants, have, for Want of the timely Assistance of a Man-midwife, in difficult and uncommon Cases, and even after a safe Delivery, for Want of proper Diet, Medicines and Attendance, either perished, or been deprived of the Use of their Limbs, or otherwise impaired in their Constitutions, so as to become useless to their Families and burthensome to the Publick; and how many of them are daily obliged to apply for Relief to other Hospitals for a Variety of Maladies arising from the Want of due Care and Assistance, in that perilous Time of their Lying-in, is but too well known! And therefore it is hoped, that an Institution of this Nature, calculated to support and provide for Married Women of good Character, in the last Stage of their Pregnancy, Time of Labour, and Month of Lying-in, with all suitable Helps and Necessaries, proper Diet, Advice and Medicines, will be thought a most necessary Charity, and accordingly meet with suitable Encouragement from every humane Person, especially from the Ladies, who cannot but feel, and it is hoped will gladly contribute to relieve, such imminent Distresses so peculiar to their own Sex.

Conditions.

I. Such Persons as subscribe twenty Guineas are Governors for Life, and may recommend one pregnant Woman to be upon the Books at a time.

II. Those who subscribe five Guineas, or three Guineas per Annum, are Governors so long as they continue their Subscriptions, and have the Privilege to recommend, as in the first Article.

III. All lesser Benefactions are thankfully received.

IV. Annual Governors may make up their Subscriptions twenty Guineas, within one Year from their last Payment, and thereupon become Governors for Life.

V. All Noblemen and Ladies are at Liberty, at all Elections of Officers, to vote by Proxy signified in writing.

N. B. That the Publick may be satisfied the Women are well and properly taken Care of, Ladies, though not Subscribers, may visit the Wards of the Hospital at any time; and the giving themselves that Trouble will be esteemed a Favour by the Governors.

Rules of the Hospital.

A General Court of the Governors is held four Times a Year, to receive the Report of the Quarterly Committees, elect a new Committee, and transact such other Business as may then be laid before them.

General
Court.

A House Committee is appointed at every General Quarterly Court, consisting of thirteen Governors, three of whom are a Quorum. This Committee meets every Tuesday Morning, at eleven of the Clock in the Forenoon, at the said Hospital, to receive and discharge Women, inspect the Diet and Provisions, order any Furniture and Conveniencies that may from Time to Time be wanted, and to examine into and regulate the Conduct of all the Servants and Patients of the House. These Committees are to make their Reports to the General Quarterly Courts.

Servants. A Matron, who is a skilful Midwife, constantly resides in the Hospital, and acts as such in all natural and easy Labours.

A sufficient Number of Nurses and Servants to take Care of the Lying-in Women, and do the common Business of the House.

Also a Beadle, who constantly resides at the Hospital, to be ready to go on all Messages, on sudden Emergencies, and summon the Governors, &c.

Note. The Servants of the House are forbid to take any Fee or Reward from the Lying-in Women, on any Pretence whatsoever, on Pain of being discharged.

Qualifications for Admission.

Married Women, admitted into this Hospital, must previously produce a Certificate of their Marriage from a lawful Minister; or, in case they cannot, then an Affidavit of their being married, and the Time when, and Place where, and also of the Settlement of their Husbands, and by what Means such Settlement was obtained. And no Woman is to be taken into the House, who hath any contagious Distemper.

Such as are inclined to become Benefactors by their last Will, have the following Form of a Legacy recommended to them:

Form of a Legacy.

Item, I give and bequeath unto A. B. and C. D. the Sum of _____ upon Trust, and to the Intent that they, or one of them, do pay the same to the Treasurer (for the Time being) of a Society, who now call themselves, The Governors of the City of London Lying-in Hospital for Married Women; which said Sum I desire may be applied towards carrying on the charitable Design of the said Society.

N. B. Giving Land, or Money, or Stocks, with Directions to be laid out in Land, will be void by the Mortmain Act.

The Government of this Hospital is managed by a President, four Vice-Presidents and a Treasurer, chosen annually from among the Governors; and select Committees, as before. The following are the Presidents, Vice-Presidents, Physicians, &c. at this Time:

(4.) On the same Side, more Northward, was another Nobleman's Seat, the Duke of Lauderdale's, situate between Cherry-tree-Court and Hare-Court; likewise deserted by the Successors of that most noble Family, and at present occupied by an eminent Distiller.

Lauderdale-House.

(5.) Again, on the West Side of this Street, and to the South of London House, was a fine Mansion belonging to the Earls of Westmoreland; whose Remains pronounce it to have been a beautiful and capacious Building; and are now let out into divers Tenements, and for mechanic Uses.

Westmoreland-House.

(6.) In the Street called Little Britain, antiently called Britain-Street, was once the City Mansion of the Duke of Bretagne, near to the Church of St. Botolph; but for several Ages entirely erased, and the Site alienated to private Property, whose Buildings are now also become ruinous.

Duke of Bretagne's Palace.

(7.) Peterborough House, a Palace belonging to the Earls of that Title, graced the South-East Corner of the same Street, on the Spot where the South Part of St. Bartholomew's Hospital now stands. And, Peterborough-House.

(8.) Almost the whole East Side of Little Britain, from the Gate that leads into Bartholomew-Close to Little Mountague-Court inclusive, was adorned with a superb Palace, the antient Residence of the Lord Mountague.

Mountague-House.

(9.) Near the West End of Aldersgate, in Bull-and-Mouth-Street, was situate a City Mansion-House of the Earls of Northumberland.

Northumberland-House.

(10.) Near the North-East Corner of Little Britain, in Aldersgate-Street, as noted in the Plan, stood an Hospital, Hall or Priory belonging to the Abby of Cluny in France; which, among other alien Foundations, being suppressed by King Henry V. his Majesty granted its Revenues to the Parishioners of St. Botolph, on Condition that they should found in their Church a Fraternity or Altar dedicated to the Holy Trinity. The Site of this antient religious House remains still, by the Name of Trinity-Hall, and several Tenements in Trinity-Lane, in the Possession of the Parish; and Part of the Building is existing: A lower Part is let out for a Coffee-house, but the upper Room retains somewhat the Appearance of its original Use, serving for a Place of Worship to a Congregation of Non-jurors. Here also the Parishioners meet in Vestry on particular Occasions. The other Parcels thereof are occupied by different Tenants. And for seven Inquest-Men without the Gate sitting every Year in Trinity-Hall upon the Wardmote Inquest, the Parish receives seven Shillings yearly.

Shelly-House. (11.) Besides these were several more stately Edifices; as Shelly-House, built by Sir Thomas Shelly in the 1 Henry IV. and afterwards rebuilt by Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord-Keeper under Queen Elizabeth; and that spacious House of Sir Richard Kennet, between the Church-yard of St. John Zachary and Staining-lane, in Maiden-lane, where now is built, and finished this present Year, (1754) the Union Fire-Office of Assurance of Goods, removed from Gutter-lane.

Union Fire-Office. This Office was erected in the Year 1714 by a considerable Number of Persons, who mutually agreeing to insure one another's Goods and Merchandize from Loss by Fire by an amicable Contribution, entered into a Deed of Settlement for that Purpose, which being signed by every Person desirous of becoming a Member, he is thereby admitted into the joint Contributionship, and becomes an equal Sharer in Profit and Loss, in proportion to his, her, or their respective Insurances; which Deed of Settlement was executed on the 16th of February, Anno 1714, and inrolled in Chancery on the 3d of July, Anno 1715.

This Office, denominated The Union Society for insuring of Goods and Merchandize from Loss by Fire, was erected upon the same Foot, in all respects, as that of the Hand in Hand Fire-Office, other than this, that instead of Houses, they only insure Goods and Merchandize at the Rates in the following Table :

The Affairs of this Community are managed by twenty-four Directors, who generously serve gratis; which, together with their frugal and disinterested Management, considerable Fund, and a Call of ten Shillings per Cent. (which is the most that each Contributor is obliged to pay, in case so great a Loss should happen as to require the same, which hitherto has not happened, and probably never will) on any extraordinary Event, a better Security cannot well be devised. And as this Office, as already hinted, is calculated for the general Good of the Society, the Members have the Advantage of examining the Deed of Settlement, and all Orders and Proceedings, as well of the general Courts, as that of the Directors.

To this Office belong twenty-four Porters (who give sufficient Security for their Fidelity) for carrying off the Goods of the Insured in case of Fire, who, besides their Cloaths and Badges, and Protection from a Press, are handsomely paid for their Labour.

King Edward II's House. Rec. Tur. (12.) According to an antient Record in the Tower, I find a certain Tenement in the Parish of St. Mary Staining-lane pertaining to King Edward II. bounded on the South by the Land of Robert Burdeine, and a Lane which leads from the said Church unto the King's Street of Wood-street; which House the King granted first to C. de Burgalia, and again to Rafe Bassett de Draiton, A. D. 1320, Reg. 14.

St. Martin le Grand. After this pompous Survey of the antient Buildings in this Parish compared to its present Condition, which has Reason to bemoan the Loss of its noble Inhabitants, and the Destruction of their Palaces; I shall proceed with a Survey of the Liberty of St. Martin le Grand.

St. Martin's le Grand contains but one principal Street, called St. Martin's le Grand; which cometh out of Blowbladder-street, by the West End of Cheapside, and runneth North to Aldersgate. But this Liberty runneth but to Bell-court, near unto St. Anne's-lane, on the East Side. For from Bell-court unto Aldersgate, is in Aldersgate Ward, and out of this Liberty. This Street is a Place of considerable Trade, is a great Thoroughfare, and its Houses well built.

In this Liberty are these Courts and Places of Note; Round-court, large, with a handsome Free-stone Pavement, the Part towards St. Martin's being a handsome square Court. It has a Passage into Blowbladder-street, which was formerly inhabited by Milliners, and such as sell Copper Lace, called St. Martin's Lace, for which it was of Note. Out of this Court is an Alley, which leads into New-rents, which also comes into St. Martin's-street; and at the Upper End are two Passages into Foster-lane, one of which goes into a Place called the Dark-entry, by St. Leonard Foster-lane Church-Yard. Mouldmakers-rents, an indifferent open Place; out of which are several Passages, as into New-rents, Dean's-court, and George-street. New-rents, a handsome Street, which comes out of St. Martin's-street; and at the Upper End was the Swan Tavern. Great Dean's-court, an open Place, indifferently well built and inhabited; has a Passage into Mouldmakers-rents, or Row, and another into George-street. In this Court is another small one, called Little Dean's-court, which is but ordinary. George-street, of which there are two; the one leading into Foster-lane, and the other into Round-court. St. John's-alley, ordinary. Cock-alley has a narrow Entrance, which leads into an open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, indifferent. Christopher's-alley has a Free-stone Pavement, good; which at the Upper End, has a Door into the Bagnio. Four-dove-court, an open Place, with a Free-stone Pave-

Pavement. King's-head-court; a handsome Place, well built and inhabited, with a Free-stone Pavement. Angel-alley, good; the Upper End falls into Butcherball-lane. Of this Street, that Part within this Liberty goes no farther than King's-head-court; the rest of this Street is in the Ward of Faringdon within.

Bull-and-mouth-street goes out of St. Martin's-le-Grand, and runs up to Butcherball-lane; but it has no more in this Ward than a little Westward of the Bull-and-mouth Inn, which is large, and well built, and of good Resort by those that bring Bone-Lace, where the Shop-keepers and others come to buy it. The Fountain Tavern, commonly called the Mourning Bush, which has a Back-Door into St. Anne's-lane, is seated near unto Aldersgate. And in this Part of St. Martin's, was a noted Meeting-House of the Quakers, called the Bull-and-mouth, where they met long before the Fire, till the building Lease expired a few Years ago; but at present it is occupied by a Methodist Preacher.

This Liberty was an Ecclesiastical Foundation: It takes its Name originally from a Collegiate Church founded by Ingalricus and his Brother Edward, A. D. 1056, for a Dean and secular Canons or Priests, and dedicated to St. Martin, with the Addition of Le Grand, from the great or extraordinary Privileges of Sanctuary, &c. granted by divers Monarchs thereto; of which there has been Mention made in the first Book of this History, p. 191, 226, 227; and to which we add, The Charter granted by William the Conqueror, concerning the ancient Privileges of St. Martins-le-Grand.

For the Exposition of the Words of Privilege, occcurring in the Charters aforesaid, I have added these following Observations:

“Sok*, est Secta de hominibus in curia
 “vestra (Sancti Martini) secundum consuetudi“nem regni.

“Sak, est placitum et Emenda de transgressionib“us hominum in curia vestra. Sok, idem per “quele acheson: et Sak dicitur pur forfet.

“Tol, est quod vos et homines vestri de toto “homagio vestro sitis quieti, in omnibus merca“tis, de toto tolreto, de rebus emptis et venditis.

“Tem, est quod habeatis totam generationem “villanorum vestrorum, cum eorum sectis et “catallis, ubicunque in Anglia fuerint inventi.

“Excepto, quod si aliquis nativus, quietus per “unum annum et unum diem, in aliqua villa “privilegiata manserit; ita quod in eorum com-“munitatem et guildam, tanquam unus eorum “receptus fuerit; eo ipso à villenagio liberatus “est.

“Infangtheof, est quod latrones capti in Domi-
 “nico vel feodo vestro, et de suo latrocinio con-“victi, in curia vestra judicentur.

“Hangewyte, est quietus de latrone suspenso
 “sine judicio, vel extra custodiam vestram “evaso.

“Utsangtheof, est quod latrones de terra vestra,
 “vel de feodo vestro, extra terram vestram vel “feodum vestrum capti cum latrocinio; ad cu-“riam vestram revertantur, et ibi judicentur.

“Hamsfoken,

"Hamsfoken, est quietum esse de amerciamento pro magistro hospitiorum, violenter et sine licentia, et contra pacem: et quod teneatis placita de huiusmodi transgressionibus, factis in curia vestra, et in terra vestra.

"Gritbbrech, est pax Domini Regis fracta.

"Blodwite, est quietum esse de amerciamento pro Medlets: et quod teneatis placita in curia vestra: et quod habeatis amerciamenta inde provenientia.

"Flistwite, est quietum esse de contentione et conviciis: et quod habeatis inde placitum in curia vestra: et quod habeatis inde amerciamenta.

"Fledwite, est quietum esse de amerciamento, cum quis utlegatus fugitivus venerit ad pacem domini Regis, sponte vel licenciatus.

"Flemenesth, quod habeatis catalla five amerciamenta hominis vestri fugitivi.

"Letherwyte, est quod capiat is emendationem ab ipso qui corrumpit nativam vestram, sine licentia vestra.

"Childwite, est quod capiat is gersumam de nativa vestra corrupta et pregnata sine licentia vestra.

"Forstat, est quietum esse de amerciamento de catallis arrestatis infra terram vestram: et habeatis amerciamenta inde provenientia.

"Scot, est esse quietum de quadam consuetudine; sicut de tallagio facto ad opus Vicecomitis vel Ballivorum ejus.

"Geld, est quietum esse de consuetudinibus servilibus, quæ quondam dari consueverunt, et adhuc dantur. Sicut Hornegeld, et ab aliis similibus.

"Hidage, est quietum esse si Dominus Rex talliaverit totam terram per Hidam.

"Caruage, si Dominus Rex talliaverit terram per Carucas.

"Danegeld, est quietum esse de quadam consuetudine, five solutione; quam quidem Dani levaverunt primum in Anglia.

"Hornegeld, est quietum esse per totam terram de quadam consuetudine exactam per talliam: sicut de quacunque bestia cornuta.

"Lestage, est quietum esse de quadam consuetudine exactam in nundinis et mercatis, pro rebus cariandis, ut homo vult.

"Stallage, est quietum esse de quadam consuetudine exactam pro placeis captis vel assignatis in nundinis vel mercatis.

* Scawing.

"* Chewyng, est quietum esse de attachiamento in aliqua curia, et coram quibuscunque, de querelis ostensis, et non advocat.

"Miskennyng, est quietum esse de amerciamento pro querela, coram quibuscunque, in transumptione prolata.

"Burgbruch, est quietum esse de transgressionem facta in Civitate vel Burgo, contra pacem.

"Wardwyte, est quietum esse de denario dando pro Ward facienda.

"Hundred, est quietum esse de denario, vel consuetudine facienda Præposito et Hundredæ.

"Bordkalepeny, est quietum esse de quadam consuetudine exactionis, pro tabula levata.

"Brigbote, est quietum esse de auxilio dando ad reficiendos pontes.

"Burgbote, est quietum esse de auxilio dando

No. 65.

"ad reficiendum burgum, castrum, civitatem vel muros prostratos.

"Haverpeny, est quietum esse de denariis dandis Averagio Domini Regis; cum similibus."

Since which Time, to wit, in the Year 1457, the 36th of the said Henry VI. an Ordinance was made by the King and his Council, concerning the Sanctuary Men in St. Martin's-le-Grand; whereof the Articles are set down in the Book of K. within the Chamber of the Guildhall, in the Leaf 299, and is in the Englisch then used, as it stands in the Record:

Henricus Dei Gratia, Rex Angliæ & Franciæ, Dominus Hyberniæ: Omnibus ad quos præsentem Literam perveniunt, Salutem. Inspeximus Tenorem quendam Ordinationis, Concessionis, & stabilimenti certorum Articulorum infra Sanctua Liberæ Capellæ nostræ, St. Martini, infra Civitatem nostram London, observandum & custodiendum; coram nobis, & concilio nostro, 5 Die Februarii ultimo præterito, apud Westmon. in Camera Stellata, ordinatorum & stabilitorum, nobis in Cancellar. nostram de mandato nostro missum factum, in hæc Verba.

"The fifth of Fevever, the Yeere of the Reigne of our Sovereigne Lord King Henry VI. thirty-fifth: At Westminster, in the Sterre-Chamber, our said Sovereigne Lord, calling to high Remembrance the good and blessed Entent that his full noble Progenitors have at all Times had, to the Honour, Worship, Conservation and Wele of the Free Chapel of St. Martin's within the City of London; of the which the King our Sovereign Lord is Founder and Patron: Desiring to do all that may serve to the Ease and restful Roule of the same; and Conservation of the Sanctuary, Immunity, Privileges and Liberties, as appertain to the said Chapel and Place; willing, that hereafter none occasion be yeven to the Breach or hurting them: Remembring also the great Complaints, Grudging, and Displeasure, that his Subjects have taken, and especially the Citizens and Commonalty of the said City of London, of the demeaning of the misruled Persons coming and abiding in the said Place, under Umbre and Colour of the Sanctuary there; the which have, at divers Times, issued out of the Sanctuary and committed many Ryots, Robberies, Manslaughters, and other Mischiefes; were through the said Sanctuary hath been greatly dislaundered, and (over that) great Inconvenience like to ensue.

"After great Deliberation and Communication had, as well with Doctors of Divinity, as of Law, Civil and Canonically; called also thereto the Judges of this our Land, and their Advices had in that Behalfe; other Men also of great Wisedome and Experience, for the Weale and Conservation of the said Sanctuary, and to eschew the said Misgovernance and Mischief, called also before our said Sovereigne Lord and his Councill, the Maior and the Aldermen of the said City, and Master Richard Cawdre, Dean of the said Place of St. Martin's: Our Sovereigne Lord (by the Advice of his Councill abovesaid) ordained, granted, and established Ordinance concerning its Sanctuary. Lib. X. fol. 299. apud Guildhall.

“ established certain Articles under-written, to “ bee kept and observed within the said Sanc“ tuary, from this Time forth, without any In“ terruption of them. Willing and ordaining, “ that the said Deane, that now is, promit by his “ Oath the Observance of the same, for the Time “ that hee shall bee Deane there. And that “ every Deane after him, in his Admission to the “ said Deanary, be sworne to keepe the said “ Articles in semblable wise, and make them “ to bee kept within the said Sanctuary: The “ which Articles beene such as follow:

“ 1. First, That every Person Fugitive come“ ing unto the said Sanctuary for Tuiton, and “ challenge to enjoy the Immunities and Privi“ leges thereof; at his Entree, as soone as hee “ commodiously and reasonably may, shall now “ present himselfe unto the said Deane, his “ Commissarie, or Depute in that Behalfe; and “ before him declare the Cause of the Feare “ moving him to come to the said Sanctuarie;
 “ be it for Treason, Felony surmised upon him,
 “ or for other Causes. And that the said De“ claration and Cause bee registered in the “ common Register, ordained therefore in the “ said Sanctuary, and the Name of the said “ Fugitive.

“ 2. Item, That hee, at his first Entree, pre“ sent and deliver unto the said Deane, Commis-“ sarie, or Depute, all Manner of Weapon and “ Armour that hee bringeth with him, as well “ invasive as defensive; and that he be not suf“ fered to weare or use any such Weapon or Ar“ mour, or it to have in his keeping within the “ Sanctuary in any wise, except a reasonable “ Knife, to kerve withall his Meate, and that the “ said Knife be pointlesse.

“ 3. Item, That every erraunt and open Theefe, “ Robber, Murderer, and Felon, notoriously “ noised by the common Fame of the People;
 “ or if the said Deane, Commissary, or Depute,
 “ be credibly informed, or due Proove be yoven “ or made, that he is such one, repairing to the “ said Sanctuary, to the Intent that he shall not “ (under Colour of the said Sanctuary) intend to “ doe further Mischiefe; find sufficient Seurte to “ bee made unto the King, as well by his own “ Obligation, as by the Obligation of other,
 “ of his good Bearing for the Time of his Abode “ within the said Sanctuary, and for a Quarter of “ a Yeere after his departing out of the same:
 “ And that hee bee kept in Ward into the Time
 “ he have found and made the said Seurte. And “ if it so be, that it be complained or shewed “ unto the King’s Highnesse, that the said Seurte
 “ bee not sufficient; that then, at the Command“ ment of the said Councell, (if it bee thought “ necessary) the said Deane, Commissary, or “ Depute, shall take other and better Securte,
 “ or else commit them to Ward unto the Time “ better Securte bee found. Foreseene alway, “ that if the said Fugitive will depart out of the “ said Sanctuary, that hee may so do when “ hee will.

“ 4. Item, That all the Out-Gates, as well “ Posternes, Doores, as all other Issues outward, “ whatsoever they be, of the said Sanctuary, bee “ surely closed and shut nightly at Nine of the “ Clocke; and so remaine shut from the same

“ Houre unto Sixe of the Clocke in the Morning, “ from the Feast of Alballows unto the Feast of “ Candlemasse; and the Remanent of the Yeere, “ nightly, from the said Houre of Nine unto “ Foure of the Clocke in the Morning, or unto
 “ the Time the first Masse beginneth within the “ said Place: And that all those that been fled
 “ to the said Sanctuary for Treason or Felony,
 “ be within the Clofure on Night’s Time.

“ 5. Item, If any such Theefe, Murderer, or “ Felon, resort to the said Sanctuary for Tuiton
 “ of the same, with any manner Robbery, or “ stollen Goods, if the Party robbed make fresh “ Sute therefore, and prove, by open Evidence,
 “ that the same Felon hath brought into the said “ Sanctuary the said Goods so stollen thence, the “ said Deane, Commissary, or Depute, shall put “ in true Devoir, withouten any Dissimulation, “ Fraud, or Malengyne, to make full Restitu“ tion unto the Party so grieved of the said stollen “ Goods, if they can bee had. And semblably,
 “ if any Fugitive come to the said Sanctuary “ with other Mens Goods, Merchandize, or “ Things, intending there to live with the same,
 “ and the Owner of the said Goods, Merchandize, “ or Things, make Proove that they be his, and “ verifie that they be brought into the said Sanctu“ ary, the said Deane, Commissarie, or Depute, “ shall put him in full Devoire, to make Restitu“ tion to the Party so proving that the same “ Goods, Merchandizes, or Things were his.
 “ And no Fugitive, nor none dwelling within “ the said Sanctuary, shall receive, conceale, nor “ buy any such Goods; but that they bee brought “ to the said Deane, Commissary, or Depute, to
 “ the Intent that the Owners may have the sooner “ Knowledge of them. And if the said Goods so “ stollen and brought to the said Sanctuary be “ concealed from the said Deane, Commissary, “ or Depute, and bought by any dwelling in “ the said Sanctuary, that then the Buyer (abide-“ ing there) make Restitution or Satisfaction to
 “ the Party grieved, proving the said Goods so “ stollen to bee his, and so sold in the same “ Sanctuary.

“ 6. Item, If any Person, having Tuiton of the “ said Sanctuary, from thence issue out by Day
 “ or by Night, and commit or do any Robbery, “ Murder, Treason, or Felony, or Battery so “ done (withouten forth) commit the same Mis“ doer to Ward, there to remaine as long as he “ will abide in the Sanctuary. And if so bee hee “ will depart from thence, he shall depart at an “ Hour to be assigned unto him by Day, betwixt “ Sunne and Sunne.

“ 7. Item, That subtle Pickers of Locks, “ Counterfeitours of Keys, Contrivers of Seals, “ Forgers of false Evidences, Workers of coun“ terfeit Chaines, Beades, Brouches, Ouches, “ Rings, Cups, Spoons silvered, and Plates
 “ of Copper gilt, uttered for Gold, unto the “ common Hurt of the People, be not suf“ fered in the said Sanctuary. And if any,
 “ being within the said Sanctuary, be holden
 “ suspect of the Things abovesaid, let him
 “ be committed to Ward till he find suf“ ficient Surety, as in the third Article above“ said.

“ 8. Item,

“ 8. Item, That common Putuers, Strumpets, and Bawdes, be not suspected in the Sanctuary: And if they claime the Tuition of the said Sanctuary, that they be set in open Ward on Day-Times, till Shame cause them to depart, or to amend their vicious living.

“ 9. Item, That deceitfull Games, as Playes at Hazzard, the Dice, the Guck, the Kayelles, the Cloysh, and other such unleeftull and reproveable Games, bee not used, supported, nor cherished within the said Sanctuary.

“ 10. Item, That all Artificers dwelling within the said Sanctuary (as well Barbours as other) keepe holy the Sundayes, and other great Festival Dayes, without Breach, or exercising of their Craft, in such wise as done the Inhabitants of the said City of London. And if they doe the contrary, to bee committed to Ward till they finde sufficient Surety, as in the third Article abovesaid, to use their Crafts in Manner and Forme as doe the Inhabitants of the said City, and according to the Ordinances of the same City.

11. Item, That every Person comming to the said Sanctuary for Immunity and Tuition of the same, that hee, at his Admiffion to the said Sanctuary, be sworne on a Booke to obey, keepe, and observe the Articles abovesaid, and every each of them, with their Pains and Rules appertaining to the same. And the King, by the Advice abovesaid, would, granted, and ordained, that this Act be exemplified under his Great Seale, and be enrolled in his Chancellary; to the Intent, that the Ordinance abovesaid remaine of Record, and that his Subjects may have Knowledge thereof.

From these Regulations and Articles aforementioned, this St. Martin's appears to have been a Sanctuary for great Disorders, and a Shelter for the loofest Sort of People, Rogues and Ruffians, Thieves, Felons, and Murderers. From hence used to rush violent Persons, Committers of Riots, Robberies, and Manslaughters: Hither they brought in their Preys and stolen Goods, and concealed them here, and shared or sold them to those that dwelt here. Here were also harboured Picklocks, Counterfeiters of Keys and Seals, Forgers of false Evidences, such as made counterfeit Chains, Beads, Ouches, Plate, Copper gilt for Gold, nay, common Strumpets and Bawds, Gamesters, and Players at Hazard and Dice, and other unlawful Games; and, lastly, Prophaners of Sundays, and other Festival Days, exercising their Crafts thereon.

And again, to this Licentiousness was this Sanctuary grown in these Times, that in Henry VII's Reign, one coming hither for Sanctuary, the Sheriffs took him thence by Violence, and brought him away. But observe what followed: The Abbot of Westminster (to whom this College now belonged) exhibited a Bill to the King against these Sheriffs, for arresting and drawing with Force a privileged Person out of the Sanctuary of St. Martin's, belonging to the said Abbey. Which Matter was heard in the Court of Star-Chamber before the Lords, and others of the King's Council, and Hody and Newton, Chief Justices: Which Justices determined, that by Law the Party ought to enjoy the Privilege of Sanctuary; and the Sheriffs were grievously fined by particular Name: Which Sentence the Lord Dyer saw, as he reported under his own Hand. (And the Lord Coke saw in MS. not printed) upon a Reference to him and Justice Southcote, out of the Star-Chamber, Trin. 11 Eliz., concerning the Sanctuary of Westminster, for Hampton and Whiteakers being in for Debt. But I cannot, in Justice to my Subject, and to Mr. D. Capel, who has been so kind to give his Sentiments thereon, omit his Reasons, that this Liberty is properly subject to the Laws of the City. That Gentleman writes thus:

“ I beg Leave to lay before you the Substance of what I offered in Bar of a Sentence of Transportation passed on one William Hall, and another Person, in the Mayoralty of Alderman Winterbottom, who was tried and convicted by a Middlesex Jury, after a London Jury had heard the Cause, and were ready to give their Verdict, but were ordered by the then Recorder to acquit him, because some of the Council at the Bar persuaded him St. Martin's le Grand was in Middlesex. This Hall was tried by the Middlesex Jury, and convicted of a Robbery committed in the said Precinct.

“ The Reasons offered in Bar of Sentence, were, 1. Because the Privileged Places were granted to serve God in Acts of Devotion, and on a religious Account, only, and not for the following of Trades: And all their Privileges were taken away at the Reformation by Act of Parliament.

“ 2. Because so long ago as the Reign of Henry VI. the Common Serjeant of London offered before the King and Council to forfeit his Life, if he could not prove St. Martin's le Grand had no Right to be exempt from the City's Jurisdiction; and therefore, if these Privileges were so disputable in those Times, how much more must they now be since the Reformation?

“ 3. Because the Sheriffs Officers for London arrest for Debt in this Liberty, which, if in Middlesex, they have no Right to do.

“ 4. Because, in all the Grants and Charters to this Place, on which they found their pretended Privileges, they constantly declare that it is within the City of London, therefore cannot be said with any Propriety to be in Middlesex; consequently no Middlesex Jury can have any Cognizance of any Cause arising therein; and therefore the Sentence must be illegal, the Cause

Mr. Capel's Reasons.

"Cause not having been tried by a Jury where
"the Crime was committed."

Concerning the Patron, Privilege, and exempt Jurisdiction of this Church, we may understand by an Inquisition of the King's Justices at the Tower, in the Reign of King Edward II. when the Jury made this Presentment of it: That the Church of Great St. Martin's, London, was in the Donation of the King; and that Richard de Ellefeld then held it, and was Dean there; they knew not by what Warrant; therefore the Sheriff was commanded to cause him to appear; who came, and said, That he held the foresaid Church of St. Martin's as a free Chapel of the Lord the King, by the Donation and Concession of him, the present King, exempted from all ordinary Jurisdiction, and free, by the Letters of the same King; which he produced in these Words, Edwardus Dei Gratia, &c. and by that Warrant he held that Church.

Before this Church there was a Solar, that is, a large, airy Room, or Chamber, somewhat like the Galleries in some great Houses, being Places of Entertainment and Pleasure. This Solar was towards the Street, and had a Jetty outwards, which was so low that it annoyed the People passing along. It was presented at the aforefaid Inquisition in these Words: "That the Dean and Canons of St. Martin's the Great held a certain Solar against the said Church, containing in Length twenty-nine Feet, and in Breadth eleven Feet; Cujus Gettiscium est nimis bassum de tribus pedibus, i. e. Whose Jetty was too low by three Feet." The Sheriff was commanded to summon them. Afterwards the Dean and Canons appeared by their Attorney, and yielded to take away what was an Annoyance by the View of the Jury; and therefore it was commanded the Sheriff to throw down whatsoever was an Annoyance; but the Dean was not fined, because it was not his proper Deed.

Antiently, when this College flourished, a Curfeu Bell was rung here; as was at Bow, St. Giles's, Cripplegate, and Barking. It was a great Bell to be heard at a Distance, to give the Citizens Warning of the Time of Night, and to keep within Doors. King Edward I. in his Reign, in Orders sent to the City for keeping the Peace, against many Mischiefs and Murders, Robberies, and beating down of People by certain Hectors, walking armed in the Streets at Nights, commanded, that henceforth none should be so hardy to be found wandering in the Streets after Curfeu Bell sounded at St. Martin's le Grand.

This College was surrendered to King Edward VI. the second of his Reign, in the Year of Christ 1548; and the same Year the College Church was pulled down, many Houses built, highly prized, and lett to Strangers born, and such others as claimed Benefit of the Privileges granted to the Canons, serving God Day and Night (for so are the Words in the Charter of William the Conqueror;) which may hardly be wrested to Artificers, Buyers, and Sellers, otherwise than is mentioned in the 21st of St. Matthew's Gospel.

In the East Part, where the College Church stood, was afterwards a large Tavern built; and down to the West, and so throughout the whole Precinct of that College, it was new built upon.

After this Deanery, with the Sanctuary and Privileges, was granted to the Abbey of St. Peter's in Westminster, William, Abbot of the said Monastery of St. Peter of Westminster, asserted his Title to the Privilege and Sanctuary of St. Martin's le Grand in London, with the Precincts, Circuit, and Bounds of the same, in this Form:

"First, the said Abbot saith, That the free Chapel of St. Martin's le Grand in London, and the Precincts of St. Martin's aforefaid, is a Place privileged, and was founded and endowed long Time before the Conquest, as well of Possessions as of Immunities, Franchises, and Liberties; and corroborated and enlarged by King William the Conqueror, like as it appeareth, as well by the Charter of the said King William the Conqueror, as by divers other Charters, Writings, and Records.

"Item, The said King William the Conqueror granted by his Charter to the same Place of St. Martin's divers Liberties and Franchises, by special and general Words, as well in the Latin Tongue as Saxon; and, over that, granted to the said Place of St. Martin's all other Liberties, Immunities, and Customs, which any Church of this Realm best had: Which Grant importeth and includeth in itself as great Privileges, Franchises, and Immunities, as Westminster, Beverlay, or any other Place privileged, hath within this Realm. And also the said Words in Saxon importeth such Sentence; that the said Place should be franchised, privileged, and have Tuition and Immunities of all those Persons, which for Treason, Felonies, Trespasses, or any other Cause, should flee to the same, or abide therein: Which Franchises, Privilege, Tuition, and Immunities, the said Place hath always peaceably had and enjoyed, from the said Conqueror's Days unto this present Time.

"Item, The said Franchises, Immunities, and Privileges of St. Martin's have been corroborated, confirmed, allowed, and enlarged, by King Henry I. King Stephen, Henry II. King John, King Henry III. King Edward II. King Edward III. Richard II. Henry V. Henry VI. and in all other Kings Times since the Conquest; as by divers Charters and Allowances before Justices of Oyer and Determiner, Writings and Records, more plainly at large is shewed, and may appear.

"Item, It appeareth by divers Returns made by the Sheriffs of London, as well in the King's Bench, Common-Pleas, and all other the King's Courts, that the said Place of St. Martin's is a Place privileged and Sanctuary; as by the same Returns, remaining of Record, more plainly appear.

"Item, The said Abbot saith, That the Precinct, Circuit, and Bounds of the Privilege and Sanctuary aforefaid be and extend as hereafter followeth.

"Imprimis, Beginning at a Wall lying directly against a Post that standeth in the Middle of one Roger Wright's, a Grocer's House, which standeth on the East Side of the South Gate of "St.

“ St. Martin’s; and from the Wall in the said “ Grocer’s House, with the Half Deal of the “ Street, unto the Channel of the same Side “ that House standeth upon, Sanctuary: And “ so forth from the East Westward, unto the “ Midst of St. Martin’s Lane, next to the Cha“ pel of St. Martin’s, against the Tenement of “ the Bull’s-Head, which Tenement lieth at “ the South End of the said Lane, on the West “ Part.

“ Item, Half Part of the Street of St.
 “ Martin’s-Lane, Sanctuary, from the South “ unto the North, as far forth as the Houses “ appertaining to the Bull’s-Head do extend “ Northwards.

“ Item, From the said Place of the Bull’s-Head,
 “ then the whole Lane of St. Martin’s, Sanctuary
 “ on both Sides, unto a Post or Stoop that stand“ eth on the North Side or End of the two Tene“ ments standing by the great Gate next going “ into the Dean’s Court.

“ Item, From the said St. Martin’s-Lane, at the “ aforefaid Bull’s-Head, turning by a Wall that “ divideth the said Tenement of the Bull’s-Head
 “ and St. Martin’s Ground; which Wall turneth
 “ and extendeth from the East Westwards, unto a “ back Wall that closeth in St. Martin’s Ground
 “ of the West Side; all within the said Wall, “ Sanctuary.

“ Item, Along by the same back Wall that “ closeth in the West Part of St. Martin’s Ground, “ from the South End of the said Wall into the “ North, unto a Wall that divideth my Lord
 “ of Northumberland’s Ground and St. Martin’s “ Ground from the South End; all within the “ aforefaid Walls, Sanctuary: And so forth, “ from the South Side into the North of my “ Lord of Northumberland’s Ground, Sanctuary.
 “ Along by a back Wall of the Grey Friars, “ which back Wall closeth in my Lord of Nor-“ thumberland’s Ground of the West Part, unto
 “ the North Part of Angel-Alley, abutting North“ wards, upon the South Side of Robert Bowman’s “ House, into the Street-wards. And so Sanctu“ ary still, from the said back Wall of Grey “ Friars, along by the Angel-Alley, and by the “ South Part of the said Robert Bowman’s House,
 “ from the West unto the East, until you come “ to a Post or Stoop standing on the North “ Part of the two Tenements next lying on the “ North Side of a great Gate entering into the “ Dean’s Court.

“ Item, From the aforefaid Wall, along from
 “ the North, Southward, unto Hugh Payne’s “ Dwelling-House; and from thence, by the “ North Side of the said Hugh Payne’s Garden, “ Sanctuary still, from the West unto the East “ Part thereof.

“ Item, Again from the North Side of the “ above-rehearsed Hugh Payne’s Garden, South“ ward, unto the Dean’s Garden, Sanctuary.

“ Item, Along by the Wall on the North “ Side of the Dean’s Garden, from the West
 “ into the East thereof, Sanctuary.

“ Item, From the North unto the South of the “ aforefaid Dean’s Garden, with St. Leonard’s “ Church, Sanctuary, as by a Wall it there “ sheweth.

“ Item, From the East End of St. Leonard’s

“ Church, Westward of the South of St. Martin’s, “ unto the Bell-Alley, Sanctuary; as appeareth
 “ also by another Wall there.

“ Item, From the Bell-Alley, Southward, unto
 “ the Wall spoken of at the Beginning, which is “ within the Grocer’s House, against the Post
 “ that standeth within the Midst of the same “ House: And so forth directly again unto the “ Channel of the high Street, that lieth before
 “ the South Gate of St. Martin’s; all within the “ Bounds rehearsed, Sanctuary.

“ Item, By a Statute made in the — Year of St. Martin’s a privileged
Place for Debt,
Treason, or Felony.
 “ King Edward III. it is affirmed, The said Place
 “ of St. Martin’s to be a Place franchised and pri“ vileged, having Tuition and Immunity, in “ Manner and Form as is above rehearsed; and “ in special, and for them that come in thither
 “ for Debt, Treason, and Felony. In Proof “ whereof, the Judge that sitteth there for the “ King, as in a Place, not of the City, but by “ Privilege separate, (the Mayor not called there-
 “ to, as he is to the Deliverance of Newgate, and “ other such Acts in the City) to have Knowledge
 “ there in a Case of Treason or Felony, hath “ ever, from Time that no Mind is, sitten in “ the Gate of the said Sanctuary; and the Per“ son appeached or indicted of Treason and “ Felony hath been kept by the Officers on “ the further Side of the Street afore him;
 “ to the Intent that he come not of the other “ Side of the Channel, towards the Sanctuary
 “ there, to claim the Liberty and Franchises of
 “ the same.

“ Item, Whereas divers Kings of this Land,
 “ for Causes such as moved them, have seized
 “ into their Hands the Franchises and Liberties “ that the City of London had, by Reason where“ of they were not suffered to use or enjoy the “ said Franchises, for as long as it hath liked “ unto the said Kings; yet the said Chapel of St.
 “ Martin’s le Grand, in the said City of London,
 “ with the Precinct of the same, at the said “ Times of such seizing of the aforefaid Fran“ chises, was afore and since always a Place pri“ vileged, without any Disturbance, Diminishing, “ or Taking away by the said Kings, or by their “ Ministers; and peaceably used and enjoyed “ their Franchises, Liberties, and Immunities, “ within the Sanctuary and Precinct of St.
 “ Martin’s, as in a Place exempted and privi“ leged, and no Ways pertaining unto the said No ways pertaining to the City,
 “ City; no Parcel thereof, though it be within “ the said City.

“ And moreover, the said Abbot saith, That
 “ the said Church or Chapel of St. Martin’s, “ within the said Sanctuary and Precinct of the “ same, were of late, by the late King of fa“ mous Memory, King Henry VII. lawfully an- Given to the Abbey of Westminster by King
Hen. VII.
 “ nexed and given to the said Monastery of St.
 “ Peter of Westminster; at which Time and “ Times, without Mind of Man before that,
 “ the said Chapel and Precinct, Circuit and “ Bounds of the said Sanctuary, comprized “ within the Limits above rehearsed, were “ used, allowed, and taken, and yet be, as “ Sanctuary.”

Thus far the Abbot of Westminster’s Declaration, at which Time (as it appears) there fell out so 9 K much much Contestation concerning the Precincts of this Sanctuary, that the Matter was fain to be tried by antient sworn Men depofed in Court, as Witneffes. What follows of their Depofitions came to Hand; the reft (and the Beginning) were loft:

Depofitions concerning
St. Martin's.

"Item, The faid Henry Williamson depofeth for the claimed Bounds, and alfo for the Privilege of Sanctuary-Men, in the half Street and Lane next to St. Martin's; and for the fetting up of the Gallows on Evil-May-Day; and for the removing thereof, as others therein before have depofed.

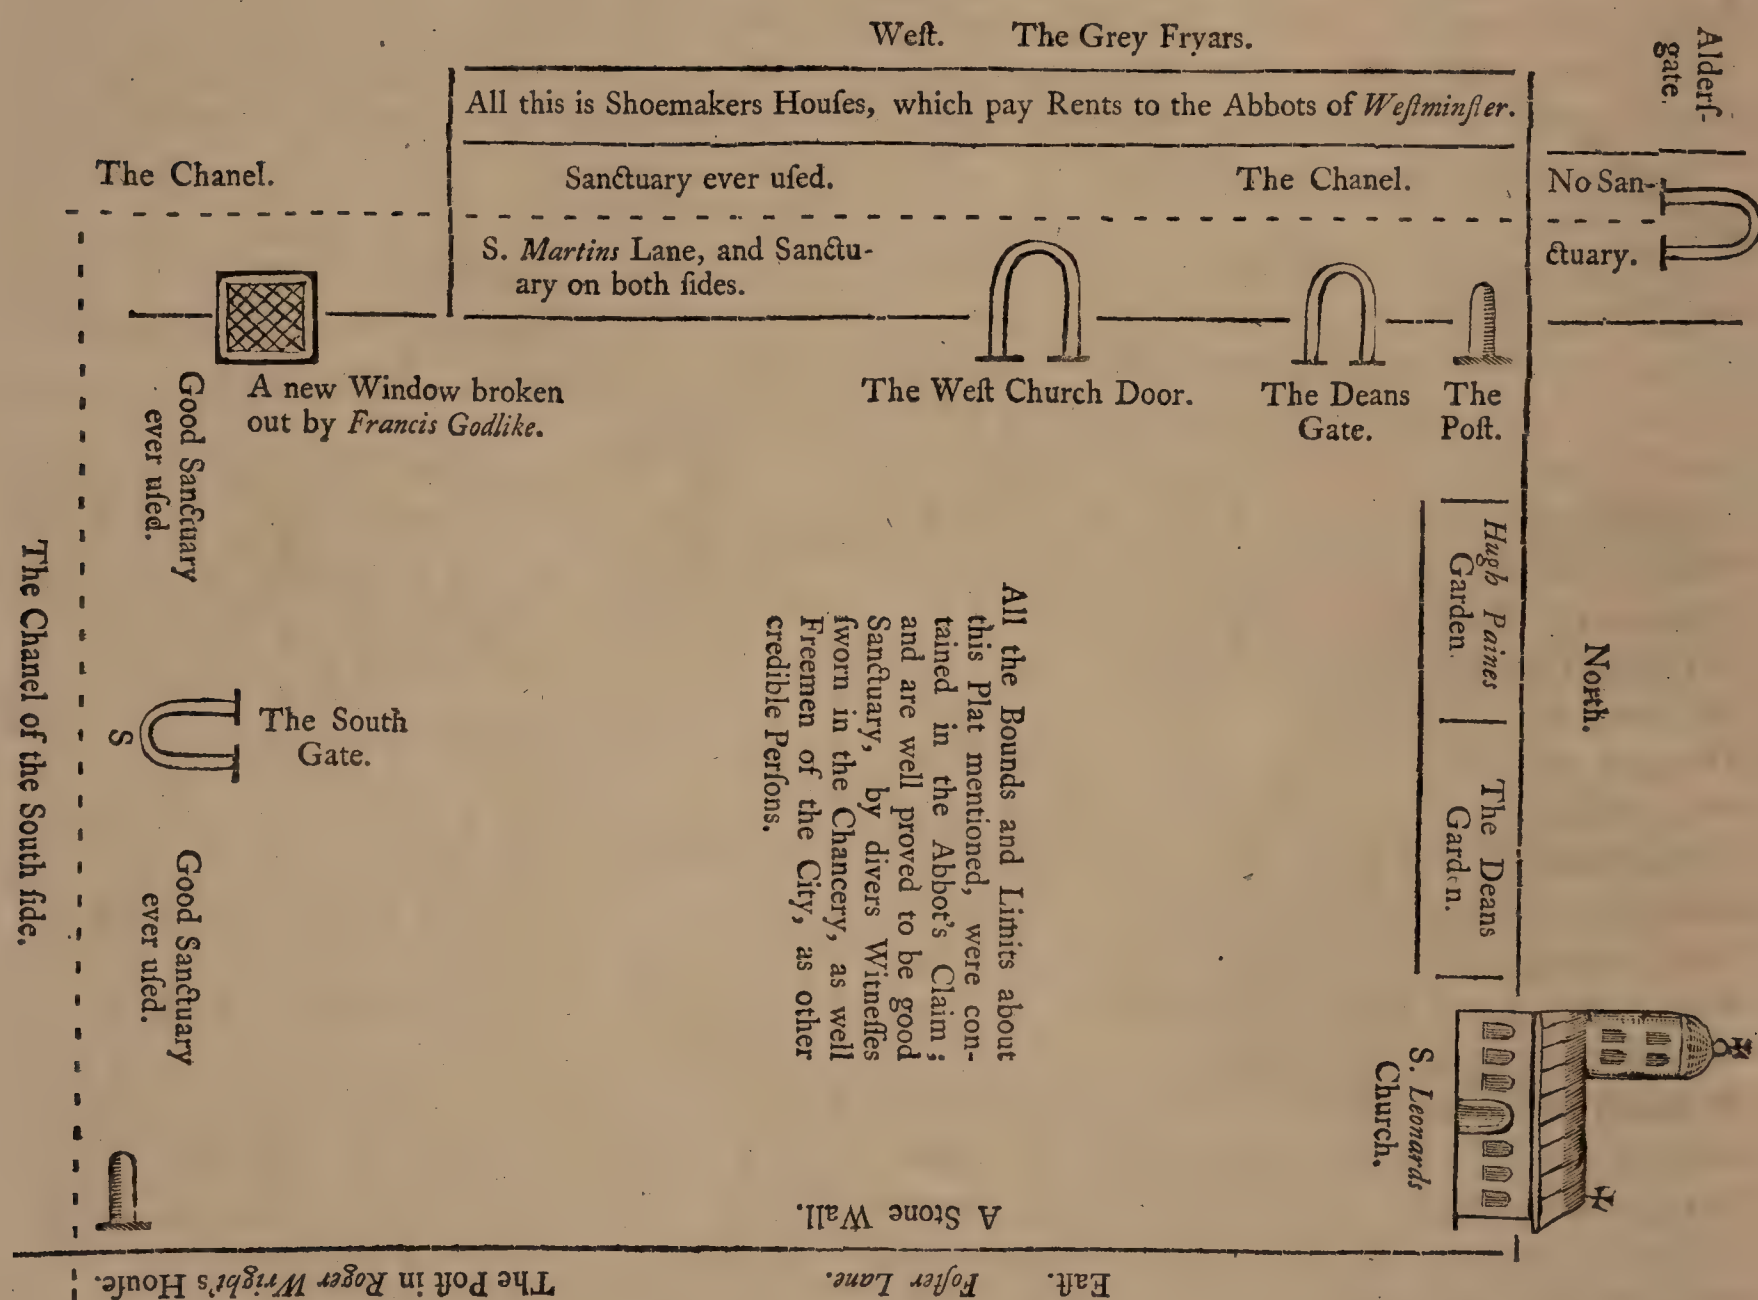

"Item, Ralph Twyn depofeth all wholly the claimed Bounds to be Sanctuary; and alfo the fetting up of the Gallows, and removing of the fame; and the Pavement to be done by the Abbot; and that he knew one Bland, privileged both for Treafon and Murder, ever ufed to walk in the Street claimed as Sanctuary, without any Difurbance.

"Item, William Bayley depofeth all the claimed Bounds, and alfo the fitting of the Juftices in "the South Gate; and that he heard the Juftices fay, that half the Street againft the faid Gate was Sanctuary; and that there were Perfons therein arraigned, and others therein depofed; and that he knew the faid Bland, privileged for Treafon and Felony, to dwell in Angel-Alley; and that the Abbot ought to make the Pavement, as others have depofed there.

"Item, John Smith, Clerk, depofeth for all the claimed Bounds; and further faith, that he knew Dr. Morton, and alfo the Cardinal Morton, to lie there, one in Roger Wright's Houfe, and the other in Angel-Alley, they both being privileged for Treafon: And alfo he fuppoſeth both Angel-Alley and Bland-Alley to be holden of St. Martin's by certain Rents, as Parcel of the Earl of Northumberland's Tenements: And alfo for the Pavement, as others before have depofed."

At this Time there was the following Survey or Plan of the Precinct exhibited into the Court of Chancery, where it appeareth theſe Witneffes to have depofed:

There was a memorable Cauſe tried about the Liberties, between this Collegiate Church of St. Martin's and the City of London, in the twenty-feventh of Henry VIII. which probably the former Declaration of the Abbot of Westminster refers to. The City then, by her Recorder and Council, penned and exhibited theſe enſuing Articles againſt the Sanctuary of St. Martin's:

"Articles declaring for the Mayor and Commonalty of London: That the Incloſure and Chyrch of Seynt Martine's le Grande, the Meſſuages, Houſes, and Lane of Seint Martine's aforeſayd, be of and in the Liberty and Jurisdiction of the ſaid City; and that there be, nor by any lawful Meane have been, any ſuch Privileges and Immunity, the which may, or ought to defend al Manner of enorm Enemies

"of God, the Chyrch, the King, and the Realm, unpunished, as it hath been of long wrongfully accuſtomed. And eſpecially to diſherit our moſt dread Sovereign Lord, and his ſaid City and Chamber of London, of ſuch Rights, Jurifdictions, Liberties, and free Cuſtoms, as of long Time before the Foundation, and at the Foundation of the ſaid Chyrch, and ever after, peaceably and quietly had uſed; and approved by divers Records, by Authority of Parliament, Letters Patents, and otherwiſe, as followeth:

"1. They ſeyen, that the City of London is, and, ſince the Tyme of Remembrance of Man, hath been the chief City of this Realm, and above al other Cities and Towns of the ſame, as wel in Honours, Liberties, and free Cuſtoms “toms highly endowed; and the which famous “City, in the Time of Seint Edward, King and “Confessor, and long Time before, always hath “been of itself one hoole County, and one hoole “Jurisdiction and Liberty, by the said Citizens, “and their Predecessors, of the King and his “Progenitors holden at Farm.

“And the said Citizens then, and by al the “Time aforesaid, by Reason of their feid Juris“diction and Liberties, among others, have had “Liberties and free Customs, to elect and make
“of themselves, yeerely, certain principal Officers
“in the said City, which faithfully shudde answer
“the King’s Terme: And immediately under “him, the People of the said City, and others “repairing to the same in Peace, Unity, and “Justice, shudde govern after their old Laws and “Customs: And also, to substitute under them
“other Under-Officers and Ministers, to help
“for the Sustentation and Execution of the Pre-“misses, &c.”

And before this, in the Reign of Henry VI. was this great Cause in Dispute, between the City and St. Martin’s, before several Commissioners appointed to hear it. Then the Citizens pleaded, That William the Conqueror, before the Foundation of the aforesaid Church, by Authority of his Parliament, and by two Charters, which the Mayor and Citizens then produced, demised to the Citizens of London all the said City and Sheriffwick of London, with all Appendages, &c. And so pleading, inter alia, concluded thus: “All and singular which the same Mayor “and Citizens are ready to make good, as “well for the said Lord the King, as for them“selves.”

It seems that there have been some later Differences about a new Door into the Liberties of the Freedom: Whereupon a Court being called, December 20, 1625, this Order was given out, to be enquired upon and certified:

“It is ordered by the Court, that the Foreman
“of the Inquest, with others of the same Inquest, “shall view the South Gate and Entry leading “from Bladder-Street into this Liberty; and also “a Door made by Thomas Rodes in the East Side “of the same Entry; and make their Reports “under their Hands in Writing, on Monday next “after Epiphany.

“According to the Direction of the Order
“abovesaid, we whose Names are underwritten,
“being all of the Enquest sworn for this Yeere, “having viewed the Gate and Entry, doe find,
“and accordingly certifie, that Thomas Rodes, a “Linnen-Draper, dwelling in a House next ad“joining to the said Entry, on the East Side “thereof, (in Part of which House Roger Wright “did dwell) hath of late, without the Privy or “Knowledge of the Inhabitants of this Liberty, “taken downe, or caused to be taken downe and “carried away, a Pair of strong, sufficient, and “serviceable Gates, in the Night Time, which “were, and Time out of Mind have bin, the “common South Gate of this Liberty; and, in“stead thereof, hath set up a new Gate of Deale, “opening all one Way, viz. towards the West “Side; whereas the former Paire of Gates or “Leaves did fall open, the one towards the East “Side, and the other towards the West Side of “the said Entry. Also the said Thomas Rodes “hath broken down the Partition Wall on the “East Side of the said Entry, against which one “Leafe of the said old Gate did fall open, as “aforesaid, and hath there made a new Doore, “(where never any was before in the Memory of “Man) of almost an Ell in Breadth, out of the “Shop into the said Entry or common Passage

“into this Liberty; whereby a free and open “Passage is made out of the City of London, the “Shop of the said Rodes, into this Liberty; to “the great Prejudice of the Lords of the same “Liberty, and to the great Hindrance and Da“mage of the Tenants and Inhabitants within the “same. In Witnes whereof we have hereunto

The Liberties of this Place, after the Dissolution of the College, remained and were preserved very cautiously from Time to Time. And to know how the Government, Privileges, and State of it stood in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, these Matters following may explain in some Measure:

Because of the Liberty enjoyed by such as lived within these Bounds, many Foreigners, English and others, Tradefmen and Artificers, planted themselves here. Anno 1585, a Survey was taken of all the Strangers, being French; Germans, Dutch, and Scots, inhabiting here, and their Occupations. Many of them were Cordwainers, that is, Shoemakers, (which Trade still continues there) Taylors, (hence the Tally-men who sold Shreds of Cloth, and Button-makers, and Button-mould-makers, that remained there even until the great Fire.) Here inhabited also Strangers, Goldsmiths, Pursemakers, Linnen-Drapers, some Stationers, some Merchants, and Silk-Weavers. Here lived also two Silk-Twisters, who Mr. Strype supposes were the first Silk-Throwsters in London, and to have brought that Trade into England; wherefore he sets down their Names: One was John James, born under the Dominion of King Philip, and made Denizen the nineteenth of December, in the tenth Year of Queen Elizabeth; the other was Anthony Emerick, born also under the Obedience of King Philip, and made Denizen the first of January, Anno 17 Regine Elizabethæ.

There were, upon that Survey abovesaid, found to be of Housholders, (Denizens as well as others) their Wives, Children, and Servants, one hundred and sixty-one in Number; which nevertheless was less by half than was some Years before; for in 1569 their Number was two hundred and sixty-nine.

There was a Constable and a Headborough for this Liberty: But divers Things here wanted providing for; in Respect whereof, they that lived out of the Liberty were in better Condition. Sundry of the Inhabitants refused to watch and ward, ward, when upon Occasion they were required, as good Subjects and honest Neighbours, so to do; they refused to contribute to such Taxes and Payments as were set upon them for her Majesty's Service, with the rest of their Neighbours; several visited with the Sickness, would not obey the Orders appointed in that Behalf; that is, they would not keep their Doors and Windows shut, nor keep themselves within their Houses, but walked forth, and struck out the Red Cross set upon their Doors, and threatened to do mischief to such as should come to set any such Crosses there; and some repaired to the Court with their Wares, a Thing dangerous to the Queen and Nobility. There was no Prison in the said Liberty to commit such as should be troublesome and offensive, but the Gatehouse in Westminster, which was in another Shire, and out of the Liberty; and so they that were thus committed, commonly brought their Actions against those that committed them, and put them to great Trouble.

Hence, in the Year 1593, the Officers and Inhabitants petitioned the Lord-Treasurer to grant them such good Ordinances for the Redress of the said Disorders, and sufficient Authority for Execution of the same, for the good Government of the said Liberty, and Conservation of the People in Peace, as to his Lordship's discreet Wisdom should be thought meet; and that they might have a Prison and Execution of Justice within the Precinct of the Liberty; and that he would send his Letters to the Constable and Headborough, to find out a convenient Place for such Purpose; and to assess all the Inhabitants of the Liberty to the Charge thereof. The Lord-Treasurer recommended this Matter to Serjeant Owen and Mr. Lewis, two Lawyers, who gave their Judgments, That, for all Matters for the Service of the Queen, the Inhabitants were compelled to perform the same; but, for other Matters, they must make some By-Laws and Orders among themselves, to bind themselves to Performance. And that such disorderly Persons, whose Houses were limited within the College, might be punished by Imprisonment; and, in that contagious Time, very convenient to be executed.

The Inhabitants also complained at this Time, that the Mayor's Officers entered into their Liberty at their Pleasure, and searched and viewed all the Wares of the Shoemakers, according to a Statute lately made, not calling the Officer of the Liberty, or making him privy thereto. To this the Judgment of the aforesaid Lawyers was, That the Searcher might enter into the Liberty, and search alone: But, for that the Benefit of the Forfeitures were given to the Liberty, they thought it convenient that the Lord-Mayor's Officer should be with them: Which they thought might be obtained, if it pleased the Treasurer to write to the Lord-Mayor in that Behalf.

See P. 771.

This Place, though in the Heart of the City of London, is still in the Liberty of Westminster, and is governed, and votes for Parliament-Men accordingly; and Persons unfree may here follow their Professions and Trades.

Lower down, on the West Side of St. Martin's Lane, in the Parish of St. Anne, almost by Alders- gate, was one great House, commonly called Northumberland-House; it belonged to Henry Percy. King Henry IV. in the seventh of his Reign, gave this House, with the Tenements thereunto appertaining, to Queen Jane, his Wife, and then it was called her Wardrobe.

Antiently the Kings of England have sometimes lodged here. A Writ of King Edward I. was dated hence: Thomas de Clirowe de Blechweeth captus & detent. in Prisons North. pro Transgr. Forrest. habet Literas Rogero de Cliford Justic. Forrest. citra Trentam, quod ponatur per Ballium. Dat. apud S. Martinum Magnum, London, 20 Die Octobris.

ALD GATE WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

The Etymology and Bounds of Aldgate Ward.

The antient and present State. Priory of the Holy Trinity. The Papey. The Portuguese Jews Synagogue. Crutched-Friers. Sir John Milburn's Charity. Parishes and Churches. Navy-Office, Halls, and other publick Buildings, and antient Monuments. Aldermen and Common Council.

ALDGATE Ward takes its Name from the East Gate of the City, called Aldgate, or antiently Ealdgate. The principal Street of this Ward, called Aldgate High-street, beginneth at Aldgate, stretcheth West, where was once a handsome Well, but now a Stone Pump, adorned with four Lamps, is placed. From thence, the Way being divided in two, it runneth on the South Side of Leadenhall-street to Lime-street Corner, and half down that Street on the Left Hand.

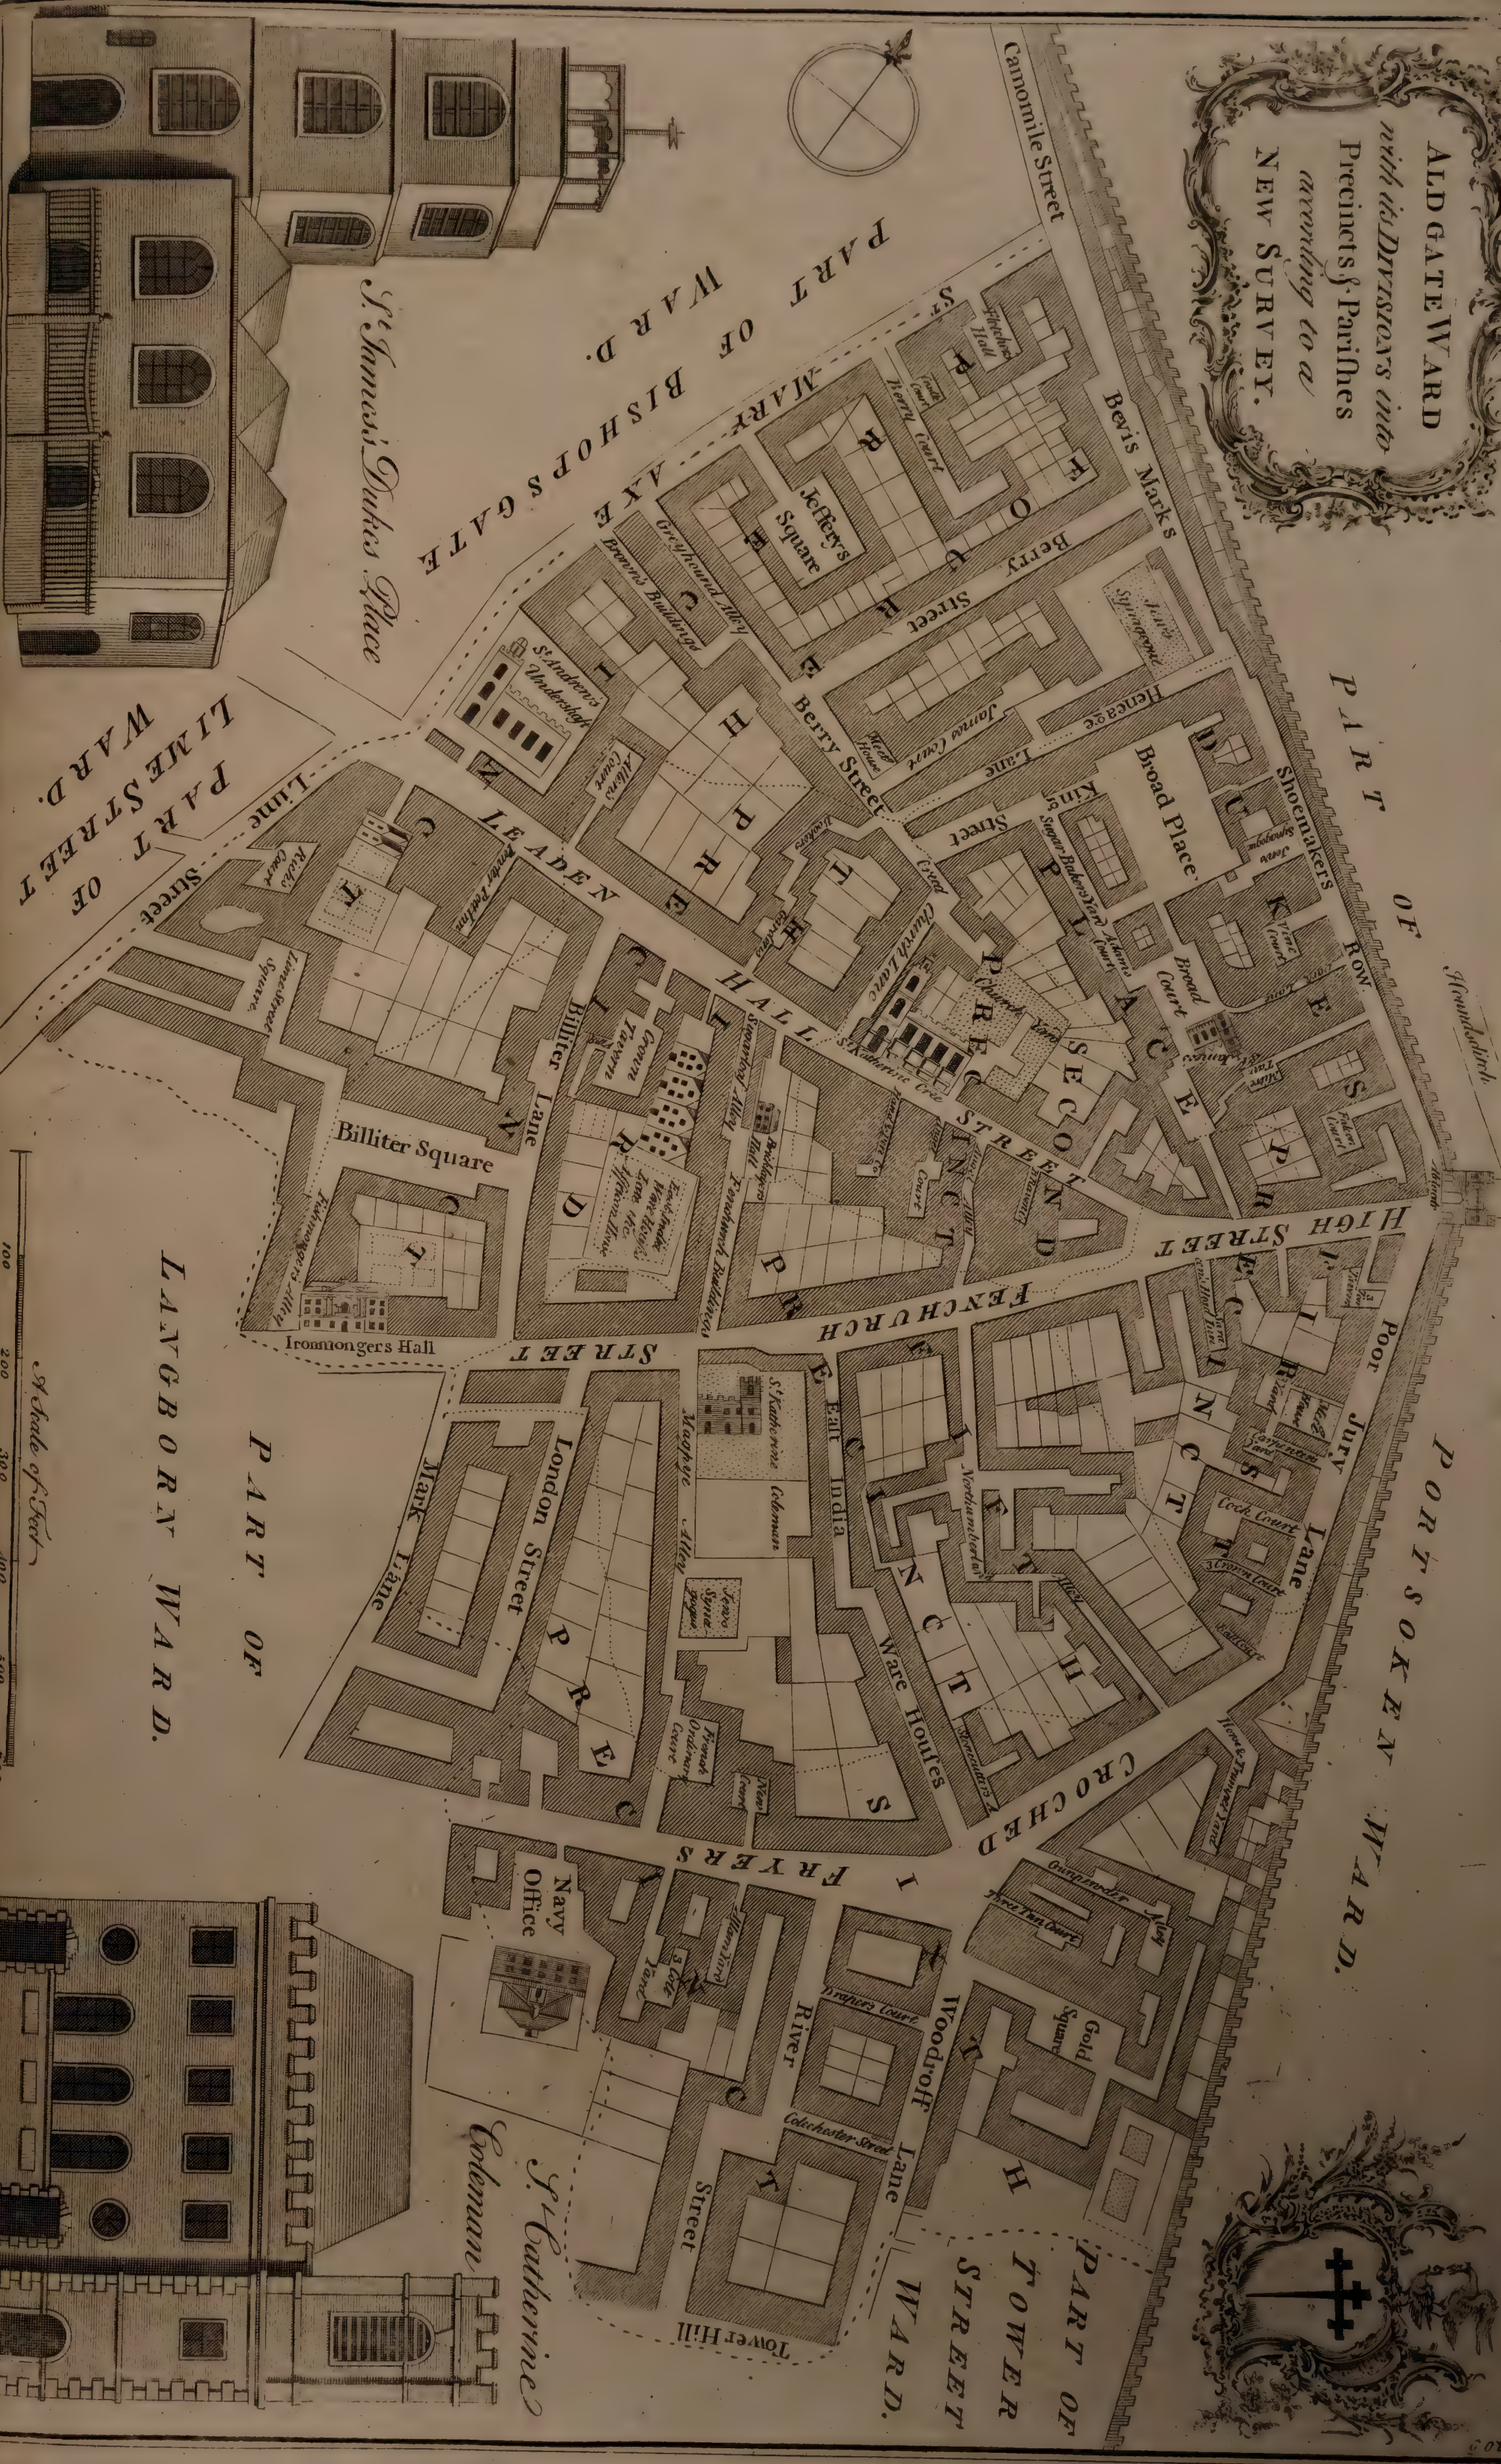

In the Midway, on that South Side, betwixt Aldgate and Lime-street, is Angel-alley, a Thoroughfare into Fenchurch-street; and another Alley, once called Sprinkle-alley, from an holy Water-pot, which used to hang there, but now Sugar-loaf-alley.

Near this was a large House, and divers Tenements near adjoining, which some Time belonged to a dissolved Priory, but afterwards given by King Henry VIII. to one Mrs. Cornwallis, Widow, and her Heirs, in Reward for some fine Puddings which she made and presented to him: Such was the Princely Liberality of those Times. A little farther was the House of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton, and of late the African-House, now pulled down to enlarge the East-India Warehouse in Billiter-lane.

Then, somewhat more West, is Belzeter's-lane, so called from the first Builder and Owner thereof, now corruptly called Billiter-lane; a Place consisting formerly of poor and ordinary Houses, where it seems needy and beggarly People used to inhabit; whence the Proverb, A Bawdy Beggar of Billiter-lane; which is somewhere used by Sir Thomas More, in the Book he wrote against Tyndal.

Betwixt this Belzeter's-lane and Lime-street, three new Houses being to be built, in the Year 1590, in a Place where before was a large Garden Plat, inclosed from the Street by a high Brick Wall, upon taking down the said Wall, and digging for Cellarage, another Wall of Stone was found directly under the Brick Wall, with an arched Gate-way of Stone, and Gates of Timber to be closed in the Midst towards the Street; the Timber of the Gates was consumed, but the Hinges of Iron were then remaining on their Staples on both Sides. Moreover, in that Wall were square Windows, with Bars of Iron on each Side this Gate; the Wall was above two Fathoms deep under Ground, supposed to be the Remains of those great Fires, mentioned on p. 32. or to be the Ruins of some House burnt in the Reign of King Stephen, when the Fire began in the House of one Aelward, near London-stone, and consumed East to Aldgate, See p. 41. Whereby it appeareth, how greatly the Ground of the City hath been raised in that Place.

On the North Side, this Ward stretcheth to the West Corner of St. Andrew's Church, and then turneth towards the North, by St. Mary-ax-street, on the East Side of St. Augustine's Church, which stood in the Wall, and by Bury's (corruptly now called Bevis) Marks again, or about by the Wall thro' Shoemaker's-row to Aldgate.

The Way towards the South, from the Pump aforesaid, is called Fenchurch-street, down which Aldgate Ward reaches to Culver or Fishmongers-alley, which is on the West Side of Ironmongers-Hall.

Again, from Aldgate, out of the principal Street, close by the Gate and Wall of the City, runneth Poor-jury-lane, South to Crouched-friers, thence to Woodrose-lane, and so to Tower-bill: And out of this Lane, West, is a Street called Hart-street, which in that Ward stretcheth to Sydon, or Seething-lane, by St. Olave's Church: One other Lane, more West from Aldgate, goeth by Northumberland-house toward Crossed, or Crouched-friers: Then on the same Side is the North End of Mark-lane, and Blanch-appleton, where the Ward endeth.

The antient Bounds of this Ward may be taken from the Extent of the Soke of the Priory of Christ-church; and what that is, may be known from what is wrote by one of that Convent, and preserved in an old Book, called Dunthorne; where we read, Sciendum igitur quanta sit Soka, cujus fines tales sunt. A Porta de Aldgate, &c. i. e. "We must know therefore, how great the Soke is, which hath such Bounds: "From the Gate of Aldgate, as far as the Gate "of the Bailey of the Tower, called Cungate, and "all Cheken-lane, towards Barking Church, as "far as the Church-yard, except one House "nearer than the Church-yard; and the Journey is returned the same Way, as far as the "Church of St. Olave's; and then we come "back by the Street which goes by Coleman-church; then it goes forth towards Fenchurch, and so there on this Side our Houses is "a Lane, through which we went unto the "House of Theobald Fitz-Ivo, Alderman; "which Lane now is stopped, because it had
No. 66.

"been suspected for Thieves in the Night: "Therefore, because a Way was not open there, "we come back again by a Lane towards the "Church of St. Michael, and as far as Lime-street, to the House of Richard Cavel. This "therefore is our Inward Soke, and these are "the Bounds of it. This the Queen-Mother "gave to us, with the Gate of Aldgate. From "Lime-street we go through the Street by the "Church of St. Andrew's, as far as the Chapel "of St. Augustine upon the Wall; then as far "as the Gate of the Church-yard. This is the "Circuit of our Inner Soke."

As to the present State of the whole Ward, it stands thus:

It first begins with Aldgate-street, which is broad, but short, and very well inhabited by Tradesmen, and, by giving Passage through the Gate, to and from the adjacent Parts, is a very great Thorough-fare. This Street begins at the Gate, and runs Westward to the Pump, where it divides itself into two Streets; one falling into Leadenhall-street, and the other into Fenchurch-street. About 100 Feet N. W. of the Gate is the chief, but narrow Entrance into Duke's-place, which is large, and for the most Part inhabited by Jews.

In this Place are several Courts, some of which are very large; as Broad-court, where the Church of St. James Duke's-place stands. Out of this Court, where the Church stands, is a Passage under an Arch into another large one, called Duke's-place-court, or Broad-place; at the South East Corner of which is the Dutch Jews Synagogue: And to these two Courts there are two Outlets into that Part of Duke's-place which fronteth London-wall: Along which is a narrow Lane, called commonly Shoemaker's-row, which turning South, leads to Aldgate, and North-West to Bevis-marks, and was formerly full of Shoemakers Shops. Here is a small Place, called Vine-court, which is but ordinary. Likewise out of Duke's-place-court is a Street which leadeth to another, and both formerly called Duke's-place, now King's-street. In this Place, in a large upper Room, was the old Jews Synagogue. From this Part is Henage-lane, which falls into Bevis-marks, close by the Portuguese Jews Synagogue, and then into Camomile-street, which runs along by the Wall, as far as St. Mary-axe: But neither this nor Bevis-marks are Places of great Account. On the South Side here is Plough-yard, which is pretty large, but chiefly taken up for Stabling and Coach-houses, but towards the upper End hath one handsome House, with a Garden before it; and near this Yard is Berry-street, which is very handsome and cleanly kept, with good uniform Buildings on both Sides, well inhabited, mostly by Jews, who dwell privately, without Shops: This Street falls into one Part of Duke's-place, where to the East is a Dissenting Meeting, and to the West a Passage into St. Mary-axe, called Greyhound-alley, which was formerly very ordinary, but now well built, and inhabited by Merchants and other Persons of Repute.

St. Mary-axe, a Street that comes out of Bevis-marks by London-wall, and runneth up South to Leadenhall-street against Lime-street. And this Street, especially the East Side, (which is only in this Ward) is generally taken up by Merchants, there being divers large and handsome Buildings seated backwards, with good Entrances to them shut up by Gates; and many of them have Gardens behind them.

At the North End of St. Mary-axe is Fletcher's-ball, and at the South Corner the Parish-Church of St. Andrew Undershaft.

Leadenhall-street, a Place of great Trade, well inhabited, and a great Thorough-fare. In this Street are these Places; Pewter-pot-linn. Allen's-court is the Scite on which formerly stood the Seat of Sir Thomas Allen. Axe-alley, or Booker's Gardens, hath several Turnings, and leads into Duke's-place. The Crown Tavern, a large and convenient House. The Scite of the Royal African-house, being the Place for the Management of the Affairs of that Company, before it was dissolved by Parliament, and since purchased by the India Company for Ware-houses now building. Sugar-loaf-court, a pretty handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, well built and inhabited at the End towards Fenchurch-street. Creed-lane, at the West Corner of St. Catherine Cree-church, which runs North into Duke's-place, and chiefly inhabited by Jews.

Lime-street, on the South Side of Leadenhall-street, leads into Fenchurch-street, and is for the generality taken up by Merchants and Persons of Repute. The West Side of this Street lieth in Lime-street Ward; some Part in Langborn Ward; there being in this Ward but the East Side, from Leadenhall-street Corner unto Cullum-street, so called from the Builder: And in this Part is Axe-yard, which is but indifferent; Lime-street-alley, by some called Billiter-alley, as leading into Billiter-square, and through that Square East into Billiter-lane; betwixt this Alley and Axe-yard is a new Court, built out of some Houses pulled down.

Ebenezer Muffell, Esq; informs us, that before the Fire of London, on the East Side of Lime-street, there was a large House and Garden, extending further East, and opening into Fenchurch-street, on whose Scite, after the Fire, were built thirty Houses by Sir Thomas Cullum, which descended by Sale from Sir Jasper Cullum to the Father of Mr. Muffell aforesaid, who now enjoys that Estate. And that lately, the Cellar of one of the Houses giving way, there was discovered an arched Room, ten Feet square, and eight Feet deep, with several arched Doors round it, stopped up with Earth. This happened on the Scite of the old Mansion-house.

East of Lime-street is Billiter-lane, which goes out of Leadenhall-street, and falls into Fenchurch-street against the End of Mark-lane. The Buildings in Billiter-lane are mostly very old ruinous Timber Houses, and may serve to give us the best Idea of the Manner in which this City was generally built before the Fire. But the Inhabitants are chiefly petty Shop-keepers. On the East Side the East-India Company have built large Warehouses, and there are several good modern Buildings. About the middle on the West Side is Billiter-square, an handsome, open, and airy Place, graced with good new Brick Buildings, well inhabited; and out of this Square to the South-West, is a handsome Free-stone Passage, called Smith's Rents, which leadeth down Fishmongers-alley to Fenchurch-street. At the South-East Corner of Billiter-lane, in Fenchurch-street, was a House, or an Estate, belonging to Cardinal Wolfey, now made two Houses, almost facing London-street.

Mark-lane, or Mart-lane, (where once used to be kept a publick Mart) entering into which, on the Left Hand, there is a large, open, square Place, with a Passage to it for Carts, called Blanch-apleton-court: It hath a turning Passage on the South Side, by an Alley, which encompasseth some of the Houses. In this Parish was the Manor of Blanch-apleton, now corruptly called Blind-chapel-court: It belonged to Sir Thomas Roos of Hame-lake, Knt. in the seventh of Richard II. standing at the North-East Corner of Mark-lane. In the third of Edward IV. all Basket-makers, Wire-drawers, and other Foreigners, were permitted to have Shops in the Manor of Blanch-apleton, and no where else, within the City or Suburbs. More South is Pick-axe-alley, very small and ordinary, with a dark Entrance into it. This Lane is very long, falling into Tower-street; but the Part in this Ward is but small, viz. the East Side from the Corner of Fenchurch-street, to Pick-axe-alley, the greatest Part being in Tower-street Ward, with some Part in Langborn Ward.

Fenchurch-street is long, reaching from the Pump within Aldgate to Gracechurch-street, and, for the generality, well inhabited by Merchants, and eminent Warehouse-men and Shop-keepers: But of this Street there is in this Ward no more than from Aldgate-street to the West End of Ironmonger's-ball, on the North Side; and a little beyond Mark-lane to Aldgate-street, on the South Side; the rest being in Langborn Ward. Between Mark-lane and St. Catharine Coleman Church, is built, with very handsome Houses in it, London-street; at the Corner of which, in Fenchurch-street, was a few Years ago a large House called the London-Tavern. Over against St. Catharine Coleman Church is a magnificent House, built and inhabited by two Jews, Brothers, whose Names are Franco. More to the West is Fenchurch Buildings, a new, large, well built and inhabited Court, with a Passage into Leadenhall-street. Adjoining to this Church, Westward, is Magpye-alley, in which is a Jews Synagogue, and by a narrow Passage there is a Way into French-ordinary-court, and so into Crutched-friers. A little to the East of St. Catherine Coleman's, is a very extensive Range of Warehouses belonging to the East-India Company, which reach quite thro' into Crutched-friers, with a Passage under for Carriages. Northumberland-alley, the Scite on which Northumberland-house once stood, but now converted into other Buildings, is very long, which, with several turning Passages, falls into Crutched-friers; and for the generality is but an ordinary Place, as well for Houses as Inhabitants. This was formerly a noted Place for Gaming and Debaucheries.

Crutched, Crouched, or Crossed-friers, begins in the West at Hart-street, and runs Eastward, taking in Part of the Navy-Office; and then turning Northwards falls into Aldgate; but that Part that runs Northward is called Poor-jury-lane, which is but ordinary in its Buildings. This Crutched-friers- friers-street hath several good Buildings and Places of Name, viz. on the North Side, French-ordinary-court, already mentioned, being a large open Place, with good Buildings, especially on the East Side; having Palisado Pales, with Trees before the Court-Yards of the Houses, and a Free-stone Pavement between the Houses. Out of this Court is a Passage down Steps into Fenchurch-street, thro' Magpye-alley.

The Navy-Office, on the South Side of the Street, hath some Part in this Ward, viz. almost all the first Court, with the Side Buildings, and some small Part of the Office itself; the other Part, viz. the back Part, being in Tower-street Ward.

Bunt's-yard seated not far from the Navy-Office Eastward, a pretty large Place, but only for Stabling. Allam-yard, taken up for Warehouses. River-street, a good large open Place, with Brick Buildings, well inhabited, leads to Great Tower-hill. Out of this Street, on the East Side, is Colchester-street; it hath good Brick Buildings, and falls into Woodrofe-lane, which begins at Crutched-friers, and so leads to Tower-hill, in which Lane is a Mixture of Brick and Timber Houses, pretty well built and inhabited. In this Lane is Chain-alley, which hath one good House and Garden to it. At the upper End of this Lane, and fronting Crutched-friers, are good Brick Buildings, called Gold-square, well inhabited. Gunpowder-alley hath at the upper End ten Alms-houses for Men and their Wives, being the Gift of the Lord Banning, and now called Oxford's Alms-Houses, the Earl marrying an Heiress of the Bannings; these have but small Allowances. Northumberland-alley comes out here into Poor-jury-lane, where is a large Brew-house. Black-horse-yard, for Stabling, with some Dwelling-Houses in it. Flower-de-lis-court, but small. Three-crown-court, a handsome open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. Holsey's-rents, very small and ordinary. Carpenter's-yard, a good handsome Court, very well inhabited. George-alley, long and narrow, with a Passage to Aldgate.

This Ward hath an Alderman, his Deputy, six Common-Councilmen, (including the Deputy) six Constables, nine Scavengers, eighteen Wardmote-Men for Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteen in London at five Pounds.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, besides the Constable and Beadle, thirty-four Watchmen, and for the Liberty of Duke's-place ten; in all forty-four.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of January.

The Alderman of this Ward is Robert Scott, Esq; Thomas Cockfedge, Deputy; and the Common-Councilmen are, Christopher Fullagar, John Hall, Stracy Till, John Platt, and William Rogers.

Thus much for the Bounds. Now for Monuments, or Places most antient and notable. First, to begin with the dissolved Priory of the Holy Trinity, called Christ Church, on the right Hand within Aldgate. This Priory was founded by Queen Matilda, Daughter to Malcolm, King of Scotland, Wife to Henry I. by the Persuasions of Archbishop Anselm, and Richard Beaumeis, Bishop of London, A. D. 1108, in the same Place where Siredus had begun to erect a Church in Honour of the Holy Cross and St. Mary Magdalen, out of which the Dean and Chapter of Waltham were entitled to receive thirty Shillings: But the Queen gave them a Mill in Exchange, and had this Agreement confirmed by King Henry, her Husband; and gave the Church to Norman, the first Canon Regular in all England, for Canons of his own Rule.

Her Majesty also endowed the same Church, and those that served God therein, with the Port of Aldgate, and the Soke thereunto belonging, with all Customs, and twenty-five Pounds Blanks, as mentioned in the following Deed, Charter, &c. as it was taken out of the Register of the said Priory, called there Prioratus de Cricchurch:

"*Matildis Dei Gratia Anglorum Regina R. Episcopo London. & omnibus Sanctæ Ecclesiæ fidelibus, Salutem. Confirmed by King Stephen.

King Stephen also confirmed this Payment of twenty-five Pounds ad Scalam, by a Charter, directed to William, Bishop of Exeter, the Sheriffs, &c.

And when Henry II. styled Fitz-Empress, Anno 1180, and the twenty-sixth of his Reign, made a new Money current, the Sheriff of Exeter would not pay the Prior of Christ-Church at Michaelmas the Half-Year's Rent, viz. twelve Pounds sixteen Shillings and three Pence secundum pondus Blanc, i. e. according to the Weight Blank, (this new Money being of less Weight than Money was when Queen Maud gave the said Gift) the said Prior, whose Name was Sir Stephen, obtained the full Payment by a Charter from that King: For new Money was twenty Pence ob. the Ounce, twenty Shillings and six Pence the Pound; so that now the Prior's Due was twenty-five Pounds twelve Shillings and six Pence, i. e. twenty-five Pounds ad Scalam, at the Scale, in the following Terms:

"Henricus Rex Anglie, & Dux Normann. & Aquitan. & Comes Andagav. Præpositis & Civib. Exonie Sal. Præcipio vobis, quod sine dilatione & juste habere faciatis Canonicis meis Sancte Trinitatis London. Reddit. suos de Exon, sicut unquam melius & plenius habere solebant, tempore Regis Henrici Avi mei, & ad terminos Statutos; & nisi feceritis justiciam, vel Vic. meus faciat fieri, ne inde a modo clamorem audiam pro penuria Reddi. Et de hiis qui Reddit. suos eis detinuerint, justiciam faciatis. Teste M. Biset. Dat. apud Wirecest."

And, in consequence of this Charter, it was recorded in the Rolls of the Exchequer, "Quod Ecclesiam Christ. London. debet habere prædict. denarios blanc. & ad Scalam, i. e. ad pondus, qui fuerint meliores in pondere quam illa nova moneta per 6s. 3d. pro termino Sancti Michaelis Archang. præd. Et sic prædict. Prior & Conventus haberent quolibet anno 12s. 6d. de incremento 25l. Blanc. prout patet in Cart."

There was another Charter, whereby this Priory was privileged to inclose the Way along London-Wall, and stop the Passage, and enlarge their Priory to the very Wall:

"Henricus Rex Anglie, &c. Rich. Episcopo & Alberico de Vere Vic. & omnibus Baronibus & Fidelibus London. Salutem. Sciatis me concessisse Sancte Trinitati & Normanno, Priori, & Canonicis Sancte Trinitatis London. ut claudant muro viam quæ erat inter Ecclesiam & Officinas eorum, & Murum Civitat. & in pace teneant, & via quæ solebat ibi esse sit a modo, ante Ecclesiam suam ex alia Parte. Et hoc concedo eis pro animab. Patris mei & Matris & Prædecessorum & Successorum meorum, & pro salute mea & statu Regni mei. Test. Ranulph. Cancellario meo, & Gaufr. de Guntona & Rad. Bassett apud Northampton."

Norman, the first Prior.

Norman took on him to be Prior of Christ-Church, in the Year of Christ 1108, in the Parishes of St. Mary Magdalen, St. Michael, St. Catharine, and the Blessed Trinity, which now were made but one Parish of the Holy Trinity.

The Priory was built on a Piece of Ground upwards of three hundred Feet long, in the Parish of St. Catharine, towards Aldgate, near the Parochial Chapel of St. Michael, whose Remains are still to be seen under the House inhabited by Mr. Gilpin, an eminent Chemist, at the S. E. Corner of Leadenhall-Street, and measures thirty-six Feet from North to South, and sixteen Feet from East to West, with a Gothic arched Roof, supported by two handsome Pillars, and built with square Bricks, Chalk, and Stone, in the Manner of the Ruins of Rochester Castle. The Soke and Ward of Aldgate was then bounded, as is before shewn. This Priory, in Process of Time, became a very large Church, rich in Lands and Ornaments, and surpassed all the Priories in the City of London, or Shire of Middlesex; the Prior whereof was an Alderman of London, viz. of Portsoken Ward, as will be shewn in the Account of that Ward.

After this great Priory had swallowed up those four Parishes above-named, and was appointed the Parish Church, the Inhabitants of the Parish of St. Catharine's prevailed with the Prior to let them build a Chapel in the Church-yard of the Priory, for their more convenient and quiet Resort to perform their Divine Service in, and to appoint them one of his Canons to say Mass to them, on Condition that they continued to christen their Children in the Conventual Church, and to come thither at all solemn Times; their Devotions at the Altar of St. Mary Magdalen, where they had before resorted, being greatly disturbed by the Noise of several celebrating Mass together. But in Time the Parishioners neglecting to come to the Conventual Church, the Prior insisted upon their Agreement to resort to the great Church for the christening of their Children, and upon all the Holidays, especially the greater; as in the Night and Day of our Lord's Nativity, Good Friday, the Day of the Benediction of the Easter Wax-Candle, the Morning of Easter-Day, the Vespers and Vigils of the Feasts of the Holy Trinity, and the Dedication of the Conventual Church of the Holy Trinity; on which Days he would allow no Service to be performed in the parochial Chapel. This occasioned great Contentions between the Prior, Robert Exeter, and the Convent, and the aforesaid Parishioners; which continued to the Time of William Haradon, and Lord Richard Clifford, Bishop of London; who, in the Year 1414, accommodated their Differences by a Composition between them on the following Terms, viz. That the said Parishioners of St. Catharine's, Christ's, or Creechurch, should have a Baptismal Font anew set up in their Church, or Chapel, for baptizing of Children, and to have other Solemnities to be there performed; (about which such Contentions had before arisen among them) for all Times hereafter: That they should resort to the Conventual Church on the Festivals and Dedication of the said Conventual Church in the Eve of St. Bartholomew, yearly; and there, in Token of their Submission and Acknowledgment, each should, in those Festivals, offer their Pence, Halfpence, and Farthings; and that they might, if they pleased, keep the Dedication of St. Catharine in their own said Chapel or Church; which he, the Bishop, out of his paternal Affection towards wards them, yielded unto. Further, that they might not ring the Bells on Easter-Day, till the Office was finished at the Conventual Church. That one of the Canons, to be placed or removed at the Pleasure of the Prior, should serve in the said Chapel, as was usual before this present Ordinance, to administer to the said Parishioners the Sacraments and Sacramentals, as antiently was done. That the Prior and Convent henceforth be not obliged to find the Ornaments, nor be at other Charges for the Chapel. All which Ordination and Composition the Prior and Convent, and the said Parishioners, received and promised inviolably to observe perpetually.

Eustacius, the eighth Prior, about the Year 1264, because he would not deal with temporal Matters, instituted Theobald Fitz-Juonis, or Ivo, Alderman of Portfoken Ward under him; and William Rising, Prior of Christ-Church, was sworn Alderman of the said Portfoken Ward in the first of Richard II. These Priors sat and rode among the Aldermen of London, in the same Livery, only the Prior's Habit was in Shape of a spiritual Person, as Stow saith he himself saw in his Childhood; at which Time the Prior kept a most bountiful House, both for Rich and Poor, as well within the House as at the Gates, to all Comers, according to their Conditions.

Monuments
in the Priory
Church.

There were Monuments in this Church for the following Persons:

Sir Robert Turke, and Dame Alice his Wife. John Tirell, Esq; Simon Kempe, Esq; James Manthorpe, Esq; John Ascue, Esq; Thomas Pauset, of Scalfet, Esq; John Kempe, Gent. Robert Chirwide, Esq; Sir John Heningham, and Dame Isabel his Wife.

Dame Agnes, Wife to Sir William Bardolph, and then to Sir Thomas Mortimer. She made her Will 1403, bequeathing her Body to be buried in the Conventual Church of the Holy Trinity, London.

John Ashfield, Esq; Sir John Dedham, Knt. Sir Ambrose Charcam. Joan, Wife to Thomas Nucke, Gent. John Hulse, Esq; John Beringham, Esq; Thomas Goodwine, Esq; Ralph Walles, Esq;

Dame Margaret, Daughter to Sir Ralph Cheney, Wife to Sir John Barkley, to Sir Thomas Barnes, and to Sir W. Burfire.

William Roope. Simon Frauncis. John Breton, Esq; — Helling, Esq; John Malwen and his Wife. Anthony Wels, Son to John Wels. Nicholas de Avesey, and Margery his Wife. Anthony, Son to John Milles.

Baldwine, Son to King Stephen; and Matilda, Daughter to King Stephen, Wife to the Earl of Millen.

Henry Fitz-Alwine, Mayor of London, 1213.

Geffrey Mandevile, 1215.

Lady Margaret le Scroope, who, 1431, bequeathed her Body to be buried in the Church of St. Trinity, of Christ-Church, London. She was Wife of Roger le Scroope, Knight, and Daughter of Sir Robert Tiptoft.

These, and many more sepulchral Monuments, were destroyed at the Dissolution of this Priory, which happened in July, 1531; for King Henry VIII. desirous to reward Sir Thomas Audley, Speaker of the Parliament against Cardinal Woolsey, sent for the Prior, and, after commending him for his Hospitality, with Promises of Preferment, persuaded him to surrender all the Priory, with the Appurtenances, into his Hands, in the twenty-third Year of his Reign. The Canons were sent to other Houses of the same Order; and the Priory, with the Appurtenances, King Henry gave to Sir Thomas Audley, newly knighted, and afterwards made Lord Chancellor.

No. 66.

Sir Thomas Audley offered the great Church of this Priory, with a Peal of nine well-tuned Bells, (whereof the four largest are now at Stepney Church, and the other five at St. Stephen's, Coleman-Street) to the Parishioners of St. Catharine Christ or Cree-church, in Exchange for their small Parish Church, being willing to have it pulled down, and to have it built there towards the Street; but the Parishioners, fearing some After-claps, refused the Offer. He also proffered the Church and Steeple of the Priory Church to whomsoever would take it down and carry it from the Ground, but no Man would undertake the Offer; whereupon Sir Thomas Audley was obliged to be at more Charges to take it down, than could be made of the Stones, Timber, Lead, Iron, &c. for the Workmen, with great Labour, beginning at the Top, loosed Stone from Stone, and threw them down, whereby the most Part of them were broken, and few remained whole, and those were sold very cheap; for all the Buildings, then made about the City, were of Brick and Timber. However, the said Thomas Lord Audley built a noble Mansion of this Priory, and dwelt in it during his Life, and died there in the Year 1544; whose only Daughter being married to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, this Estate descended to his Grace, and was then called the Duke's-Place.

A little more to the North-West, and near the North End of St. Mary-at-Axe Street, stood another religious House, called the Papey, an Hospital belonging to the Brotherhood of St. Charity and St. John the Evangelist, founded A. D. 1430, by William Oliver, William Barnabie, and John Stafford, of London, Priests, for a Master, two Wardens, &c. Chaplains, Chantry Priests, Conducts, and other Brethren and Sisters, that should be admitted into the Church of St. Augustin Papey in the Wall. The Brethren of this House becoming lame, or otherwise in great Poverty, were here relieved; as to have Chambers, with certain Allowance of Bread, Drink, and Coals, and one old Man and his Wife to see them served, and to keep the House clean.

These poor Priests of the Papey (as also the Brotherhood of the threescore Priests, and the Company of Clerks that were skilled in singing Diriges, and Church Offices) commonly attended at solemn Funerals, as may be collected from the Will of Dame Jane Milbourn, Widow of Sir John Milbourn; who, Anno 1543, bequeathed to the Brotherhood of Papey to come to her Burial, and to pray for her Soul, ten Shillings; and likewise to the Brotherhood of Threescore Priests in London, to come to her Burial, and to pray for her Soul, ten Shillings.

This Brotherhood (amongst others) was suppressed in the Reign of Edward VI. since which Time in this House hath been lodged Mr. Morris, of Essex, Sir Francis Walsingham, Principal Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth; Mr. Barret; of Essex, &c.

Next to this was one great House, with handsome Courts and Garden Plats, some Time pertaining to the Bassets, since that to the Abbots of Bury in Suffolk, and therefore called Buries Mark, corruptly Bevis Marks; and, since the Dissolution of the Abbey of Bury, to Thomas Heneage the Father, and Sir Thomas Heneage the Son.

Jews Synagogue.

This House and Ground is now increased into many Tenements; and, amongst the rest, the Portuguese Jews have built themselves a large Synagogue here, wainscotted round. It stands East and West, like one of our Churches. The great Door is on the West; near to which West End is a long Desk upon an Ascent, somewhat raised from the rest of the Floor, where the Law is read. The East Wall is in Part railed in, and before the Wall is a Door, which is to open with a Key, where their Law seems to be laid up. Aloft on this Wall are the Ten Commandments, or some Part of them, inscribed in golden Hebrew Letters without Points. There are seven great branched Candlesticks of Brass hanging down from the Top, and many other Places for Candles and Lamps. The Seats are Benches, with Backs to them, that run along from West to East; and the Galleries above, for the Women to sit in, have Lattices before them.

The House of the Crossed or Crutched Friars.

At the South-East Corner of Hart-Street, some Time stood a House of Crouched (or Crossed) Friars, founded by Ralph Hosier and William Sabernes, about the Year 1298. Stephen, the tenth Prior of the Holy Trinity in London, granted three Tenements for thirteen Shillings and eight Pence by the Year, unto the said Ralph Hosier and William Sabernes, who afterwards became Friars of St. Croffe. Adam was the first Prior of that House. These Friars founded their House in the Place of certain Tenements, purchased of Richard Wimbush, the twelfth Prior of the Holy Trinity, in the Year 1319, which was confirmed by Edward III. the seventeenth of his Reign, valued at fifty-two Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence, surrendered the twelfth of November, 30 Henry VIII.

One Andrew de Bures gave to this House, 5 Edward III. one Messuage and twenty-eight Acres of Land, and one Acre of Meadow, in Aketon; and one Messuage, and sixty Acres of Land, in Waldingfield, in the County of Suffolk.

There was a Licence granted, 23 Edward III. to the Prior of the Holy Cross, to get Lands in Oxon; and likewise the Prior obtained a Grant for a Tenement in Synedene-Lane, the same with that now called Seetking-Lane.

The very Ruins of this religious House are not now to be seen, and nothing of it remains, only it gives Name to the Street, being more commonly called Crutched-Friars than Hart-Street; but in the Place thereof now stands the Navy-Office, a noble Structure; and within the Compass of it many other fine Buildings.

At a Common-Council, not long before the Beginning of Henry VIII.'s Reign, an Act passed for granting unto the Prior and Convent of the Crossed Friars, beside the Tower of London, (to the Intent that they should pray for the good Estate of the City) some common Ground of the said City, for the Enlargement of their Church, viz. in Breadth, from the East End of their Church; from the main Wall thereof on the North Part, into the high Street there, five Feet of Aftize; and at the West End of their Church, in Breadth four Feet and a Half, stretching in Length from the East toward the West Part, seven Score and eight Feet and an Half.

Afterwards, at a Common Council, holden on Tuesday, September 25, Anno 12 Henry VIII. the said Prior and Convent petitioned for Succour towards the Edifying and Maintenance of their new Church; and to take upon them, and the whole City, to be their second Founders. Whereupon it was agreed, that several Exhortations should be made in Writing to every Fellowship or Company in London, to see what they would do for their Devotions towards the same; and such Sums to be certified to the Mayor and Aldermen, to the Intent it may be known to what it will amount.

A Prior of this House, in Henry VIII.'s Time, was not so observant as he should be of the Rules of his Order; who, on a Friday, (a Day of somewhat more Mortification and Devotion than others) was found at eleven o'Clock in Bed with a Whore, and taken by Barthelot and others, appointed Visitors by Order of Cromwell, the Vicar-General. For the concealing of this Incontinency, the surprized Prior distributed thirty Pounds presently among them, and promised thirty Pounds more: All which was certified to Cromwell, in a Letter wrote by the said Barthelot. These scandalous Crimes hastened the Dissolution of these Monasteries.

In the Church of this House was buried Mr. John Tirres.

Monuments in this Church.

Nicholas, the Son of William Kyriell, Esq;

Sir Thomas de Mollinton, Baron of Wemese; who bequeathed by Will, dated 1408, his Body to be buried in the Chapel of St. Mary, within the College of the Friars of St. Crucis, London; and Dame Elizabeth his Wife, Daughter of William Botelar, Baron of Wome, according to her last Will, Anno 1410.

John Rest, Grocer, Mayor of London, 1516.

Sir John Skevington, Knt. Merchant-Taylor, Sheriff, 1520.

Sir Rice Griffith, beheaded on the Tower-hill, 1531.

Sir John Milbourn.

Sir John Milbourn was a Benefactor to this House of the Crutched-friars. He set up his Tomb in their Church in his Life-time, and appointed a solemn Obit to be kept there, during the Life of himself, and his Wife Dame Johan; and, after his Decease, to be also kept in the said Church by the said Friars, for their Souls. He was buried here, but afterwards removed to St. Edmund's the King.

And his thirteen Beadsmen, dwelling in his Alms-House hard by, were to come daily unto this Church, where they should, in some convenient Place near unto the said Tomb, abide and continue while the Service of God, or, at the least, until such Time as the whole Mass, which daily should be begun in the said Church by the Hour of Eight o'Clock in the Morning, or thereabouts, should be sung or said, for evermore, at the Altar called Our Lady's Altar, in the middle Isle of the said Church, founded by the said Sir John Milbourn; to the Intent that the said thirteen poor Beadsmen, afore the Beginning of the said Mass, one of them standing right over-against the other, about, and encompassing the same Tomb or Burial-Place of Sir John Milbourn, shall severally, two and two of them together, say the Psalm of De Profundis, and a Pater-noster, Ave, and Creed, with a Collect thereunto belonging; and such of them as could not say the Psalm of De Profundis, were to say a Pater-noster, Ave, and Creed: Which Prayers, as the Will directs, they should especially say for the good and prosperous Estate of the said Sir John, and Dame Johan, their Children, and Friends now living; and, after their Decease, for the Souls of the said Sir John, and Dame Johan, and Margaret his first Wife, their Fathers and Mothers, Children, and Friends Souls, and all Christian Souls.

*The Fryars
Hall made a Glas-
House.*

In Stow's Time, the Place where this Church stood was made a Carpenter's Yard and a Tennis-Court, and the Fryars-Hall a Glas-House; which House, in the Year 1575, on the fourth of September, burst out in a terrible Fire, and having in it about 40,000 Billets of Wood, was consumed to the Stone Walls, which were so thick, that they prevented the Fire spreading any farther.

*Sir John
Milbourn's
Alms-
Houses.*

Adjoining to this Fryars Church, by the East End thereof, in Woodroff-lane, towards Tower-bill, are certain Alms-Houses, fourteen in Number, built of Brick and Timber, founded by Sir John Milbourn, Draper, some Time Mayor, 1521.

The Inscription.

And over the Gate towards the Street, the old Inscription, on a four-square Stone, is still remaining, with the Figure of the Assumption of our Blessed Lady, supported by six Angels, in a Cloud of Glory. The Inscription is, Ad laudem
Dei & gloriose Virginis MARIE, hoc Opus erexit
Dominus JOHANNES MILBOURN,
Miles & Alderman. hujus Civitatis, A. D. 1535.

Number of Alms-Men.

Wherein are placed thirteen aged poor Men, and their Wives, if they have Wives: These have their Dwellings, Rent-free, and 2 s. 4 d. a-piece, the first Day of every Month, for ever.

Champion's Benefaction thereto.

Sir Richard Champion, Draper, Mayor, about the eighth of Queen Elizabeth, gave 19 l. 14 s.
per Annum, to thirteen poor Alms-Men at Tower-bill: On whom Sir John Milbourn, Draper, and Founder, had settled the like Maintenance of 19 l. 14 s. before.

Concerning this Gift of Sir John Milbourn, it appears by Dolphin's Will, that he built thirteen

Alms-Houses in his Life-time on a Plat of Dolphin's Ground in the Parish of St. Olave's, near the Tower, in Aldgate Ward, next adjoining on the South Part of the Choir or Chancel of the Conventual Church of the Priory of Crossed-Fryars of London, and the Convent of the said Place, within the Precinct some Time of their House. Which Plat or Parcel of Ground contained in the East Part thereof from North to South, that is to say, from the South-East Corner of the said Church along by the Highway there, unto the new House of one John Martin, 115 Feet and one Inch of Assize: And in Breadth from East to West, that is to say, from the aforesaid Way to the Convent Garden, 16 Feet and six Inches of Assize, &c. and so it goes, on setting out the Dimensions. The said 13 Tenements, or Cottages, contained about the eighth Part of an Acre, with the Appurtenances. This Sir John Milbourn had of Edmund Strettham, Prior of the Crossed Fryars, and the Convent; recovered 26 Henry VIII. as in the Hustlings of London appeareth of Record.

Of these said thirteen Tenements, or Cottages,
 the said Milbourn, and Dame Johan, his Wife,
 made a Gift in Trust unto one William Dolphin, Citizen and Draper; as also of eleven other Messuages in several Parishes in London: Which were bought with the Money and Goods of the said Sir John Milbourn and Dame Johan.

The Houses were these: Five Messuages in Thames-street, in the Parish of St. Laurence Pountney: Two Messuages with their Appurtenances in the Parish of St. Nicholas near Newgate: Two Messuages with their Appurtenances in St. Martin's the Great, some Time belonging to the Reverend Father in Christ, John, Archbishop of Thebes, and Commendatory perpetual of Carlisle:
 Two Messuages or Tenements and Gardens, some Time John Chester's, afterwards Dame Johan, his late Wife, married to Sir John Milbourn, lying in the Parish of our Blessed Lady of Aldermay:
 Eleven in all.

All these eleven Messuages, with the said thirteen Cottages, the said William Dolphin, by his Last Will, bearing Date the eighth Day of December, 36 Henry VIII. devised and bequeathed to the Master and Wardens, Brethren and Sisters of the Guild or Fraternity of our Blessed Lady of Drapers; to have and to hold to them and their Successors for ever, for these Uses, viz. with Part of the Rents and Issues, to dispose and distribute 32 s. 10 d. Sterling, at twelve Times of the Year, to thirteen poor People, Householders, either wedded Persons or unmarried, Brethren or Sisters, of the same Fraternity of Drapers, as should be admitted to the thirteen Rooms:
 That is, 7 d. a Week a-piece, on every first Day of the Month, beginning the first Day of May in the Year 1536.

And in case there should not be found within the Company of Drapers so many poor Householders as would receive the same Alms, then there should be named, to supply the same Number of Alms-men, other Householders of the Parish of St. Edmund's in Lombard-street, and St. Bartholomew the Little, to receive the said
 Alms.

These poor People were to be thus qualified,
 viz. to be of honest Conversation, and not detected

ed of any open Crime; and after their Admission, should be reſtant and abiding upon the ſame; and not to keep any common Selling of Ale, Beer, or Wine, or any other Thing concerning Tippling, or any petty Oſtrey.

They were to be nominated, and put in, by Sir John Milbourn, and Dame Johan his Wife, during their mortal Lives; and after their Deceaſes, by their Executors, and then by the Maſter and Wardens and Aſſiſtants of the Drapers for ever: And the ſaid Beadſmen, or Alms-Men, were daily to come unto the Church of the Croſſed Fryars, in ſome Place near to the Tomb of the ſaid Milbourn, and Dame Johan; and there to abide and continue while the Service of God was ſaid.

Next to the Alms-Houſes was the Houſe of the Lord Lumley, built in the Time of Hen. VIII. by Sir Thomas Wiat, the Father, upon a Piece of Ground that belonged to the Croſſed Fryars; which is the fartheſt Part of Aldgate Ward.

On the South Side of Fenchurch-ſtreet, over-againſt the Pump, among other large and handſome Houſes, was one, ſome Time belonging to the Prior of Monte Jovis, or Monaſtrie Cornute (Hornchurch) in Effex. It was the Prior's Inn, when he came to London.

Remarkable Things.

The moſt remarkable Things in this Ward at preſent are,

Parishes.

Fiſt, Four Pariſh-Churches, (1) St. Katherine-cree or Chriſt-church, (2) St. Andrew Undershaft, (3) St. Catherine Coleman, (4) St. James Duke's Place, and the Pariſh of St. Mary-axe, united and annexed to the Pariſh of St. Andrew Undershaft; of which more particularly in the Parochial State of this City.

Secondly, The Navy-Office, which is a large modern Building, very commodious for Buſineſs; the Office where the Commiſſioners meet, and the ſeveral Clerks keep their Books, being placed in the miſt of a large Court, apart from the reſt of the Buildings round about it, which are ſet apart for the Reſidence of the Commiſſioners and principal Officers; the Office being thus built apart to prevent the Danger of firing the Books, &c. This Office has another Entrance into Seething-lane, and another by Tower-hill.

Thirdly, The HALLS:

Halls.

(1.) Bricklayers-hall, a Building of Brick in the Year 1627, on the South Side of Leaden-ball-ſtreet, almoſt facing St. Katherine-cree Church: But ſo covered with private Houſes and Shops in the Front, that it cannot be ſeen from the Street, the Way to it being thro' a very narrow Paſſage.

(2.) Fletcher's-hall, at the North-Eaſt Corner of St. Mary-axe-ſtreet.

(3.) Ironmongers-hall, at the Extremity of the Ward, in Fenchurch-ſtreet, a very fine modern Building, erected in the Year 1748, with a Stone Front, agreeable to the Elevation annexed.

Publick Buildings.

Fourthly, Other publick Buildings:

(1.) An Independent Meeting-houſe at the South End of Bury-ſtreet, and another on the Side of Poor-jury-lane near the North End.

(2.) Three Jews Synagogues, one at the North End of Bury-ſtreet, as mentioned before; and another in Magpye-alley for the Portugueze, and other Jews from Spain, Italy, and other Countries on the South and Eaſt; and one in Duke's-place for the Dutch, German, and other Jews from the North and Western Parts.

(3.) Aldgate; of which there has been given a Deſcription on Page 22, Vol. I. where for Sir John Taſh read Sir John Caſs.

Sir John Caſs, Knt. Alderman, Sheriff, and one of the Representatives of this City in two ſucceſſive Parliaments, built two Schools near the Church of St. Botolph without Aldgate, (A. D. 1709.) in his Life-time, and at his own Expence, for the Charity-Children belonging to Portſoken Ward, who till then were clothed and educated by voluntary Contributions. Theſe Schools, for fifty Boys and forty Girls, were at firſt endowed by him with an Annuity out of ſome contiguous Building; and from the Profits ariſing out of the Burials in a certain Vault near the Church, built at the ſame Time; and opened with great Solemnity in 1710, by a Sermon in St. Botolph's, the Pariſh-Church, preached by the Moſt Rev. Sir William Dawes, attended by ſixteen Peers, and forty Members of the Houſe of Commons. This Benefaction was afterwards, by his laſt Will, dated July 5, 1718, augmented with an Annuity of 150 l. more, for providing Salaries for the Maſter and Miſtreſs, and Cloathing for the Children; and with the Reſidue of his Eſtate after the Death of his Wife, which he gave to Mr. Valentine Brewis, and eight other Truſtees, in Truſt, to provide a ſufficient Dinner every Day for the ſaid Children, and for other Purpoſes. But Sir John's Breath failing him, when he had ſigned with his Name only two Sheets of his Will, which conſiſted of ſeveral Sheets of Paper, it was neceſſary after his Death to apply to Parliament to get this his laſt Will eſtabliſhed by an Act; in which the Truſtees were greatly aſſiſted by the Lady Caſs; and the Act paſſed the Houſe of Lords. But the Heirs at Law claiming the Freehold Eſtates, which could not be conveyed by ſuch an imperfect Will, the Commons threw it out at the ſecond Reading. This was in the Year 1726.

On the Death of Lady Caſs, on July the 7th, 1732, Mr. Valentine Brewis, then Deputy of Portſoken-Ward, ſolely ſtood up in behalf of Sir John's laſt Will; which he proved in due Form, and then commenced a Suit in Chancery for the Eſtabliſhment of this Charity, none of the other Truſtees being willing to embark in ſo knotty an Affair. But this Gentleman dying in October 1738, tho' the Suit abated for awhile after his Death, the Ward was prevailed upon by their Principals, in 1742, to revive it, and obtained a Decree in Chancery to eſtabliſh as well the Freehold as Copyhold Eſtates for the Uſes declared by the ſaid Will. However, the Charity ſtill remained dormant. The many and long Accompts that were now ordered to be paſſed before a Maſter in Chancery had like to have fruſtrated the Deſigns of the pious Founder, had not Mr. Gascoyne, then one of the Common Council of Portſoken Ward, now Sir Criſpe Gascoyne, Knt. Alderman, and late Lord-Mayor of London, with indefatigable Pains unravelled and digeſted the Proceedings of the Accomptant and and two Attornies, who had got the Management of the Estate, and the Receipt of its Profits, in their Hands; which was finally adjusted and laid before a general Vestry of the Freedom Part of St. Botolph's Parish, or whole Ward of Portfoken, on the first of April, 1747, to their general Satisfaction. And, in Consequence of this Proceeding, the Master's Report was finished and confirmed by the Lord Chancellor in April 1748; when his Lordship approved of the Scheme stated therein, for the present Establishment of the Charity, and gave Directions for the Appointment of twenty-one Trustees for the Care and Management thereof, therein-named; and those to be from Time to Time filled up, when the Number of the Trustees is reduced to eleven. Nineteen of these Trustees appointed in Chancery met at the School-Room on the thirteenth of July following, and elected Mr. Alderman Gascoyne Treasurer of the Trust-Estate. And upon an Account delivered in the Year 1749, the Estate consisted of a Capital Fund of between 400 and 500 l. per Ann. Real Estate, and 5000 l. in Money. Their next Care was to provide a Master and Mistress with their Lodging, and a School-Room convenient, which at present is over Aldgate.

BASINGHALL, or BASSISHAW
WARD.

[See the PLAN of this WARD, joined to that of
COLEMAN-STREET WARD.]

The Situation and Bounds of Basinghall Ward.

Whence it takes its Name. Its present State and Government. Remarkable Things therein. Of Blackwell-hall, Mafons-hall, Girdlers-hall, Weavers-hall. Their Charter from King Henry II.

The Situation and Bounds of this Ward.

Basinghall Ward is very small, consisting of one Street, called Basinghall-Street, from Bassings-hall, which was the principal House in it. This Ward is bounded on the East and South by Coleman-street Ward, on the North by Cripplegate Ward, on the West by Cheap Ward and Cripplegate Ward: It begins in the South at Bakewell-hall, alias Blackwell-hall, which is the last of Coleman-street Ward; and runs from thence North down to London-wall, and 88 Feet East, and 54 West against the said Wall.

The Origin of its Name.

Of old Time, the most noble Persons that inhabited this City were appointed to be principal Magistrates there; as was Godfrey de Magun (or Magnaville) Portgrave, or Sheriff, in the Reign of William the Conqueror, and of William Rufus. Hugh de Buck, in the Reign of Henry I. Aubery de Vere, Earl of Oxford. After him Gilbert Becket, in the Reign of King Stephen. After that, Godfrey de Magnaville, the Son of William, the Son of Godfrey de Magnaville, Earls of Essex, were Portgraves, or Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. In the Reign of Henry II. Peter Fitzwalter; after him, John Fitznigel, &c. So likewise in the 16 of King John, A. D. 1214, a Time of great Troubles, Solomon Bassing, and Hugh Bassing, Barons of this Realm, were Sheriffs; and the said Solomon Bassing was Mayor in the Year 1216, which was the first of Henry III. Also Adam Bassing, Son of Solomon, was one of the Sheriffs in the Year 1643, the 28th of Henry III. unto which Adam de Bassing the said King, in the 31st of his Reign, gave and confirmed certain Messuages in Aldermanbury, and in Milk-street, (Places not far from Bassings-hall) and the Advowson of the Church at Bassings-hall, with certain Liberties and Privileges. He was afterwards Mayor, A. D. 1251, the 36th of Henry III. and Thomas Bassing was one of the Sheriffs, A. D. 1269.

Robert Bassing was Sheriff, 1279, and William Bassing served the same Office for this City in 1308. This Family spread itself into Cambridgeshire, near to a Water, or Bourn, and was therefore, for a Difference, called Bassing at the Bourn, and, more shortly, Bassingbourn; which gave the same Arms, and left their Name to the Place where they dwelt.

Basinghall-street, of which this little Ward consists, is of no great Uniformity, as not running strait, nor of an equal Breadth. But it is graced with good Buildings, and well inhabited by Merchants.

Present State of this Ward.

On the East Side, beginning at the South End, is Mafons-alley, which, by Permission of the Owner of the House under which the Way is made, is a Passage into Coleman-street, facing Bell-alley, of great Convenience to the Inhabitants and all the Passengers from the North-West to the Royal Exchange, &c. This Alley is paved with Flag-Stones, and kept very clean. More Northward is Potters-alley, or Court, as some call it, a small Place; and Shooters-court, also small, with a Free-Stone Pavement: Here is another Court at the North-East Corner, which takes its Name from the Street, and leads through to London-wall. Then, turning from the Wall down the West Side, we meet with no Alleys or Courts 'till we come to Church-alley, the Name of the Passages on both Sides the Church, which lead into Aldermanbury; but there are a Pair of Gates in the Centre at the West End of the Church, shut up at Nights. In the Alley on the North Side is Youngs-court, a very decent small Place. More to the South is Guildhall-court, which is well built and inhabited by the Chamberlain, Town-Clerk, and some other Officers chiefly depending on the City Business transacted in Guildhall. This Court has a Thoroughfare into Guildhall-yard, that opens between the Hall and the Chapel; and it leads into the great Hall by a back Stairs.

There are 25 Feet West of Cateaton-street, Northward, in this Ward.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and 12 Watchmen.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest, for this Ward, are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of March.

This Ward hath an Alderman, his Deputy, four Common-Councilmen, two Constables, two Scavengers, Scavengers, 17 Wardmote Inquest Men, and a Beadle.

It is taxed to the Fifteen in London at 7*l.* and likewise in the Exchequer at 7*l.*

Aldermen,
Common-Council-
men.

The present Alderman of this Ward is William Baker, Esq; and the Common Council are, Mr. William Colthurst, Deputy, Francis Cooper, Esq; Mr. Samuel Ellis, Mr. Thomas Fludyer.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are,

(1.) St. Michael's Church, called Bassishaw Church; of which hereafter.

(2.) On the West Side, almost at the South End of the Street, is Bakewell-hall, corruptly called Blackwell-hall, and antiently Bassings-hall, a Building of great Antiquity, belonging to the antient and renowned Family of Bassings, and was therefore called Bassings-haugh, or Hall. Authors, who saw the Arms of this Family on several Parts of the antient Building, confirm this Opinion. These Arms were, a Gerond of twelve Points, Or and Azure.

Blackwell-
hall.

But how Bakewell-hall took that Name, is another Question. It is said that Thomas Bakewell dwelt in this House in the 36th of Edward III. and that in the 20th of Richard II. the said King, for the Sum of 50 l. which the Mayor and Commonalty had paid into the Hanaper, granted Licence, so much as was in him, to John Frosh, William Parker, and Stephen Spilman, Citizens and Mercers, that they, the said Messuages, called Bakewell-hall, and one Garden, with the Appurtenances, in the Parish of St. Michael of Bassings-haugh, and of St. Laurence in the Jewery of London, and one Messuage, two Shops and one Garden, in the said Parish of St. Michael, which they held of the King in Burgage, might give and assign to the Mayor and Commonalty for ever, ad opus Communitatis; i. e. for the Use of the Corporation: And Bakewell-hall from that Time has been chiefly employed as a weekly Market-Place for Woollen Cloths, broad and narrow, brought from all Parts of this Realm to be sold there. In the 21st of Richard II. Richard Whittington Mayor; and in the 22d, Drew Barrington being Mayor, it was decreed, that no Foreigner or Stranger should sell any Woollen Cloth, but in Bakewell-hall, upon Pain of Forfeiture thereof.

An Act of Common Council, held August the first, in the eighth of Henry VIII. concerning Blackwell-hall:

"Whereas by an Act of Common Council, in the twenty-second Year of the Reign of King Richard II. it was ordained and established, That no manner of Person should bring or convey any Woollen Cloths to the said City, to be sold, except they were first brought, harboured, and discharged, at the common Market of Blackwell-hall, therefore ordained and provided, and of old Time accustomed, upon Pain of Forfeiture of all the said Cloths so harboured and laid, contrary to the said Ordinance, was, by another Act of Common Council, held at the Guildhall afore said, the Day and Year above said, ratified, approved, and confirmed. And over that, it is now at this present ordained, established, and enacted,

No. 67.

"That no Manner of Person, being Freeman of this City, after the Feast of the Nativity of our Lady, next coming, suffer any Manner of Person whatsoever, be he Free or Foreign, to buy or sell any Manner of Woollen Cloths, harboured, or lodged, contrary to the said Ordinance: As Broad-cloth, Kerseys, Cottons, Bridgewater Frizes, Doffeins, or any other Manner of Cloth made of Wool, within his Shop, Chamber, or other Place within his House, unless the said Cloths were first brought to Blackwell-hall afore said, and there bought and sold: Or else the said Freeman, the said Cloths lawfully brought in the Country, out of the said City; upon Pain to forfeit and to pay, to the Use of the Commonalty of this City, for the first Offence, for every Broad-cloth so sold, harboured, or lodged, contrary to the said Ordinance, 6*s.* 8*d.* for every Kersey, 3*s.* 4*d.* for every Doffein, Bridgewater, and other Pieces of Cloth made of Wool, 20*d.* And for the second Offence, the said Pains to be doubled. And for the third Offence, the Party so offending to be disfranchised, and deprived clearly from the Liberties of this City for ever."

This House growing ruinous, and in Danger of falling, was taken down; and in the Month of February next following, the Foundation of a new, strong, and beautiful Store-House being laid, the Work was finished in the Space of ten Months, in the Year 1558, at the Charge of 2500 l. 300 l. whereof was a Legacy of Mr. Richard May, Merchant-Taylor. This was demolished in the Flames of 1666, and re-erected Anno 1672. The Door-Case in the Front, next Guildhall, is of Stone, adorned with two Columns, Entablature and Pediment of the Dorick Order; in the Pediment are the King's Arms, and the Arms of the City are lower, enriched with Cupids, &c.

The City gave to Christ's Hospital the Profits arising from Lodging and Pitching of Cloth in the several Warehouses, or Halls; for here is the Devonshire, Glocester, Worcester, Kentish, Medley, Spanish and Blanket Halls; besides the like Profits of the Bays at Leadenhall. Cloths pay 1*d.* each Pitching, and a Half-penny per Week Resting; and, to avoid Trouble, every Factor has a Rest, or one certain Number, for which he pays; as for Example, admit a Rest to be 180 Cloths:

And the next Week there are Cloths pitched. — — — } 90

Stockings and Blankets pay by the Pack; all which, it is said, amounts to about 1100 l. per Ann. clear. There are also several Statutes relating to the Regulation of this Market, as to Factors, and others concerned; and the whole Management is under the Inspection of the Governors of Christ's Hospital. See p. 462.

From this Hall Northward, are several good Houses, to the Back-gate of Guildhall; which Gate, and Part of the Building within the same, are of this Ward.

Coopers
Hall.

(3.) Some small Distance from this Gate the Coopers have their Common Hall: It is well built of Brick, and the Hall is a handsome Room, wainscotted about fourteen Feet high, paved with Marble, adorned with several Coats of Arms in the Glass, and the Portraiture, at full Length, of Sir John Fleet, Lord-Mayor, 1693, and that of Mr. Henry Stroud, another worthy Member, who at his Decease, An. 1704, when he died Master of the Company, gave 6500 l. to build and endow a Free-School and Alms-Houses at Egham. And under the King's Arms is the Bust of King William III.

Masons
Hall.

(4.) On the East Side is Masons-hall, in Masons-alley. It is small, but well built of Stone, and is bounded on the West by Coleman-street Church-yard.

Weavers
Hall.

(5.) The next is Weavers-hall, which is neatly adorned on the Inside with Hangings, Fret-Work, and a Screen of the Ionick Order. The Company is of great Antiquity, as appears by a Charter of Henry II. in these Words, Rex omnibus, ad quos, &c.

“Henry, King of England, Duke of Normandy, and of Guian, Earl of Anjou, to the Bishop, Justices, Sheriffs Barons, Ministers, and all his true Lieges of London, sendeth greeting. Know ye, that we have granted to the Weavers in London, their Guild to be had in London, with all the Freedoms and Customs that they had in the Time of King Henry, my Grandfather. So that none but they intromit within the City of their Craft, but he be of their Guild; neither in Southwark, or other Places pertaining to London, otherwise than it was done in the Time of King Henry, my Grandfather. Wherefore I will and straightly command, that over all lawfully they may treat, and have all aforesaid; as well in Peace, free, worshipful, and wholly, as they had it, freer, better, worshipfullier, and whollier, than in the Time of King Henry, my Grandfather. So that they yield yearly to me two Marks of Gold, at the Feast of St. Michael. And I forbid, that any Man to them do any Unright, or Disease, upon Pain of ten Pounds. Witness Thomas of Canterbury, Warwick fil. Gar. Chamberlaine, at Winchester.”

The same Henry II. in the thirty-first of his Reign, confirmed to the Weavers in London, that made Woollen Cloth, the Correction thereof; and amongst other Articles decreed, That if any Man made Cloth of Spanish Wool, mixed with English Wool, the Portgrave, or chief Magistrate of London, ought to burn it.

King Henry III. granted to the Citizens of London, that they should not be vexed for the Burrels, or Cloth-listed, according to the Constitution made for Breadth of Cloth the 9th of his Reign. Richard II. in the 3d of his Reign, granted an Order of Agreement between the Weavers of London, Englishmen, and Aliens or Strangers born, brought in by Edward III.

(6.) Almost at the North End of the Street is Girdlers Hall, well wainscotted within, and adorned with a beautiful Screen of the Composite Order.

CHAP. IX.

BILLINGSGATE WARD.

With a PLAN on a COPPER-PLATE, neatly engraved from a NEW SURVEY.

Situation, Bounds, and Contents of Billingsgate Ward. Whence it derives its Name. Parishes and Parish-Churches. Government and Present State. Billingsgate Market. Keys or Docks. Butchers Hall. Fire of London. Antiquities.

BILLINGSGATE Ward is situated on the River Side, and is therefore bounded on the South by the Thames, on the East by Tower-street Ward, on the North by Langborne Ward, and on the West by the Ward of Bridge Within. It begins at the West End of Tower-street Ward in Thames-street, about Smart's Key, and runs along that Street, on the South Side, to St. Magnus Church, at the Bridge Foot, and on the North Side of the said Thames-street, from over-against Smart's Key, till over-against the North-West Corner of St. Magnus Church aforesaid.

The Contents, from Thames-street to the North, are the Street of St. Mary-at-Hill, Love-lane, Botolph's-lane, Pudding-lane, Little Eastcheap, and a considerable Part of Rood-lane and Philpot-lane, with several other cross Lanes, Alleys, and Courts.

As to the Derivation of the Name given to this Ward, Authors are not agreed; but the most probable Opinion refers us to some eminent Person, who, in antient Times, had large Possessions in this Part of the City, or held this Ward by the same Tenure, as the Basings, &c. held other Wards; and tho' we do not attempt to support the exploded History of King Belinus, related by Fabian and others, it is certain this Name appears in the first List of Wards. See Page 105.

The present State and Condition of this Ward:

Thames-street is a Place of very considerable Trade, on Account of its convenient Situation near the Water, the Custom-House, Billingsgate, and the several Wharfs and Keys for lading and unlading Merchants Goods, &c. and is very well built for that Purpose.

The Keys, Wharfs, and Docks, which are now assigned and allowed to be lawful by an Act of Parliament, for shipping, lading, and landing of Goods and Merchandizes, are these: 1. Brewer's-key, 2. Chester's-key, 3. Galley-key, 4. Wool-dock, 5. Customhouse-key, 6. Porter's-key, 7. Bear's-key, 8. Sab's-key, 9. Wiggan's-key, 10. Young's-key, 11. Rafe's-key, 12. Dice-key, 13. Smart's-key, 14. Billingsgate, 15. Somer's-key, 16. Lion's-key, 17. Botolph's-key, 18. Hamon's-key, 19. Gaunt's-key, 20. Cock's-key, and Fresh-wharf. These Keys or Wharfs are chiefly named from their first Proprietors, or particular Use or Situation; as Botolph's-wharf, called in the Con-

Botolph's Wharf. quoror's Days Botolph's-gate: And we observe, that this Wharf was in the Crown in Edward I's Time, who granted it to Richard de Kingston in these Words: "Our common Key of St. Botolph next Billinggate, London, with free going in and out to the same, in the East Head of the same Place: Which Place hath Land contained from the Tenement of the said Richard against the West, and to the Head of the said Church, and the common Way which leadeth to the Thames against the West, eighteen Ells and one Quarter of an Ell, of the Iron Ell of our Sovereign Lord the King of England, without Inches measured: And it containeth in both Heads, from the Wall of the said Church unto our common Key, in Breadth six Ells of the Ell aforesaid, without Inches measured. To have and to hold to the said Richard and his Heirs, and to whom he will give, sell, bequeath, assign, or any other mannerwise alien, and their Heirs, of us, our Successors, &c. freely, quietly, well, and in Peace, &c. yielding therefore a Silver Penny at the Feast of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, for all Services, &c."

Billinggate. Billinggate is that from which the Ward takes its Name, being a large Water-gate, Port, or Harbour for small Vessels, which here arrive with Fish, Salt, Oranges, Lemons, Onions, and several other Commodities; and in the Summer Season with Abundance of Cherries from Kent. Likewise Wheat, and other Grain at Smart's-key. And these Stairs of Billinggate are very much resorted unto by the Gravesend Watermen, this being the noted Place to land and take Water at, for that and other Eastern Towns down the River. And here the Coalmen and Woodmongers meet every Morning about Eight or Nine o'Clock, this Place being their Exchange for the Coal Trade, which brings a great Resort of People, and occasions a great Trade to the Inhabitants.

Touching the antient Customs of this Billinggate, I have not read, saith Stow, in any Record, more than that in the Reign of Edward III. every great Ship landing there paid for Standage two Pence; every little Ship with Orelocks, a Penny; the less Boat, called a Battile, a Halfpenny. Of two Quarters of Corn measured, the King was to have one Farthing; of a Comb of Corn, a Penny; of every Weight going out of the City, a Halfpenny; of two Quarters of Sea-Coals measured, a Farthing; and of every Tun of Ale going out of England beyond the Seas, by Merchant Strangers, four Pence; of every thousand Herrings, a Farthing, except the Franchises.

Altho' Stow saith these Payments were not made before the Reign of Edward III. yet it appears in Brompton's Chronicle, inter Leges Ethelredi, which was Anno 1016, that Tolls were then paid at Billinggate.

An Act of Parliament was made (10 & 11 of William III.) to make Billinggate a free Market for the Sale of Fish; when it was enacted, "That after the tenth of May, 1699, Billinggate Market should be every Day in the Week, except Sunday, a free and open Market for all Sorts of Fish; and that it should be lawful for any Person to buy or sell any Sort of Fish without Disturbance."

This Act also settled the Tolls to be paid by the Fisher-Boats; enacting, "That after the said tenth of May, no Person selling any Sort of Fish in the said Market, should pay any other Toll or Duty, to any Person or Persons, for coming with his Boat or Vessel, or landing, standing, or selling, in or at this Market, than it was hereafter expressed, viz. for every Vessel of Salt Fish, for Groundage, eight Pence per Day, and twenty Pence per Voyage, and no more, in Full of all Duties and Demands, to be distributed and disposed of as the Lord-Mayor, &c. shall yearly order and direct, according to the Right of the respective Persons thereunto. For a Lobster-Boat, for Groundage, per Day, two Pence, and per Voyage thirteen Pence, and no more, in full as aforesaid. For every Vessel of fresh Sea Fish, Groundage, per Day, two Pence, and per Voyage thirteen Pence. For every Dogger-Boat or Smack with Sea Fish, for Groundage, per Day, two Pence, and per Voyage thirteen Pence. For every Oyster-Vessel or Cock, per Day, two Pence, for Metage one Halfpenny per Bushel.

"And that it should be lawful for any Person, that bought any Fish in the said Market, to sell the same again in any other Market, Place, or Places in the City of London, or elsewhere, by Retail, being found and whole-some Fish, without any Disturbance or Molestation.

"And that from and after the tenth of May, that Person that should take or demand any Toll or Sample, or any Imposition, or set Price of Sea Fish, of English catching, should forfeit the Sum of ten Pounds, the one Half to his Majesty, and the other Half to him that will sue for the same."

And because the Fishmongers caused the greatest Part of the Fish to be bought up at Billinggate, and then divided the same by Lot among themselves, in order to buy and sell at what Rate they pleased, it was also enacted, "That no Person whatsoever should, after the said tenth of May, buy, or cause to be bought, at the said Market of Billinggate, any Quantity of Fish, to be divided by Lot among any Fishmongers, or other Persons, with an Intent to be put afterwards to Sale by Retail, or otherwise; nor any Fishmonger to engross or buy in the said Market any Quantity of Fish, but what shall be for his own Sale or Use, and not on the Behalf of any other Fishmongers exposed to Sale, on Pain of forfeiting twenty Pounds for every such Offence, the one Half to the Use of the Poor of the Parish where he lives, the other Half to his own Use that shall sue for it. Provided nothing contained in this Act should be construed to prohibit the Selling of Mackarel before or after Divine Service."

Afterwards, upon the ingrossing of great Quantities of Fish by some Persons, to the Violation of this Act, this Order came forth, Anno 1707, Sir Robert Bedingfield, Lord-Mayor:

Jovis vicesimo sexto die Junij, 1707, Annoq; Regni Reginae Annæ, Magnæ Britannia, &c. sexto.

"Whereas in and by an Act of Parliament made “made in the tenth and eleventh Years of the “Reign of King William III. intituled, An Act to “make Billingsgate a free Market for Sale of Fish,

 “it is enacted, That it shall and may be lawful “for any Person or Persons to buy or sell any “Sort of Fish in the said Market, without any “Disturbance or Molestation whatsoever, and to “sell the same again in any other Market-Place
 “or Places within the City of London, or else“where, by Retail: But, contrary to the true “Intent and Meaning of the said Act, divers “Persons do frequently buy and ingross to them“selves great Quantities of Fish, in or at Bil- “lingsgate Market, and sell the same again in the “said Market; which Practice tends greatly to “the enhancing the Prices of Fish, and is punish“able by the Statute made against Regrators, in “the fifth and sixth Years of the Reign of King “Edward VI. Chap. 14.

The Hours of the Fish-Market at Bil-lingsgate.

“For Prevention whereof for the future, it is “now ordered by this Court, That no Fishmonger, “Fishwoman, or other Person or Persons whatso“ever, do or shall hereafter sell or expose to Sale “any Fish in or at Billingsgate Market, which “was then before bought in the same Market;
 “and that none but Fishermen, their Wives, “Apprentices, or Servants, be permitted to “stand, stay, or remain there, to sell, by Retail,
 “the Fish by them taken and brought to the said “Market to be sold, so that the Citizens may “have Fish at the first Hand for their own Use,
 “according to the true Meaning of the Law.
 “And it is further ordered by this Court, That
 “the Hours limited for beginning of the said “Fish-market at Billingsgate shall hereafter be “strictly observed; that is to say, from Lady- “Day to Michaelmas, at Four of the Clock in the “Morning, and, from Michaelmas to Lady-Day,
 “at Six o’Clock in the Morning; and that before “those Hours none do presume to buy or sell any “Sort of Fish at the said Market, (except Her- “rings, Sprats, Mackarel, and Shell-Fish) on “Pain of being proceeded against as Foretallers
 “of the Market. And the Yeomen of the Water“side are strictly enjoined and required to see “this Order duly and constantly observed; and “also constantly to ring the Bell at Billingsgate, “precisely at the Times aforesaid, for the Begin“ning of the Market there: And that without “Fail they cause all Persons that shall buy or “sell Fish there, before the said Hours and Ring“ing of the said Bell, or shall regrate Fish, that “is to say, buy Fish, and sell the same again in “the said Market, to be apprehended, and “brought before the Right Honourable the Lord-“Mayor of this City for the Time being, or some “Justice of the Peace, to be bound over to the “Sessions, there to answer the same. And it is “further ordered, That no Fish, except Herrings, “Sprats, Mackarel, and Shell-Fish, be sold aboard “any Vessel or Boat at Billingsgate; which the “said Yeomen of the Water-side, and the Under “Water-Bailiff, are likewise carefully to see “observed, as they will answer the contrary at “their Perils.

GIBSON.”

And this Place is now more frequented than in ancient Time, when Queenhithe was made Use of

for the said Purpose, this being more commodious; and therefore it was ordained to be the only Port for all such Sorts of Merchandizes.

Boss-alley, so called from a Bosse of Spring-Water which was erected facing this Alley by the Executors of Richard Whittington, is long, but very ordinary, narrow, and dirty.

Near this Alley is St. Mary-bill, which runs Northwards unto Eastcheap, facing St. Margaret Pattens Church. This St. Mary-bill has very good Houses on it, inhabited by several Merchants. On the East Side is Cross-lane, which falls into Idle-lane, against St. Dunstan’s Church.
Austin’s-court, but mean, lying Northwards of Cross-lane. Maffie’s-court, a little more Northwards, hath a dark Passage up Steps, and then is an open Court, but mean.

The Church here Stow calls St. Mary on the Hill, but others have called it St. Mary at Hill, because it stands not on the Hill, but at, or about the Middle of the Ascent from Billingsgate to Little Eastcheap. The back Part of the Church stands in Love-Lane, and adjoining to it is an Alley called Church-alley, which leadeth into Love-lane, and hath Buildings only on the South Side, pretty good, the other Side lying open to the Church-yard.

Love-lane comes out of Little Eastcheap, and falls into Thames-street, where it hath but a narrow Entrance only for a Coach or Cart.

St. Botolph’s-lane is also a Descent from Eastcheap into Thames-street, but is well inhabited by wholesale Dealers in the Orange Trade, &c. It is narrow towards Thames-street, but broader upwards, adjoining to the Church: And it must not be forgot, that the first London Bridge across the Thames abutted towards the South End of this Lane. See Page 45.

George’s-lane, on the North Side, gives an Entrance into the Church, and hath a good Passage into Pudding-lane. Over-against this Church is St. Botolph’s-alley, indifferently well inhabited, with a broad Free-stone Passage into Love-lane.
 More Southward is St. Botolph’s Church-yard, at the upper End of which are two or three ordinary Houses.

Pudding-lane, another Descent from Eastcheap into Thames-street, is narrow and steep, but a Place of Trade, and well inhabited by considerable Dealers in foreign Trade. This was antiently called Rother-lane, or Red-rose-lane, from such a Sign there. Stow says, it was afterwards called Pudding-lane, because the Butchers of Eastcheap had their Scalding-House for Hogs there; and their Puddings, with other Filth of Beasts, were voided down that Way to their Dung-Boats on the Thames.

In this Lane it was that the dreadful Fire of London, on the second of September, 1666, first began. See Page 432, and hereafter in Bridge Ward within.

On the House where this dismal Fire began,
 this Inscription was set up by Authority:

“Here, by the Permission of Heaven, Hell brake loose “upon this Protestant City, from the malicious “Hearts of barbarous Papists, by the Hand of “their Agent Hubert, who confessed, and on the “Ruins of this Place declared the Fact, for which

N. B. This Inscription has been taken away some Years.

It was then a Baker's, now a Gentleman's House; and, in Commemoration thereof, there is erected a stately Monument of Free-stone on the East Side of Fish-street-hill; of which in Bridge Ward Within.

On the East Side of Pudding-lane is George-lane, and Fish-yard, a small Court, with a Free-stone Pavement. On the West Side is a Passage to Fish-street-hill, by the Monument; and lower down, to the South, King's-head-alley, paved with Free-stone.

Little Eastcheap is severed from Great Eastcheap by Gracechurch-street and Fish-street-hill. It is well inhabited by different Sorts of Tradesmen. On the North Side, and at the Corner of Rood-lane, stands St. Margaret Pattens Church; and betwixt Rood-lane and Philpot-lane is Turner's-alley, small and narrow.

Rood-lane is well built, and inhabited by Merchants and others; as is also Philpot-lane; of which more in Langbourn Ward.

Talbot-court, in Little Eastcheap, is a large and well inhabited Place; out of which a narrow Passage leadeth into another handsome Court, which hath an Entrance into Gracechurch-street.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward every Night, besides a Constable and Beadle, thirty Watchmen.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward, are to serve as Jurors in the Courts of Guildhall in the Month of May.

This Ward hath an Alderman and ten Common-Councilmen, eleven Constables, six Scavengers, fourteen Men of the Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at thirty-two Pounds, and in the Exchequer at thirty-one Pounds ten Shillings.

The Alderman of this Ward is William Beckford, Esq; one of the present Representatives of this City in Parliament. The Common-Councilmen are, George Woods, Deputy, Mr. Samuel Harris, Mr. Edward Robinson, Mr. John Cbeaney, Mr. Henry Cowling, Mr. Thomas Merrick, Mr. Charles Easton, Mr. William Harris, Mr. John Reed, and Mr. James Rossiter.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are,

1. The three Parishes and Parish-Churches of St. Mary-at-Hill, of St. Margaret-Pattens, and of St. George Botolph-lane; and two Parishes without their Churches, viz. the Parish of St. Botolph Billingsgate, and of St. Andrew Hubbard.

1. In Pudding-lane is seated Butchers-Hall, in which are three handsome Rooms, finely adorned with Fret-work and Wainscot, viz. an upper and lower Hall, and a Parlour.

3. In Love-lane, on the North-West Corner, entering into Little Eastcheap, is the Weigh-house, No. 67.

built on the Ground where the Church of St. Andrew Hubbard stood before the Fire of London, 1666; which said Weigh-house was before in Cornhill. In this House are weighed Merchandizes brought from beyond the Seas by the King's Beam; to which doth belong a Master, and under him four Master-Porters, with labouring Porters under them. They used to have Carts and Horses to fetch the Goods from the Merchants Warehouses to the Beam, and to carry them back. The House belongeth to the Company of Grocers, in whose Gift the several Porters, &c. Places were. But of late Years little is done in this Office, as wanting a compulsive Power to constrain Merchants to have their Goods weighed, they alledging it to be an unnecessary Trouble and Charge. Over this Office or Weigh-house is a large Room, now made Use of as a Meeting-house for some Dissenters from the Church of England. On the Backside of this Building is a Passage into St. Botolph's-lane. The chief Entrance into this Weigh-house is in Little Eastcheap. See Page 469.

In this Ward there was a House called The Boar's Head, inhabited by William Sanderson, which came to King Edward VI. by the Statute about Chantries; which, with the Shops, Cellars, Solders, and other Commodities and Easements, he sold in the second of his Reign, together with other Lands and Tenements, to John Sicklemore and Walter Williams for two thousand six hundred and sixty-eight Pounds, and upwards.

In the Parish of St. Mary-hill there was a Place called Septem Camerae, which was either one House, or else so many Rooms or Chambers, which formerly belonged to some Chantry; the Rent whereof went towards the maintaining of a Priest to pray superstitiously for the Soul of the Deceased, who left those Septem Camerae for that Use. These, with other Lands and Tenements in the City, and elsewhere, were sold by King Edward VI. to Thomas Heybarn and Thomas Brand, for the Sum of nine hundred and eighty-eight Pounds eight Shillings and a Penny.

BISHOPSGATE WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name, Bounds, and Extent. Its present State.

Parishes. The Artillery-ground. St. Mary Spittle. Devonshire-house. Clerk's-hall. Leathersellers-hall. Crosby-square. South-Sea-house. Gresham College.

THIS Ward takes its Name from the Gate, which stands almost in the Center thereof, and is described on p. 23. Vol. I; on the East it is bounded by Aldgate Ward, Portoken Ward, and Part of the Tower Liberty; on the South by Langborn Ward; on the West by Broadstreet Ward, and Moorfields; and on the North by Shoreditch; and extends from the Bars at the North End near Spital-square, on both Sides of the Way, including almost half of Hounsditch, as as far as the Pump, at the Corner of St. Martin's Outwich; and then winding by the West Corner of Leadenball, down Gracechurch-street, to the South-West Corner, over-against Fenchurch-street.

As to the present State of this Ward, we shall divide it into two Parts, as it is commonly called Bishopsgate within, and Bishopsgate without, tho' under only one Alderman.

The present State of Bishopsgate Ward.

Of these two general Parts, first to begin with that within the Wall, wherein are these Streets, Lanes, and Alleys, in whole, or in Part, viz.

Gracechurch-street, on both Sides the Way, from the North-West Corner of Leadenball-street, and North-East Corner of Cornhill, to Lombard-street, and Fenchurch-street.

All Bishopsgate-street.

Both the Great and Little St. Helen's, in the whole.

All Crosby-square.

All Camomile-street.

Wormwood-street, but a small Part. And in these Streets are divers Courts and Alleys.

Grace, or Grass-church-street, a large and spacious Street, with well built and lofty Houses, inhabited by good Tradesmen. The whole Street begins at Eastcheap, and falls into Leadenball-street at the four cross Streets: But the Part in this Ward begins only at Lombard-street End, as noted above.

In this Street, on the West Side, are these Courts and Places of Name, viz. Cross-keys-Inn, a Place of great Resort, large and well built, hath a Passage into George-yard, Lombard-street. Bell-yard, a good, large, and well built Place, having a Passage into St. Michael's Church-yard. Corbet's-court, a large, open, well built and inhabited Place: Near this Court is Tobacco-roll-court, which has but one good House in it: Church-alley, adjoining to St. Peter's Church: This Alley, with a turning Passage, falls into Cornhill.

Then on the East Side of this Street, within the Limits of this Ward, which begins at Fenchurch-street, is Boar's-head-court, an open Place, taken up with Warehouses for Wholesale Dealers.

Leadenball-herb-market, large, and not inferior to any in London, is in this Ward; but the other Parts of Leadenball, viz. the Flesh-Market, and the Fish-Market, &c. are in Lime-street Ward.

Bishopsgate-street is large, long, and spacious, and generally well inhabited: But the Fire of London, 1666, not coming into these Parts, many of the Houses are old Timber Buildings, and not uniform.

In this Street are these Courts, Alleys, and Places of Name, beginning on the Southern Part, and so towards the Gate, North: Sun-yard, a large Place, with a Passage into Broad-street, taken up for Stablings and Coach-Houses, a Coach-maker, and some private Houses.

Gresham College, a large, but old Building, which encompasseth a large square Court; this being antiently the Seat of Sir Thomas Gresham, Knight, and now called Gresham College.

A little beyond this College are divers great Inns, viz. the Bull Inn, the Green Dragon, and the Four Swans, all three large, and of a confiderable Trade and Resort for Waggons and Stage-Coaches, that go Northwards. Sutton-court, but narrow, with a Free-stone Pavement, being a regular built Court, with neat Brick Houses: It leads by a few Stairs into Wormwood-street, thro' Peaben-alley, which is but ordinary. The Vine Inn, seated near Bishopsgate.

Some Part of Wormwood-street is in this Ward; but the greatest Part, which are mostly old Buildings, is in Broad-street Ward.

The Places East of Bishopsgate-street, beginning at the Gate within, are as followeth:

Camomile-street, the Part in this Ward goeth but a little beyond Cook's-court, which is the first Court on the South-East from the Gate. This Street was but of small Account, either as to its Buildings, or Inhabitants; but is lately much amended in both. Clark's-alley in Bishopsgate-street, but ordinary, especially that Part which leadeth to Camomile-street. Angel-court, is both small and ordinary.

Little St. Helen's, a good large Place, having one or two Courts within it, with good old Timber Houses, well inhabited, some by Merchants; at the lower End of which is seated Leathersellers-hall, and in another Part a Dissenting Meeting-House.

Great St. Helen's, a handsome, open, and large Court, with Rows of good Houses, well inhabited, on the East Side of the Church and Church-yard, which is gracefully seated in the midst of the Court, with Rows of Trees round about the Church-yard, very pleasant in the Summer-Season.

Passing this Court, the Passenger is led to two others, both of the same Name, well built and inhabited; which, with a winding Passage, lead Eastward into St. Mary-axe, over-against St. Andrew Undershaft Church, and Westward to Crosby-place, a curious open Square, with fair Brick Houses, well inhabited by Gentry and Merchants; several of the Houses having Palisado Pales before, and Gardens behind them: And here is a large Meeting-House. Out of this Square is a Passage through a back Gate-way, shut up at Nights, passing by a large Warehouse belonging to the East-India Company, and so into St. Mary-axe, &c.

Bishopsgate-street without.

Having viewed the Ward within the Gate, we now pass to that Part that stands without it.

This is also a very broad and spacious Street, but not so well built and inhabited as that within the Wall. It runs Northward a great Length, but no farther in the Freedom than to the Bars. In the Account of this Street, we begin next the Gate, at St. Botolph Bishopsgate Church, taking in all Places to the Bars on the West Side; and then come back from the Bars on the East Side to Bishopsgate.

In St. Botolph Bishopsgate Church-yard is the Rector's House, a handsome and capacious Brick Building; and close to the North Side is an open Passage, called Alderman's-walk, and leads to a very magnificent House, with a fine Garden, and a Court-yard before it, graced with Trees, and a Stone Statue standing on a Pedestal in the Middle. This House did formerly belong to the Family of the Darbwoods.

Old

Old Bethlem, or Bedlam, as it is vulgarly called; a Lane wherein stood an antient charitable House for keeping and curing Lunaticks. This was founded, A. D. 1246, by Simon Fitzmary, Sheriff of London. King Henry VIII. gave this House to the City of London. They converted it to a House or Hospital for the Cure of Lunaticks. But, its Situation near unto many common Sewers, and its Incapacity for the numerous Patients which offered, being found inconvenient for the Purpose, it was removed unto the South Side of Moorfields; as shall be shewn in its proper Place.

The Place that generally goes by the Name of Old Bethlem, is very large, containing several Courts and Alleys; the principal Street comes out of Bishopsgate-street, and runs into Moorfields, being a great Thoroughfare, and has been greatly improved with new and handsome Buildings of late Years; and its Inhabitants, who were formerly only Flax and Hemp-Dressers, Shoemakers, Yarn and Worsted-Sellers, and Turners, are now many of them Merchants, &c. In this Place is Bethlem-court, an open Place, where the Hospital stood, at the upper End of which is a Passage out of the principal Street of Bethlem; Crown-court, large, with indifferent Buildings; Loom-alley, narrow, and ordinary; Housewives-alley, narrow, which with a turning Passage runs a great Length; Halfmoon-alley, long, but narrow and ordinary, and fell into Round-court, which now is included in Broad-street Buildings. Rose-and-Crown-court, a large and open Place, but ordinary, leading to Moorfields, and also into Halfmoon-alley, which leadeth into Bishopsgate-street; near to this Alley is Baker's-court, which hath a Passage into Halfmoon-alley, as also into Vine-court and Chequer-court; Bell-court, but small, and opposite to Bethlem Church-yard; as is Three-leg-alley, which is narrow and ordinary, with a turning Passage; likewise Dyer's-court, but ordinary, so called, as having had a Dyer's House at the upper End.

Petty-france, formerly so called; the greatest Part of this is new built, and called New Broad-street; it is a most regular Building, and has the most elegant Houses in the City; at the East End is a Passage into Bishopsgate-street thro' St. Botolph's Church-yard.

Northwards of Bethlem, in Bishopsgate-street, is Still-alley, which is but small; Garland-alley, an open Place, at the upper End of which is an Inn, as also a large Yard for Stabling and Coaches, and but ordinarily inhabited; Bottle-alley hath a narrow Entrance, but openeth into a Free-stone Court, with well built Houses, which said Alley leadeth into a another down Steps, bearing the same Name; and out of this is a Passage into Garland-alley; Swan-yard Inn, at the lower End hath Stables and Coach-houses; Halfmoon-alley, ordinary, and ill inhabited; in a strait Line it runs Westward into Moorfields; on the South Side of this Place is Stone-cutters-yard, an open, but ordinary Place; and on the North Side is a small Alley that leads to Dunnings-alley; Three Tun-alley, but indifferent; White Hind-court, an open Place, with a narrow Passage into it, and indifferent as to its Houses and Inhabitants; Sweetapple-court, so called from Sir John

Sweetapple, Goldsmith, the Owner thereof, a handsome new built Place, with an open Passage for Carts; this Place before its new Building was two, viz. Soper's-alley, and Horshoe-yard; the upper End of this Court, or rather Lane, is taken up for Stables for Livery-Horses, with Coach-houses; Dunning's-alley, very large, and ordinary; the West End divides itself, and falls into Halfmoon-alley, which leads into Moorfields: In this Alley are these Courts; Tripe-yard, very small and ordinary; Adams-court, but small, with a Passage into Sweetapple-court; Pump-court, but mean; Westminster-ball-court, indifferent, with a Free-stone Pavement; Cripple-court, very small and mean, with about two Houses; Harrow-yard, also small and ordinary; Bell-yard, inconsiderable; Lamb-alley, very narrow and ordinary, which, running a great Length, divides itself, one Part falling into Sugar-loaf-court, and the other into Long-alley: In this Alley are these Courts, Paved-court, Lamb-yard, and White-bart-yard, all three very mean; Angel-court, likewise very ordinary; Angel-alley, long and mean, at the upper End of which is a Timber-yard, and on the West Side is a small Court, and passing further leads into Angel-court, which is very inconsiderable: In this Alley are these Courts, Brown's-court, but small; Balaam's-court; Sugar-loaf-yard; Pheasant-cock-yard; Three-colts-alley, all four but small and ordinary; Jews-harp-court, a handsome new built Place with a Free-stone Pavement; Brown's-yard, but ordinary; Cock-yard, very mean, at the upper End of which is Thacker's-court, but mean; Acorn-court, very narrow and ordinary; at the upper End it opens into a little Court, and out of this is a Passage into Skinner's-street; George-yard, inconsiderable; Skinner's-street, a handsome open Place, with well built Houses, chiefly inhabited by Master-Weavers; Ship-yard is very well built and uniform, with a Free-stone Pavement on the West Side; Primrose-alley, long, narrow, and ordinary, hath a Passage into Long-alley; Gun-yard, indifferent long, at the upper End opens itself into two Parts.

Having thus enumerated the various Places on the West Side of Bishopsgate, we come next to those on the East Side, beginning next the Bars.

Bishopsgate-street without, the East Side.

Mountague-court, a handsome open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, and good Buildings; Catharine-Wheel and George-yard, long, hath a Passage into Mountague-court, and another into the Artillery-ground; Red-lion Brewhouse, near which is the Red-lion Inn.

Artillery-lane, an open Place, with good Houses, which, passing by Petticoat-lane, hath the South-West Side in this Ward, and runs behind Gun-street.

Wide [or White] Gate-street, a Place well built, and of some Account, falls into Petticoat-lane: In this Street is King's-head-court, as also Savage-court, which have been all rebuilt, and inhabited by substantial Tradesmen and Dealers, chiefly in the Silk Way; and Rose-alley, with a turning Passage, falls into Petticoat-lane; Swedeland-alley, very ordinary; Sutton's-alley, both narrow and mean; Catharine-

Catharine-wheel-alley, narrow, and without Houses, having only back Yards. It hath one Passage into Hand-alley, and another into Petticoat-lane. Nigh to this Alley is Catharine-wheel Inn. Rose-alley, long and narrow, falling into Hand-alley. Vine-court, a handsome Place, with good Houses on the North Side, the South lying open to New-street, formerly called Hand-alley, having a Passage for Cart or Coach; its Buildings are good, and well inhabited. King's-head-court, but small, with Free Stone Pavement. Three Slippers-court, also small, with Free Stone Pavement. Handscourt, but small, and falls into Rose-alley. Walnut-tree-court, both small and mean. Still-court or Alley, indifferent good, falls into Houndf-ditch.

Devonshire-square and Street, made out of an House called Fisher's Folly, an airy and creditable Place, and where the Countess of Devonshire, about eighty Years ago, dwelt in great Repute for her Hospitality: It consists of good Buildings, and they well inhabited by Merchants, and Persons of Wealth. In the Middle of the Square, upon a Pedestal carved with Figures on each Side, and ascended by three Steps, and inclosed with Iron Bars, stands a gilt Mercury: Hence is a Passage called Cavendish-court, which hath good Buildings, with a Free-stone Pavement, leading to Houndf-ditch; and another Passage by Steps Eastward towards Gravel-lane, at the Top of which Steps stands a noted Quaker's Meeting-House.

More towards Bishopsgate is Magpye-alley, which is narrow: Near unto this Alley is the Dolphin, an old Inn, large, and of good Account; and adjoining to Bishopsgate is the Flying-horse Inn.

Houndf-ditch, over-against St. Botolph's Church, is a long Street, running from Bishopsgate to Aldgate: But the Part in this Ward goeth but to the Blue Anchor, the rest is in Aldgate Ward. This Street is a Place of great Trade, and of Note for Still-worm-makers, Pawnbrokers and Salesmen, whose Dealings are in Apparel, Linnen and Upholsterers Goods. In this Street are a great many Alleys and Courts, of which some are without Name, and for the most Part are but ordinary, viz. Flying-horse-yard, hath a turning Passage into Bishopsgate-street a Place of small Account, only for Livery-stables; and Cavendish-court falls into Devonshire-street, already mentioned; Buckle-court, small and ordinary.

There are to watch at Bishopsgate, and the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, the Beadle, and eighty Watchmen, both within and without.

The Jurymen returned by the Inquests are to serve for Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of December.

Thus much for this Bishopsgate Ward, which hath an Alderman, two Deputies, one without the Gate, another within, six Common-Councilmen, seven Constables, seven Scavengers, thirteen for the Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at thirteen Pounds.

The Alderman of this Ward is Matthew Blakiston, Esq; The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Thomas Long, Deputy, Mr. George Wyld, Mr. Samuel Palmer, Mr. William Cramond, Mr. Samuel Vickers, Mr. William Mottershed, Henry Hall, Esq; Mr. John Pepys, Mr. William Hufsey, Mr.

Richard Chapman, Mr. Uppington Bracee, Deputy, Mr. John Forty, Mr. Jonathan Farr, and Mr. Calvert Benn.

The most remarkable Things and Places within this Ward are,

1. Three Parish-Churches, viz. St. Botolph's without Bishopsgate; St. Ethelburga's, and Great St. Helen's, both within the Gate, on the East Side of the Street; of which more particularly in the Parochial History of this great City.

2. Leathersellers-Hall, Part of the Convent for Nuns, which was there dedicated to St. Helen. This Hall, considering the Antiquity of its Building, has some of the best Joiners and Plaisterers-Work in the Kingdom. The Screen is magnificent, adorned with six Columns of the Ionic Order, Enrichments, &c. with Ceiling of Fret-Work. The Entrance into the common Hall is up a handsome Flight of Stone Stairs from the Court-yard.

3. This Ward was formerly distinguished by more publick Buildings. In the Parish of St. Botolph without the Gate was the antient Hospital of St. Mary of Bethlehem, founded by Simon Fitz-Mary, one of the Sheriffs of London, in the Year 1246. He founded it to have been a Priory of Canons, with Brethren and Sisters: And King Edward III. granted a Protection for the Brethren, Militie beate Marie de Bethlem, within the City of London, the fourteenth Year of his Reign. It was an Hospital afterwards for distracted People; as mentioned before, and will more largely appear by this original Deed:

The Copy of an antient Deed of Gift, given to Bethlem, or Bedlem, by Simon the Son of Mary.

"To all the Children of our Mother Holy Church, to whom this present Writing shall come, Simon the Son of Mary sendeth greeting in our Lord. Where, among other Things, and before other Lands, the high Altitude of the heavenly Councils, marvelously wrought by some readier Devotion, ought to be more worshipped, of which Things the mortal Sickness (after the Fall of our first Father Adam) hath taken the Beginning of this new repairing: Therefore, forsooth, it beseemeth worthy, that the Place in which the Sonne of God is become Man, and hath proceeded from the Virgin's Womb, which is Increaser and Beginner of Man's Redemption, namely, ought to be with Reverence worshipped, and with beneficial Portions to be increased. Therefore it is that the said Simon, Sonne of Mary, having special and singular Devotion to the Church of the glorious Virgin at Betblem, where the same Virgin of her brought forth our Saviour incarnate, and lying in the Cratch, and with her own Milk nourished, and where the same Child to us there born, the Chivalry of the heavenly Company sang the new Hymn, Gloria in excelsis Deo. The same Time, the Increaser of our Health (as a King, and his Mother a Queene) willed to be worshipped of Kings. A new Starre going before them at the Honour and Reverence of the same Child, and his meek Mother: And to the Exaltation of my noble Lord Henry, King of England, whose Wife and Child the Stephen Gennings, Merchant-Taylor, gave forty-four Pounds towards the Purchase of the Patronage of this Hofpital, by his Testament, Anno 1523.

And, in the Year 1546, the Mayor and Commonalty purchafed the Patronage thereof, with all the Lands and Tenements thereunto belonging. The fame Year King Henry VIII. gave this Hofpital unto the City.

In the Year 1551, a Protection was granted, by Letters Patents from King Edward VI. dated March 7, to John Whitehead, Proctor for this Hofpital of Bethlem, to beg within the Counties of Lincoln and Cambridge, the City of London, and the Ifle of Ely, to endure for an whole Year.

At a Court of Aldermen, held on Tuesday the twentieth of January, Anno 4 Edward VI. a Carroon was freely given to the Inhabitants of Bifhopsgate Ward, to the Intent that they fhould caufe the utter Parts of the faid Ward, without the Gate, to be kept clean.

Alfo at a Court of Aldermen, held on Tuesday the feventh of April, Anno 5 Edward VI. it was ordered, That the Inhabitants within the Precinct of Bethlem fhould be, from thenceforth, united to the Parifh-Church of St. Botolph without Bifhopsgate, and fo by the Parfon and Parifhioners of the fame Parifh accepted and taken, and to be allotted and charged with them to all Offices and Charges (Tythes and Clerks Wages excepted;) in Confideration whereof, the Parfon of the Parifh was to receive yearly out of the Chamber of London twenty Shillings, the Parifh-Clerk fix Shillings and eight Pence.

In the Year 1569, Sir Thomas Roe, Merchant-Taylor, Mayor, caufed to be inclofe with a Wall of Brick about one Acre of Ground, being Part of the faid Hofpital of Bethlem, to wit, on the Weft, on the Bank of Deep Ditch, fo called, parting the faid Wall of Bethlem from the Moorfield. This he did for Burial Eafe to fuch Parifhes in London as wanted convenient Ground within their Parifhes. The Lady his Wife was there buried, (by whose Perfuaftion he inclofed it) but himfelf, born in London, was buried in the Parifh-Church of Hackney.

This was called New Church-yard, near Bethlem; where, upon Whit-Sunday, the Lord-Mayor, and his Brethren the Aldermen, ufed to refort to hear a Sermon: And this was praftifed Anno 1584, “When (according to a Letter from Recorder Fleetwood to the Lord Treafurer) a very good “Sermon

“ Sermon was preached at this New Church-yard
 “ before the Lord-Mayor, Sir Edward Osborn,
 “ and his Brethren; and, by Reason no Plays
 “ were the same Day, [i. e. Whit-Sunday, as there “ used to be] all the City was quiet.”

The Church and Chapel of this Hospital were taken down in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and Houses built there by the Governors of Christ's-Hospital in London.

On the South Side of this Church-yard, over a folding Gate, this Inscription was engraven in great Letters :

“ Thomas Roe, Miles, cum Prætor esset Londinensis, hunc Locum Reipublicæ, in Usus “ publicæ Sepulturæ communem, suo Sumptu
 “ dedicavit, Anno Dom. 1569.”

Which Inscription, even in the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, began to decay, and some Letters were utterly defaced; which was the Cause that A. F. one of the Compilers of Hollingshed's Chronicle, inserted it in the said Book; that so the Memory of the worthy Benefactor might not vanish, and be lost with the fading Inscription.

Fisher's
Folly.

On the other Side Bishopsgate-street was a large House, built by the Lord John Powlet; and near that a larger and more beautiful House, built by Jasper Fisher, free of the Goldsmiths Company, one of the Six Clerks in Chancery, and a Justice of Peace. It was afterwards the Earl of Oxford's House, and then the Earl of Devonshire's, whose Name is still preserved in the Street and Square built upon its Ruins. This House being so large and sumptuously built by a Man of no great Birth or Fortune, (for he was much in Debt) was mockingly called Fisher's Folly.

Artillery
Ground.

North-East from this Fabrick, at the Distance of about three hundred Yards, lies a spacious Inclosure, called the Artillery-Ground. This Ground was originally a large Close, called Tasell-Close, because there were some Time Tasels planted there for the Use of Clothworkers; afterwards let to the Cross-Bow Makers, wherein they used to shoot for Games at the Popingey. Then the same being inclosed with a Brick Wall, served as an Artillery-Ground, to which the Gunners of the Tower repaired weekly, namely, every Thursday, and there levelled certain Brass Pieces of great Artillery against a Butt of Earth made for that Purpose.

William, the last Prior of St. Mary Spital, with his Convent, granted over this Artillery-Ground for thrice ninety-nine Years, for the Use and Practice of great and small Artillery.

There was a Charter granted to the Fraternity of Artillery in great and small Ordnance by the famous Prince King Henry VIII. and the Piece of Ground, called the Artillery-Ground, by his Means was appointed for the Exercise of the same Fraternity; as by the Lease thereof appeared, granted to the same Fraternity; which Lease was put into the Hands of Sir William Pelham, Lieutenant of the Ordnance: And the same Charter since was delivered to the Lord Burleigh, Lord Treasurer under Queen Elizabeth.

Now, for the further Improvement of this

Fraternity, and to make it useful to the Kingdom, one William Thomas, Master-Gunner of the Queen's Ship the Victory, in the Year 1584, moved the Lords of her Council, that the same Charter might be confirmed, and new established, with other needful Additions thereto; and chiefly for the increasing of good Gunners for the Queen's Navy and Forts, viz. That some of their Honours, with the Earl of Warwick, (who was Master of the Ordnance) should be the chief Masters or Governors of the said Fraternity. That there might, by the chief Masters or Governors, be chosen four of the chief of her Majesty's Gunners to be Under-Masters; who, with the Master-Gunner of England, might have the Teaching of all the Scholars, and the Proving of all such Men as should take upon them the Charge of a Gunner in any of her Majesty's Ships, Forts, or Castles, or should have any Gunner's Fee; and to make Report to the chief Masters of their Knowledge, before they should be admitted to any Service. That no Ship or Vessel, having Ordnance in her, should cross the Seas, without the same had in her such Number of Gunners as followeth, viz. that every Ship of the Burthen of sixty Tons have three Gunners, whereof the Chief or Master-Gunner to be such an one as should be tried, allowed, and licensed by such as should be for that Purpose appointed; and every Ship of eighty Tons, four Gunners, to be tried as aforesaid; and so for every twenty Tons, one Gunner more. That the chief Officers in the Havens, Towns, Ports, and Places where Shipping is used, should take the Names of all Persons in the same Towns, Ports, and Places, which took Charge or served as Gunners in any Ship or Vessel, and the same to register in a Book for that Purpose; and in every Easter Term to send up the same Names, and their Dwelling-Places, to the Master-Gunner and his four Associates; by which it might be known where to have skilful Gunners to serve her Majesty, when Opportunity required. That all such Ships as should be freighted within the River Thames with Merchandizes or Goods, should, for the Safeguard thereof, have, for every two Pieces, one such seafaring Man as should be a Scholar, to be taught and instructed in the Science of Shooting in great and small Ordnance, according to the Intent of her Majesty's Allowance for the same Purpose. That there might be, by the chief Masters, such strict Commandment given to the four Under-Masters and the Master-Gunner, that the Powder, and other her Majesty's Allowances for teaching and instructing Scholars in the Science or Mystery of Shooting in great and small Ordnance, be by them justly and truly expended about the same Purpose that it was allowed for, and not otherwise, upon some Pain and Penalty. That the four Associates or Under-Masters, with the Master-Gunner, for the better Service of her Majesty, might have the Proof of all such Saltpetre, Coal, Sulphur, Powder, Match, Ordnance, Carriages, Wheels, Stocks, and Iron Work, as should be for her Majesty's Service and Store; and that none should be received, but that which they should find to be good and fit for Service, and that upon a Penalty to be appointed by their Honours. Lastly, That there might be set down down such a perfect Government in every of her Majesty's Ships by their Honours, both for their own Safe-guards, and for a Terror to the Enemy, as heretofore was never put in Practice by any.

And all this the said Thomas the rather offered at this Time, since the Queen had now gotten a puissant Navy of Ships for Defence, and the Nobility, at their own great Charges, had furnished it with great and terrible Ordnance, for the Terror of her Enemies; but there was a great Want of skilful Men to supply the Room of Gunners: So that, if Proof were made, he asserted, there would not be found skilful Gunners sufficient for four of her Men of War. But this Motion came to nothing.

There was also afterwards, for the laying up and preserving of the Arms, an Armoury built. The Foundation of this Armoury was begun to be erected the first Day of May, Anno Dom. 1622, and was finished the last of November then next following; Colonel Hugh Hamersley being then President; Edward Pierse, Treasurer; Henry Petowe, Marshal; and John Bingham, Captain, and one of the Council of War for this Kingdom.

London's Honour, and her Citizens approved
Love, exercising Arms in the Artillery-Garden, London.

The Fabrick.

This Architecture, Phoenix of our Age,
(All Europe cannot shew her Equipage)
Is Mars his Mistress, which retains the Store
Of Mars his Arms, being Mars his Paramour.
This Fabrick was by Mars his Soldiers fram'd,
And Mars his Armouries this Building nam'd.

The Soldiers Honour.

It holds five hundred Arms, to furnish those
That love their Sovereign, and will daunt his Foes.
They spend their Time, and do not care for Cost;
To learn the Use of Arms, there's nothing lost.
Both Time and Coin, to do their Country good,
They'll spend it freely, and will lose their Blood.

The Alder-mens Love.

Our City London is a Royal Thing,
For it is call'd The Chamber of our King:
Whose worthy Senate we must not forget;
Their Grant and our Request together met:
They cherish us, and we do honour them:
Where Soldiers find true Love, they'll love again.

For full three hundred Years, excepting three;
The Time remaining we shall never see.

Now have the noble Council of the King
Confirm'd the same, and, under Charles his Wing,

We now do exercise, and of that little Teasel of Ground, we enlarge St. Mary Spittle.
Trees we cut down, and Gardens added to it.
Thanks to the Lords, that gave us Leave to do it.

Next to this Field, on which are now Duke and Stuart Streets, was the dissolved Priory and Hospital of our blessed Lady, commonly called St. Mary Spital, founded by Walter Brune and Rosia his Wife, for Canons Regular. Walter, Archdeacon of London, laid the first Stone, in the Year 1197. William, of St. Mary Church, then Bishop of London, dedicated it to the Honour of Jesus Christ, and his Mother, the perpetual Virgin Mary, by the Name of Domus Dei et Beate Mariæ extra Bishopsgate, in the Parish of St. Botolph: The Bounds whereof, as appeareth by Composition betwixt the Parson and Prior of the said Hospital concerning Tythes, begin at Berward's-lane, towards the South, and extend in Breadth to the Parish of St. Leonard Shoreditch, towards the North, and in Length from the King's-street on the West, to the Bishop of London's Field, called Lolleworth, on the East. The Prior of this St. Mary Spital, for the Emortising and Propriation of the Priory of Bikenacar in Essex to this said House of St. Mary Spital, gave to Henry VII. four hundred Pounds, in the twenty-second of his Reign.

The Hospital of St.
Mary, called the Spital.

This Hospital, surrendered to Henry VIII. was reckoned to dispend four hundred and seventy-eight Pounds; wherein, besides Ornaments of the Church, and other Goods pertaining to the Hospital, there were found standing an hundred and eighty Beds, well furnished, for Receipt of the Poor of Charity; for it was an Hospital of great Relief. Sir Henry Plesington, Knight, was buried there A. D. 1452.

In the Place of this Hospital, and near adjoining, are now built many handsome Houses for Merchants and others.

Here was the House of a famous Italian Merchant and Embassador, much employed by Queen Elizabeth, namely Sir Horatio Pallavicini. And in this same House, in the first Year of King James I. the Ambassadors from the Archduke of Austria lodged, with his Company.

Queen Elizabeth, in the Month of April, 1559, came in great State from St. Mary Spital, attended with a thousand Men in Harnefs, with Shirts of Mail, and Crosslets, and Morris-Pikes, and ten great Pieces carried through London unto the Court, with Drums, Flutes, and Trumpets sounding, and two Morris-Dancers; and in a Cart two white Bears.

A Part of the large Church-yard pertaining to this Hospital, and severed from the rest with a Brick Wall, was for a long Time remaining, with a Pulpit Cross therein, somewhat like to that in St. Paul's Church-yard; and against the said Pulpit, on the South Side, before the Chancel and Chapel of St. Edmund the Bishop, and St. Mary Magdalen, (which Chapel was founded about about the Year 1391, by W. Evesham, Citizen and Pepperer of London, who was there buried) there was a handsome House of two Stories high, for the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and other Persons of Distinction to sit in, to hear the Sermons preached in the Easter Holidays. In the Part over them stood the Bishop of London, and other Prelates; afterwards the Aldermens Ladies used to stand or sit at a Window there.

It was for a long Time a Custom, on Good-Friday in the Afternoon, for some learned Man, by Appointment of the Prelates, to preach a Sermon at Paul's-Cross, treating of Christ's Passion; and upon the three next Easter Holidays, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, other learned Men, by the like Appointment, used to preach in the Forenoon at the said Spital, to persuade the Articles of Christ's Resurrection: And then, on Low-Sunday, before Noon, another learned Man, at Paul's-Cross, was to make Rehearal of those four former Sermons, either commending or reproving them, as to him (by Judgment of the learned Divines) was thought convenient: And, that done, he was to make a Sermon of himself; which in all were five Sermons in one. At these Sermons, so severally preached, the Mayor, with his Brethren the Aldermen, were accustomed to be present in their Violets at St. Paul's on Good-Friday, and in their Scarlets, both they and their Wives, at the Spital in the Holidays, except Wednesday in Violet; and the Mayor, with his Brethren, on Low-Sunday, in Scarlet, at Paul's-Cross. (See Page 298.) The Pulpit was broken down in the Grand Rebellion. Since the Restoration these Sermons are continued by the Name of the Spital Sermons at St. Bride's, with the like Solemnity, on Easter Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, every Year.

Touching the Antiquity of this Custom: In the Year 1398, King Richard having procured from Rome Confirmation of such Statutes and Ordinances as were made in the Parliament begun at Westminster and ended at Shrewsbury, he caused the same Confirmation to be read and pronounced at Paul's-Cross, and at St. Mary Spital, in the Sermons before all the People. Philip Malpas, one of the Sheriffs in the Year 1439, the eighteenth of Henry VII. gave twenty Shillings by the Year to the three Preachers at the Spital. Stephen Forster, Mayor, in the Year 1454, gave forty Shillings to the Preachers of Paul's-Cross and Spital. The aforesaid House, wherein the Mayor and Aldermen sat at the Spital, was built (for that Purpose) out of the Goods, and by the Executors of Richard Rawson, Alderman, and Isabel his Wife, in the Year 1488. In the Year 1594, this Pulpit, being old, was taken down, and a new one set up, the Preacher's Face turned towards the South, which was before towards the West. Also a large House (on the East Side of the said Pulpit) was then built for the Governors and Children of Christ's Hospital to sit in; and this was done out of the Goods of William Elkins, Alderman: But, within the first Year, the same House decaying, and like to have fallen, was again, with great Cost, repaired at the City's Charge.

Gate, were certain Tenements of old Time, pertaining to a Brotherhood of St. Nicholas, granted to the Parish-Clerks of London, for two Chaplains to be kept in the Chapel of St. Mary Magdalen, near unto the Guildhall of London, in the twenty-seventh of Henry VI. The first of the Houses towards the North, and against the Wall of the City, was some Time a large Inn or Court, called the Wrestlers, from such a Sign; and the last in the high Street, towards the South, was some Time also an Inn, called the Angel, from such a Sign. Amongst these said Tenements was, on the same Street Side, an Entry or Court to the Common Hall of the said Parish-Clerks, with Alms-Houses, seven in Number, adjoining, for Parish-Clerks, and their Wives; their Widows, such as were advanced in Years, and not able for Labour. One of these, by the said Brotherhood of Parish-Clerks, was allowed sixteen Pence the Week; the other six had each of them nine Pence the Week, according to the Patent thereof granted. This Brotherhood, amongst other, being suppressed; in the Reign of Edward VI. the said Hall, with the other Building there, was given to Sir Robert Chester, a Knight of Cambridgeshire; against whom the Parish-Clerks commenced a Suit in the Reign of Queen Mary; and being likely to have prevailed, the said Sir Robert Chester pulled down the Hall, sold the Timber, Stone, and Lead, and thereupon the Suit was ended. The Alms-Houses remained in Queen Elizabeth's Hands.

Where Crofsby-square now stands was antiently one great House, called Crofsby-Place, being built by Sir John Crofsby, Grocer and Woolman, in Place of certain Tenements, with their Appurtenances, let to him by Alice Ashfield, Priores of St. Helen's, and the Convent, at ninety-nine Years, from the Year 1466 to the Year 1565, for the annual Rent of eleven Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence. This House he built of Stone and Timber, very large and beautiful, and the highest at that Time in London. He was one of the Sheriffs, and an Alderman in the Year 1470, knighted by Edward IV. in the Year 1471, and died 1475: So short a Time enjoyed he this stately Building.

What the Contents and Particulars of the Demises granted to Crofsby by the Priores were, may be understood by the Grant of Crofsby-Place, and the Appurtenances, made by King Henry VIII. to Anthony Bonvixi, an Italian Merchant, Rex omnibus, &c. Cum Alicia Ashfield, &c. Wherein are mentioned, first, the great Messuage or Tenement commonly called Crofsby-Place, with a certain Venell, i. e. Lane or Passage, that extended in Length from the East Part of the said Tenement, to the Corner or South End of a certain little Lane North, bending unto the Priory Close: Also nine Messuages, situate and lying in the said Parish of St. Helen; whereof six were situate and lying between the Front of the said Tenement, and the Front of the Ball-House or Steeple aforesaid, and the six Messuages mentioned before; together with a certain void Place of Land, situate in the said Parish, extending in Length, toward the East, by the said Messuage which which Catharine Catesby formerly held, from the outward Part of the Plat or Post of the Bell-

Houses, in

Bell-House, abutting upon the North Part of the said six Messuages, and the King's-street, unto the Church-yard there, five Feet and an half Assize; and thence extending in Breadth toward the South, directly to a certain Tenement there, formerly in the Tenure of Robert Smith; and two Messuages more of the said nine Messuages jointly, situate within the Close of the Priory; of which one heretofore in the Tenure of the said Robert Smith. And these were the Tenements and Appurtenances held of the Priory of St. Helen, by Sir John Crosby.

Richard,
Duke of Glocester, lodged at Crosby-
House.

Richard, Duke of Gloucester, and Lord Protector, afterwards King of England, by the Name of Richard III. was lodged in this House.

While his Nephew, Edward V. reigned, he here contrived his Plots, and here the Citizens came to him with the Professions of their Love, and desiring him to accept the Crown. See Page 210.

Since which Time, among other, Antonio Bonvice, a rich Merchant of Italy, dwelled there; on whom King Henry VIII. bestowed it, Anno 1542, with all belonging to it; as appears by the Copy of the Grant, running thus: Sciatis, &c.

“Know ye, that we, of our special Grace, certain Knowledge, and mere Motion, give and grant unto the said Anthony Bonvice the Reversion and Reversions of the said Messuage and Tenement, with the Appurtenances, commonly called Crosby-Place; and of all the said Houses, Solars, Cellars, Gardens, Lanes, Messuages, Tenements, void Places of Land, and all other and singular Premises with the Appurtenances, lying and situate in St. Helen's, and Parcel of the said late Priory, &c. Teste Rege apud Westmonast. 9 die Sept. Ann. Regni Reg. Henrici Octavi 34.”

After him German Cioll dwelt here.

Then William Bond, Alderman, increased this House in Height, with building a Turret on the Top thereof. He deceased in the Year 1576, and was buried in St. Helen's Church. Divers Ambassadors have been lodged there; namely, in the Year 1586, Henry Ramelius, Chancellor of Denmark, Ambassador unto the Queen's Majesty of England from Frederick II. King of Denmark; an Ambassador of France, &c. Sir John Spencer, Alderman, purchased this House, made great Reparations, kept his Mayoralty there, and afterwards built a very large Warehouse near thereunto.

In the first of King James I. when divers Ambassadors came into England, Monsieur de Rosney, Great Treasurer of France, with his Retinue, (which was very splendid) was there lodged; the House then belonging to Sir John Spencer.

Within Bishopsgate also, and very likely in this House, were lodged the youngest Son of William Prince of Orange, Monsieur Fulke, and the learned Monsieur Barnevelt, who came from the States of Holland and Zealand.

Hence returning Northward, by the West Side of Bishopsgate-street, we pass over to the South-Sea-House, a large, handsome Brick Building, coped with Portland Stone, at the North-West Corner of Threadneedle-street, which reaches backward into

No. 68.

Broad-street; in which Ward the greatest Part of it standing, we shall defer our Account thereof till we treat of Broad-street Ward.

More Northward, about an hundred Yards, is Gresham-College, formerly the Dwelling-House of Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. who died in the Year 1579.

Gresham-College.

Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. a Merchant of London, Agent to Queen Elizabeth, by his last Will and Testament, dated July, 1575, gave the Royal-Exchange, and all the Buildings thereunto appertaining, that is to say, the one Moiety to the Mayor and Commonalty of London, and their Successors, upon Trust, that they perform as shall be declared, and the other Moiety to the Mercers, in like Confidence. See Page 256.

The Salaries, and other Bequests of Sir Thomas Gresham, are payable out of the Rents of the Exchange, and other Rents of Houses belonging thereunto: But the excessive Charges in rebuilding the Exchange, by a Model which was shewn to, and approved by King Charles II. (which, some say, cost not less than eighty thousand Pounds) hath put the Company in Debt, and somewhat postponed the Payment of the Salaries.

The Will was to this Tenor: “That one Moiety of the Buildings of the Royal-Exchange, with all Pawns, Shops, Cellars, Vaults, Messuages, Tenements, &c. Parcel of the said Exchange, after the Expiration of an Indenture Quadripartite, should remain unto the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, and to their Successors, upon Trust, to perform certain Payments, and other Intents hereafter limited; and the other Moiety to remain to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Mystery of the Mercers of London, and to their Successors, upon Trust and Confidence, and to the Intents hereafter mentioned. And when that one Moiety of the said Exchange should come to the said Mayor and Corporation of the said City, they and their Successors shall every Year give and distribute, for the Sustentation of four Persons, to be chosen by the said Mayor and Commonalty, qualified to read the Lectures of Divinity, Astronomy, Musick, and Geometry, within his own Dwelling-House, within the Parish of St. Helen's, in Bishopsgate-street, and St. Peter's the Poor, the Sum of two hundred Pounds; that is, to every of the said Readers the Sum of fifty Pounds, yearly, each, for their Salaries and Stipends; to be paid at the Feast of the Annunciation of St. Mary the Virgin, and St. Michael the Archangel. And further, to give and distribute the Sum of fifty-three Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence, yearly, unto eight Alms-Folks, whom the said Mayor and Commonalty, or their Successors, appoint to inhabit his eight Alms-Houses in St. Peter's the Poor, to every of them the said Alms-Folks the Sum of six Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence, to be paid at the four usual Terms in the Year. And that the said Mayor and Commonalty should give and distribute, at the Terms aforesaid, to the Relief of the poor Prisoners in the Prisons known by the Names of Newgate, Ludgate, the King's-Bench, the Marshalsea, and the Compter in Wood-street, fifty “ Pounds in Money, or other Provisions and Necessaries, viz. to every of the same five Prisons ten Pounds, at the four usual Feasts, or twenty-eight Days next after.

Thomas
Gresham.

“ And, as concerning the other Moiety, disposed to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Corporation of the Mercers, they and their Successors, yearly, shall give and pay, to and for the Find and Sustentation of three Persons, by them from Time to Time to be chosen, and meet to read the Lectures of Law, Physick, and Rhetorick, within his said Dwelling-House, the Sum of one hundred and fifty Pounds; that is, to every of the said Readers, for the Time being, the Sum of fifty Pounds, for their Salaries and Stipends, at the two usual Times of the Year, viz. the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and St. Michael. And that the said Wardens and Corporation of Mercers, and their Successors, shall yearly bestow and expend an hundred Pounds, at four several Times in the Year, in and about the Expences and Charges of a Feast or Dinner for the whole Company, to be had and made in the Mercers Hall, in the End of every their Quarter-Day, the Sum of twenty-five Pounds; and shall every Year give and distribute to the Relief of the poor Persons and Prisoners in the Hospitals and Prisons known by the Name of Christ or Christ's-Church, lately Grey-Friars, in London, the Hospital of St. Bartholomew, near Smithfield, the Spital and Bedlam, near Bishopsgate, the Hospital for the Poor in Southwark, and the Compter kept in the Poultry, fifty Pounds in Money, or other Provisions and Necessaries for them; that is, to every the said Hospitals and Prisons ten Pounds, at the four most usual Feasts, or within twenty-eight Days after, &c.

“ And, as concerning his said Mansion-House, with the Gardens, Stables, and all and singlaur the other Appurtenances, &c. he willed and disposed, that they should remain, and the Use thereof be, to the said Mayor and Commonalty, and to their Successors, and also to the Wardens and Commonalty of the Mercers; to have and to hold in common, upon Trust and Confidence, that the same Mayor and Commonalty, and the said Wardens and Commonalty of the Mercers, and their Successors, shall permit and suffer seven Persons, by them to be elected and appointed, in Manner and Form afore said, meet, and sufficiently learned, to read the said seven Lectures, to have the Occupation of all the said Mansion-House, Gardens, and all other the Appurtenances, &c. for them, and every of them, there to inhabit, study, and daily to read the said several Lectures.

“ And his Will was, that none should be chosen to read any of the said Lectures after being married, nor receive any Fee or Stipend appointed for the Reading of the said Lecture.”

It is to be noted, that all this was thus disposed and given only during fifty Years: Then after, the Will proceeds: “ That moreover he willed and disposed, that if the said Mayor and Commonalty, and the said Wardens and Commonalty, before the End of the said fifty Years, to them in Form afore said limited, should procure and obtain sufficient and lawful Dispensations and Licences, Warrant and Authority had and obtained, should have and enjoy the said Royal-Exchange, Messuages, Shops, Pawns, Vaults, Houses, and all other the Premises, &c. for ever severally, by such Moieties, Rates, and other Portions, and in such Manner and Form, as before was limited, upon Trust and Confidence, that they severally for ever should do and perform the Payments, Charges, &c. before limited and expressed.

“ And he required and charged the said Corporations, and chief Governors thereof, with circumspect Diligence, and without long Delay, to procure, and so to be done and obtained, as they would answer for the same before Almighty God. For if they, or any of them, should neglect the obtaining of such Licence, or Warrant, (which he trusted could not be difficult, nor so chargeable, but that the Overplus of his Rents, and Profits of the Premises, would soon recompence the same; because to so good a Purpose in the Commonwealth no Prince or Council in any Age would deny or defeat the same; and that if conveniently, by his Will or other Conveyance, he might have assured it, he would not have left it to be done after his Death) then the same to revert to his right Heirs, whereas he meant the same to the Commonwealth. And then the Default thereof should be to the Reproach and Condemnation of the said Corporations afore God.” The Proving of this Will bore Date, November 26, 1579.

This noble Foundation of Learning Mr. Stow and Mr. Strype have given a brief Account of; and we shall add a few other Things, whereof they are silent. The Lady Gresham being dead, at whose Decease the Salaries for the Lectures were to commence, from the Rents then growing out of the Royal-Exchange and the Mansion-House of Sir Thomas Gresham, and the Lecturers being now to be appointed, in the Year 1597; the Mayor therefore, Aldermen, and Commons, considering what a Trust this was committed to them, thought fit to write Letters to the University of Cambridge, importing, “ How that they might the better discharge the Trust committed to them, both in Conscience, and in Regard of their own Credit, as not doubting but the Eye of her Sovereign Majesty, her honourable Council, and all other of best Judgment throughout this Land, would observe their Doings, with what Care and good Discretion they performed this Duty, being Matter of so great Importance to the Church of God and this Commonwealth; and that for themselves, for Want of Judgment to discern Men of most Sufficiency in the said Faculties, they might make Default, and commit some Error in their Election; they thought good therefore to derive their Choice from the very Fountain, and in earnest and hearty Manner to crave the Help and Assistance of their learned Judgments, and to entreat of them the Nomination of two meet Persons, being unmarried, according to the Will of the Testa“tor, of best Knowledge in every Faculty of “those four that were referred to the bestowing

 “of the City; being also furnished with good “Utterance, and other meet and requisite Parts
 “for the publick Profession of the said Arts;
 “whose several Names they prayed them to set “down, and send unto them, under the Signa“ture of the University; that they might make “Choice of the fittest Persons in every Faculty, “being assisted by so many grave and learned “Judgments; wherein, as they should perform
 “a special Part of their own Duty, so they “doubted not but that themselves should do a “good acceptable Work to Almighty God,
 “and bind them and the whole City in mutual “Respects, and good Correspondence of like “Desire to procure the Good, wherein they “might, of that University.”

To the like Effect they directed their Letters to the University of Oxford.

Some of the Heads in Cambridge were jealous that these Lectures, being to be read in London, might be prejudicial to that University, in hindering many from coming thither to study the Sciences, and drawing them to London. This occasioned Dr. Jegon, the Vice-Chancellor, to refrain for a little Time to nominate any, before he had acquainted the Lord Burleigh, their High Chancellor, with it, and had his Allowance for the doing it.

It is not known whether either of the Universities sent such Recommendations, but it is probable they never did, or at least, that the first Choice was made without any Regard to them; for, at the first Election, two of the Professors were chosen by Recommendations from the Court, namely, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, Professor of Physick, and Dr. John Bull, Professor of Musick. The first, viz. Dr. Gwinne, had, by his Interest at Court, been sent into France, Physician to Sir Henry Unton, Leaguer Ambassador to the King of France from Queen Elizabeth, and, after his Return, was designed to be made Physician to the Tower of London; but the first Election of the Professors for Gresham College happening at that Time, the Lord Thomas Egerton, Baron Ellesmere, Lord High Chancellor of England, recommended him, in two Letters, to the Mercers Company, to be chosen Physick Professor, which they did accordingly; and he was about the same Time admitted Fellow of the College of Physicians. The other, Dr. Bull, Musick Professor, had for some Years been travelling into France, Spain, and Germany, as Mr. Wood tells us, in his Athenæ Oxonienses, and, on his Return, was one of the Gentlemen of the Queen's Chapel, for four or five Years at least, before the Election of the first Gresham Professors; and as he was in the Service of the Court, and in the highest Esteem there for his vast Knowledge in Musick, it is very likely he had his Recommendation from thence.

This noble Gift was afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament, in the twenty-third of the Queen, and was intitled, “An Act for the “establishing an Agreement between Sir Henry “Nevyl, Knight, and Dame Anne Gresham, Wi“dow, for the better performing of the last

“Will of Sir Thomas Gresham, Knight, deceased,
 “and for the Payment of his Debts.” The Clause ratifying and confirming the Donation of the Exchange for the aforesaid Lectures, was in these Words:

“And the Buildings in London, called the “Royal Exchange, and all Pawns, and Shops, “Cellars, Vaults, Messuages, Tenements, and “other whatsoever Hereditaments, Parcel of,
 “or adjoining to, the said Royal Exchange in Lon“don, some Time the said Sir Thomas Gresham's, “shall be to the said Dame Anne, during her “Life; and, after her Decease, the one Moiety “thereof to the Mayor, Commonalty and Ci“tizens of London, by whatever special Name
 “or Addition the same Corporation is made
 “or known, and to their Successors for ever;
 “and the other Moiety thereof to the Wardens
 “and Commonalty of the Mystery of Mercers
 “of the City of London, that is to say, to the “Body and Corporation of the Company of the “Mercers of London, by whatsoever special “Name or Addition the same Corporation is “made, known, and to their Successors, to the “good Uses and Intents, in the said Writing,
 “last Will and Testament, limited, or ap“pointed.”

So that these Lectures began after the Decease of the Lady Anne Gresham, (which happened in the Year 1596) and so to continue for ever; whereupon the Lecturers were accordingly chosen and appointed to begin their Readings in Trinity Term 1597, which also they do at this Time perform. The Names of the first Professors were Anthony Wootton, for Divinity, Dr. Matthew Gwinne, for Physick, Dr. Henry Mountlow, for the Civil Law, Dr. John Bull, for Musick, Edward Breerwood, for Astronomy, Henry Briggs, for Geometry, and Caleb Willis, for Rhetorick, to the great Delight of many, both Learned and Lovers of Learning.

If the Trustees did not take the Recommendations of the Universities to direct their Choice, yet they seemed to make their Methods and Customs the Pattern by which the Gresham Lectures were to be modelled; and accordingly the Gresham Professors began, and ever performed their Lectures in a Method and Course in no material Point differing from the Universities; which appears to be altogether agreeable to the Intention of Sir Thomas Gresham, who, as he founded Professorships in the same Arts and Sciences as are in the Universities, must be supposed to design, that they should be cultivated in the same Manner at London. Thus Sir George Buck, in his Treatise of the third University of England, namely, London, says, That all the Liberal Arts and Sciences are there professed and taught, and that there are many and daily Lectures thereof read Particularly and Academically in Gresham-College; for which Reason, he afterwards styles Gresham-College a little University, Academia Epitome. And besides, That the Method of the Lectures themselves, the Times of Reading them, and the Intervals between the Times of Reading, were, in a great Measure, conformable to the publick Lectures in the Universities, and in the same Manner performed when the Gresham Lectures were first instituted, is beyond Contradiction plain, from the Conclusion of Dr. Gwinne's second Oration, read in Gresham-College, wherein he says, That the *Exercises, or Lectures, required of the Professors in Gresham-College, are no other than what are required from the Professors in the Schools and Lecturers in the Colleges in the Universities; and that as they, the Universities, had their Vacation Time and Recesses between the Performance and Return of their Duty, so had Gresham-College; where the Lectures were read only at particular and appointed Times; namely, when such Exercises are usually performed in other the like Places: And that these usual and customary Times of Reading were the Term-Times only, is plain from Stow; for it appears from the first Edition of his Survey, written the same Year that Dr. Gwinne read the aforesaid Lecture, and not above seven Months after the first Lectures were read, that the first Professors began their Lectures in Trinity-Term 1597. That every Lecturer had his particular Day in the Week, on which he was to read twice, once in English, and the other in Latin; and the same Practice appears to have been followed in 1603, from the second Edition of the Survey, published by Mr. Stow himself, in that Year, improved, augmented, and carefully corrected; and it is as plain, that the same Practice continued in the Year 1618, from the third Edition, published by Mr. Anthony Monday; and in the Year 1633, from the fourth Edition published at that Time.*

There were two Things, that those who had the Care of this College, in order to the Settlement thereof, were busy about; the one was in concerting, whether the Lectures should be read in Latin, or English; the other, for the Regulation of the College with good Rules and Orders.

Concerning the former, it was much controverted, in which of the two Languages the Lectures should be read: And there were two Papers of Reasons assigned; one, Why the Lectures in Divinity should be read in English, all, or Part; and the other, Why all the other Lectures should be rather read in English, all, or Part: But the Judgment of learned Men differed, it seems, in this Point; some being for reading in Latin, some in English; the general Opinion was, That of the three Readings in the Week, the two former should be in Latin, and the last in English.

The Reasons given in the aforesaid Papers were as follow:

I. Because the Good that would ensue would be more publick.

And the Founder seemed to have a more special Respect to the Benefit of the Citizens, of whom few understood the Latin Tongue.

That there would be more Hope of Contribution from the Citizens for the perfecting this and other good Works, if they might be employed to the common Benefit of the People of the City.

That it would be less offensive and damageable to the Universities, that this Reading be in English.

That the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, to whom the Ordering these Lectures was committed by the Will of the Founder, thought themselves bound in Conscience to provide that they might be read to the greatest Profit.

That if they be read in Latin, some of the Learned might probably resort to them, at first, for Novelty's Sake; but in a short Time they would become solitary, and void of Auditors; whereby Occasion would be taken to convert the Revenue to some other Uses, or else to transfer the Lectures to the Universities; both which were contrary to the Founder's Meaning.

That the Grecians taught all Parts of Learning in their own Tongue; Varro, Cicero, and Cæsar, and other of the wisest and learnedest of the Romans, laboured to have the like done in the Latin: That the vulgar Tongues at this Time, especially the Italian, French, and Spanish, both translate out of Latin and Greek, and write in their Languages all Parts of Learning; which hath much graced and benefited those Countries.

And Lastly, It will further the Estimation of Learning among the People, and will give them such a Taste of Learning as not to despise it, as the ruder Sort do; and make them withal to find their own Wants, and how necessary it is to have learned Men among them.

II. Reasons why the Divinity Lecture should be in English; viz.

That the former Reasons make most for the Divinity Lecture.

That the Exposition of the Texts of Scripture is fit for none more than the common People, who may and do mistake many Places of Scripture: And when Points of Doctrine, which they hear but shortly and slightly handled in Sermons and ordinary Lectures, shall be soundly and largely delivered in English, with plain Proofs of the Truth of our Doctrine, and Disproof of the Sophistry of the adverse Party; hereby Knowledge will come to be well settled in the Minds of the People, in whom there is a great and general Want of it.

That many, able to understand Latin when they read it deliberately, will not be able to understand the Reader when he speaketh it.

That it will be a good Means to beget a Reverence towards learned Ministers, when Divinity, and the Study thereof, shall appear to be a greater and harder Matter than is apprehended by many; since many simple Men and Women take themselves to be great Divines, upon meer Ignorance and vain Presumption.

Recusants, and other secret Papists, shall not be so easily able to shake the Faith, and disquiet the Minds of unlearned People, who, for want of Grounds, are snared and confounded with subtle Arguments, as Papists furnish themselves withal.

That that false and dangerous Opinion, That the Difference between us and the Papish Church is about small Trifles, and maintained by our Side for Contention rather than Conscience sake, may be found false and slanderous; and a true and grounded Detestation of Popery shall be bred in the Queen's Subjects Hearts.

That it may please God to make it a Means of the Conversion of some Papists, who, though they refuse to be present at Sermons, yet peradventure, venture, will not shun altogether Scholastical Lectures.

If it be objected, That it will not be fit to have all Controversies, or the Reasons of both Sides made known to the People, it may be answered, That the Practice of the Adversaries, who have contrived the Controversies, and framed their Reasons in the English Tongue, with as much Subtilty as they can, shew the Necessity of writing and reading Scholastically and Learnedly in English, that the People may be able to maintain the Truth professed by Soundness of Reason.

There is a Collection of Rules prefaced in these Words: It is thought good by the "Mayor and Aldermen and Commons of the City, and by the Master, Wardens, and Company of the Mercers, to whom the Election of the said Professors, and the good Government of their said College is wholly committed by the last Will of the said Founder, to devise and set down certain Ordinances for the good Government of the said College, in Manner following."

But the Reader may observe, by what will be said hereafter, that these Orders were never kept up to.

The first whereof was, for a Priority among the Professors. This Priority to be in the Professors of Divinity, Law, and Physick, successively; so that these three principal Readers be Presidents in Succession. The Divinity Reader to be next the President. The other Readers, after the Divinity Professor, to have their Place according to their Seniority within the College.

The Readers to lodge and common within the House, as Collegiate Persons.

Deputy Readers to be allowed by the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Wardens of the Mercers.

A common Table, or ordinary Diet, to be kept by the Professors, within the College, by a common Charge.

No Stranger to be entertained at their common Diet, above three Meals within one Month.

The publick Reading to be performed at five Terms; whereof the first to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, of the Common Law, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. the Space of thirty Days next ensuing; after which Term, a greater Vacancy and Intermission is granted to them for their private Study and other Business, and for avoiding the Concourse of People in the Heat of Summer. The second Term to begin the first Monday in September, and to continue for a Fortnight. The third Term to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term, and to end with the same Term. The fourth Term to begin the Monday next after the Epiphany, and to continue for two Months, viz. the Space of threescore Days. The fifth Term to begin the Monday seven-night after Easter Day, and to end with Easter Term.

The Divinity Lecture to be read thrice every Week, twice in Latin, and once in English, between the Hours of eight and nine in the Forenoon, a whole Hour at a Time. The Lecture to be read in Latin for the Sake of Strangers (whereby the Memory of the Founder may be divulged) on Mondays and Wednesdays. To be read in English, for the common Benefit of the People of the City, on Fridays. Which English Lecture may be the Effect of the two former Latin Lectures.

That the Divinity Reader employ his Time in handling Controversies that concern the chief Points of Christian Faith, especially those with the common Adversary, the Church of Rome: And to endeavour to confirm the true Doctrine established in the Church of England; and to bolt out the true State of each Controversy, especially drawn from the Council of Trent, and the late Writers of refined Popery; and to overthrow their false Opinions. First, by Scripture; then by Consent of Antiquity; and lastly, by Schoolmen, and chief Writers of their own Side; not intermeddling with domestick Questions, or intestine Differences, touching the Rites and Manner of Government of the Church.

The Law Lecture to be read thrice every Week for an Hour; the two former in Latin, and the third in English; as a brief Recapitulation of the two former. The Days to be Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. The Law Lecture.

This Law Lecture, considering the Hearers, for the most Part, are like to be Merchants, or other Citizens, not to be read, after the Manner of the University, upon any Text of the Civil Course, but to cull out such Titles and Heads of Law, as best may serve to the good Liking and Capacity of the Auditory, and are more usual in Practice; which may be handled after the Method of Waserbekius, and certain others; by Definition, Division, Causes, Effects, Contraries, &c. To which are added the Heads and Titles of such Matters as were fitted for this Place and Auditory.

The Physick Lecture to be thrice every Week, viz. Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, between the Hours of ten and eleven. The two first Lectures in the Latin Tongue, and the third in the English, as a brief Collection and Recapitulation of the two former. The Physick Lecture.

And for the Matter of the said Lecture, it is to be wished, that the Reader follow Fernelius's Method, by reading Physiology, then Pathology, and last Therapeuticy; whereby the Body of the said Art may be better imprinted by good Method in the studious Auditors, rather than be disjointed, and delivered out of Order, by Exposition of some Part of Galen, or Hippocrates.

The Astronomy and Geometry Lectures to be read likewise, viz. either of them thrice every Week. The Astronomy and Geometry Lectures.

The Geometrician to read every Trinity Term, Arithmetick; in Michaelmas and Hilary Term, Theoretical Geometry; and every Easter Term, Practical Geometry.

The Astronomy Reader to read, first, the Principles of the Sphere, and Theories of the Planets, &c. then to apply them to Use, by reading Geography, and the Art of Navigation, in some one Term of every Year. The Days for the Astronomy Lecture to be Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, between the Hours of two and three in the Afternoon. For Geometry, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at the same Hour. The first Reading of the said Lectures to be in Latin, the next in English, and so following in the same Order.

The Rhetorick
Lecture.

The Rhetorick Lecture to be read thrice every Week, viz. Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, for a whole Hour, in the Latin Tongue with a brief Recapitulation for one Quarter of an Hour in the English, between the Hours of ten and eleven in the Forenoon.

The Musick
Lecture.

The Musick Lecture to be also read thrice every Week, viz. the Theorick Part, for Half an Hour in the English Tongue; and the Practick Part, by Concert of Voices, or of Instruments, the other Half Hour: The Days appointed to be Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, in the Afternoon, between the Hours of three and four.

For the greater Comeliness and Order, the Readers were obliged at their Lectures to appear with such Hoods and Habits as are proper to their Academical Degree.

In this Manner these Lectures began to be read; and thus they continued, without any Interruption, till the dreadful Fire of London in 1666; when the Exchange of London being consumed, this College was made Use of to supply the Want of Shops for the Inhabitants of the Exchange, and to be a Place for the Merchants to meet in. The City made Use of it for their Court and Chamber, and for other Publick Uses. The Inner Court-Yard for the Meeting of the Merchants, until such Time as the Royal Exchange could be re-built; also, the Galleries above the Court-yards without, and the Piazzas about the Inner Court, where the Merchants met, were all converted into Shops for those who had been burnt out by the Fire of the Exchange. This Alteration did, for some Time, impede the orderly Course of the Reading the aforesaid Lectures.

After which the Lectures were again renewed in the Manner they had before been practised; and thus continued till they had again been like to be interrupted in the Year 1699, thro' the Discouragement the Professors met with from the Trustees, who, under Pretence of a great Debt they had run into by re-building the Royal Exchange in the sumptuous Manner it now appears, thought it good to stop the Professors Salaries; but they, however, did not think this a sufficient Reason to omit their Duty, and continued in the Discharge of it, notwithstanding this great Difficulty they had to encounter with: The Particulars of which Matter were as follow:

The Professors Salaries

In the Month of August 1699, a grand Committee for Gresham Affairs was summoned to meet, and the Professors directed to give their Attendance: When the Professors came, the Committee acquainted them, that Sir Thomas Gresham's Gift had greatly run them into Debt; that the Expence of Re-building the Exchange, (to do which they were forced to take up great Sums of Money upon Interest) was so great, and the Income of the Exchange so small, the Trade thereof being greatly fallen off, that the present Profits of the Exchange were less than the Interest of the Money borrowed to re-build it, whereby there was no Revenue left to maintain and support the Uses of Sir Thomas Gresham's Will; wherefore they were not in any Condition to pay the Professors Salaries any longer, nor any more could be at any Expence in Repairing the College, tho' they had ever, before that, kept in constant Repair both the publick Rooms of the College, and the private Apartments of the several Professors. The Professors used all possible Endeavours, in the most respectful Manner, to prevail with the Trustees to recede from these Resolutions, but without Success, 'till the following Year, when they were forced to apply to Counsel, to advise what proper Course to take to obtain Redress: The Counsel they applied to, were the then Attorney-General Sir Thomas Trevor, and Mr. Henry Pooley, to whom they gave a short State of their Case, in Substance as follows:

Sir Thomas Gresham, by Will, made 1575, left one Moiety of the Exchange, &c. to the City of London, to the Intent that they perform certain Payments mentioned in his Will; and the other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mercers, on the same Confidence and Trust: One of these Payments directed by the Will, was, that the City should find four Lecturers in Divinity, Geometry, Astronomy, and Musick, for ever, and pay them yearly 50 l. a-piece. And that the Mercers likewise find three Lecturers, for ever, in Civil Law, Physick and Rhetorick, and pay them also 50 l. a-piece. As to his Mansion-House, with the Gardens, Stables, and Appurtenances, &c. the Will directs the same to be and remain to the said City and Company, upon Trust and Confidence, that they permit and suffer the seven Readers aforesaid there to inhabit, and have the Use thereof to study and read the said Lectures daily. On the next Year, an Act of Parliament passed for the better performing this Will. The City and Company have accordingly enjoyed this Gift, and have nominated the Readers, paid the Salaries, and kept the College in Repair ever since, 'till of late, which they now refuse to do; alledging, that they were at a vast Expence in Re-building the Exchange, and had borrowed vast Sums to do it, and that the Interest thereof being first paid, the clear Profits of the Exchange, &c. will not pay the Salaries and other Payments appointed. The Trustees farther pretend, That the Ground Sir Thomas built the Exchange on was not his own Ground. On stating their Case after this Manner, the Professors made these Queries, and received the following Advice:

The first Question is, supposing they [the Trustees] have borrowed Money to build, "Whether they, enjoying the Rents and Profits, as they do, under the Will, so confirmed by Act of Parliament, and the Act for Rebuilding the City, not appointing in what Manner the Exchange should be re-built, are not in all Events to pay the seven Salaries, and the other Charities yearly, and whether they can be now admitted to controvert the Title to the Ground upon which the Exchange was built?"

I conceive this City shall not now be admitted to controvert Sir Thomas Gresham's Right to the Ground on which the Exchange is built; and I conceive no extravagant or extraordinary Expences which the City may have been at in Building the Exchange more sumptuously than needful, only for their own Grandeur and Magnificence, shall be allowed to them to sink the Rents in Disappointment of the Lecturers, and other Charities. The necessary Charges of Re-building, in such a Manner as to make it answer a Rent sufficient to answer the Charities, must be allowed; and if, after such an Allowance, the rest of the Profits will not be sufficient to answer the Charities, I conceive the City ought to account for all the Rents and Profits from the Death of Sir Thomas Gresham, that so the Surplus of Profits may be applied to make up the Deficiency that now is.

The second Question is, "Whether the several Readers shall bring in a Bill in Chancery for Performance of the Will in their own Names, and for their Salaries only? or, Whether in the Name of the Attorney-General, at their Relation for the Payment of their Salaries, and the other Charities in the Will?"

I conceive it is most proper to bring the Bill in the Attorney-General's Name, at the Relation of the Lecturers, &c.

May 17, 1700.

HENRY POOLEY.

Upon this Advice, the Professors, who still sought the Trustees to give them Redress, without running to Extremities, but could not prevail, filed a Bill in Chancery against the Trustees in Michaelmas Term, 1700. This Information was in Substance as follows: "That Sir Thomas Gresham did, in the Reign of the late Queen Elizabeth, at his own Charge, build and erect in the City of London a Building, which was, by the said Queen, called the Royal Exchange: That by his last Will, made 1575, he left one Moiety of the said Exchange, &c. to the City of London, and the other Moiety thereof to the Company of Mercers, upon this special and express Trust and Confidence, and to the Intent that they should perform the Payments, and other Intents, in that his last Will appointed to be done and performed." Then the Bill recites the several Payments of Salaries and other Charities mentioned in the Will, and proceeds: "That the Overplus of the Rents and Profits of the Premises, above all the Payments thereout appointed to issue by the said Will, would soon abundantly recompence such Charge and Trouble as the Trustees should be at: And as to his Mansion-House, now commonly called Gresham-College, he gave that, and all the Appurtenances thereto belonging, to the said City and Company, to have and to hold, upon this express Trust and Confidence, that they should permit the said seven Lecturers to have the Occupation of all his said Mansion-House, &c. for them, and every of them, there to inhabit, study, and read, &c. That the said Trustees did pay the said Salaries and other Charities, until the twenty-fifth Day of March, 1699; but, since that Time, have stopped further Payment, whereby the Salaries of the Professors are in Arrear from the said twenty-fifth of March 1699, to the present October 1700, altho' Application has been several Times made of late to the Trustees for the Payment of the said Salaries; and when the Performance of the Founder's Will has been earnestly pressed upon them, the Answer was, There was no Money to make good the said Salaries, &c. on which Pretence the Trustees do absolutely refuse to perform the Will of the said Testator, by paying the said Salaries, but do convert the Rents and Profits of the Premises devised to them to their own respective Uses; and their Pretence for this Want of Money, is, That the Royal Exchange, and other Appurtenances devised to them in the said Will, were burnt in the Fire of London; that they re-built the same at a vast Expence, borrowing Money for that Purpose; and that the Incomes and Profits arising from the Exchange, thus re-built, do not answer the Money that was borrowed to rebuild the same. Altho' this was true, the same ought not to prejudice the Payment of the said Salaries, &c. for that there was no Necessity for them to expend such vast Sums in outward Magnificence; and besides, they had, for above an hundred Years, enjoyed all the Rents and Profits of the Premises, being a very great Revenue, much above the said Payments charged on the same: Besides, had not the Trustees thought it for their Advantage, and so had refused to re-build the same, subject to the Trusts and Payments in the Testator's Will, some other Ways and Means would have been found out and provided for the Re-building, without defeating the several Payments appointed; and of this the Trustees are so sensible, that they have, ever since the Fire of London, continued to pay the same, and but lately, as is afore set forth, stopped Payment; and for some farther Colour to make this Stop, do pretend, that, by a late Act of Parliament for the Relief of Orphans, &c. the Revenues of the City are appropriated to answer for ever a Fund of 8000 l. a Year, to pay these Orphans Debts, &c. which is only a Pretence to defeat the Founder's Will, since this Act cannot affect the Salaries due to the Professors, &c. for that not the whole Benefaction of Sir Thomas Gresham, but only the Surplus of it, after paying the Uses of the Will, can be called or taken to be Part of the Revenue of the City. And so bent are the Trustees to defeat the Will of the Testator, that, tho' by his said Will his Mansion-House is expressly appointed for the Habitation of the said seven Readers, yet, to force the Readers from thence, they have let the said House run to Ruin, and refuse to repair, and keep in Repair, the same. All which Refusal of Paying the Salaries, &c. and of Repairing the Mansion-House, is against all Equity and good Conscience, and directly against the Will and Meaning of the Testator afore-said, and a Breach of the Trust reposed by the said Will in them. To the End, therefore, that the said Trustees may answer the Premises, and be decreed to make good the Salaries, &c. and to pay the Arrear, and put the said Mansion-House, and keep the same, in Repair, the Lord Chancellor is prayed to grant his Writ of Subpoena to the Trustees, commanding them personally to appear, &c."

The Consequence of Filing this Bill was, That not long after the Trustees met, and directed the Professors to attend, and at their Meeting ordered the Payment of one Year's Salary, telling them, That they would in convenient Time discharge charge the remaining Part of the Arrear, whereupon all Proceedings in Chancery were suspended. The Trustees said, likewise, That they had a Proposal to make for the mutual Advantage both of the Trustees and Professors, to which they desired the Concurrence of the Professors: Which Proposal was to bring a Bill into Parliament for the Re-building Gresham-College into a Square (to be let out for Rent, for the Use and Advantage of the Trustees) and Providing Houses more commodious for the Professors than the Lodgings they now enjoy; and to this Proposal all the Professors, save one, gave their Consent; and accordingly the Bill was brought into the House of Commons in 1701, and carried there; but, at the second Reading in the House of Lords, it was rejected, upon the Petition of Dr. Robert Hooke, Geometry Professor, who had before denied his Consent to it. The Contents of this intended Act of Parliament were as follow: In the Preamble it sets forth, "That the Royal Exchange was given to the Trustees, in Trust, to pay out "603 l. 6 s. 8 d. per Ann. That this Exchange was burnt down in the great Fire of London, and so no Revenue left to pay the annual Charge. That the Trustees re-built the Exchange at the Expence of 80,000 l. or thereabouts, and the Trustees lost thereby more than 2000 l. yearly, the Trade of the Exchange decreasing, and many of the Shops standing empty, altho' considerable Abatements have been made to encourage Tenants. That Gresham-College is grown old and ruinous, and the Repairs thereof have been very expensive; but the said College standing upon a considerable Quantity of Ground, and great Part of it lying waste, good Improvement may be made by Re-building it. That the Trustees and Professors are agreed upon a Scheme of Building seven convenient Houses for the Lecturers, and a publick Hall, and likewise Alms-Houses in a more airy and convenient Place for the Alms-Folks.

"Wherefore they pray, that it may be enacted, That it may be lawful to pull down the old College, &c. and to convert the Materials to their own Use, and also to let and dispose all, or any Part of the Ground belonging to the said College, except such Part as the Lecturers Houses and Hall are agreed to be built upon. Provided, however, that the Lecturers Houses and Hall be built in the Manner specified, and that all those new Buildings be liable, together with the Royal Exchange, &c. in the first Place, and before all other Charges, to the Payment of the Uses of Sir Thomas Gresham's Will, and that all the Arrears due to the Lecturers, &c. be fully paid, clear of all Taxes, either now assessed, or to be ever hereafter assessed; and that no Stoppage shall be made of the same Payments for the future, on Account of Re-building the Exchange, or otherwise howsoever; and that the Trustees shall support, maintain, and repair, at their own Costs and Charges, the said Lecturers Houses, &c. as often as Occasion shall be; and that the Trustees shall on any Vacancy of a Lecturer, for the future, come to a Choice within two Months."

The Bill being thus lost in the House of Lords, upon the Petition of Dr. Hooke, the Geometry Professor, the Trustees were much offended, and therefore went no farther in clearing the Arrears due to the Professors, than the above-mentioned Payment of the Year's Salary, and laid aside this Project of Re-building till the Death of Dr. Hooke, which happened within a Year or two after; soon after which, the Trustees again resumed their Design of bringing their Bill into Parliament, as hoping now for better Success, when the main Opposer of it was dead; and then again they desired the Professors Consent and Concurrence, which they readily had; and accordingly, in the Year 1703-4, they brought into the House of Lords the same Bill as before, where it passed; but with the following Clause added: "Provided always, that no Person shall hereafter be capable of being chosen a Lecturer upon any Vacancy, except he be a Graduate in one of the Universities of this Kingdom." There was likewise added a Penalty to the Bill, namely, "That the Trustees should be obliged and required to build these Houses, Hall, and Alms-Houses, for the Lecturers and Alms-Folks, within five Years from the passing of this Act, upon the Penalty of 2000 l. to be forfeited to her Majesty, her Heirs, or Successors, &c." But when this Bill came down to the House of Commons, Exception was taken to this Clause, and the Bill, being on that Account rejected, hath never since been attempted again in Parliament.

Bill for Rebuilding the College again brought into Parliament.

Thrown out again.

In the Year 1706, some Persons in Office, in the Parishes of St. Helen's and Broad-street, did, contrary to all Custom and Usage, assess and tax the several Apartments of the Professors as distinct Houses; whereas the whole seven Lodgings (all which, as was well known, were only the single Mansion-House of Sir Thomas Gresham) had been before taxed but as one House: They likewise endeavoured to bring the Professors into the Poors Rates, and other parochial Taxations, to subject their Salaries to the King's Taxes, and to lay other such-like Hardships upon them; nothing of which had ever before been so much as demanded of them. The Professors absolutely refused to comply with any of these Demands, and by proper Appeals, and other Methods, got themselves discharged from these Impositions. The Parish-Officers finding themselves disappointed, and not able to lessen their own Charges, by laying Part of them on the Professors, grew angry, and sought to give all the Molestation and Trouble they could to them; for which Purpose they employed Persons of mean and base Condition perpetually to attend the Lectures, not to reap any Advantage thence, or even to satisfy any Curiosity, but to obtain Matter for Calumny or Complaint, and to give Notice if any blameable Omission should happen: And these Persons Behaviour was suitable to the Design they were sent to pursue, being always tumultuous and rude, and sometimes abusive to some of the Professors, during the Time of their performing their Duty. The Professors might have taken just Exception to such an Audience, or have refused to read to Persons so unqualified as they were: However, they never omitted their their Lectures on this Account, but continued in the constant Discharge of their Duty, to the Disappointment of their Adversaries, who wanted nothing more than a just Occasion of Complaint; but as they could find no Neglect in the Professors of their real Duty, they had Recourse to an imaginary one, demanding of the Professors to read Lectures on Holidays; nay, of the Divinity Professor to read on Sundays: This they afterwards carried so far, as to insist on Lectures every Day in the whole Year. The Professors refusing Compliance with these Demands, their Adversaries had Recourse to Clamour and Noise; they printed Representations and Advertisements, that such Lectures were to be read on such Days, namely, on Holidays, when they knew no Lectures would be read, and pasted these up and down in the most publick Places, and by other Means dispersed them, and thus drew many Strangers thither, who being disappointed, and not knowing the Usage and Custom of the Place, were drawn in to join with them in their unreasonable Clamours: And among these were several Persons of good Fashion and Education; such, whose Attendance might have been a Credit and Reputation to the Professors, had they not fallen into the Prejudices before-named, and with great Zeal joined in the groundless Demand of Lectures every Day in the Year, instead of the known Duty of Reading them only in the Term Times. The Professors, refusing to depart from what had been ever the Custom of the College, were menaced with Complaints to be made to the Committee for Gresham Affairs; and if Redress was not to be had there, of farther appealing to the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen. And to make these Complaints more effectual, and to pursue them with greater Vigour, the Complainants selected a Number from among themselves, to meet and consider how to carry on these Designs; at which Meetings they diligently went thro' the Founder's Will, to see if any thing was omitted that they could charge the Professors with, and there finding the Expression of, Studying and Reading daily, they fixed upon this last Word, and obstinately contended that nothing else was, or could be meant by it, than every Day in the Year; they likewise found Fault with the customary Hour of Reading, (two o'Clock) as unreasonable for them to attend, it falling at the Time of their Dinner. This was the Original and Progress of their Complaints, which they carried on farther, by using great Industry to get Hands to an Instrument, setting forth these Grievances, in order to be presented to proper Authority to obtain Redress; and accordingly Petitions were delivered in to this Effect, both to the Court of Aldermen, and Grand Committee for Gresham Affairs.

The Professors proved, by sufficient Authorities, That from the first Institution, to the present Time of the Dispute, these Lectures were read only in Term Times. The first Author mentioned for Proof hereof, was Dr. Gwinne, in his Orationes Due; he was, as is before observed, chosen Professor of Physick at the first Election, and was directed to begin his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597. The ninth Lecture that he read is printed, and bears this Title: Praelelio nona, cum resumerentur Lectiones post Natalitia. The ninth Lecture, read when the Time of Reading came on again after Christmas. The Professors observed, from this Citation, that Dr. Gwinne beginning his Lectures in Trinity Term 1597, and his ninth Lecture coming after Christmas, in January, that is, in Hilary Term 1597-8, he could only have read in the Term Times: For just as in the then present Year 1706, so in that Year 1597, there would fall three Saturdays (which are the Physick Lecture Days) in Trinity Term, and five Saturdays in Michaelmas Term, so that he read eight Lectures only in 1597; there being just eight Saturdays within those Terms, and no more; and consequently the ninth Lecture must fall on the first Reading Time after Christmas; that is, on the first Saturday in Hilary Term in 1597-8, exactly, as he says it did, in the Inscription of his Lecture just now quoted. To this evident Proof the Professors added the Citations from the other Parts of Dr. Gwinne's Book.

The next Author the Professors cited, was Mr. Stow, whose Survey was written in the Year 1598, the very Year after the first Institution of these Lectures; and he says, Page 57, Line 32, of his first Edition, as he does also in the second Edition, corrected and amended by himself, and published in the Year 1603, Page 76, Line 5; These Lectures are read Daily, Sundays excepted, in the Term Time, by every one on his Day, &c. and from thence they inferred, That the Words to read Daily, in the Founder's Will, might be either understood in the Sense of the Universities before-mentioned, or else in this of Mr. Stow, That each Lecturer should read on his particular Day assigned him in the Week; that so the Auditors, who had a Mind to attend any particular Science, might know on what Day to come, and not be disappointed.

The next Author was Sir George Buck, in his Treatise concerning the three Universities of England, annexed to Stow's Chronicle, and dedicated to the Lord Chief Justice Coke, printed in the Year 1612, within fifteen Years of the Founding the Lectures; and he says, Page 980, Line 35, And these Lectures, viz. in Gresham College, must be read only in the Term Time.

The next Author mentioned, was the Editor of the third Edition of Stow, Anthony Monday, which he published in the Year 1618, one and twenty Years after the Founding of the Lectures, and he says, Page 123, Line 26, That their Lectures were read daily in the Term Times. The Professors observed, That this Author had been six and twenty Years one of the City Servants, in sundry Employments, had Encouragement from the whole Court of Aldermen, and Orders for the Perusal of whatever Helps he wanted, and that this Work was by them approved when finished, which cost him twelve Years Time in compiling; that therefore, he neither wanted Means of Knowledge, nor refused Industry for the obtaining it.

The next Author was Dr. Holdsworth, who was chosen Divinity Professor in Gresham-College in 1630, thirty-three Years after the first Institution; and his Divinity Lectures were published in 1661, by Bishop Pearson. Dr. Holdsworth tells his Auditors, It was three whole Months since his last Reading. Again, That those Lectures had been omitted for these three Months. Again, he concludes his Lecture with telling them, He should not read till that Day three Weeks, because the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that a Church Holiday. At the End of another Lecture, he says, He is sorry he is forced to break off abruptly in his Discourse, which must be the Work of the next Term. And again, he refers his Audience, for the Remainder of the Argument, to the next Term: And more to the same Purpose. And this Author continued Divinity Professor for nine or ten Years, with the greatest Applause. The next Author was Howell's Londinopolis, who published his Work in 1657, sixty Years after the first Institution; and he says, Page 21, Line 29, These Lectures are to be read every Day in the Week in Term Time. The Professors were ready with Proof, that likewise ever since the Restoration the Lectures were only read in the Term Time; and, among other Instances of this Practice, they had the Example of the most celebrated Dr. Isaac Barrow, who was chosen Geometry Professor in Gresham-College in the Year 1662, being at the same Time Fellow of Trinity-College in Cambridge: All the while he continued Geometry Professor in Gresham-College, he was Fellow of Trinity; and as he read his Lectures in Term Times in Gresham-College, so, in the Vacation Times, he went down to Cambridge, and attended his Duty and Fellowship there. But this, and the rest of their Proofs thereof, were not produced before the Committee, because the Petitioners were willing to allow, that Termly Readings only had been the Custom and Practice in Gresham-College ever since the Restoration.

When the Professors had given in this Proof, they observed, that the Argument by them offered was of the strongest Nature, because it proved, that reading the Lectures (in Term Times only) was the original Practice enjoined by the first Trustees, taken up by the first Professors, and followed by their Successors in all Times; that therefore this Practice could be no Corruption crept in by Degrees, either thro' the Sloth of the Professors, or the Connivance of the Trustees, but was founded in, and continued by, the full and free Approbation or Consent of both. They argued farther, That the first Trustees and Professors could not possibly be ignorant of that Expression in the Founder's Will, that says, The Professors are to inhabit, study, and read daily; because that Part of the Will is, at all Elections, read to the Persons elected, in the Presence of the Electors; and, if so, it was not conceivable that the first Trustees could understand the Word Daily, in the Sense of the Petitioners, to mean every Day in the Year, since they were so desirous of discharging their Consciences faithfully, as their Letter before mentioned shews them to be; it is hardly possible they could sit down quiet and unconcerned, when they saw the first Professors begin and continue to read only in Term Time, in direct and open Violation of the Founder's Will; much less could they ever have been brought to give their Direction, or even Consent, that they should do so; nor can it be believed, that, had the first Professors thus understood the Word Daily to mean, they could ever have began and continued a Practice directly contrary to their Duty, unless they be supposed to have been Men of the most profligate and shameful Character possible, the very Reverse of which they had, as is before seen of Dr. Gwinne, and might easily be proved of the other six. In the Conclusion, the Professors brought in the Books they cited, in order to submit their Citations to Examination, and then called on the Petitioners to shew so much as one Proof or Evidence to the contrary.

The Petitioners, who had in their Plea and in their printed Papers asserted, that at the original Institution the Professors read every Day in the Year, and, amongst these Professors which they asserted did thus read, had named Dr. Gwinne and Dr. Holdsworth, &c. and had, with all Assurance, said, that their printed Works intimated as much, (the direct contrary to which is true); and had farther laid down, that the Interruption of these every Day Readings was owing to the Civil War Time, to the great Sickness, or to the Fire of London, thought fit no longer to insist on these Pretences, but fell to vilify and depreciate the Characters of the Authors quoted. Mr. Stow, they said, might easily be convicted of Falshood and Mistake, even in what he writes concerning this Matter; his Authority was never admitted in any Cause or Court; he and the others were antiquated Authors. As for Dr. Holdsworth, he spoke in his own Cause, and might be convicted of Partiality, &c. And this laid the Professors under a Necessity of doing a needless Work, of justifying the Reputation of Mr. Stow, which, till that Time, had never been questioned; and the rather, because one or two of the Committee spoke with Contempt of him, as an old, neglected, useless Author. The Professors referred themselves to Dr. Nicholson, then Dean, and afterwards Bishop of Carlisle; who gives the following Character of Mr. Stow and his Book, in his Historical Library, then printed in Octavo, but since, in 1714, in Folio. He says, Page 18, "John Stow wrote and published "A Survey of London.—The whole is collected "out of our best Historians and most authentick "Records, and discovers a great deal of Industry "and Accuracy in the worthy and honest Author." And again, he says, Page 72, "Industrious John Stow deserves to be remembered "with Honour: He was a Member of the Merchant-Taylors Company in London, and a "special Benefactor to that City, in enquiring "after and preserving its Antiquities and Records. He travelled thro' a good Part of "England in Search after the Manuscript Historians, in the Libraries of our Cathedral "Churches, and was very exact and critical in "his Collections, and spent above forty Years in "these Studies. He always protested, (and we "may take his honest Word for it) that he never "was swayed by Favour or Fear in any of his "Writings; but that he had impartially, to the "best of his Knowledge, delivered the Truth. "This good Opinion the greatest of our Historians

“rians seem to have of him, since even Sir Francis Bacon, and Mr. Camden, (not to mention others of less Repute) have boldly taken several Things upon his single Credit.”

As to the next Author, Sir George Buck, quoted by them, he was not only a Man of Credit, but of Quality, being both one of the Gentlemen of the King's Privy Chamber, and also Master of the Revels: This his Work he delivered to the Lord Chief Justice Coke, and dedicated it to him, leaving the Manuscript to be disposed of at his Lordship's Pleasure. The Lord Chief Justice was so well satisfied of his Integrity and his Ability, that he himself directed the Printing it, giving his Allowance for its Publication, and under his Hand giving his special Commendation and Approbation of it, as of a Work worthy the publick Light.

What Character Mr. Monday's Work, which was the next Author quoted, deserves, is mentioned before. The Professors on this Head took Notice, how strange a Thing it was to make the Antiquity of these Authors an Exception to their Testimony, because their being old Authors gave their Evidence the greatest Strength, since they wrote of Things within their own Knowledge, and of Times in or very near to which themselves lived.

The next Author who was quoted by the Professors was Dr. Holdsworth, a Man of the strictest Virtue and most unfulfilled Reputation, though, at Random, his Character was excepted against, as is said before, by the Petitioners. He was, as the eminent Bishop Pearson tells us, the most celebrated Preacher of his Time, being Minister of St. Peter's Poor in Broad-street, to which Living he was preferred in 1623 or 1624. He was a most faithful Pastor of his Parish, and a most conscientious Man; insomuch that, when the great Sicknes happened in 1625, he refused to go into the Country, as most others did, but lived in his Parish, and constantly visited the Sick, despising the Contagion, and preferring the Discharge of his Duty to the Safety of his Person. In the Year 1630 he was, without making any Interest, or using any Solicitation, (so great was his Reputation) chosen Divinity Professor in Gresham-College, of which he was a great Ornament nine or ten Years. He was a Person that so exactly adhered to his Duty, and so fearful of acting in the least against his Conscience, that, in the Beginning of the Rebellion, he was sequestered, plundered, and imprisoned four Years in the Tower, after which Time he was released; in every Part of his Life being of an unblameable Carriage and a most holy Conversation. In short, he was, as Bishop Brownrig assures us, a most excellent Preacher, a most faithful Interpreter of Scripture, a Contemner of Riches, a most charitable Man, of strict Morals, and one of a most holy Life. This was the Character of those Men, whom the Petitioners represented as Men of no Weight, of no Principles, nay, of Falshood and Partiality.

From thus supporting the Characters of the Authors cited by them, the Professors proceeded to justify themselves, as to the other Parts of the Charge against them. As to the not reading on Holidays, they insisted on their superior Obligation to attend their Duty at Church, as also on the perpetual Practice of the Universities, and of all their Predecessors, who never read Lectures on Holidays; an early Proof of which is found in Dr. Holdsworth, who says, as is before mentioned, He should not read till that Day three Weeks, because the following Monday was a State Holiday, and the Monday after that a Church Holiday. And in this Matter the Trustees were so far satisfied, that, in their Order, presently to be mentioned, they did not comply with the Petitioners in this Point, in directing Lectures to be read on Holidays. As to the not reading in broken Weeks, the Professors justified that from the Practice likewise of their Predecessors; and also produced Letters from both the Universities, proving, that the Divinity Professor always opened the Term. As to the last Part of the Complaint, the Unreasonableness of the Hours, the Professors were indifferent whether they remained the same, or were altered.

After both the Petitioners and Professors were withdrawn, the Trustees, after a long Debate, made an Order, dated October 4, 1706; the Preamble of which declares, “That Application had been made by several Citizens and others, in Relation to the Lectures at Gresham-College, setting forth, That the said Lecturers did not duly perform their Readings in Term Time, for that if any Term did not begin on a Monday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture that Week; and, in like Manner, if any Term did not end on a Saturday, that was taken for a broken Week, and no Lecture performed; whereby the Inhabitants of this City, and others, were much hindered of the Benefit which they might reap by the said Lectures. Wherefore they do order and direct, That, for the future, those Lectures shall be performed, by the several Professors, on such Days of the Week as they now read in their several Sciences, at four Terms in every Year, as followeth, viz. the first Term, to begin the Monday before Michaelmas Term of the Common Law, and to end with that Term; the second Term to begin the Monday before Hilary Term, and to end with that Term; the third Term to begin the Monday Se'nnight after Easter-Day, and to end with Easter Term; the fourth Term to begin the Monday before Trinity Term, and to continue for one whole Month, viz. twenty-eight Days: And farther, it is ordered by the Committee, That the said Lecturers do begin to read their several Lectures at Nine of the Clock in the Forenoon, and Three in the Afternoon, precisely.”

This Order likewise sets forth, that it was made after consulting the Founder's Will, and Articles that were made soon after the Trust came to the City and Company. The Professors complied with this Order, with Respect to the broken Weeks and Hours of Reading; but, finding the Order direct them to read out of the Term, contrary to all Custom and Usage, and this also by Virtue of such Articles or Orders as were never looked upon to have any legal Authority or Force, they went to Counsel, and were advised not to charge themselves with any new Duties, nor submit to the Authority of such Articles, as they had good Reason to believe were never duly signed or legally ratified: Wherefore the greatest Part of the Professors drew up a Paper, and waited on Sir Thomas Rawlinson, the Chairman of the Committee, with it, which was as follows:

Virtue

Reasons why the Professors have not, in all Points, complied with the Order of the Honourable Committee, dated October 4, 1706.

“First, We are, at our being chosen into our respective Places, directed to perform our Duty, according to the Custom and Practice of the Place.

“Secondly, We are able to give unquestionable Proof, that the Custom has been, without any Interruption, to read only in Term Time; and, since it has been so, we are advised to be very careful how we charge ourselves, or our Successors, with unnecessary Burthens.

“Thirdly, We are informed, that the Ground upon which this Order to read out of Term is founded, is taken from some Articles which were never legally ratified, or admitted as legally ratified, either by the then Trustees or Professors.

“We therefore, that our Compliance with this Order might not be looked upon as allowing of the Authority of those Articles, and so subject us to the rest of them, which, when under Consideration, appeared unreasonable both to yours and our Predecessors, have rejected it.”

The Professors had made Application to obtain an Order to examine these Articles in the Original in the Committee's Books, but could not obtain Leave sufficiently to inspect them: However, when they came to the Lord-Mayor with the afore-mentioned Reasons why they could not comply wholly with the late Order of the Trustees, they offered likewise to give in to the Committee their Exceptions to the Legality and Validity of these Articles or Orders, in Substance as follows:

First, They had this to offer, namely, That none of their Predecessors ever acknowledged the Validity of these Articles, or owned the Obligation of them, because they, from the Beginning, acted quite otherwise than these Articles direct. The Articles direct, that the Professors shall read three Times in each Week, and that on three distinct Days in the Week: But it has been proved, that, from the very Beginning, the Professors never have read otherwise than twice in the Week, and that both Times on the same Day. Again, the Articles direct, that the Professors should live and diet at a common Table, to be kept at a common Charge: But the Professors never had any such common Table, as Dr. Gwinne says, in his afore-mentioned Book; where, speaking of the Professors living together, he says, They live not together so as to have Commons at one Table. And as their Manner of living together was altogether different from what these Articles direct, so also was their Method of reading their Lectures; for none of all the Professors Lectures, that have ever yet appeared in Print, have followed the Method directed by these Articles. The Articles say, that the Physick Professor shall follow the Method of Fernelius, by reading Physiology, then Pathology, and, lastly, Therapeutics; but Dr. Gwinne, the first Physick Lecturer, read upon the Aphorisms of Hippocrates; and Dr. Winslow, who was chosen in 1616, eight Years after Dr. Gwinne, read Anatomical Lectures only. The same Difference may be seen between what these Articles direct the Divinity Professor, and what Method Dr. Holdsworth followed in his Divinity Lectures, before quoted; and so between what the Articles direct the Geometry Professor, and what Method Dr. Barrow and Dr. Hook followed in their Lectures, now printed: From all which it is plain, that the Professors altogether neglected the Direction of these Articles or Orders, as well in the Method of their Reading, as in the Manner of their Living, and therefore could never believe them to have any obligatory Force, or be of any Authority whatsoever.

Secondly, The Professors had this farther Consideration to offer, That these Articles were so far from being legally ratified, that they were never duly considered, being not so much as even consistent with themselves. For Instance, when they speak of the Times of all the Professors Readings in general, they make five Terms of Reading; but, when they speak of the particular Professors Times of Reading, they make but four Terms of Reading: But farther, they enjoin what it is impossible the Professors should comply with, because the Amount of their Incomes could never defray the Expence that their Professorships must put them to, if the Directions of these Orders be complied with, since fifty Pounds apiece is the whole of their Salaries, out of which it is impossible to support themselves, their private Servants, and likewise publick ones, for the Hall, the Kitchen, and Cellar, and, farther, for an hospitable Entertainment for Strangers; all which Expences these Articles direct: And, besides the Musick Professor's Proportion to this Charge, he must, according to these Orders, be singly at the Expence of seventy-five publick Concerts every Year of Vocal or Instrumental Musick; which, if properly performed, would so far exceed the Salary of one Professor, that it would hardly be supported by the Income of all seven. Again, a farther Proof that these Articles are not authoritative, might be taken from hence; that whereas the Professors at every one of their Elections have the Founder's Will, so much of it as concerns them, read over to them, to which they give their solemn Promise to conform themselves; so, if they were obliged to any Compliance with the Directions of these Articles, that Part of them that concerns the common Duties of all the Professors, as well as what belongs to the particular Duty of each Professor, would at least be read to them, if not a Copy thereof be directed to be given them, at their Elections; but, instead thereof, the Professors, tho' they sometimes applied to the Trustees for Liberty to inspect spect them carefully, have never been able to obtain Leave for a diligent Examination of them; these Articles then, to be sure, would never be kept from their Knowledge, if their Compliance with them was at all expected as Part of their Duty. But, lastly, The Professors were ready to appeal to the Trustees, whether they had not (at a former Meeting some few Years before, at which were present many of the Trustees, and the Professors, living in 1706) themselves disowned the Authority of these Articles. The Trustees, not many Years before, held a grand Committee within Gresham-College, in the Musick Professor's Lodgings, about the Affair of rebuilding the College; at which Meeting, upon some Discourse then arising, Part of these Articles were directed to be read; whereupon the Professors then present asked of the Trustees, whether these Articles had ever been signed by all the first Professors, or whether they were legally ratified by the first Trustees? To which the Trustees answered, Not that they knew of; but said, that they were produced as Papers that were very antient. And this was the Substance of what the Professors had to except against these pretended Orders.

The Result of all these Complaints and Hearings ended in a fair Justification of the Professors. The Trustees, not long after, made an Order, that the Professors Salaries should be constantly paid them one Year under another, without troubling the Committee from Time to Time for particular Orders. And, in the Year 1719, upon the Professors petitioning, that the Year's Arrear then remaining might be discharged, the Trustees, after some Debate, came to a Resolution, that, tho' the Exchange brought them in Debt, yet that should not tend to the Prejudice of the Professors, but the Inconvenience thereof lie on the City and Company of Mercers; wherefore they then ordered the immediate Payment of the said Arrear, and that the future Payments should be made regularly, as they became due.

house.

Without the Gate, at the South-East Corner of Half-moon-alley, is a large and commodious Brick Building, called the London-Workhouse, which, by its Constitution, is partly an Hospital, and partly an House of Correction.

This Foundation is commonly ascribed to an Act of Parliament passed in the Year 1662; but, without any Disparagement to so good a Design, we more properly and truly may carry the Incorporation of this House backwards to the Year 1649, as the Reader may be convinced from the following authentick Piece, communicated by a learned Clergyman of the Church of England:
No. 69.

An Act of the Commons of England in Parliament assembled, for the Relief and Employment of the Poor, and the Punishing of Vagrants, and other disorderly Persons, within the City of London and Liberties thereof: Whereby is constituted a Corporation, or Body Politick, consisting of a President, Deputy, Treasurer, and Assistants, for the due ordering and putting in Execution the said Act.

“Whereas the Necessity, Number, and Increase of the Poor is very great within the City of London and Liberties thereof, for want of due Provision for their Relief and Employment, and thro' Neglect of the due Execution of such Laws and Statutes as have been formerly made; for Remedy whereof, and for the better Execution of the Laws and Statutes heretofore made in this Behalf, and for the further Redress of the Mischiefs intended to be hereby remedied, be it enacted by this present Parliament, and by the Authority of the same, and it is hereby enacted, That from henceforth there be and shall be a Corporation within the said City of London and Liberties thereof, consisting of a President, Deputy to the President, a Treasurer, and fifty-eight Assistants; whereof the Lord-Mayor of the said City for the Time being to be the President, and ten of the said Assistants to be of the Aldermen of the said City for the Time being, and the other fifty to be Freemen and Inhabitants of the said City, chosen out of the several Wards of the said City, two out of every Ward respectively; and that Sir John Wollaston, Isaac Pennington, Thomas Atkin, Thomas Andrews, Samuel Avery, John Bide, Thomas Vyner, Rowland Wilson, Christopher Pack, and John Detbick, Aldermen of the said City, shall be the first ten Aldermen of the present Assistants, and that Francis Waterbouse shall be the present Deputy to the President; and that Maurice Getking shall be the present Treasurer; and that James Russel, Richard Glyd, William Jeston, Tempest Milner, William Kendall, Toby Lisle, Edmund Whitwell, John Cock, Robert Mead, William Bromwich, John Everett, John Jones, John Bellamy, John Babington, Richard Garforth, Robert Tichbourne, John Perrin, Thomas Bromfield, Samuel Moyer, Dierich Host, Richard Coysh, Nicholas Corfellis, William Pennoyer, Christopher Loaves, Lawrence Steel, Richard Floyde, Thomas Jenner, Lawrence Brinley, Rice Bush, Thomas White, Benjamin Blundell, Thomas Dawney, Abraham Babington, Jacob Jurin, Edward Odling, Thomas Brightwell, James Story, John Berrisford, William Wyberd, Richard Waring, John Dodd, Walter Lee, Harman Sheaf, John Fletcher, Owen Rowe, Mark Hilsley, John Stone, and Clement Ireton, Citizens of London, shall be the other Assistants; and that the succeeding Deputy and Treasurer shall from henceforth, and from Time to Time, be eligible by the said Corporation, or any seven or more of them, yearly, on the twenty-fifth Day of June, or within twenty-eight Days then next following; and shall have hereby Power and Authority, and are hereby authorized, at any Time or Times, upon just and reasonable Cause, to amove the " said City, and Liberties thereof; and to put in Execution

 " any Law or Statute now in force, touching binding out
 " poor Children Apprentices, for " the Relief of the Poor, punishing Rogues and Beggars,

 " and for effecting the Remedies hereby intended. And it is enacted, by the Authority aforesaid,
 " That the said President and Governors, or any seven of " them, shall have Power from Time to Time to make and " constitute Orders and By-Laws, for the better relieving,
 " regulating, and setting the Poor on work, and the " apprehending and punishing of Rogues, Vagabonds,
 " and Beggars within the said City and Liberties, that
 " have not wherewith honestly to maintain themselves,

 " Orders and By-Laws shall, from Time to Time, be " presented to and allowed by the Common Council of the " said City, and by three or more of the Justices of the " upper Bench, Common Pleas, and Barons of the Exchequer.
 " And it is further enacted, by the Authority aforesaid,
 " That the Treasurer of the said Corporation for the Time " being shall once in every Year, yearly, between the " twenty-fourth Day of June and the twenty-ninth of " September, or oftner, if Need require, give a true and " perfect Account in Writing of all the Receipts, Charges,
 " and Disbursements in and about the Premises, unto the " Auditors for the Time being, appointed for taking the " Accounts of the Chamberlain and Bridge-masters of the " said City, and the said Account to remain in the " Custody of the Chamberlain of the said City. And it is " enacted, by the Authority aforesaid, That an Ordinance
 " made this present Parliament, the seventeenth Day of " December, 1647, and every Clause and Thing therein " contained, concerning any Provision and Relief for the " Poor of London, and the Liberties thereof, be and are " hereby made null and repealed. And it is enacted, by " the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful
 " to and for the said President and Governors, or seven of " them, to make Enquiry for and after any charitable Gift or " Grant heretofore given and appointed, or hereafter to be " given and appointed, to and for the Maintenance and " Relief of the Poor within the said City, and Liberties " thereof; and to act and proceed thereupon, for " discovering and reforming the Misemployment thereof,
 " in such Manner as any Commissioners for charitable Uses
 " may do by Virtue of the Statute of 43 Eliz. Cap. 4.
 " And that the said President and Governors shall and may,
 " by themselves, or such as they shall appoint under their " Common Seal, freely, and without Fees, search in any " Courts or Offices for any Records or Evidences, for the " Discovery of any Matter or Thing concerning the same.
 " And it is further enacted, That the said President and " Governors, or any twenty or more of them, being " assembled together, shall have hereby Power to chuse and " entertain all such Officers and others, as shall be needful
 " to be employed in and about the Premises, and them,
 " or any of them, from Time to Time to remove, as they " shall see Cause; and, upon the Death or Removal of " them, or any of them, to chuse others in their Places,
 " for the carrying on of this Work, and to make and give " such reasonable Allowances unto them, or any of them,
 " out of the Stock and Revenue belonging to

“to the said Corporation, as they shall think “fit. And it is enacted by the Authority afore“said, for the further Relief and employing of “the said Poor within the said City, and Liber“ties thereof, That the said President and “Governors, or any seven of them, shall “have hereby Power to erect one or more “Workhouse or Workhouses for receiving, re“lieving, and setting the Poor to Work, and “one or more House or Houses of Correction,
 “as they shall think fit, for punishing of Rogues, “Vagabonds, and Beggars. And it is further “enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if,
 “upon any Action, Suit or Plaint, to be com“menced or prosecuted by any Person or Per“sons, in any Court whatsoever, against the “said President and Governors, any of the said “Justices of the Peace hereby authorized, or “any of them, or any Person or Persons for “doing or executing any Thing by their or “any of their Order, Warrant, Command, or “Direction, or coming in to their or any of “their Aid or Assistance, in, about, or con“cerning the Premises, the Defendant or De“fendants may plead the general Issue of not “guilty, and shall and may give the special “Matter in Evidence: And if, upon Trial of
 “the Cause, it shall appear the said Defendant “or Defendants did act or do the Matter in “Question by virtue of this Act, or that the “Matter of Fact, whereupon the Issue is join“ed, was done in any other County, than “where the same Fact is laid to be done; that
 “in such Case the Jury that shall try the same “shall find the Defendant or Defendants, in “every such Action, Plaint, or Suit, not “guilty; and if, in any Action, Plaint, or “Suit, the Plaintiff or Plaintiffs become non-“suit, or suffer any Discontinuance thereof, or “Verdict shall pass against him or them, that
 “in every the said Cases the Defendant or De“fendants shall have double Costs, and all “other Advantages and Remedies, as in other “Cases where Costs by the Laws of this Realm
 “are given to Defendants. And it is further “enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all “Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Constables, and all other “Officers and Ministers of Justice, shall be “aiding and assisting to the said Corporation,
 “or any of them, and unto all such Officers
 “as shall be employed by them, for the better Ex“ecution and Performance of the said Service.”

And this at the Restoration had been found so good and useful an Institution, that, upon further Application of the City to Parliament for the more effectual Establishment and Government thereof, it was enacted, in An Act for the better Relief of the Poor of this Kingdom,

Act 13 and 14 Car. II.

The Occasion of the Increase of the Poor.

“Whereas the Necessity, Number, and con“tinual Increase of the Poor, not only within “the Cities of London and Westminster, with the “Liberties of each of them, but also through
 “the whole Kingdom of England and Dominion
 “of Wales, is very great, and exceeding bur“then some, being occasioned by reason of some “Defects in the Law concerning the settling
 “of the Poor, and for Want of a due Provision
 “of the Regulations of Relief and Employment
 “in such Parishes or Places where they are “legally settled, which doth enforce many to “turn incorrigible Rogues, and others to perish

 “for Want, together with the Neglect of the “faithful Execution of such Laws and Statutes
 “as have formerly been made for the appre“hending of Rogues and Vagabonds, and for “the Good of the Poor: For Remedy whereof,
 “and for the preventing the perishing of any
 “the Poor, whether Young or Old, for want
 “of such Supplies as are necessary, be it enacted, “(inter alia)

“That from thenceforth there be, and shall “be, one or more Corporation or Corporations, “Workhouse or Workhouses, within the City of “London, consisting of a President, a Deputy “to the President, and a Treasurer; and that “the Lord-Mayor of the City of London, for “the Time being, be President of the Corpo“ration or Corporations, Workhouse or Work-
 “houses, within the said City; and the Assistants
 “to be the Aldermen of the said City of London,
 “for the Time being, and fifty-two other Citizens “to be chosen by the Common Council of the “said City: And that the said President and “Assistants, or the major Part of them, shall
 “and may elect a Deputy-President and Trea“surer, and all other necessary Officers hereby “constituted and authorized to execute the “Powers and Offices by this Act appointed:
 “And that upon the Vacancy, by Death or o“therwise, of any Assistants, the Power to “elect, in their room, be in the said Common “Council; and the Election of the Deputy-“President or Treasurer, and all other Officers, “in the said President, and major Part of the “Assistants, as aforesaid.

Corporations or Workhouses in the City of London, their Number and Manner of Election.

“That at every Quarter-Sessions they shall “require and take an Account, in Writing, of “all the Receipts, Charges, and Disbursements
 “of the Officers and Treasurer of such Corpo“ration or Corporations, Workhouse or Work-
 “houses, how, and how many poor People “have been employed and set to work in the “Year last past, and what Stock there was,
 “and is remaining; which President, Deputy-“President, and Treasurer, for the Time being, “respectively, shall for ever hereafter, in Name
 “and Fact, be Bodies Politick and Corporate in “Law, to all Intents and Purposes, and shall “have a perpetual Succession, and may sue or “plead, or be sued and impleaded, by the “Name of the President and Governors for the “Poor of the respective Places aforementioned,
 “in all Courts and Places of Judicature within “this Kingdom, and the Dominion of Wales,
 “and the Town of Berwick upon Tweed; and by
 “that Name every of the said Corporations “shall and may, without Licence in Mortmain, “purchase or receive any Lands, Tenements, or “Hereditaments, not exceeding the yearly “Value of three thousand Pounds per Annum, of “the Gift, Alienation, or Devise of any Person “or Persons, who are hereby, without further “Licence, enabled to give the same, and any “Goods, Chattels, or Sums of Money whatsoe-

An Account of this Corporation, published
in 1713.

In November 1708, it was ordered; " That " no Child, although born within the City of " London, and Liberties thereof, should be re" ceived from any Benefactor, giving a less Sum
" than fifty Pounds; yet, that the Charity might " not be too strictly confined, it was further " ordered, that any Benefactor, giving seventy " Pounds, might put in a Child from what Place
" he thought fit; to the Intent that the Children,
" which should be so received, might not be any " Charge, but an Advantage to the House. And " in April 1710, it was ordered that the 12*d.* per " Week, before paid for Parish-Children, should " be taken off, and not be demanded after the " first of May following; both which last Orders,
" as also an Order that no Child should be taken
" in from the Executors of any Benefactor, un" less a Clause were inserted in the Will of such " Benefactor for that Purpose, have been since
" made into By-Laws, confirmed at the Sessions,
" and strictly observed.

" The House is divided into two Parts, one " Part is called the Steward's Side, where poor " Children are taken in from Benefactors giving
" 50*l.* or 70*l.* as before mentioned, and these " Children are by that Means, and their Labour,
" rather a Profit than Charge to the House; and
" on this Side are also taken in such Children as
" are a Charge to the several Parishes of this City " and Liberties to which they belong. And all " these Children are religiously educated, accord" ing to the Church of England, and are employed
" in spinning Wool, Flax, Sewing, or Knitting;
" they are dieted and cloathed, and duly taken " Care of in Sickness. They are taught to read,
" write, and cast Accompts, whereby they are " qualified for Services and honest Ways of Liveli" hood, and at their going out they have a Suit
" of Cloaths, or 20*s.* But Freemens Children " have a larger Allowance out of a Benefaction
" directed to be appropriated to that Purpose.

" And the other Part of the Workhouse is " called the Keeper's Side, where Vagabonds,
" Beggars, Pilfering and other Vagrants, Leud,
" Idle, and Disorderly Persons, (duly committed)
" have such Relief as is proper for them, and are " employed in beating Hemp, picking Oakum,
" or washing Linen. And these Vagrants and " Beggars, &c. after they have been some Time
" confined to hard Labour, and been taught
" thereby how to maintain themselves honestly,
" are sent to their respective Settlements, as the " Law directs. So that from Easter 1700, to " Easter 1713, the Number of Vagrants, Beg" gars, &c. discharged, is 5555; during which " Time, there died 54, and at Easter last there " remained 40.

" The Number of Children put out Appren" tices * during the said Time, is 1243; during " which Time there died 118, and at Easter
" 1713 there remained 179.

* N. B. This has been discontinued for five Years, owing to the want of a sufficient Fund to support it.

" The Children, and all others in the Work" house, are required to attend Divine Service

" Morning and Evening, which is regularly and " duly performed in a convenient Place of the " House, set apart for that Purpose. But it " would take up more room than can be spared
" in a brief Account, to set down particularly the " Orders relating to the Christian Education of " the Children, and how they are cloathed, fed,
" and taught, and brought up to write, and the " exact Government and Discipline of the House,
" which afford together one of the most pleasing
" and agreeable Sights that a Man can behold,
" and than which nothing of this Nature can
" tend to inspire a Man with more Humanity
" and Love, or more provoke him to speak well
" of, and assist the Work by all Means in his " Power. The great Charity of the Work, and " the Good of which it is productive in all its " Parts to the Publick, has encouraged the Com" mon Council, from Time to Time, as there " has been Occasion, readily to comply with the " said Act of Parliament, and to levy Money
" for its Support. But the Money so raised could " not have brought the Work to that Degree of " Perfection and Usefulness, unless it had been " assisted with many private and great Charities,
" which have amounted to about 15000*l.* The " yearly Charge of the said House being about " 2400*l.* per Annum, over and beyond what the " Children earn, and over and above their Estate,
" which, besides the House itself, amounts to no " more than 220*l.* per Annum. This Estate was " given purely with regard to the poor Children.
" And the great and constant Care and Applica" tion of the Governors, and their wise and pru" dent Management thereof, and of all the " Branches of this Charity, have effectually an" swered the Ends and Design of it; which can" not be better evinced and demonstrated, than
" by briefly setting forth the Substance of the " Reports of several Committees appointed by
" the Common Council which relate thereto,
" and were made by them from Time to Time
" to the Common Council, which are as follow,
" viz.

" August 26, 1702. The Committee report; they " have examined the Management of the Money for" merly advanced, and do find that the same hath
" been managed with the utmost Care, Application;
" and Frugality, and that there would have been an " Occasion for a Supply long since, but for many con" siderable Charities.

" April, 30, 1706. The Committee report, the " Corporation have taken great Care and Pains in " carrying on the Work, and have kept the Accompts
" of all the Receipts and Payments very fair and " just, an Abstract whereof they then laid before the " Common Council.

" March 22, 1708. The Committee say, they " have viewed the several Apartments, and the Me" thod used in employing the Children and others com" mitted there to Work, according to their several " Capacities and Abilities, and do well approve of
" the same.

" June 22, 1710. The Committee report, they " have inspected the Accounts, and enquired how the " Moneys, already raised for the Use of the Poor,
" have been expended, and are very well satisfied with
" the great Frugality of the President and Gover-
" ners; that they have also inspected the Govern" ment

"ment of the Corporation, and their Method of "employing and setting to Work those under their "Care, as an Hospital for Relief of necessitous poor "Children sent from several Parishes, and as a "Workhouse for the Correction and Punishment of "Rogues, &c. And well approved of the same.

"November 1712. The Committee report,
 "they have inspected the Management of the Presi"dent and Governors for the Poor, and enquired
 "how the Moneys last granted for the Use of the Poor
 "have been expended, and are well satisfied with "their Frugality in Disposal of the same.

"If any thing need to be added to shew the "Weight these Reports ought to have with all "good Citizens; it may be truly said, they were "from Time to Time made by such as were in"ferior to none in Abilities and Skill in publick
 "Business, as well as in Integrity.

"Thus much is thought fit to be said, not "only with respect to the Justice due to the Go"vernors, but also with respect to the Honour
 "and Regard that is due to the Common Coun"cil, who have all along, from Time to Time,
 "had so just and laudable a Concern for the Dis"charge of the Trust reposed in them by their "Fellow-Citizens, as not to suffer any new Sum "of Money to be raised on them, before they "have seen how the former Moneys granted have "been applied.

"The Charge of the Poor has been complain"ed of for many Ages; and in the said Act;
 "the same is said to be very great, and exceed"ing burthensome; and the Parliament thought
 "the erecting Corporations for their Relief
 "and Employment a necessary Means for Re"medy thereof, and, in all likelihood, future
 "Ages will not find a better. We have seen
 "by the Care of the City in putting the said
 "Act in Execution, that in these few Years
 "5555 Vagabonds, Common Beggars, Pilfer-
 "ing and other Vagrants, Leud, Idle, and "Disorderly Persons have been punished with "hard Labour. And how great and lasting a "Benefit and Advantage this hath, and must be,
 "not only to the Persons themselves, and to "their Relations, but also to the Publick, let "any intelligent Citizen judge. And if this "Part of the Design be so necessary and useful,
 "how much more excellent and more useful
 "and beneficial must be the other Part of the "Design of the Workhouse, which, according "to the said Act, is for a due Provision of Relief
 "and Employment of Poor Children, and to prevent "their Perishing for Want! Add to this, the "inestimable Benefit of their being nurtured
 "and brought up in a religious Education,
 "and taught to work as soon as they are "able, whereby they at present help to support "themselves, and whereby they are fitted for "honest Trades and Services, and are not only "kept from Perishing for Want, but from "Pilfering, and turning Vagabonds and in"corrigible Rogues, and made useful Members
 "of the Community: And great must needs
 "have been the Advantage of having above
 "1000 poor necessitous Children so brought "up, and put out into the World. And sup"pose they had been otherwise kept from pe"rishing for Want, yet great would have been
 "the Loss of their honest Labour and Industry,

"at least to themselves; and greater would have "been the Evil, if they had followed the wicked
 "Practices their miserable Condition exposed
 "them to: So that the real Truth of the Mat"ter seems to be this, That if the Poor are not "taken in to one Side of the House, when "they are young, it's great odds but they will "deserve to be sent to the other, when they are
 "grown up."

Since the first publishing the foregoing Account, there has been Application made to the Common Council of the City of London, for a further Supply, which has been granted; as in A.D. 1720
 the Year 1720, the Sum of 2443 £ . 14s.

In the Year 1731, a further Supply was re- A.D. 1731 quested, and the Committee reported, That on Examination they were very well satisfied of the good Management of the said President and Governors in the Disposal of the Money formerly granted, and are of Opinion they should have a further Supply of 2443 £ . 14s. — which was accordingly granted.

Since the Year 1713 to Lady-day 1744, A.D. 1744
 the Number of Children put out Apprentices is 1504; during which Time there have died 204; and at Easter 1744 there remained 111.

The Number of Vagrants, Beggars, &c. discharged since Lady-day 1713, to Lady-day 1744, is 14487; during which Time there died 167;
 remained at Lady-day 1744, 16. Which Work could not be carried on without the Assistance of private Benefactions, which have amounted to about 18000 Pounds.

At Michaelmas, 1751, the Governors of this House came to a Resolution, That no more Children, paid for by the Parishes to whom they belong, be taken into this House: And accordingly on Lady-Day, 1752, delivered the above forty-one to their respective Parishes and Friends;
 and have since that Time resolved to conform strictly to the Act of Parliament of the 13th and 14th of Charles II. by taking into their Care such Children only as are committed by the Magistrates of this City, found begging in the Streets, pilfering on the Keys, or lying about in Glas-
 Houses, and other uninhabited Places, those fatal Receptacles of all Kinds of Wickedness; and have now the Satisfaction to acquaint the Publick, that since that Time there have been thus committed ninety-one Children.

Who are educated according to the Usage of the Church of England, and are taught to read and write, Part of the Day being appropriated for that Purpose; the rest of their Time is spent in weaving Nets for the British Fishery, Sewing, Knitting, and other Labour, by which they are qualified for Service and honest Employments, and put forth Apprentices or Servants.

N. B. A Boy knits twenty-five Yards of this Netting per Week, at eighteen Pence per twenty Yards; and it is agreed to give a Penny per Week to every Boy that knits above twenty-four Yards, as an Encouragement for Industry. From the fourth of February to the twenty-eighth of August, in all twenty-nine Weeks, were knit ten thousand five hundred and twenty-nine Yards, i. e. three hundred and sixty-two Yards per Week.

Vagabonds, sturdy Beggars, lewd Street-walkers, pilfering and other Vagrants, and disorderly Persons, duly committed in the seven Years last past, were two thousand six hundred and eighty-six, and twelve remaining at Lady-Day, 1747.

These Vagabonds, Beggars, &c. have proper Relief, and are employed in beating Hemp and washing Linen; who, by God's Blessing and these Means, have been brought to a Sense of their Crimes; and many of them have reformed, and used an honest Industry afterwards for their Livelihoods.

Of the Children here educated since the Year 1701, there have been discharged and placed forth Apprentices to Officers of Ships, to Trades, and to Services in several good Families, besides those mentioned in the other Account, three thousand; and within that Time twenty thousand eight hundred and fifty-four Vagabonds, Beggars, &c. among which were several notorious Impostors, pretending to be lame, dumb, and blind, have been committed and punished with Confinement and hard Labour, in the Manner above-mentioned.

Of the Children there have died three hundred and twenty-six, and of the Vagabonds two hundred and forty-two.

By the afore-mentioned Act of Parliament, Power is granted to the President and Governors of this Corporation, without Licence in Mortmain, to purchase or receive any Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, not exceeding the yearly Value of three thousand Pounds, of the Gift, Alienation, or Devise of any Person or Persons, and any Goods, Chattels, or Sums of Money whatsoever, to be applied to the Uses afore-said. But, as yet, the present real Estate belonging to the said Corporation, besides the Ground on which the Workhouse is situate, amounts to little more than one hundred Pounds per Annum; and the necessary Expence, far exceeding the yearly Income, is discharged by a Rate on the several Inhabitants of the City of London, not having received, within these seven Years past, above the Sum of seven hundred and seventy Pounds in Benefactions; whereby the further good Designs intended by this Charity are prevented. It is therefore humbly hoped, good and well-disposed Persons will be pleased to encourage and charitably assist this most useful and beneficial Work; which is now appropriated solely to the Support of such unhappy distressed Objects, as must otherwise inevitably perish, having neither Friends, nor any Parishes to which they can make a proper Claim, and, being so young, are not able to support themselves, the greatest Part being from seven to twelve Years of Age: By which Means these poor destitute Children will be educated, maintained, and employed, and kept from the Distress and Miseries those suffer who want such an Education; and, in Time, become useful Members of the Community, instead of a Terror to the Inhabitants of this City; whilst pilfering and other strolling Vagrants, sturdy Beggars, lewd Night-Walkers, and such other idle disorderly Persons, being punished with Confinement and hard Labour, may be thereby corrected, restrained, and reformed.

The Design and Intention of the Governors of the said Workhouse is to employ all the poor Children, Beggars, Vagrants, and other idle and disorderly Persons that are, or can be found, within the said City of London, and the Liberties thereof.

The Design and Intention of it, published in 1704.

I. The poor Children are,

1. Such for whom no Settlement can by Law be provided.
2. Such whose poor Friends are much oppressed by a great Charge of Children, or are reduced by Misfortunes to such Circumstances that they cannot provide for them themselves.
3. Such who are the Children of Seamen and Soldiers in the Queen's Service, many of whom lose their Lives therein, or are otherwise rendered incapable of providing for their Wives, Children, and Families.
4. Such who are commonly known by the Name of the Black Guard, who too commonly live upon pilfering Sugar and Tobacco on the Keys, and afterwards become Pick-pockets and House-breakers, many of whom, at last, have received their due Rewards, and made their Exits at the Gallows; which are now kept to work, and get their Livings honestly in the said Workhouse.
5. Many Parish Children.

All these, being taken into the said Workhouse, are there taught to read and write, and kept to work, until they are qualified to be put out to be Apprentices, and for the Sea-Services, or otherwise disposed.

II. The Beggars and Vagrants. They are those sturdy and insolent Men and Women, who live in the Skirts and Out-parts of this City, and Places contiguous thereto, and other Stragglers and Wanderers, who too frequently resort to this City; which, when apprehended and taken, are in the said Workhouse kept to hard

hard Work and Labour, until they are by Law discharged therefrom.

III. The idle and disorderly Persons are those Rogues and vagrant Men which are there kept until they are put into their Country's Service by Sea and Land; and those ill Women which are taken up in the Streets, debauching the Youth, and others of this City, many of which, rather than be continued to Work and Labour, voluntarily transport themselves to the Western Plantations, whereby this City and Nation is rid of them.

In building for these convenient Houses, Work-Rooms, paying Officers and Servants, and in providing Meat, Drink, Washing, Lodging, Cloaths, and all other Necessaries, and to put them out Apprentices, great Sums of Money are yearly expended; besides what they severally earn by their own Labour, and besides what hath been already raised by the Common Council of this City.

The Consideration whereof is earnestly recommended to all charitable Persons, who are Well-Wishers to Honour, Virtue, and Morality, that they will vouchsafe, by their Wills or otherwise, to give their Aid and Assistance for the propagating and continuing this great Work of Charity, which the Governors of the said Corporation have, by their Care, Diligence, and Industry, already made so good a Proficiency in, and which may prevent the Ruin of many idle and disorderly Persons for the future.

Note, There are in the Workhouse feldom less than four hundred Children at work, besides the grown Beggars, Vagrants, and other idle and disorderly Persons, who are there kept to hard Labour.

The new Building.

Some Years ago the Governors built a very strong and useful Building, and of large Dimensions, containing, besides other Apartments, three long Rooms or Galleries, one over another, for Workhouses, which are all filled with Boys and Girls at work, some knitting, most spinning of Wool; and a convenient Number of Women and Men teaching and overseeing them; Fires burning in the Chimnies in the Winter-Time, to keep the Rooms and the Children warm. And they intend, if they get Money, to pull down the rest of the old Houses, where, now also, the Poor and the Vagrants are kept at their several Works, and to build a fair Court answerable to the foresaid new Building, which is on the South Side thereof.

It is to be wondered at, how all Things are contrived here, to the best Advantage for Thrift and good Husbandry, to maintain in Cloaths and Food such a vast Number as live and are harboured here. Some are Taylors, some Shoemakers, some knit Stockings. They brew their own Drink, having, in the new Building, erected a large and convenient Brewhouse, and over that a Malthouse. They killed their own Beef and Mutton, and have for that Purpose a Slaughterhouse; but since they find it better Husbandry to buy their Meat of the Butcher. And, in Case of Sicknes, broken Limbs, or Sores, or Wounds, they have Advice, Physic, and Surgery gratis.

Their Diet.

Their daily Food is plain, but wholesome and sufficient. They have Breakfasts, Dinners, and Suppers every Day in the Week, and a constant set Allowance each Day. Their Stint each Meal for Bread, is four Ounces; for Cheese, an Ounce and an Half; for Butter, an Ounce; for Small-beer what is sufficient, not exceeding a Pint at a Time, of seven Shillings a Barrel.

Their Breakfast, Sundays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, is Bread and Cheese, or Bread and Butter, and Beer. On Mondays, a Pint of Pease-pottage, with Bread and Beer. On Tuesdays, a Plumb-pudding Pie, of nine Ounces, and Beer. On Wednesdays, a Pint of Frumenty. On Friday, a Pint of Barley-broth, and Bread. On Saturday, a plain Flour Suet-dumpling, with Beer.

Their Supper is always the same; that is, to each four Ounces of Bread, one Ounce and Half of Cheese, or one Ounce of Butter, and Beer sufficient.

The Habit of the Children is all the same, being made of Ruffet Cloth, and a round Badge worn upon their Breast, representing a poor Boy and a Sheep; the Motto, God's Providence is our Inheritance.

They have also a large Room, which serves them both for a Chapel and a Dining-Room. They go to Prayers at Six in the Morning, and at Six at Night, and are duly taught the Catechism, and have a Minister that attendeth hereupon; and on Sundays they all go to Church at Great St. Helen's, where is a convenient Seat for them.

The Power invested in this Corporation, and its Benefit to the Publick, and Reputation of its Governors, may be in Part collected from the following Testimonies:

An Order, published in the Postman, December 15, 1704, by the President and Governors for the Poor of London, viz.

"Whereas the Streets and Passages of this City are generally at this Time of the Year much annoyed with Rogues, Vagabonds, and sturdy Beggars; for Prevention hereof for the future, the President and Governors of the Poor of the City of London do give Notice, That, if any Overseer for the Poor, Constable, Beadle, Marshal's Man, Warder, or other Person, shall apprehend any Rogue, Vagabond, or sturdy Beggar, and bring them before any Justices of the Peace, so that they may be brought and delivered to and received by the Keeper of the Workhouse, he shall receive twelve Pence for every such."

An Order for taking up idle People, from the Governors of this House.

A Presentment of the Grand Jury, May 8, 1706, at Justice-Hall in the Old-Bailey.

Wherein they represented to that honourable Court, "That, in attending the Business of that Sessions, they did not find any of those young Criminals which formerly were used to be brought before them, and that their Attendance there was very short; which they were sensible was owing, in a great Measure, if not entirely, to the Workhouse erected in the City, which received therein all poor and vagrant Children, which lay up and down in the Streets, commonly called by the Name of the Black Fewer young Criminals by Means of this Workhouse.

Wherefore they returned their hearty Thanks to that honourable Court, and the rest of the Governors of that House, for their great Pains therein, &c."

The Speech of John Trusty, aged eleven Years, a poor Boy belonging to the Workhouse of the Corporation for the Poor of the City of London, to her Sacred Majesty Queen Anne, upon her coming into the City, to dine at the Guildhall, on Thursday, October 29, 1702, being the Lord-Mayor's Day.

"May it please your most excellent Majesty to pardon this great Presumption in us poor Children, who throw ourselves at your Royal Feet, among the rest of your glad Subjects, that here in Crowds appear to behold your Sacred Majesty.

"We, Madam, have no Fathers, no Mothers, no Friends; or, which is next to none, those who, through their extreme Poverty, cannot help us: * God's Providence is our Inheritance. All the Support we have is from the unexhausted Charities of your loyal Citizens of London, and other your good Subjects, and the pious Care of our Governors, who are now teaching our little Hands to work, and our Fingers to spin.

"* These Threads, Madam, are some of the early Fruits of our Industry. We are all daily employed on the Staple Manufacture of England, learning betimes to be useful to the World. And there seemed nothing wanting to compleat our Happiness, but the Opportunity which this Day affords us, of being the Objects of your tender Pity and Compassion. One gracious Smile from your Majesty on this new Foundation will make us live—And live to call you Blessed.

"And may God Almighty long preserve your Majesty, for the Good of these your Kingdoms, and your Royal Confort the Prince. So pray we, your little Children: And let all your People say, Amen.

We shall conclude our Account of this good Foundation with an Extract and Encomium from a Sermon preached by the Right Reverend the Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, on Easter-Monday, Anno 1702, before the Governors of the Hospitals:

"I must not forget another publick Charity of admirable Use, and which, for that Reason, deserveth the utmost Encouragement; I mean, the Workhouse erected for employing poor Children, and such distressed vagrant Children as are found within the City and the Liberties thereof. This, by the Industry of the Presidents and Governors of the Poor of the City, hath been carried so far, that two hundred and sixty-one Children, of several Parishes, remained in the Workhouse this Year, and seventy-one have since been received. Of Vagrants there remained seventy-one; and eighty-nine have since been taken in. All these, according to their Ages and Conditions, are clothed, and fed, and instructed in the Principles of Religion, and in honest Arts and Trades. They are inured to Labour, kept cleanly, and disposed to Honesty by Encouragement and Discipline. I have not Time to say of what wonderful Benefit these Places are, and may be, to the Publick, if they can happily fall into the right Management of them; where the Refuse of Mankind, they that would otherwise be the Bane and Scandal of the Commonwealth, are rescued from Perdition, and made useful Members of it. But it is hardly possible for Men to be better employed than in this Work, or to be more charitable than in their Contributions towards it. And may it please Almighty God to enable those that undertake it to surmount all the Difficulties that cross their Designs. They will then have, what one would wish to every good and publick-spirited Man, the Comforts of their Labours in this Life; and, when that is at an End, those Labours will conduct them to the Joys of that above, and that will for ever remain."

CHAP. XI.

BREAD-STREET WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey. Derivation of its Name. Bounds. Present State. Parishes and Churches. Cordwainers-Hall. Gerard's-Hall Inn. Compter removed. Act of Common Council. Goldsmiths-Row.

THIS Ward takes its Name from the principal Street therein, called Bread-Street; which, in old Time, was the Bread-market.

It appeareth by Records, that in the Year 1302, which was the thirtieth of Edward I. the Bakers of London were bounden to sell no Bread in their Shops or Houses, but in the Market: And that they should have four Hallmotes in the Year, at four several Terms, to determine Enormities belonging to the said Company.

Bread-street Ward begins in Cheapside on the North, and runs on the South Side from where the Standard to where the great Cross formerly stood. On the South it extends in Watling-street up almost to the House next to St. Augustin's Church on the North Side; and on the South Side, up to the Old Change; and down the same, at the East Side, by the West End of Maiden-lane, or Distaff-lane, to Knightriders-street, or, as they call that Part thereof, Old Fish-street; and all the North Side of the said Old Fish-street, till over-against the Trinity-church, and Trinity-lane.

It is encompassed on the North and North-West by the Ward of Farringdon within, on the East by Cordwainers-Ward, on the South by Queenhithe-Ward, and on the West by Castle-Baynard-Ward.

Its Name.

Bounds.

Within this Compass is Bread-street, which, as said above, begins in Cheapside or West-Cheap, and gives Name to the whole Ward. This Street runs from almost where the Standard stood in Cheapside, or facing Wood-street, down Southward cross Watling-street to Knightriders-street, where it endeth. This Bread-street is wholly on both Sides of this Ward, as is also a Part of Basing-lane, on the East Side thereof.

From the North-West Extremity of this Ward there is another Street, called Friday-street. It begins in West-Cheap, and runneth down South thro' Watling-street to Knightriders-street, or Old Fish-street. This Friday-street is of Bread-street Ward, on the East Side, from over-against the North-East Corner of St. Matthew's Church; and on the West Side, from the South Corner of the said Church, down, as aforesaid, to Old Fish-street.

In this Friday-street, on the West Side thereof, is a Lane, commonly called Maiden-lane, or Distaff-lane, corruptly from Distar-lane, which runneth West into the Old Change: And in this Lane is also another Lane, on the South Side thereof, likewise called Distar-lane, which runneth down to Knightriders-street, or Old Fish-street. These are the Bounds of the whole Ward.

Now for the present State of this Ward.

Present
State.

The principal Streets and Places in this Ward are, Watling-street, Bread-street, Friday-street, Distaff-lane, Basing-lane, with the East Side of the Old Change, from the Corner of St. Austin's Gate to Old Fish-street; and the North Side of Old Fish-street and Trinity-lane, with Part of the South Side of Cheapside, betwixt Friday-street and St. Mary le Bow Church.

Watling-street is a great Thorough-fare, and has good Buildings in it, which are very well inhabited by great Dealers, chiefly by wholesale. This Street begins two or three Houses beyond St. Austin's Church on the West, and runs Eastward through the Heart of this and Cordwainer Ward, almost to St. Anthony, alias St. Antholine's Church, where Budge-row begins, and runs into Canon-street, in Wallbrook Ward. In the Part of this Street belonging to this Ward are these Places, beginning by St. Austin's Church, viz. St. John Evangelist Church-yard, seated in the East-Side Corner of Friday-street, the Church not being rebuilt, but the Parish united to that of Allhallows Bread-street; and the Ground on which this Church stood, being inclosed, serves as a Burying-Place for the Inhabitants, and has a handsome Pair of Iron Gates before it.

Bread-street is a good open Street, well built, and inhabited by great Dealers, both by wholesale and retail, Hop-Merchants, Grocers, and others. It begins at Cheapside on the North, and runs Southwards to Old Fish-street, next to Trinity-lane, crossing Watling-street. The Courts in this Street, beginning next Cheapside, are Black-spread-eagle-court, but small, with a Free-stone Pavement; has a very good House at the upper End. Planners-court, indifferent large, but ordinary. Star-court, very large, with an open Passage for a Cart, is well built and inhabited. Three-Cups Inn, large, well built, and of a great Trade for Country Waggon and Carriers. White-cock-court, a handsome square Place, well built, and inhabited by wholesale Dealers.

Basing-lane, or Bakeing-lane, from having the King's Bakehouse, or some other great Bakehouse, there formerly, in 20 Richard II. a handsome open Street, with good Buildings: Of this Lane about half is in this Ward.

In this Lane is Gerard's Hall, now made use of for an Inn.

Red-lion-court has a Passage into Watling-street, already taken Notice of; and near the aforesaid Inn is Horn-alley, which is but small and ordinary.

Friday-street comes out of Cheapside, and runs South into Old Fish-street, and in its Passage crosses Watling-street: This Street is well built, and inhabited chiefly by Haberdashers, and other wholesale Dealers. In this Street are these Places; White-horse Inn, large, and of a good Resort. Bell Inn, of good Resort and Trade. Blue-boar-court, an open Place, also inhabited by wholesale Dealers. Angel-court, but ordinary, with an open Passage for Carts. Saracen's-head Inn, large, and of a great Resort and Trade.

St. Margaret Moses Church was seated on the East Side of this Street, towards Old Fish-street, burnt in the Fire of London, not rebuilt, but the Parish is united to St. Mildred's Bread-street; and the Place where this Church stood is inclosed for a Burial-Place for the Inhabitants.

Great Distaff or Distar-lane comes out of the Old Change, and runs up to Bread-street, against Basing-lane, crossing Friday-street on the South Side.

Places of Name in this Lane: Buck's-head-court, a small Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. Cordwainers or Shoemakers-Hall, a handsome Building, seated opposite to Little Distaff-lane, which is of no great Account, and runs into Old Fish-street. And in this Lane is Dolphin-court, as also Sugar-loaf-court, both small and ordinary.

Old Fish-street has the North Side in this Ward, the other Side in Queenhithe Ward.

Trinity-lane has also the North Part in this Ward, the other in Queenhithe Ward.

The Old Change has but a small Part in this Ward, viz. the East Side, from Watling-street Corner to Old Fish-street; the other Part in the Ward of Faringdon within and Castle-Baynard.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and thirty Watchmen.

The Jury returned by the Inquest for the Ward are to serve in the several Courts at Guild-hall in the Month of April.

This Ward hath an Alderman, his Deputy, and twelve more Common-Councilmen, sixteen Constables, eight Scavengers, thirteen Wardmote-Inquest-Men, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at thirty-seven Pounds, and in the Exchequer at thirty-eight Pounds eighteen Shillings and two Pence.

The Alderman is the Right Honourable Stephen Theodore Janssen, Esq; Lord-Mayor. The Common-

mon-Councilmen are, Mr. Robert Cadge, Deputy, Mr. John Sedgwick, Mr. Anthony Plank, Mr. William Woolley, Mr. John Moorey, Mr. Thomas Skynner, Mr. William Robinson, Mr. Edward Say, Mr. Thomas Smith, Mr. Jonathan Barnard, Mr. John Twyne, and Mr. Edward Barwick.

The remarkable Things in this Ward are,

Parishes.

First, Four Parishes; 1. Allhallows Bread-street, 2. St. Mildred's Bread-street, 3. St. John the Evangelist, and, 4. St. Margaret Moses; but only two Parish Churches, dedicated, 1. to Allhallows or All-Saints, and, 2. the other to St. Mildred: Of which hereafter in the Parochial History.

Cordwainers-Hall.

Secondly, Cordwainers-Hall or Shoemakers-Hall, situate on the North Side of Great Distaff-lane, is a handsome Brick Building, and convenient within. The large Hall is adorned with the Pictures of King William III. and Queen Mary his Consort.

Of these Cordwainers Stow has read, that, since the fifth of Richard II. (when he took to Wife Anne, Daughter to Wenceslaus, King of Bohemia) by her Example the English People had used piked Shoes, tied to their Knees with filken Laces, or Chains of Silver and gilt. Wherefore in the fourth of Edward IV. it was ordained and proclaimed, That Beaks of Shoes and Boots should not pass the Length of two Inches, upon Pain of Curfing by the Clergy, and by Parliament to pay twenty Shillings for every Pair. And every Cordwainer that shod any Man or Woman on the Sunday, to pay thirty Shillings. See Page 204.

Gerard's-Hall Inn.

Thirdly, On the South Side of Basing-lane is a great House, built of old Time upon arched Vaults, and with arched Gates of Stone, brought from Caen in Normandy. It is now an Inn of good Repute, and the arched Vaults, supported by sixteen Pillars, are a great Curiosity.

Stow says, in his Time this was a common Hostery, corruptly then and now called Gerard's-Hall, from a Giant said to have dwelled there.

In the high-roofed Hall of this House some Time stood a large Fir-Pole, which reached to the Roof thereof, and was said to be one of the Staves that Gerard the Giant used in the Wars to run withal. There stood also a Ladder of the same Length, which, as they said, served to ascend to the Top of the Staff. But Stow takes all this to be a Fable, as undoubtedly it was; nor does he believe that any one of the Name of Gerard lived there. "I read, says he, that John Gisors, Mayor of London, in the Year 1245, was Owner thereof; and that Sir John Gisors, Knight, Mayor of London, and Constable of the Tower, 1311, and divers others of that Name and Family, since that Time, owned it: For I read that William Gisors was one of the Sheriffs in 1329: More, that John Gisors had Issue Henry and John, which John had Issue Thomas; which Thomas deceasing in the Year 1358, left unto his Son Thomas his Messuage called Gisor's-Hall, in the Parish of St. Mildred in Bread-street. John Gisors made a Feoffment thereof 1386, &c. So that it appeareth, that this Gisor's-Hall of late Time, by Corruption, hath been called

No. 70.

Gerard's-Hall for Gisor's-Hall; as Bosoms-Inn for Blossoms-Inn, Bevis Marks for Buries Marks, Mark-lane for Mart-lane, Beliter-lane for Belzetters-lane, Gutter-lane for Guthuruns-lane, Cry or Cre-Church for Christ-Church, St. Michel in the Quern for St. Michel at Corn, and such others. Out of this Gisor's-Hall, at the first Building thereof, were made divers arched Doors, yet to be seen, which seem not sufficient for any great Monster, or other than Men of common Stature, to pass through. The Pole in the Hall might be used in old Time, as then the Custom was in every Parish, to be set up in the Street in the Summer as a May-Pole, before the principal Hall or House in the Parish or Street; and to stand in the Hall before the Shrine, decked with Holly and Ivy, at the Feast of Christmas. The Ladder served for the decking of the May-Pole and Roof of the Hall." Thus much for Gisor's-Hall, and for that Side of Bread-street, may suffice.

On the West Side of Bread-street, amongst divers fair and large Houses for Merchants, and Inns for Passengers, was a Prison-House pertaining to the Sheriffs of London, called the Compter in Bread-street. But, in the Year 1555, the Prisoners were removed from thence to another new Compter in Wood-street, provided by the City's Purchase, and built for that Purpose. See Page 257. The Cause of which Remove was this; Richard Husband, Pastelar, Keeper of this Compter in Bread-street, being a wilful and head-strong Man, dealt, for his own Advantage, hard with the Prisoners under his Charge; having also Servants, such as himself liked best for their bad Usage, and would not for any Complaint be reformed. Whereupon, in the Year 1550, Sir Rowland Hill being Mayor, by the Assent of a Court of Aldermen, he was sent to the Jail of Newgate, for the cruel handling of his Prisoners; and it was commanded to the Keeper, to set those Irons on his Legs which are called the Widows Alms. These he wore from Thursday till Sunday in the Afternoon; and, being by a Court of Aldermen released on the Tuesday, was bound in an hundred Marks, to observe from thenceforth an Act made by the Common Council, for the ordering of Prisoners in the Compters. All which notwithstanding, he continued as afore, and could not be reformed, till this Remove of the Prisoners; for the House in Bread-street was his own by Lease, or otherwise, so that he could not be put from it. Such Jailers, buying their Offices, will deal hardly with pitiful Prisoners.

An Abstract of an Act of Common Council, held September 19, in the third and fourth Years of Philip and Mary, for the removing of the Compter Prison out of Bread-street into Great Wood-street.

"By Reason of divers Hindrances, Injuries, Extremities, and Displeasures, done unto the Prisoners in Bread-street Compter, by the Keepers of the same, who, hiring the House of the Goldsmiths Company, would not many Times suffer the Sheriffs of London, who stand charged with the Prisoners, to use them so well as they had

“ had proposed; whereby the City hath been “ slandered, Law and good Orders broken, and “ poor Prisoners too much abused: Therefore “ was the Prison removed to a House belonging “ to the City, situate in Great Wood-street, where “ the Sheriff and his Officers were to keep their “ Courts, &c. as they had before used in Bread- “ street. At which Time it was also enacted, “ that the said Compter in Wood-street should “ never hereafter, for any Cause whatso“ ever, be let out to any other Use or Pe-“ son, &c.”

Goldsmiths-
Row.

Fourthly, Among the Monuments of Antiquity to be mentioned in this Ward, we must not omit the most beautiful Frame and Front of fair Houses and Shops that were within the Walls of London, or elsewhere in England, commonly called Goldsmiths-Row, betwixt Bread-street End and the Cross in Cheap, but within this Bread-street Ward. The same was built by Thomas Wood, Goldsmith, one of the Sheriffs of London in the Year 1491. It contained in Number ten Dwelling-Houses and fourteen Shops, all in one Frame, uniformly built four Stories high, beautified towards the Street with the Goldsmiths-Arms, and the Likeness of Woodmen, in Memory of his Name, riding on monstrous Beasts; all which were cast in Lead, richly painted over and gilt. These he gave to the Goldsmiths, with Stocks of Money to be lent to young Men having those Shops, &c. This said Front was again new painted and gilt over in the Year 1594, Sir Richard Martin being then Mayor, and keeping his Mayoralty in one of them; and serving out the Time of Cutbert Buckle, in that Office, from the second of July till the twenty-eighth of October.

The Goldsmiths kept their Shops and Trade in West-Cheap from antient Times, even before the Days of King Edward III. unto the Times of King Charles I. (see Page 301): And the Exchange for the King's Coin was not far off the Place yet called the Old-Change, as appears by this Record, shewing not only the Place of the Goldsmiths Habitation, but their Occupation and Business about the Coin and Plate.

Upon the Goldsmiths Petition, exhibited to King Edward III. and his Council in Parliament, holden at Westminster in the first of his Reign, shewing, “ That no private Merchant nor Stranger heretofore were wont to bring into this “ Land any Money coined, but Plate of Silver “ to exchange for our Coin. And that it had “ been also ordained, that all who were of the “ Goldsmiths Trade were to sit in their Shops
 “ in the high Street of Cheap: And that no “ Silver in Plate, nor Vessel of Gold or Silver, “ ought to be sold in the City of London, except “ at or in the Exchange, or in Cheapside, among “ the Goldsmiths, and that publickly; to the “ End that the People of the said Trade might “ inform themselves, whether the Seller came “ lawfully by such Vessel or not. But that now
 “ of late the said Merchants, as well Private as “ Strangers, brought from foreign Countries
 “ into this Nation counterfeit Sterling, whereof
 “ the Pound was not worth above sixteen Sols of “ the right Sterling; and of this Money none “ could know the true Value, but by melting it “ down. And also that many of the said Trade

 “ of Goldsmiths kept Shops in obscure Turnings,
 “ and By-Lanes and Streets, and did buy Vessels
 “ of Gold and Silver secretly, without enquiring
 “ whether such Vessel were stolen or lawfully “ come by; and, immediately melting it down,
 “ did make it into Plate, and sell it to Merchants
 “ trading beyond Sea, that it might be exported.
 “ And so they made false Work of Gold and “ Silver, as Bracelets, Lockets, Rings, and “ other Jewels; in which they set Glasse of divers “ Colours, counterfeiting right Stones, and put “ more Alloy in the Silver than they ought;
 “ which they sold to such as had no Skill in such “ Things.

“ And that the Cutlers, in their Work-houses, “ covered Tin with Silver so subtilly, and with “ such Slight, that the same could not be dis“ cerned and severed from the Tin; and by that “ Means they sold the Tin so covered for fine “ Silver, to the great Damage and Deceit of the “ King and his People.

“ Whereupon the said Goldsmiths petitioned
 “ the King, that he would be pleased to apply “ convenient Remedy therein. And he, being “ willing to prevent the said Evil, (as the Letters “ Patents ran) did, by and with the Assent of
 “ the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the “ Commons of the Realm, for the common “ Profit, will and grant for him and his Heirs,
 “ That henceforth no Merchant, either private “ or Stranger, should bring into this Land any “ Sort of Money, but only Plate of fine Silver;
 “ nor that any Gold or Silver, wrought by Gold“ smiths, or any Plate of Silver, should be sold “ to the Merchant to sell again, and to be carried “ out of the Kingdom, but should be sold at the “ King's said Exchange, or openly among the “ said Goldsmiths, for private Use only: And “ that none that pretended to be of the same “ Trade should keep any Shop but in Cheapside, “ that it might be seen that their Works were “ good and right.

“ And that those of the same Trade might,
 “ by Virtue of these Presents, elect honest, law“ ful, and sufficient Men, best skilled in the “ said Trade, to enquire of the Matters afore“ said: And that they so chosen might, upon “ due Consideration of the said Craft, reform
 “ what Defects they should find therein, and “ thereupon inflict due Punishment upon the “ Offenders; and that, by the Help and Assis“ tance of the Mayor and Sheriffs, if Occasion “ be. And that in all trading Cities and “ Towns in England, where Goldsmiths resided,
 “ the same Ordinance be observed as in London.
 “ And that one or two of every such City or “ Town, for the rest of that Trade, should come “ to London, to be ascertained of their Touch
 “ of Gold, and there to have a Stamp of a “ Puncheon, with a Leopard's Head, marked “ upon their Work, as of antient Time it hath “ been ordained.” These Letters Patents bore Date at Westminster, the thirtieth of March, in the first Year of the King.

The Monuments to be noted here are, first,
 at Bread-street Corner, the North-East End, in 1595, one Thomas Tomlinson, causing in the High Street of Cheap a Vault to be digged and made,
 there

there was found, at fifteen Feet deep, a fair Pavement, like that above Ground. And at the further End, at the Channel, was found a Tree, sawed into five Steps, which was to step over some Brook, running out of the West, towards Walbrook. And upon the Edge of the said Brook, as it seemeth, there were found lying along the Bodies of two great Trees, the Ends whereof were then sawed off; and firm Timber; as at the first when they fell: Part of the said Trees remain yet in the Ground undigged. It was all forced Ground, until they went past the Trees aforesaid; which was about seventeen Feet deep, or better. Thus much hath the Ground of this City (in that Place) been raised from the Main.

And here it may be observed, that within fourscore Years, and less, Cheapside was raised divers Feet higher. For it was found to be twenty-eight Feet higher than it was when St. Paul's was first built; as appeared by several eminent Marks discovered in the late laying of the Foundation of that Church.

Present State.

THIS Ward derives its Name from its Connection with London-Bridge; for it begins Southward at the End next Southwark; from whence it stretcheth direct North up Gracechurch-street, as far as the Corner of Lombard-street and Gracechurch-street, including all the Bridge, the greatest Part of all the Alleys and Courts on the East Side, and on the West Side all the Alleys, Courts and Lanes in Thames-street on both Sides to New Key, Part of Michael's-lane, and Part of Crooked-lane. It is encompassed on the South by Southwark, and the River Thames; on the East by Billinggate Ward; on the North by Langborne Ward; and on the West by Candlewick and Dowgate Wards.

As to the present State of this Ward:

The Streets and Places of Note are London-Bridge, New Fish-street, Gracechurch-street, as far as Fenchurch-street.

We begin with London-Bridge; a Bridge not inferior to any in Europe for its Length, Breadth, and Buildings thereon, being sustained by nineteen great Stone Arches, secured by Piles of Timber drove to the Bottom of the River, having a Draw-bridge towards Southwark, as also strong Gates; and by the Houses built thereon on both Sides, it seemeth rather a Street than a Bridge, being furnished with good Timber Buildings, which have been well inhabited by sufficient Trademen, who have very considerable Dealings, as being so great a Thoroughfare from Southwark into London: And amongst these Buildings some are very large, with curious Fronts, in that Part near the Draw-bridge, where it hath an open Prospect on both Sides into the River Thames; but we cannot help being of the Opinion of a late Writer, that this Bridge would have been more convenient for Passage, and a greater Ornament to the City, if, instead of the Houses thereon, it had been only adorned with a strong Breast-work and Balustrade.

To what has been written concerning this Bridge, in the former Part of this Work, Chap. VII. p. 42, &c. we apprehend it may be satisfactory to our Readers to add the Answers of an ingenious and experienced Architect to certain Queries, proposed to him by the Lord-Mayor and his Council in the Year 1746, concerning the present State, and the properest Method of altering and improving London-Bridge.

Mr. Labelye informs us, that the monstrous Largeness of the present Sterlings stops near one fourth Part in five of the Water-way, during the greatest Part of the Flood and Ebb Tides, which makes a Fall of near five Foot perpendicular in Height, and makes the Navigation thro' the Arches or Locks very difficult, and often fatal to the Lives of the People; of which Fact hardly a Week passes without some melancholy Proof.

He then gives a Sketch of a Method to remove these Sterlings, and consequently the Danger occasioned by them, (see the Plate) with the following Explanation:

"This Sketch represents the Plan of the Piers, and the Western Elevation of London-Bridge, exclusive of the Houses, with the Sterlings, reduced to the Size they ought to be of, to afford the greatest Waterway possible, which would be never less than about 400 Feet, or twice as much as it is now, and the Fall would be reduced to about 15 Inches, which would afford at all Times an easy and safe Navigation thro' the Locks or Arches. Practicable Methods will be explained (if desired) how to reduce the Sterlings, as is expressed in this Plan; and thereby not only to secure the Foundations of the Piers from further Decay, but greatly to mend them, with Materials much more durable than those used in the present Sterlings; which, if mended according to this Method, would require but very few and inconsiderable Repairs for many Years. As to the Time and Expence that is likely to be required to mend London-Bridge after this Method, it is likely that two or three of the Piers may be mended every Year till the whole is done; and the Expence, as far as it can be computed at present, does not amount to more than about 2000 l. for every Pier, taken at an Average upon them all.

"This Method of mending London-Bridge, and saving the large Sums now yearly laid out in bad Repairs, may be put into Execution, without any Hindrance to the Navigation under, or to the Passage over, the said Bridge."

To this the Architect adds another Sketch, (see the Plate), "which, says he, represents the Plan and Western Front of London-Bridge, as it may be mended, and ought to be, according to the Opinion of that justly celebrated Architect, the late Sir Christopher Wren."

"The

Mr. Labelye's Opinion and Method of repairing and improving London-Bridge.

Sir Christopher Wren's Plan for repairing London-Bridge.

"The Arches are all proposed to be Gothick,
"as being much stronger than any others of "the Heights and Spans, and to spring from
"the lowest Low-water-Mark, which would "greatly add to their Strength: But this could "not be represented in the Sketch, wherein all
"the lower Parts of the Arches are covered by "the saliant Angles of the Piers.

"London-Bridge, so mended, would want no
"Repairs for a great Number of Years, unless
"as to the Paving.

"Instead of Gothick Reccesses, and a Cast-iron "Balustrade, on a Dwarf Parapet-Wall, as in "this Sketch, new Houses might be replaced
"on the Top in the same Taste as those now
"building.

"Such a Bridge would afford at all Times, a "clear Water-way of upwards of 540 Feet,
"and there would not be above nine Inches Fall
"at the most, which would never hinder nor
"endanger the Navigation.

"No new Materials are required, but only "to turn the Sofiets of the new Arches; the "Stone Materials in the present Arches, and in "the eleven Piers that would be taken away,
"being more than sufficient to complete the "Whole.

"The Time required for putting in Execu"tion this Method of mending London-Bridge,
"would not be much longer than for the Me"thod explained in the preceding Sketch, and "might also be done without a Moment's Hinder-
"ance to the Navigation under, or to the Passage
"over, the Bridge.

"The Expence would not be much more than "the other, and London-Bridge, so mended, would "be the finest and most commodious Gothick
"Bridge in the World."

Mr. Ald. Winterbottom, Mr. Benjamin Crooke,
Mr. Chr. Fullagar, Mr. Robert Elliott,
Mr. Deputy Bayley, Mr. James Hodges.*

A Plan of the Arches and Sterlings of the Bridge was laid before the Committee, and the Answers to the Queries formerly given to Messrs. Dance and Sparruck were laid before them, which are as follow:

Queries relating to London-Bridge, proposed in 1746.

Queries by the Committee of Bridge-Lands.

"I. What are the Shapes and Dimensions of "the Stone Piers, the Sterling, and the Open"ings at High and Low Water?

"N. B. This will be best answered by figured "Sketches, or Plans, correctly laid down from "an exact Mensuration by a Scale, provided "that Scale be not smaller than 8 or 10 Feet
"to an Inch.

"II. What are the Depths of Water just "above, under, and just below the Arches, or "Locks, at a common Low-water.

"N. B. These Depths may be marked on the "Plans or Sketches.

"III. At what Height above Low-water-
"Mark, and at what Depth below the Surface "of the Sterlings, is the under Bed, or lower
"Side, of the first Course of Stones?

"IV. What is there between the Stones and "the Heads of the Piles? Is it one Row of "Planks only, or two Rows, cross-laid? Or, if "Timber, what Wood are they made of? And "what are their Dimensions and Scantlings?

"V. Are the Piles, which surrounded the Foun"dations of the Piers before the Sterlings were "added, square or round, rough or hewn, driven
"as close as possible, or at a Distance? If they "touch one another, are they fastened by a "Dove-tail, or by any other Contrivance of the "same Nature? And, if they do not touch, at "what Distance are they, at a Mean?

"VI. Are the Heads of those surrounding "Piles fastened together by any Curb, or Capcil?
"If there be any, let it be described, and its "Dimensions, by a figured Sketch.

"VII. Are the inside Piles, on which the "Foundations of the Piers are laid, round or "square, hewn or rough, very close, or at a "Distance, at a Mean? Of what Timber and "Size? Are they shod, or not?

"VIII. Whether the Foundations of the "Piers, before the Sterlings were added, extend"ed beyond the naked Line of the Stone
"Work? And, if so, (as it is most likely)
"describe how much, at a Mean, and the Man"ner, by a figured Sketch.

"IX. Are the Piles under the Foundations of "the Piers much decayed and galled by the "Action of the Current of Water, before the "Sterlings were added?

"X. What is the Inside of the Stone Piers
"made of? Whether of the same sort of Stone,
"as the Outside, cut and laid regular, or only
"common Rubble Stones, laid in very bad Mor"tar, as it is in Rocheſter-Bridge?

"N. B. The Persons, who are to answer these "Queries, may add to their Answers what fur"ther Remarks and Observations they shall “ I. I have described the Shapes and Dimensions of the Stone Piers, Sterlings, and Openings, at High and Low-Water, in a signed Plan, which I delivered to Mr. Comptroller.

“ I have likewise described the Dimensions, in the Plan aforeſaid.

“ III. The Heighth of the under Bed of the first Course of Stones is various, ſome being 2 Foot 4 Inches, ſome 1 Foot 11 Inches, ſome 1 Foot 10 Inches, ſome 1 Foot 3 Inches, ſome 1 Foot 1 Inch, above Low-Water-Mark; and ſome are 6 Foot, ſome 5 Foot 8 Inches, ſome 4 Foot 6 Inches, ſome 4 Foot 1 Inch, and ſome 4 Foot, below the Surface of the Sterlings. Theſe are the Dimensions, as far as I am able to get at them, there being no Opportunity to make Obſervations, but when a Breach happens to any of the Piers.

“ IV. In general, I find nothing between the Stones and Piles; but here and there are ſome Pieces of Plank, moſtly of Oak, and a little of Elm, ſome of which are 6 Inches, and ſome 4 Inches thick: Which, I apprehend, were not originally placed there, but only when there hath been Reparation; upon which Account they were fixed, in order to wedge up tight to the Stone Work, it being impoſſible to make ſound, in that Caſe, by any other Method.

“ V. Theſe Piles are rough and unhewn; they are driven cloſe, and touch one another; they do not ſeem to be faſtened together, by any Contrivance, except that ſome have Plank upon them, and ſome have none: But theſe Obſervations I have made where Breaches have happened, ſo that one might get one, two, or three Feet within the Surface of the Piers; but how they are in the Middle of the Piers, is impoſſible to determine.

“ VI. They are faſtened by no Curb or Cap-cil; there is only Plank upon ſome of them, as I mentioned in the former Answer.

“ VII. This Query is very difficult to answer: I can only ſay, that I have had an Opportunity to examine one Pier about 7 Foot within; it is the South Pier of the Dam-Lock, a great Part of which was undermined by ſome of the Sterlings being carried away, and leaving it defenceleſs; there I obſerve, that the Piles are round, rough, unhewn, and driven cloſe together; they are chiefly Elm, and about one Foot Diameter. Some of theſe Piles, being taken up, were ſhod with Iron; and I think it is reaſonable to ſuppoſe they are all ſo.

“ VIII. There is to every Pier a Set-off; or Foundation, which extends about 7 Inches beyond the naked Line of the Pier; and

“ that Set-off, or Foundation, is of Stone. But “ I am of Opinion, that the Sterlings were fixed
 “ at the first Erecting of the Bridge, because I “ think it impossible for the Piers to stand long “ without some such Defence; but whether they “ were so much extended, or in the same Shape
 “ they are now, is not easy to determine.

“ IX. All those Piles under the Foundation
 “ of the Piers, which I ever saw, are very found
 “ at the Heart, but about 1 Inch of their Sur“ face hath been decayed; but these were Piles “ which had been for some Time exposed to the “ Violence of the Flood, by the Breaches made in “ the Sterlings: But, I apprehend, that cannot “ be the Case with the other Piles, because the “ Water cannot act upon them.

 George Dance, and Joseph Nixon, the Tide-Carpenter's Freeman, and were severally examined concerning the Bridge: Whereby many Inconsaid Mr. Labelye, that must frequently happen to Vessels and Craft going thro' the Bridge, by the past and present Method of driving Driftshod in the Passages, which are thence rendered very shallow and almost unnavigable: He also objected to the great Extent of the Sterlings;

 which he alledged to be, in a great Measure, unnecessary, and made the Bridge no stronger than it would be, were they no longer above and below the Piers, than they are on the Sides. And then the said Mr. Labelye informed the Committee, That he had a written Paper of the Purport of what he had now advanced, which, being delivered in, was read as follows :

To the Right Honourable the Lord-Mayor, and the Gentlemen of the Committee of Bridgehouse-Lands.

His Answer to the former Queries.

" Having carefully examined the Plan of London-Bridge lately made, and the Answers given to the Queries proposed, from what I have seen of London and Rocheſter Bridges, my humble Opinion is as follows, viz.

" I. That London-Bridge (like most of the Stone Bridges that were built about the same Time over large and deep Rivers) is founded on the Tops of wooden Piles, cut off some Feet above Low-Water-Mark : Such are the Stone Bridges at Rocheſter, Bristol, and Berwick, in Great Britain ; and those of Dresden, Prague, and Ratisbon, in Germany.

" II. That the wooden Piles, on which the Foundation of London-Bridge was laid, having been for some Years exposed to the Air, and to the Wet and Dry for some Hours alternately, twice every 24 Hours, the necessary Consequence was, that those Piles decayed in Time ; and this occasioned the Necessity of surrounding them with some Fences, to preserve them from Ruin ; which Fences, or Sterlings, have been increased by Degrees to the present monstrous Size, without any Necessity.

" III. That, notwithstanding the Repairs of this Bridge have cost (as I have been informed) for several Years last past near 2000 l. a Year, the Sterlings being made of Timber and exposed to the Wet and Dry, and filled in with loose Stones, or Chalk, they must be continually decaying, and in want of Repairs.

" IV. And that, as long as all those Piers stand with their Sterlings of such monstrous Size, and as long as they are repaired in the same Manner, they will certainly occasion the same great Expences, and the same great and dangerous Fall under the Arches ; and, consequently, London-Bridge will still be a most dangerous Bridge to the Navigation, and to the Lives of Watermen and Passengers.

" All which is humbly submitted to the Consideration of the honourable Committee, by their most humble Servant, Sept. the 17th, 1746.

Charles Labelye."

His Proposals.

And, they being withdrawn, a Motion was made, That Mr. Labelye be again called in, and asked if he had any Proposal to lay before the Committee how to remedy the above Faults and Defects. And he was accordingly called in, and examined thereto.

He informed the Committee, That he had two Plans to produce ; but, as they were partly mathematical, he should desire that some eminent, skilful, and disinterested Persons should be likewise present to hear his Proposals. However, he mentioned the casting the Piers four Feet about with strong Portland Stone, and the Sterlings to be taken away. A Model whereof he had prepared.

He then mentioned another Scheme, which, he said, was Sir Christopher Wren's ; which was, That out of nineteen Piers, nine, being every other Pier, should be taken away, and the remaining to be well repaired, and made Gotbick Arches across ; and there would no new Materials be wanting, but several of the Houses must be taken down.

And then he withdrew ; and a Motion was made, That a Sub-Committee be appointed to examine the Plan of London-Bridge in its present Condition ; and also any other Plan or Design, which shall be proposed by any Person or Persons, for altering or amending thereof : And that the said Committee do desire the Assistance of Martin Folkes, Esq ; William Jones, Esq ; George Scott, Esq ; Mr. Horsnaile, Mr. Jelf, Mr. Etheridge, Dr. Jurin, Mr. Robins, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Price, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Dance, Mr. Charles Labelye, and such other Persons as any Member of the Committee shall think proper to apply to, in order to receive their Opinions concerning the present Condition of the Bridge, and the Practicability and Consequences of making any Alteration therein : And that this Committee do consist of the Whole, and that every Member be summoned, and the Summons underwrote upon what Business : Which was agreed to. And it was ordered, that the Comptroller should attend the said Gentlemen nominated for their Assistance, and acquaint them therewith, and desire their Presence at the said Committee.

A Motion for a Sub-Committee.

By whom assig. ed.

At a Committee of Bridgehouse Lands, held at Guildhall, London, on Thursday the twenty-fifth of September, 1746.

This Committee being met, pursuant to their Resolution of Wednesday, the 17th Instant, to consider of the present Condition of the Bridge, and the Practicability and Consequences of making any Alteration therein ; and Mr. Labelye being called in, and perusing the Plan of the Bridge lately prepared by Mr. Dance ; and the several Gentlemen, who were desired to be present at this Committee, being likewise called in, viz. He then defired Leave, before he prefented the Model and Plan he had prepared (as mentioned above) to obferve, that he fhould propofe to leave the Piers and Houfes ftanding, but to take away great Part of the Sterlings, and cafe the Piers about, with ftrong Portland Stone, three or four Feet: And then he produced the Plan, whereby he fhewed the propofed Casing, and the Increafe of the Water-way or Paffage through the Bridge, which would be, from two hundred and thirty-fix Feet, as it is now, increafed to three hundred and ninety-fix Feet and fix Inches clear, and the Solid, at Low-Water, five hundred and forty Feet; and that the additional Stone Work may be fet on the prefent Piles, (and, if they are not fufficient, to drive more) and the Piles be cut off three Feet below Low-Water-Mark.

Mr. Labeye was asked, if this Method propofed would fufficiently fecure the Piers and their Foundations from Decay by Weather? He answered, it would; and it was agreed to by Mr. Horsenaile, the Mafon, and others, efpecially as the Stone Work was to go two or three Feet below Low-Water-Mark.

It was urged, by a Member of the Committee, that this Propofal might hinder the City being ferved with Thames Water; and which being abfolutely neceffary for the Ufe of the City, no Confiderations of faving in Repairs of the Bridge would be an adequate Satisfaction for the Lofs of the Thames Water, if they cannot otherwife be fufficiently ferved.

And it was mentioned by a Member of the Committee, as a Query, if taking away the Sterlings, as above propofed, would not affect the Navigation, and alfo the Water-Works, to their Hurt?

Then a Motion was made, That the Plans, Queftions, and Proceedings already had, concerning this Alteration, be produced and delivered in Writing to the feveral Gentlemen affifting this Committee, the better to enable them to give their Opinions thereon; and that the Bridgehoufe Officers and Workmen do attend the faid Gentlemen as often as they defire the fame: Which was ordered accordingly.

And then the faid Gentlemen, attending to affift the Committee, withdrew. And the following Queries were propofed, and ordered to be delivered to them in Writing, viz.

“ I. What Effect will the Reducing and Alteration of the Sterlings, according to Mr. Labeye's Model, have upon the Ebbing and Flowing of the Tide, with regard to Time, and the Difference in the Depth of the Water at High and Low Water, above and below Bridge, to the Extent of the Tide? And how will the Navigation be affected?

“ II. What Effect will it have on the Water-Works? And, if it fhould render them ufelefs, or not fufficient, how, and in what Manner, may the City be otherwife fupplied with Water?”

A Mo-

Mr. Geo. Dance ordered to answer the said Letter. A Motion was made, and the Question being put, That Mr. George Dance, with proper Assistance, do give in Answers to the said Queries, to be laid before the Committee, it was ordered accordingly.

These Inquiries into the State of London-Bridge ended in a Proposal for Building a new Bridge, as we have related on p. 709, &c. of our first Volume. But, after several Meetings of a Subcommittee, appointed by the Common Council, holden on the twenty-second Day of July, 1754, who examined many Gentlemen in relation to the Consequences that might attend the Commerce and Navigation of this City, from the Construction of a new Bridge, at or about Black-Fryars, to the opposite Shore; and came to several Resolutions in favour of repairing and improving the present, before the Addition of another Bridge should take place; both their Schemes seem to be laid aside, or postponed for more mature Deliberation. See p. 52. Vol. I.

Fish-street Mill.

Fish-street-hill is a Street very well built, and inhabited by great Dealers in Fish, &c.

King's-head-court, on the East Side of the Hill, is open, with indifferent good Buildings, and hath a Passage into Pudding-lane.

Globe-yard, on the West Side, an open and somewhat large Place, having several Turnings, with a Free-stone Pavement, and is indifferently well inhabited.

Crooked-lane, also on the West Side, hath a turning Passage into St. Michael's or Miles-lane; but the greatest Part being in Candlewick Ward, it shall be there treated of.

Star Inn, Northward of the Monument, is very large and well accustomed, and hath a Passage into Pudding-lane.

Bell-yard, seated almost against the Monument, is a good open Court, containing three or four large Houses, well inhabited.

Grace-church-street.

Gracechurch-street is a very handsome, spacious Street, graced with good Buildings, which are well inhabited by wealthy Tradesmen, being a Street of great Resort. In that Part of the Street lying in this Ward are these Places; Talbot-court, with a wide Entrance for a Coach or Cart, being large and well inhabited.

Out of this Court is a narrow Passage into another of the same Name, which leadeth into Little Eastcheap, there also taken Notice of. Crown-court, neat, with a Free-stone Pavement, well-inhabited, but small.

Jerusalem-court, indifferent long, with an open Passage, a Free-stone Pavement, and good Houses.

On the West Side of the Street White-bart-court, a pretty good open Place, well inhabited by wholesale Dealers, hath a Passage into another Court so called, which leadeth into Lombard-street, mentioned in Langborn Ward. Near unto this is a small Court, with about two or three Houses, but without a Name.

Nag's-head-court, very long, well built and inhabited, hath a Passage into St. Clement's-lane, where it is mentioned, the greatest Part being in Langborn Ward.

Thames-street.

Thames-street is a Place of great Trade; the Part thereof in this Ward begins on the East Side of the Old Swan-lane, and goeth Eastward to Fish-street-hill.

Places of Note in this Part of the Street, are, Gully-hole, being a Passage to the Water-house, and so to the Thames Side, which lieth open to the Wharfs as far as the Stillyard in Dowgate Ward.

Three-tun-alley, on the North Side, which is but small.

Churchyard-alley, but narrow and indifferent, falls down into the new Passage, being the open Ground next the Thames; which said Passage leads to Old Swan-stairs Westward, and to the Water-house Eastward, as aforesaid.

North from Thames-street is St. Michael's-lane, which hath the greatest Part in Candlewick Ward. In the Part of this Lane belonging to this Ward is Fen-court, a handsome, open, and well built Place, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Three-tun-court, a good square Place, with an open Entrance for Carts.

Egbate-lane runs down to the Thames, and unto the Old Swan-stairs, much resorted unto by Watermen, and is of good Note.

The Old Swan-lane also runs down to the Water Side, and leadeth to the said Stairs: The West Side of this Lane is in Dowgate Ward.

St. Martin's-lane, another Lane North from Thames-street, hath but a small Part in this Ward, the greatest being in Candlewick Ward.

There are to watch in this Ward at the several Stands, every Night, besides the Constable and the Beadle, twenty-five Watchmen. Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward, are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of July. Jurymen.

This Ward hath an Alderman and his Deputy, included in the fifteen Common-Councilmen, fifteen Constables, six Scavengers, sixteen Wardmote Inquest Men, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteen in London at forty-seven Pounds, and in the Exchequer at forty-nine Pounds ten Shillings. Alderman, Common Council, &c.

The Alderman of this Ward is William Stephenson, Esq; Mr. James Hodges, Deputy, Mr. Coles Child, Mr. Richard Walkden, Mr. William Post, Mr. Cornelius Owen, Mr. Benjamin Silcock, Mr. Thomas Horne, Mr. Thomas Machen, Mr. Thomas Gillmore, Mr. James Howard, Mr. John Watben, Mr. Clement Coderoy, Mr. Joseph Gonson, Mr. George Baskerville, and Mr. Gabriel Wright, Common-Councilmen.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are, First, Two Parish-Churches, 1. St. Magnus, and, 2. St. Bennet's Grace or Grays-Church. Four Remarkable Things. Churches. Parishes, 1. of St. Magnus, 2. of St. Margaret, in New Fish-street, 3. of St. Leonard Eastcheap, and, 4. of St. Bennet Grays-church; of which more particularly in our Parochial History.

Secondly, Fishmongers Hall, situate in Thames-street, about an hundred and fifty Yards West of the Bridge. It is a curious and capacious Building of Brick and Stone. By the Street you enter thro' a handsome Passage paved with Free-stone, which leads into a large, square Court, paved in the same Manner, encompassed by the great great Hall, the Court-Room for the Assistants, and other grand Apartments; with Galleries, supported by Columns and Arches of the Ionick Order, and the Statue of Sir William Walworth. See Page 141. But the Front next the Thames, which has been lately repaired and beautified, at a very extraordinary Expence, exceeds every Thing of its Kind in this City, and yields a most graceful and pleasant Prospect; with a magnificent double Flight of Stone Stairs on the Wharf.

These Fishmongers were sometimes of two several Companies, to wit, Stockfishmongers and Saltfishmongers; of whose Antiquity we find, that, by the Name of the Fishmongers of London, they were for forestalling, &c. contrary to the Laws and Constitutions of the City, fined to the King at five hundred Marks, the eighth of King Edward I. More, that the said Fishmongers, hearing of the great Victory obtained by the same King against the Scots, in the twenty-sixth of his Reign, made a triumphant and solemn Shew through the City, with divers Pageants, and more than a thousand Horsemen, &c.

These two Companies of Stockfishmongers and Saltfishmongers, of old Time, had their several Halls; to wit, in Thames-street two, in New Fish-street two, and in Old Fish-street two; in each Place one for either Company; in all six several Halls; the Company was so great.

These Fishmongers have been famous Citizens, and have had six Mayors of their Company in twenty-four Years; to wit, Walter Freke, 1350; John Loskin, 1359; John Wroth, 1361; John Pechie, 1362; Simon Morden, 1369; and William Walworth, 1374. But in the Year 1382, thro' the Council of John Northampton, Draper, then being Mayor, William Essex and John More, Merchants, and Richard Northbury, the Fishmongers were greatly troubled, hindered of their Liberties, and almost destroyed, by Congregations made against them. See Page 143. However, in a Parliament at London, the Controversy depending between the Mayor and Aldermen of London, and the Fishmongers, Nicholas Exton, Speaker for the Fishmongers, prayed the King to receive him and his Company into his Protection, for Fear of corporal Hurt. Whereupon it was commanded, that each Party should keep the Peace, upon Pain of losing all they had. Hereupon a Fishmonger starting up, replied, That the Complaint brought against them by the Movers, &c. was but Matter of Malice; for that the Fishmongers, in the Reign of Edward III. being chief Officers of the City, had, for their Misdemeanors then done, committed the chief Exhibitors of those Petitions to Prison. In this Parliament the Fishmongers, by the King's Charter Patents, were restored to their Liberties. See Page 145.

Those Stockfishmongers and Saltfishmongers were united in the Year 1536, in the twenty-eighth of Henry VIII. their Hall to be but one, in the House given to them by Sir John Cornwall, Lord Frankhope, and of Amptbull, in the Parish of St. Michael in Crooked-lane, in the Reign of Henry VI.

The Monument.

Thirdly, The Monument, erected on the East Side of Fish-street-hill, in a Square, open to the Street, to perpetuate the Remembrance of the dreadful Fire of London, in the Year 1666. This fine Piece of Architecture is the Design of that great Genius Sir Christopher Wren. It is undoubtedly the finest modern Column in the World, and in some Respects may vie with the most famous of Antiquity, being twenty-four Feet higher than Trajan's Pillar at Rome.

This Column is of the Dorick Order, fluted; whose Altitude is two hundred and two Feet from the Ground, the greatest Diameter of the Shaft or Body of the Column is fifteen Feet, the Ground bounded by the Plinth, or lowest Part of the Pedestal, twenty-eight Feet square, and the Pedestal is in Altitude forty Feet, all of Portland Stone: Within is a large Stair-case of black Marble, containing three hundred and forty-five Steps, ten Inches and an Half broad, and six Inches Risers; and a Balcony within thirty-two Feet of the very Top, where is a curious and spacious gilded Flame.

The Account we have of this Pillar from the Life of Sir Christopher Wren, Knt. is more particular, as follows: Parentalia, P. 321, &c.

"In the Year 1671, the Surveyor began the building of the great fluted Column of Portland Stone, and of the Dorick Order, (commonly called the Monument of London, in Memory of the burning and rebuilding of the City) and finished it in 1677. The Artificers were obliged to wait sometimes for Stones of proper Scantlings; which occasioned the Work to be longer in Execution than otherwise it would have been. It much exceeds in * Height the Pillars at Rome of the Emperors Trajan and Antoninus, the stately Remains of Roman Grandeur, or that of Theodosius at Constantinople. In forming this Coloss Column, the Surveyor took the Liberty to exceed the received Proportion of the Order, one Module, or Semi-diameter. In the Place of the Brass Urn on the Top, (which is not artfully performed, and was set up contrary to his Opinion) was originally intended a Coloss Statue, in Brass gilt, of King Charles II. as Founder of the new City, in the Manner of the Roman Pillars, which terminated with the Statues of their Cæsars; or else a Figure erect of a Woman crowned with Towers, holding a Sword and Cap of Maintenance, with other Ensigns of the City's Grandeur and Re-erection. The Altitude, from the Pavement, is two hundred and two Feet, the Diameter of the Shaft or Body of the Column is fifteen Feet, the Ground bounded by the Plinth or lowest Part of the Pedestal is twenty-eight Feet square, and the Pedestal in Height is forty Feet. Within is a large Stair-case of black Marble, containing three hundred and forty-five Steps, ten Inches and an half broad, and six Inches Risers. Over the Capital is an Iron Balcony, encompassing a Cippus or Meta, thirty-two Feet high, supporting a blazing Urn of Brass gilt. Prior to this, the Surveyor (as it appears by an original Drawing) had made a Design of a Pillar of somewhat less Proportion, viz. fourteen Feet in Diameter, and after a peculiar Device: For, as the Romans expressed by Relievo, on the Pedestals, and round the Shafts of their Columns, the History of

* The greatest of the Roman Columns, viz. that of Antoninus, was 172½ Feet in Height, and 12 Feet 3 Inches in Diameter, English Measure.

“ Actions and Incidents as were intended to be “ thereby commemorated; so this Monument of “ the Conflagration and Resurrection of the City “ of London was represented by a Pillar in “ Flames; the Flames, blazing from the Loop“ holes of the Shaft, (which were to give Light
 “ to the Stairs within) were figured in Brass-“ work gilt, and on the Top was a Phoenix rising
 “ from her Ashes, of Brass gilt likewise.”

Made English thus:

“ In the Year of Christ 1666, the second Day “ of September, Eastward from hence, at the “ Distance of two hundred and two Feet, (the “ Height of this Column) about Midnight, a “ most terrible Fire broke out, which, driven “ on by a high Wind, not only wasted the “ adjacent Parts, but also Places very remote,
 “ with incredible Noise and Fury: It consumed “ eighty-nine Churches, the City Gates, Guild- “ hall, many publick Structures, Hospitals, “ Schools, Libraries, a vast Number of stately “ Edifices, thirteen thousand two hundred Dwel“ ling-Houses, four hundred Streets; of twenty-“ six Wards, it utterly destroyed fifteen, and left “ eight

“ eight others shattered and half burnt. The “ Ruins of the City were four hundred and “ thirty-six Acres, from the Tower by the “ Thames Side to the Temple Church, and from “ the North-East Gate along the City Wall to “ Holborn-Bridge. To the Estates and Fortunes
 “ of the Citizens it was merciless, but to their “ Lives very favourable, that it might in all “ Things resemble the last Conflagration of the “ World.

“ The Destruction was sudden; for in a small “ Space of Time the same City was seen most “ flourishing, and reduced to nothing.

“ Three Days after, when this fatal Fire had “ baffled all human Counsels and Endeavours in “ the Opinion of all, as it were, by the Will of “ Heaven, it stopped, and on every Side was ex-

In English thus:

“ Charles II. Son of Charles the Martyr, King “ of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender
 “ of the Faith, a most gracious Prince, com“ miserating the deplorable State of Things,
 “ whilst the Ruins were yet smoaking, provided “ for the Comfort of his Citizens, and the Orna“ ment of his City; remitted their Taxes, and “ referred the Petitions of the Magistrates and “ Inhabitants to the Parliament, who immediately “ passed an Act, That publick Works should be “ restored to greater Beauty with publick Money, “ to be raised by an Imposition on Coal; that “ Churches, and the Cathedral of St. Paul's, “ should be rebuilt from their Foundations, with “ all Magnificence; that Bridges, Gates, and “ Prisons should be new made, the Sewers “ cleansed, the Streets made strait and regular,

“ such as were steep levelled, and those too nar“ row made wider, Markets and Shambles re“ moved to separate Places. They also enacted,
 “ That every House should be built with Party-“ Walls, and all in Front raised of equal Height,
 “ and those Walls all of square Stone or Brick,
 “ and that no Man should delay beyond the “ Space of seven Years. Moreover, Care was “ taken by Law to prevent all Suits about their “ Bounds. Also anniversary Prayers were en“ joined; and, to perpetuate the Memory hereof
 “ to Posterity, they caused this Column to be “ erected. The Work was carried on with Dili“ gence, and London is restored; but whether “ with greater Speed or Beauty, may be made a “ Question. A three Years Time saw that “ finished, which was supposed to be the Business
 “ of an Age.”

The East Side of the Pedestal has also an Inscription, expressing the Times in which this Pillar was begun, continued, and brought to Perfection. The Words are these:

And finished in that of Sir Thomas Davis, in the Year 1677.

And whereas, upon Evidence, it was thought that this dreadful Fire was contrived and carried on by the Popish Faction, the same is expressed in English round the Base of the Pedestal, under the said Inscription, in these following Words:

This Pillar was set up in perpetual Remembrance of the most dreadful Burning of this antient City; begun and carried on by the Treachery and Malice of the Popish Faction, in the Beginning of September, in the Year of our Lord 1666, in order to the carrying on their horrid Plot for extirpating the Protestant Religion, and old English Liberty, and introducing Popery and Slavery.

On

On the Front, or the West Side of the Die of the Pedestal of this magnificent Column, is finely carved a curious Emblem of this Tragical Scene, by the masterly Hand of Mr. Cibber, Father to the present King's Poet, who likewise carved the inimitable Figures on the Gate of Bethlem. The eleven principal Figures on this Pedestal are done in Alto, the rest in Basso Relievo, viz.

I. At the North End of the said Plan is represented, in Basso Relievo, the City in Flames, and the Inhabitants in a Consternation, with their Arms extended upward, and crying out for Succour.

II. A little nearer the Horizon are the Arms, Cap of Maintenance, and other Ensigns of the City's Grandeur, partly buried under the Ruins.

III. On the Ruins lies the Figure of a Woman crowned with a Castle, her Breasts pregnant, and in her Hand a Sword; denoting the strong, plentiful, and well-governed City of London in Distress.

IV. The Sovereign (King Charles II.) is represented standing on an Anabathrum, or Place ascended to by three Steps, in a Roman Habit, providing with his Power and prudent Directions (as is expressed by the Inscription on the South Side) for the Comfort of his Citizens and Ornament of his City.

V. On the said Steps stand, in the King's Presence, the Figures of three Women; that next his Majesty representing Liberty, having in her right Hand a Hat, whereon is the Word Liberty, denoting the Freedom or Liberty given to those that engaged three Years in the Work.

VI. Another of the said three Women is Ichthyographia, with Rules and Compasses in one Hand, (the Instruments whereby Plans and Designs are delineated in due Proportion) and a Scroll partly unrolled in the other Hand, whereon such Designs are to be drawn; and near this is a Bee-hive, the known Emblem of Industry.

VII. The third of the said Figures represents Imagination, holding the Emblem of Invention, and having on her Head Wings and small Children, as being swift and fruitful, and on the Borders of her Garment these Words, Non aliunde; all which shew, that the speedy Re-erection of the City is principally owing to Liberty, Imagination, Contrivance, Art, and Industry.

VIII. And farther, to encourage the said Citizens, here is the Figure of Time, elevating the Woman in Distress, and Providence with his winged Hand containing an Eye, promising Peace and Plenty, by pointing towards those two Figures appearing above the Clouds.

IX. Behind the King, as it were Eastward, the Work is going forward, as Scaffolding, Labourers carrying Materials, &c.

X. Partly within a cambered Cell, under the Sovereign's Feet, appeareth Envy, diabolically enraged at the Measures concerted, and the great Prospect of Success. He is endeavouring to renew the Disaster, by blowing Flames out of his Mouth towards the distressed City.

No. 71.

XI. On the same Plane, at the South End from the King, is a Lion, with one fore Foot tied up, and curbed by the left Hand of Fortitude, in whose right Hand is a Sword, under which Figures appears the Muzzle of a Canon, which denotes this deplorable Loss and Misfortune to happen in Time of War.

XII. Between that and the King is the Figure of Mars, with a Chaplet in his Hand, an Emblem that an approaching honourable Peace would be the Consequence of the War.

And above this, round the Cornice of the Pedestal, are noble Enrichments of Trophy Work, and the King's Arms; also of the Sword, Mace, Cap of Maintenance, &c. and at the Angles are four very large Dragons, the Supporters of the City Arms.

For a more particular Account of the Fire, and the Parties accused thereof, see Page 432, &c. to which we shall now add,

The Damage done by this Fire is thus computed: Burned and consumed twelve thousand Houses within the Walls of the City, and above one thousand more without the Walls, but all of them within the Freedom and Liberty of London; that is, in all, thirteen thousand, or, as others, thirteen thousand two hundred Houses. There were also destroyed the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, which at that Time was new building, and, as to the Stone Work, almost finished; also eighty-seven Parish-Churches, and six consecrated Chapels; most of the principal and publick Edifices; as, the great Guildhall, wherein were nine several Courts belonging to the City; the Royal-Exchange; the King's Custom-house; Justice-hall, where the Sessions were kept eight or nine Times in the Year for the Trial of Murderers, Felons, and other Malefactors; the four Prisons; four of the principal Gates of the City; and fifty Halls of Companies, most of which were most magnificent Structures and Palaces. The whole Damage sustained by this Fire is almost incredible: Yet, to make some Computation, that which follows is the Method that hath been taken:

An Account of the vast Damage and Spoil made by the afore-mentioned Conflagration.

That the Reader may the better judge of the Damages done by this Fire, some have computed the thirteen thousand odd hundred Houses burnt and destroyed to be worth, one with another, twenty-five Pounds yearly Rent; which, at the low Rent of twelve Years Purchase, will in the whole amount unto three Millions nine hundred thousand Pounds Sterling, and upwards.

And for the other Works of publick Concern, they have been thus moderately estimated:

A Table of Estimates.

In Houses burnt as aforesaid	£. 3900000
In Churches and other publick Edifices as follow: The eighty-seven Parish-Churches at eight thousand Pounds each	696000
Six Chapels, at two thousand Pounds each	12000
10 C	The

The Royal-Exchange, at	£. 50000
The King's Custom-house, at	10000

Water-Works.

Fourthly, The Water-works, by which the City is supplied with Thames Water, is a lofty wooden Edifice at the North-West End of the Bridge, behind the Front Houses, which, by Vessels, Iron Chains, &c. forceth the New Water through Pipes into a Cistern placed at the Top thereof, which from thence descends by Pipes to the Bottom, to be conveyed thro' other Pipes, under the Pavements of the City. See a larger Account of this Machine on p. 51.

Fifthly, at the End of Crooked-lane, facing the Monument-yard, was in antient Days a Palace built chiefly of Stone, in which Edward the Black Prince, Son to King Edward III. held his Residence, to the Honour of this City. It was afterwards let out for an Inn, and was known by the Name of the Black-bull-Inn.

Prince Edward's Palace.

C H A P. XIII.

Of BROAD-STREET WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

The Derivation of its Name. Bounds and Contents. Present State. Aldermen and Common Council. Winchester Place. St. Augustin's Priory. The Dutch Church. The French Church. Scalding-House. Carpenters, Drapers, Merchant-Tailors, and Pinners Halls. The Bank of England, and Directors. The South-Sea House, Company and Directors. The Pay-Office. Gresham Almshouse, and the Ward-School.

THIS Ward derives its Name from that Part of it called Broad-street, which lies almost in the Centre thereof, and in antient Times was peculiarly distinguished from the rest of the Streets in this Metropolis by the Name of Broad, there being few before the Fire of London of such a Breadth within the Walls.

It is bounded by Bishopsgate Ward on the East and North; on the West by Coleman-street Ward; and on the South by Cornhill Ward; and extends from the East Corner of Helmet-court, in Wormwood-street, Westward, on both Sides of the Way, to the Iron Grate over the Common-Sewer near to the Back-Gate of New Bethlem-Hospital; and its Extent from North to South, from the East Corner of Allhallows Church-yard in Wormwood-street, where new Broad-street begins, somewhat South, to the Parish Church of St. Peter the Poor, on both Sides. And then by the South Gate of the Augustine Friars, West, down Throkmorton-street, by the Drapers-ball, into Lotburi, to another Grate of Iron over the Channel there, whereby the Water runneth into the Course of Walbrook, under the East End of St. Margaret's Church. Certain Posts of Timber are there set up; which is the farthest West Part of this Ward, in the said Street. Out of which Street, it runs up Bartholomew-lane, South, to the North Side of the Exchange: Then, more East, out of the former Street, from over-against the Friars Augustines Church South Gate, it runs up Pig-street, which is another Part of Broad-street, South, to a Pump over-against St. Bennet's Church.

Then

Three or Thread-Needle-
street.

Then have ye one other Street, called Three or Threadneedle-street, beginning at the Well with two Buckets, now a close Pump, by St. Martin's Outwich Church-wall. This Street runneth down on both Sides to Finch or Finke's-lane, and half Way up that Lane, to a Gate of a large House on the West Side, but not so far on the East. Then the aforesaid Street, from this Finke's-lane, runneth down by the Royal Exchange, to the Stocks, and to a Place formerly called Scalding-house, or Scalding-wick, but now Scalding-alley; by the West Side whereof, under the Parish Church of St. Mildred, runneth the Course of Walbrook: And these are the Bounds of this Ward.

The modern State of Broad-street
Ward.

The Streets, Lanes, Courts, Alleys, and Places now contained in this Ward, are, Threadneedle-street, on both Sides of the Way, from the North-West Corner of Cornhill; near St. Christopher's Church, to St. Martin's Outwich Church at the Corner of Bishopsgate-street; Bartholomew-lane, Prince's-street, almost as far as Catharine-court; the North End, next to Lotbury, being in Coleman-street Ward; Lotbury, on both Sides, from the Gate by St. Margaret's Church to Bartholomew-lane End. Throgmorton-street, on both Sides, unto Broad-street. Broad-street, on both Sides, from St. Bennet-fink Church to London-wall. Winchester-street, Augustine-fryars, Wormwood-street, as far as Helmet-court in the East; London-wall-street, from a little Eastwards of Cross-keys-court, or Helmet-court, unto the Beginning of Wormwood-street, by Broad-street End.

In the Streets and Lanes are several Courts and Places, in the Description of which we shall begin with London-wall-street, and so come Southward:

London-
wall-
street.

London-wall-street, so called, from having the City Wall running along the North Side. It is a Street of old Buildings, and they, for the most Part, but ordinary, and inhabited by Curriers, Innholders, Chandlers, &c. This Street, extending beyond this Ward, is very long, taking its Beginning from Cripplegate: The Alleys, Courts, &c. beginning West, are these, Little Bell-alley, or Back-alley, narrow, seated on the Back-side of Coleman-street: This Alley is very long and well built, but the Part in this Ward begins on the East Side, over-against Swan-alley; and from thence falls down into Thompson's-rents, which is very narrow, dark, and an ill Passage, to London-wall; Three-pigeon-alley, very ordinary; White-horse-Inn, a Place for Stabling; all these three fall into Bell-alley. Ball-alley, very ordinary. The Boarded-entry, but indifferent. Threetun-alley, large, and indifferently built and inhabited. Maidenhead-court, somewhat long, but narrow, except at the upper End, which is wider and better built, with a Free-stone Pavement. Wrestler's-court, very long, with only Houses on the West Side, the East being the Back-side of Carpenter's-hall. White-bart-Inn, indifferent large, chiefly for Coaches, and Stabling for Livery Horses.

This Street, to Broad-street, is called Allhallows in the Wall, from the Church of that Name there seated, very dirty and of no Trade.

Here on the South is Winchester-street, the Great and the Little.

Winchester-street.

Great Winchester-street comes out of Broad- street on the East, and after some Space, turning Northwards, falls into London-wall-street: It is an open broad Street, graced with good and some capital Buildings, which are well inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute: Where it looks Northward, it is called Little Winchester-street, and leadeth to London-wall, where Little Moorgate, or Postern, formerly stood, and opened into the South-East Corner of Moorfields.

This Little Winchester-street is not so broad, nor so well inhabited, as the Great. Out of Great Winchester-street on the South is a Passage paved with Free-stone, but very narrow, and leads into St. Augustine-fryars. Along from Allhallows Church-Wall is Wormwood-street, of small Account for Houses, or Inhabitants. In this Street are Alms-houses for twelve poor Women, erected by Mr. Kemp, each having 12 d. a Week in Money, besides some other Perquisites: And in this Street also are these Places; Hand-alley, but small; Queen's-head-alley, very ordinary, both as to its Houses and Inhabitants; this Alley with a turning Passage falls into a broad or open Place, out of which is a Passage into Bishopsgate-street; Helmet-court, but indifferent, which ascending up Steps comes into Sutton-court, which hath a Passage into Bishopsgate-street; it is a pretty handsome new built Court, with a Free-stone Pavement, and well inhabited, but this Court is in Bishopsgate Ward; betwixt Helmet-court and Queen's-head-alley is Cock-yard, a Place of ordinary Account.

Now going back again, we turn South into Broad-street, very spacious, graced with good Buildings, which are well inhabited; which said Street from London-wall runs Southwards, till, bending West, it falls into Throgmorton-street, and more South into Pig-street, or Little Broad-street, and thence into Threadneedle-street. In this Broad-street are these Alleys, Courts, and Places of Name, beginning next to London-wall: First White-horse-court, large, well built and inhabited, nigh unto which is White-horse-yard, only for Stablings; Vine-court, well built; Bull-alley, but narrow and ordinary.

At the South-West Corner of Great Winchester-street, already mentioned, is Pin-maker's-alley, a pretty handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement; Crown-court, still more South, a handsome broad Place, with good Houses, well inhabited by Merchants and others.

On the East Side of this Street, hereabout, is the back Part of Gresham College, which has some Part in this Ward, but is most of it in Bishopsgate Ward, as already described. Here stand Gresham's Alms-Houses, and near unto them is a Yard for Livery Horses; adjoining to which is Sun-yard, a Livery Stable, having some Houses in it, and is a Thoroughfare into Bishopsgate-street. Next to this is the South-Sea House, spoken of before in Bishopsgate Ward.

Opposite to this Office is the Parish Church of St. Peter's Poor, with a Dial hanging over the Street. A little beyond the Church is a Place called Augustine-friars, now built into several large Houses, inhabited chiefly by Merchants.

Over-against Augustine-fryars Gateway, is Little Broad-street, or Pig-street, much narrower than the other, wherein are these Places; Adam's-court, pretty pretty large, well built and inhabited; Cushion-court, pretty handsome, but small, containing only two good Houses; Britain's-yard, but small, having but one House; French-court, indifferent well inhabited, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Throgmorton-street.

Throgmorton-street begins at the Gate of Austin-fryars, and runs West to Lothbury; it is very well built and inhabited; the chief Place here is the House and Gardens belonging to the Drapers Company. In this Street are these Courts, and Places of Name, viz. Red-lion-court, both small and ordinary; New-court, a pretty handsome square Place with good Houses; Shorter's-court, a very neat square Place, with an open Passage, the Houses well built and inhabited; St. Bartholomew's-court, but mean; Angel-court, very large and handsome, with good Buildings, the Habitation of Merchants and People of Repute; Copt-hall-court, a large and handsome open Place, with Houses fit for good Inhabitants; Warnford-court, a good large Place, very well built and inhabited.

Lothbury.

Next Throgmorton-street, West, is Lothbury, a well built Street of pretty good Trade, formerly for Founders, who made Candlesticks, Bells, and divers Utensils of Brasses and Copper; but at present for divers other Trades, and Merchandize. The Part of this Street, which is in this Ward, goeth but to the East Corner of St. Margaret's Lothbury. The Courts in this Part are, Green's-court, but ordinary; Prince's-court, likewise but ordinary; Falcon-court, but small, with a Free-stone Pavement; Token-house-yard, a large Place, with well built Houses, fit for good Inhabitants; the Row on the East Side, have Court-Yards, with Brick Walls before them; at the Upper End of this Yard is a narrow Passage into Bell-alley in Coleman-street Ward; this Place took its Name from an old House there standing, which antiently was the Office for delivering out of Farthings, which were called Tokens; Whalebone-court, large, with a Free-stone Pavement, hath good Houses, pretty well tenanted.

Bartholomew lane.

Coming back we pass up Bartholomew-lane, which runs up to the North Side of the Royal Exchange; a Place well built and inhabited, and of a good Trade for several Callings, being a great Thoroughfare, to and from the Exchange, to the North Parts of the City: In this Lane are Black Swan-yard, formerly called Ship-yard, which hath a wide Entrance; it is replenished with good Buildings, spacious, well inhabited, and it hath a Free-stone Pavement. Facing it is the Back-Gate of the Bank of England.

Thread-needle-street.

Bartholomew-lane brings us into Threadneedle-street; which takes its Beginning on the West, at the Corner of St. Mildred's in the Poultry, and passing by St. Bartholomew-lane, and leaving Little Broad-street on the North Side, and Finch-lane on the South, falleth into Bishopsgate-street, at the East End: In this Street are several good Buildings, well inhabited, with divers noted Places, with Taverns, Coffee-Houses, and other publick Places of Entertainment. Near the West End of this Street is Prince's-street, which, with a winding Passage, falls into Lothbury; and is very well built and inhabited; in the Part in this Ward is Draper's-court, which is pretty handsome, with a Free-stone Pavement, and turns by a Triangle into Lothbury. Catharine-court, which is but small and ordinary.

But to go back again into Threadneedle-street; near the End of Prince's-street is Three-nun-court, pretty large, and indifferent good, with a Free-stone Pavement.

At the East End of this St. Christopher's Church is a narrow Alley, which bears the Name of St. Christopher's-alley: At the upper End whereof, going down Steps, is a handsome open Court, with good Houses, having also the same Name.

More Eastward is Castle-alley on the South Side, which falls into Cornhill, filled with Eating-Houses, Stationers, and Offices depending on the Change; further to the East, are Sweeting's-rents and alley, both narrow Places, with Free-stone Pavements; which also give Passages into Cornhill, being Places taken up by Coffee-houses, Eating-houses, and Shops of divers Sorts, as Watchmakers, Stationers, &c.

Still further East, on the same Side, is Finch, or Fink-lane, which falls into Cornhill; and is a Place of good Trade. On the West Side is Spread-eagle-court, but ordinary, which with a turning Passage falls into Threadneedle-street, against Pig-street.

Hatton-court, a handsome square Place, well built and inhabited; Crown-court, small, and but indifferent.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, the Beadle, and thirty Watchmen. Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward, are to serve in the several Courts in Guild-hall in the Month of August. Jurymen.

This Broad-street Ward hath an Alderman, with his Deputy, and nine other Common-Councilmen, ten Constables, eight Scavengers, thirteen Men for the Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at 27 l. and accounted in the Exchequer after the Rate of 25 l.

The Alderman of this Ward is Thomas Rawlinson, Esq; late Lord-Mayor of London; Mr. John Clark, Deputy, Mr. John Cotterel, Mr. John Ellis, Mr. Thomas Warren, Mr. Samuel Guillum, Mr. Timothy Helmsley, Mr. Henry Kent, Mr. John Weare, Mr. Francis Magnus, and Mr. Samuel Dolby, are the Common-Councilmen. Aldermen and Common Council.

On the Spot where Great and Little Winchester-streets now stand was a large House (Part of which is the present Pay-Office;) and Garden, divided from Carpenters-hall on the West by a high Stone Wall; the Property of and built by Sir William Pawlet, Knight, created Earl of Wilts, and Marquis of Winchester, Lord High Treasurer of England under K. Edw. VI. Winchester House.

Through this Garden was a Foot-way, leading by the West End of the Augustine-fryars Church, strait North, and opened somewhat West from Albhalloes Church, against London-wall, towards Moorgate; which Footway had Gates at each End, locked up every Night: The great House joining to the Gardens stretched to the North Corner of Broad-street, and then turned up the said Street to the East End of Augustine-fryars Church, which the Lord Winchester pulled down, except the West End thereof, inclosed from the Steeple and Choir, which was in the Year

Year 1550 let to the Dutch Nation in London, to be their Preaching Place.

St. Augustine's Priory on Augustine
Fryars.

On that Spot of Ground still retaining the Name, stood a Convent of Augustine-fryars, called properly Fryars Eremites of the Order of St. Augustine. They were Mendicants. The House was a Priory, founded A. D. 1253, by Humphrey Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, and at its Dissolution, 26 Hen. VIII. a great Part of it was granted to William Pawlet, Lord St. John, afterwards Marquis of Winchester.

Reginald Cobham gave his Messuage in London to enlarge it, in the Year 1344. Humphrey Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, re-edified this Church in the Year 1354, whose Body was there buried in the Choir. The small spired Steeple of this Church was overthrown by a Tempest of Wind in the Year 1362, but was raised anew, and was standing in the Year 1603, in a very dangerous, tottering Condition; but such was the venerable Regard the City had of it, that a Petition being preferred to the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, by the Inhabitants of St. Peter le Poor, they readily concurred to promote the Repair thereof all they could, by using their Interest with the Marquis of Winchester, to whom the Property of that Monastery and the Lands adjoining belonged, and for that Purpose drew up a Letter to him, in the most pathetic Words, and moving Arguments, exciting him to go in Hand with that Work; which was as followeth:

Right Honourable, my very good Lord,

City Petition to the Marquis of Winchester.

"There hath been offered of late unto this Court a most just and earnest Petition, by divers of the chiefest of the Parish of St. Peter le Poor in London, to move us to be humble Suitors unto your Lordship, in a Cause which is sufficient to speak for itself, without the Mediation of any other, viz. for the Repairing of the ruinous Steeple of the Church, some Time called The Augustine Fryars, now belonging to the Dutch Nation, situated in the same Parish of St. Peter le Poor, the Fall whereof (which, without speedy Prevention, is near at Hand) must needs bring with it not only a great Deformity to the whole City, it being, for Architecture, one of the beautifullest and rarest Spectacles thereof, but a fearful imminent Danger to all the Inhabitants next adjoining. Your Lordship, being moved herein (as we understand) a Year since, was pleased to give honourable Promises, with Hope of present Help; but the Effects not following, according to your honourable Intention, we are bold to renew the said Suit again, eftsoons craving at your Lordship's Hands a due Consideration of so worthy a Work, as to help to build up the House of God, one of the chiefest Fountains, from whence hath sprung so great Glory to your Lordship's most noble Descendency of the Pawlets, whose Steps your Lordship must needs follow, to continue to all Posterity the Fame of so bountiful Benefactors both to the Church and Commonwealth.

"So that I trust we shall have the less Need to importune your Lordship in so reasonable a
No. 71.

"Suit: First, Because it doth principally concern your Lordship, being the Owner of the greatest Part of the said Spire, or Steeple: But especially that by disburfing of a small Sum of Money, to the Value of 50 or 60 l. your Lordship will do an excellent Work, very helpful to many, and most grateful to all, as well English as Strangers; who by this means shall have Cause to magnify to the World this so honourable and charitable an Action. And I and my Brethren shall much rejoice to be relieved herein by your Lordship's most noble Disposition, rather than to fly to the last Remedy of the Law of the Land, which in this Case hath provided a Writ, De reparatione facienda.

"Thus hoping as assuredly on your Lordship's Favour, as we pray incessantly for your continual Felicity, we humbly take Leave of your Lordship. From London the 4th of August 1600.

Your Lordship's humbly to be commanded,

Thomas Lowe,
Leonard Holiday,
Robert Hampson,
Ry. Godard,
John Wattes,
Thomas Smythe,
William Craven,
Humphrey Weld,

Nicholas Mosly, Mayor.
Richard Markin,
John Hart,
Henry Billingsly,
Stephen Soame,
William Ryder,
John Gerrard,
Thomas Bennett.

But this took no Effect.

This House was valued at 57 l. &c. and was surrendered the 12th of November, in the 30th of Henry VIII.

There lie buried in this Fryars Church, among many others of less Note, Edmond, first Son of Joan, Mother to King Richard II. 1375.

Lady Margery de Ilderton, in Com. Northumberland. buried in Augustine Fryars, London. Her Will bore Date, 1338.

Guy de Mericke, Earl of St. Paul.

In the middle Isle Sir Humphrey Bobun, Earl of Hereford and Essex, Lord of Brecknock, who died 1361.

Richard, the great Earl of Arundel, Surrey, and Warren, beheaded 1397.

Sir Francis Courtney, Earl of Pembroke, who married Alice, Sister to the Earl of Oxford.

The Lord John Vere, Earl of Oxford, beheaded on Tower-hill, 1463.

Aubrey de Vere, Son and Heir to the Earl of Oxford.

Sir William Bourser, Lord Fitz-Warren.

Dame Jane Norris, Lady Bedford.

Anne, Daughter to John Viscount Welles.

In St. John's Chapel, John, Son of Sir John Wingsfield.

The Lord Angleure of France. By him the Lord Tremayle of France.

In the Chapter-house, many of the Barons, slain at Barnet Field, 1471.

In the Body of the Church, Sir Thomas Courtney, Son to the Earl of Devonshire, and by him his Sister, wedded to Chevestone.

Between St. James's Altar, and St. Mary's, lay the Lord William, Marquis of Barkeley, and Earl of Nottingham, and Dame Joan, his Wife.

This William, Marquis of Barkeley, by his Last Will, bearing Date, Feb. 6, 1491, bequeathed

cient Priory of Augustine-fryars.

his Body to be buried here in the Fryars of Augustine: And two Fryars to sing perpetually in the White-fryars Church in Fleet-street, in the Suburbs of London, for the Testator's Soul, and the Soul of Thomas Barkeley, his Son, &c. Sir Tho. Brandon, Knight, who married the Lady Marchioness, bequeathed by his Will, Anno 1509, to these Fryars Augustines, 60 l. for a perpetual Memory to be had of the said Lord Marquis Barkeley, and the said Lady his Wife: And his own, to be buried in the Fryars Preachers, London.

William Collingborne, Esq; beheaded, 1484.

Sir James Tirrell, Sir John Windany, Knights, beheaded 1502.

Edward Duke of Buckingham, beheaded 1521.

Gwiscard, Earl of Huntington.

Some also of the antient Family of the Scots of Stapleford Tawney, in Essex, seem to have been here interred. William Scot, of the same Place, Esq; by his last Will, bearing Date 1490, willed his Executors with his Goods, as lone as they goodly may, to be seyd and songe for his Soule and other Soules atoselepd [viz. of his fadyr and Modyr, Benefactours, and al Chyisten Soules] in the Cobent Chyrch of the Freers Austyns of London, by the Freers of the seyd Place, xxx Masses, which bene call'd a Trental of St. Gregory, &c. Also, in the seyd Cobent Chyrche of Freers Augustines, by the Cobent of the seyd Place, a Dirige and Mass of Requiem by Note, if it happen hym there to decease. And to the same Freers for the same Dirige and Mass to be kept, that is to sey, the Principal thereat, being xl to the Pyour, xl to the Freers which shall song the said Mass of Requiem, xii d. to every other Freer of the same House being a Pyest, and helpin gat the same Dirige and Mass viii d. and to every other Freer of the same House, being no Pyest, helping therein likewise iii d.

That Portion of this Church which was East, and not granted to these Strangers, the aforesaid Pawlet, Earl of Wilts, obtained in the fourth also of the said King, who of his special Grace granted him totam superiorem partem Ecclesie nuper fratrum Augustinen. infra Civitatem London. viz. Le Quere, La Cros Ile, & capellas ibidem.

This other Part then, namely, the Steeple, Choir, and Side Isles to the Choir adjoining, the Earl reserved to Household Uses, as for Stowage of Corn, Coal, and other Things. His Son and Heir, Marquis of Winchester, sold the Monuments of Noblemen (there buried) in great Number, the Pavé Stones, and whatsoever, (which cost many thousands) for one hundred Pounds, and in Place thereof made Stabling for Horses. He caused the Lead to be taken off the Roofs of the Church, and laid Tile instead thereof; which Exchange of Lead for Tile proved not so profitable as he looked for, but rather to his Disadvantage.

Dutch Church in Augustine-
fryars.

In the 4th of King Edward VI. he granted by Letters Patents, dated the 24th of July 1551, all that Church, except the Choir, to John Alasco, and a Congregation of Germans, and other Strangers fled hither for the Sake of Religion, and to their Successors, in puram & liberam Eleemosynam; and the Church to be called The Temple of the Lord Jesus; and Alasco to be the first Superintendent, and Gualter de Leone, Martinus Flandrus, Francis Riverius, and Richardus Gallus, to be the four first Ministers: And this Gift hath been confirmed by the successive Princes to the Dutch Strangers, and remains to them to this Day, for the holy Uses of Prayer, Preaching and Administration of the Sacraments. This is a very spacious and comely Church, tho' but a Part of that Church that belonged to the Augustine-fryars: There is a handsome Library erected on the West Part of it, which is very ornamental as well as useful: And the Ministers, which are now reduced to two, have convenient Houses allotted them in the said Fryars.

The aforesaid Charter is extant in the Collection of Records to The History of the Reformation, Vol. II. Book I. Numb. LI.

It has been customary for the Dutch and Walloon Churches to pay a Deference to every Bishop of London, and to each Lord-Mayor, upon their first Access to their Dignity and Charge, and to present them with a Piece of Plate. Their Ministers and Elders of both Churches, as Representatives of the whole, at some convenient Time, make their Appearance before them, and one of the Ministers makes a short Speech to the Bishop in Latin, to the Mayor in English. The Sum of what is spoken to the Bishop is, "To shew the original Plantation of their Church in London, by a Charter of King Edward VI. in the Year 1550, until they, with many other pious Christians, were fain to fly the Realm in the Reign of Queen Mary: But yet, that in the Year 1558, upon the Success of the Reformed Religion, restored under Queen Elizabeth, they began to fly hither again by little and little, as to a Sanctuary, from the Persecution of the Duke D'Alva, the Guises, and Prince of Parma; she, a true Mother in Israel, restoring them the Place and Privileges granted them by King Edward. That King James I. her Successor, willed this Liberty of theirs to remain to them inviolate. That their Ministers have all along, to that Time, been Men of Piety and Learning, preserving Peace and Brotherhood with the English Churches. And that as for the Bishops of this Diocese of London, it appeared from their Records, how lovingly in their Restoration Grindal received them, and what Edwin Sandys, the next Bishop, most prudently performed, in appeasing certain unseasonable Controversies arisen among them, and how brotherly all the rest of the Bishops of London since had offered their Assurances to them. The like they certainly promised themselves from him; and so congratulating him on his Preferment, and his Merit of it, for his Piety and Eloquence, so well known in Court, in the University, in the City, and whole Kingdom, they conclude with a Prayer, That God would endue him with his Holy Spirit, that by his Ministry the Glory of God might be promoted, and his Church edified."

The Import of their Address to the Lord-Mayor, is, "That they appear there before his Honour, to congratulate him in the Name of their Congregations, according to their yearly Custom. They pray Almighty God, by his Holy Spirit, to qualify him for the great Du"ties

“ties belonging to his high Office and Calling,
“that God’s Glory may be advanced, and the “Church edified. And lastly, beseeching him,
“according to the Example of his Predecessors,
“to be favourable unto them Strangers, fled hi“ther, at first, for the true Profession of the “Gospel, and hitherto charitably entertained “in this Honourable City.” And then they dine with the Lord-Mayor.

Upon the Access of King James I. to the Crown of Great Britain, Anno 1603, the said Church making their humble Address to him, he answered them in French, “That the Queen “departed made herself renowned through the “whole World by two Things; the one was,
“that she always entertained and cherished the “Service of God in the Kingdom; and the “other, her Hospitality towards Strangers.
“Which Commendation of hers he was de“sirous to inherit. That if Occasion had offered “itself, when he was at a Distance, and lived
“as in a Corner of the World, he would have “made known his good Affection to them: But “now that it had pleased God to constitute him “King of this Country, he swore to them, that “if any molested them in their Churches, they “addressing to him, he would avenge them.
“And that tho’ they were not his proper Subjects, “yet he would maintain and cherish them, as “much as any Prince in the World.” He took Notice also of their former good Deserts to the Queen and Kingdom; that is, “How they “had always prayed for the late Queen, and “never gone beyond the Limits of their Duty,
“and how they had enriched the Realm with “many Arts, Manufactures, and Sciences useful
“to the Publick.”

Further, in the Year 1642, they preferred a Petition to the House of Lords, in Behalf of themselves and of the reformed Foreign Churches in the Realm; as in Norwich, Colchester, Canterbury, Sandwich, &c. to this Purpose: “That “there might be an Ordinance of Parliament for “settling the Liberty and Exercise of their Reli“gion and Discipline, as they were used beyond
“the Seas respectively in the reformed Churches “of their several Nations: And which they had “hitherto enjoyed by the Charter of King Edward VI. of ever-blessed Memory, authorized “by his Parliament, and the gracious Favour of “all the succeeding Princes.” Particularly,

“First, That they might have free Liberty to “chuse and appoint their own Ministers and all “other Officers belonging to their Churches, ac“cording to their Discipline.

“Secondly, That no Member of their Congre“gations, being under the Censure of their Dis“cipline, by reason of some scandalous Offence “committed, might be received as Member of “any other Church without a Certification from “his own Church.

“Thirdly, That no Church or Congregation
“of Foreigners should be authorized in this “Realm, which was not subject respectively to the “Synods of their several Nations.” They added Reasons for their third Article.

Hereupon on Saturday, Jan. 21, 1642, (by Report of the Earl of Northumberland) the House ordered, “That there be an Ordinance of Parlia“ment for settling of the Liberty and Exercise

“of their Religion and Discipline, as they are “used beyond the Seas respectively in the re“formed Churches of their several Nations,
“which they have hitherto enjoyed by the Char“ter of King Edward VI. authorized by Parlia“ment, and the Favour of all succeeding Princes
“of the reformed Religion, Queen Elizabeth, “King James, and his Majesty that now is. In “particular, First, &c. as above in the three Ar“ticles.”

About the Year 1704, this Dutch Congregation in Augustine-fryars built, at their common Charge, upon a Piece of Ground in Middle Moor-fields, purchased by them, a handsome Alms-House, containing twenty-six Rooms, for maintaining their Poor, either Men or Women, besides one complete Room where the Elders and Deacons meet weekly to pay the Pensions of the Alms-Folks, or to do other Business relating to their Poor. The Pensions are either more or less, according as their Necessities require. The Rooms are not so appropriated to the Dutch Nation, but that any English Woman, whose Husband had been a Member of the said Church, is capable of being admitted. And oftentimes it happens, that there be more English than Dutch harboured there.

Since this Church hath been appropriated to the Use of the Dutch Nation, few have been buried here, except the Ministers belonging to it, and the Elders, or others, of more eminent Quality, or Wealth. Such as have Monuments, or Stones, with Inscriptions, are these that follow:

Against the East Wall of the North Isle, a Monument for Margaret Laurence, Daughter and Heir of Laurence Huyssen Heer Van Weelde in Zeeland. She was married to Colonel Henry Cornwall of Bredwardine, in the County of Hereford.
Died April 21, 1692.

Elizabeth Philippine, Widow of Wylen Albert,
George Graaf tot Bronchorst, and Lamborg Stirum, born Baroneß of Boetzlaer. Died October 1692.

In the South Isle is the common Place of Burial for the Ministers of the Church; tho’ some others are also here interred.

Arnoldina, Daughter of the Heer Arnold Citters, Ordinary Ambassador of the States General to his Majesty of Great Britain. She died June 5, 1686, aged 5 Years.

Here is a very handsome Marble Monument set up for Sir Dennis Dutry, who died in the Year 1728; the Inscription, as upon most of the other, is in the Dutch Language.

At the East End of this Church, between the two Isles, is a Rising with several Steps both from the North and South Sides, and likewise on the West, unto a large Platform, whereon is placed a long Table with Seats against the Wall, and Forms round, for the Use of the holy Communion. On the East Wall at a due Height are the Ten Commandments in Dutch, largely written in golden Letters.

On the West End over the Skreen is the Library, inscribed thus: Ecclesie Londino-Belgicae Bibliotheca, extructa sumptibus Mariae Dubois, 1659.

In this Library are divers valuable MSS and Letters of Calvin, Peter Martyr, and other foreign Reformers.

The Church is very large and spacious, supported with two Rows of Stone Pillars. The Seats are all long Benches lined with green Cloth, stuffed for easy sitting. The Floor with Deal-Boards laid over the Stones for Warmth: The Windows on the South Side have painted on them JESUS TEMPLE in several Places.

The present State of this Dutch Church in Augustine-fryars, and the Congregation of Strangers, or the Children of Strangers, belonging to it, is thus:

They have two Ministers, who preach twice every Sunday, and once in the Week besides; and they administer the Holy Sacrament monthly, the last Sunday in the Month; and exchange Churches every first Sunday in the Month with the Walloon Congregation, for their Administration of the Sacrament, their own Church in Threadneedle-street being too small for them. The Ministers have allowed them a good yearly Salary, and Houses to dwell in, conveniently situated, near the said Church, and a competent Subsistence for their Widows. M. Vandermerse, a Merchant, and one of their Elders, built a House, at his own Cost, for one of the Ministers, on which he laid out 400 l. and afterwards finished it within, at a considerable farther Expence, greatly to his Commendation, and the lasting Memory of his Charity, and good Will to the Church.

They maintain their Poor at their own Charge, which stands them in near 1200 l. per Ann. Part of which they collect every Sunday, and Week-day, when there is a Sermon, at the Church door, by Deacons of the Church, who stand there with Basons to receive what the People are pleased to put in.

Near this Church was formerly a Glass-house, where Venice Glasses were made, and Venetians employed in the Work: And Mr. James Howel, an ingenious Man in King James I's Reign, was Steward to this House (who was afterwards Clerk of the Council to King Charles I.) When he left this Place, scarce able to bear the continual Heat of it, he thus wittily expressed himself, That had he continued still Steward, he should in a short Time have melted away to nothing among those hot Venetians. This House stood on the Ground where now are built handsome Dwelling-Houses and Pinner's-Hall.

Drapers-Hall. Adjoining to the South-West Side of the Marquis of Winchester's Garden was another large House and Garden that reached into Throgmorton-street, on whose Site Drapers-Hall and Gardens now stand. This was the Palace of Lord Cromwell, Earl of Essex, Vicar-General to K. Hen. VIII.

Mr. Stow makes great Complaints of this Lord's ill Usage of his Father, who had a Garden and Summer-House joining to the North Pales of my Lord's Garden: This Summer-House was loosed from the Ground, and carried on Rowlers into his Father's Garden, 22 Feet, without any Warning given to him, or being able to obtain any other Answer, when he spoke of it to the Surveyors of the Work, than, That their Master had commanded them so to do.

And more to the West in Throgmorton-street was another great House, appertaining to the Abbot of St. Alban's; and on the South Side thereof a large Free-School, belonging to the dissolved Hospital of St. Anthony in Threadneedle-street.

On the North Side of Threadneedle-street, near St. Anthony's Hospital, where the French Church now stands, was formerly the Hospital of St. Anthony, and some Time a Cell too of St. Anthony of Vienna. For King Henry III. granted to the Brotherhood of St. Anthony of Vienna a Place amongst the Jews, which was some Time their Synagogue, and had been built by them, about the Year 1231. But the Christians obtained of the King, that it should be dedicated to our Blessed Lady: And since, an Hospital being there built, was called St. Anthony's of London. It was founded in the Parish of St. Bennet Finke, for a Master, two Priests, one School-master, and twelve poor Men: After which Foundation, amongst other Things given to this Hospital, one was a Messuage and Garden, [whereon was built the fair large Free-School, mentioned above] and one other Parcel of Ground, containing 37 Feet in Length, and 18 Feet in Breadth, in the Parish of St. Bennet Finke. This was given to the Master of the Hospital, to the enlarging of their Church, and House to the same belonging, for a Master, 14 Priests, &c. in the 7th of Henry VI.

Moreover King Henry VI. in the 20th of his Reign, gave unto John Carpenter, Doctor of Divinity, Master of St. Anthony's Hospital, and to his Brethren and their Successors for ever, his Manor of Ponington, with the Appurtenances, with certain Pensions and Portions of Milburn, Turneworth, Charlton, and Up-wimburne, in the County of Southampton, towards the Maintenance of five Scholars in the University of Oxford, to be brought up in the Faculty of Arts, after the Rate of 10 d. per Week for every Scholar: So that the said Scholars, before their going to Oxford, be first instructed in the Rudiments of Grammar at the College of Eaton, founded by the said King.

In the Year 1474, Edward the IVth granted to William Say, Batchelor of Divinity, Master of the Hospital of St. Anthony's, to have Priests, Clerks, Scholars, poor Men, and Brethren of the same, Clerks or Laymen, Choristers, Proctors, Messengers, Servants in Household, and other Things whatsoever, like as the Prior and Convent of St. Anthony of Vienna, &c. This Hospital was annexed, united, and appropriated unto the Collegiate Church of St. George in Windsor, about the Year 1485, as was reported by Sir Anthony Baker, Master of the said Hospital, to Sir John Woolfborne, Knt. and other Commissioners in the 37th of Henry VIII.

The Proctors of this House were to collect the Benevolence of charitable Persons towards the Building and Supporting thereof: And among other Things remarkable in this Place, Mr. Stow says, he remembered that the Officers charged with the Oversight of the Markets in this City, did several times take from the Market-People Pigs starved, or otherwise unwholesome for Man's Sustenance; these they used to slit in the Ear; and one of the Proctors for St. Anthony's having tied a Bell about the Neck of one of them, and turned it to feed on the Dunghills, no Man would hurt or take take it up; but if any gave them Bread, or other Feeding, such they would know, watch for, and daily follow, whining till they had somewhat given them: From whence arose the Proverb, That such-a-one would follow such-a-one, and whine like an Anthony Pig. But if one of these Pigs grew to be fat, and came to good Liking, as oftentimes they would, then the Proctor took it up for the Use of the Hospital.

Since the said annexing this Hospital to Windsor College, to wit, in the Year 1499, the 14th of Henry VII. Sir John Tate, some Time Ale-brewer, then a Mercer, caused his Brew-house, called the Swan, near adjoining to the said Free Chapel, College, or Hospital of St. Anthony, to be taken down for the enlarging of the Church, which was then newly built; toward the Building whereof the said Tate gave great Sums of Money.

This goodly Foundation having a Free-School and Alms-Houses for poor Men, built of hard Stone, adjoining to the West End of the Church, was of old Time confirmed by Henry VI. in the Year 1447. The outward Work of this new Church was finished in the Year 1501.

Sir John Tate deceased 1514, and was there buried in a Monument by him prepared, as appeareth by an Indenture Tripartite, made between the said John Tate, the Dean of Windsor, and William Milbourne, Chamberlain.

Walter Champion, Draper, one of the Sheriffs of London, 1529, was buried there, and gave to the Beadmen 20*l.* The Lands, by Year, of this Hospital were valued, in the 37th Year of Henry VIII. to be 55*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Here was also an antient Marble Tomb of John Taylor, some Time Master of the Rolls, remaining long after the French enjoyed the Church, viz.

Religionis interest Monumenta extrui & ornari.

Johannes Taylor Trigeminor. natu primus, Illustrissimo Rege Henrico VIII^o imperante, Archi-chartophylax, in hac sacra Aede teneris ab unguiculis enutritus, ad Laudem Dei Omnipotentis, & istius celebris & Beatissimi Patris Antonii Ecclesie Ornamentum & Decus, ad Oblivionis Procacitatem, quæ rerum omnium citius obfuscet memoriam, effugandam, hoc vivus & superstes posuit, quia præstat tempestive quam sero sapere, Executoribus negligentibus ac avaris hujusmodi Cûram relinquendo, Anno Dom. MDXXXII.

Quocunq; ingrederis, sequitur mors corporis umbram.

One Johnson (a School-master here) became a Prebendary of Windsor, and then (by little and little) spoiled this Hospital: He first dissolved the Choir, conveyed away the Plate and Ornaments, then the Bells, and, lastly, put out the Alms-Men from their Houses, appointing them Portions of 12*d.* the Week to each: But afterwards their Houses, with others, were let out for Rent, and the Church was a preaching Place for the French Nation, who hold it of the Church of Windsor.

This School was commended in the Reign of Henry VI. and since also commended above others; but now it is decayed, and come to nothing.

The Scholars of this School used at a certain

Time of the Year to go in Procession. In the Year 1562, on the 15th Day of September, there set out from Mile-End two hundred Children of this St. Anthony's School, and so along through Aldgate down Cornhill to the Stocks, and so to the Fryar Augustine's, with Streamers and Flags, and Drums beating.

The French and Walloon Church is still in this Place, having been new built after the Ruins of the former Church by the great Fire.

At the West Extremity of this Ward, now called Scalding-Alley, was formerly a large House known by the Name of Scalding-House, or Scalding-wicke; because the Ground, for the most part, was then employed by Poulterers, who dwelt in the High-street, from Stocks-market to the great Conduit. Their Poultry, which they sold at their Stalls, was scalded in this Place. The Street yet bears the Name of the Poultry. This Scalding-alley was once parted by the Water of Walbrook from Cheap Ward.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward at present are,

First, Six Churches. (1.) Allhallows in the Wall. (2.) St. Peter's le Poor. (3.) St. Martin's Oteswick or Outwick. (4.) St. Benedict, alias Bennet-Finck or Finch. (5.) St. Bartholomew Exchange, or Little. (6.) St. Christopher's. Of which more particularly in the parochial History.

Secondly, Four Halls. (1.) Carpenters-Hall is situate almost facing the East End of Betlehem, on the South Side of London-wall-street, in a Court or Yard called Carpenters-Hall-yard, to which we enter through a large Pair of Gates. The Buildings in this Yard, and the Hall itself, are antient Timber and Plaister, in the Manner of the like Sort that escaped the Fire of London. This Hall was formerly bounded on the East by a high Stone Wall belonging to the Garden of the Marquis of Winchester; and on the South it is now joined by Drapers-Gardens. This Hall, though very old, and chiefly Timber, is not without its peculiar Ornaments.

(2.) Drapers-Hall, situate on the South Side of Throgmorton-street, in the Parish of St. Peter le Poor, is built upon the Ruins of a noble Palace erected on that Spot in the Reign of King Henry VIII. by Thomas Lord Cromwell, Earl of Essex, which upon his Attainder and Execution for High Treason devolving to the Crown, was purchased by the Company of Drapers for the Uses to which it is now applied. It was burnt down in the Fire of London 1666, and since magnificently rebuilt partly by Subscription; towards which, one Member, then in the East-India Service, gave 6000*l.* if we are rightly informed.

It is a very spacious noble Building, containing the four Sides of a Quadrangle, each Side elevated on Columns, and adorned with Arches, by which there are constituted Piazzas, and between each Arch is a Shield, Mantling, and other Fret-Work. To this Hall belongs a large and pleasant Garden, with Walks, much frequented by genteel Citizens at convenient Hours. The Room called the Hall is adorned within with a stately Screen, Enrichment and fine Wainscot; the Pictures of King William III. King George I. King George II. at full Length; and a three Quarter Length, an antient Picture, of Henry Fitz-Alwine,

10 E

a Dra-

a Draper, and first Lord-Mayor of London: And there are several large Rooms wainscotted with Oak; such as the Court-Room, so called, at the West End of which hangs an original Picture of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots, at full Length, with King James her Infant Son in her Hand; supposed to be a Picture of great Value. This leads into a long Gallery, at the South End whereof is a Door into the Apartments for the Clerk and Offices: At the North End, a folding Sash-door opens into a grand square Room, called the Ladies Chamber, where the Company used, a few Years ago, to entertain their Wives and Friends with a Ball at certain Seasons, especially on the Day of declaring the Election of their Master and Wardens. In the Center of this Chamber hangs a large and beautiful Crystal cut Chandelier, a Present from the late Sir Joseph Eyles, when he served the Office of Sheriff. And over the Chimney-piece is a fine Picture of Sir Robert Clayton, Lord-Mayor of London in 167-- . Out of the West Side of this Room, a Passage leads to a Place called the Record Room; the Door to which is of Iron. It is very strongly built over the Passage that leads into the Garden, and covered with a Cistern, containing such a Body of Water, as at any Time to be ready and sufficient to defend this Apartment from Fire that might spread from the adjacent Buildings.

Merchant
Taylors-
Hall.

(3.) Merchant-Taylors-Hall, situate near the South-East Corner of Threadneedle-street, and in the Parish of St. Martin Outwich, is built upon the Site of an antient House possessed by one Edmund Crepin, or Dominus Crepin, who in the Year 1331 sold it to John of Yakesley, the King's Pavilion-maker, for the Use of the Linnen Armourers, or Taylors, of the Guild and Fraternity of St. John Baptist, who at that Time met at a House or Hall on the Back-side of the Red Lion in Basing-lane.

This Merchant-Taylors-Hall is a spacious Building, having at the Entrance, in the Front, a handsome large Door-Cafe, adorned with two Demy Columns, their Entablature and Pediment of the Composite Order; and the Inside is adorned with Hangings, which contain the History of their Patron St. John Baptist; and which, though old, are very curious and valuable.

Pinner's-
Hall.

(4.) Pinner's or Pinmakers-Hall, situate at the S. E. Corner of Great Winchester-street. It is most noted for being let out for a Meeting of Independents, whose Lectures are preached here with great Applause.

The Bank.

Thirdly, Publick Offices. (1. The Bank of England, which is situate close to the East End of St. Christopher's Church, on the Site of the late House and Garden of Sir John Houlton, and some other Tenements, to make its Way backward into Bartholomew-lane. It stands in too narrow a Place, near to the confined West Extremity of Threadneedle-street; but it is a most magnificent Structure; the Front next the Street is about eighty Feet in Length, adorned with Columns, Entablature, &c. of the Ionick Order. There is a handsome Court-yard between this and the main Building, which, like the other, is of Stone, and adorned with Pillars, Pilasters, Entablature, and triangular Pediment of the Corinthian Order. The Hall is 79 Feet in Length, and 40 in Breadth, is wainscotted about eight Feet high, has a fine

Fret-work Ceiling, and a large Venetian Window at the West End of it. Beyond this is another Quadrangle, with an Arcade on the East and West Sides of it; and on the North is the Accountant's Office, which is 60 Feet long, and 28 Feet broad. There are handsome Apartments over this and the other Sides of the Quadrangle, with a fine Stair-case adorned with Fret-work; and under it are large Vaults, that have very strong Walls and Iron Gates for the Preservation of the Cash.

The back Entrance from Bartholomew-Lane is by a grand Gateway, which opens into a commodious and spacious Court-yard for Coaches or Waggons that come frequently loaded with Gold and Silver Bullion.

The Bank was established by Act of Parliament, Anno 1693, 5 and 6 William and Mary, Chap. 20. for a Loan of 1,200,000 l. subscribed and paid in to the Government at several Times; which Act laid an additional Duty on Tonnage, Excise, &c. which it was proposed would bring into the Exchequer 140,000 l. per Ann. of which 100,000 l. was secured to the Bank, as Interest, &c. for the said 1,200,000 l. viz. 96,000 l. Interest, at eight per Cent. per Ann. and the 4000 l. for Salaries and Incidents; upon which Basis the Governor and Company of the Bank of England were incorporated, with a Power to make By-Laws, and act in all other Respects as a legal Corporation for thirteen Years.

By their Charter they were constituted a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Directors, thirteen of whom, whereof the Governor, or Deputy-Governor, to be one, made a Court; who were invested with the Power of Management, except at General Courts of all the Members, which were to be held four Times a Year, or oftner, if demanded by nine Members, who had then each 500 l. Stock. And the Sum of 4000 l. in Capital Stock qualified a Member for Governor; 3000 l. for Deputy-Governor; and 2000 l. for Director: And the Appointment of Officers, and their Salaries, was by the Majority of such Members as had in this Stock 500 l. and the Choice to be annually.

Upon this Foot the Bank continued till the Year 1696, when, by reason of the ill State of the Coin, the selfish Practices of some Persons, &c. the Credit both of the Exchequer and Bank were low, greater Demands being made upon the latter than they were able to answer; and the Tallies going at 50, or upwards, per Cent. Discount, an Act was made Anno 1696, 8 and 9 Will. III. Chap. 20. for restoring Credit to both, whereby any Person might make new Subscriptions to the Bank, which was obliged to take them four Fifths in Tallies (upon a Par) and one Fifth in Bank Notes, by which Means the Capital Stock of the Bank was enlarged, the Demand on their Notes lessened, their Credit revived, and the Discount on Tallies reduced much lower, the Government allowing eight per Cent. for all subscribed as abovesaid, until the Funds might come in, which would pay off in Course such Tallies, and the Bank was to make a Dividend of the Principal to the Members, as those Tallies were from Time to Time paid off.

Samuel Holding, Esq;

Henry Herring, Esq;

Matthew Howard, Esq;

William Snelling, Esq;

James Spilman, Esq;

Charles Savage, Esq;

Mr. Rob. Thornton.

In the Year 1707, Nathanael Tench, Esq; a worthy and intelligent Citizen, wrote a Defence of this Bank; being a Reply to a Pamphlet, called, Remarks upon the Bank of England; also to two other Pamphlets wrote against the Bank, one intitled, A short View of the apparent Danger and Mischiefs from the Bank of England; the other, Reasons offered against the Continuance of the Bank, in a Letter to a Member of Parliament. These Remarks and Pamphlets were thrown abroad, to prejudice the Parliament against granting a further Enlargement of Time to the Bank. The chief Purpose of this Defence was to vindicate a Corporation, and the Management thereof; not so much from Crimes they had already been guilty of in the Experiment of eleven or twelve Years, as the Fear of what they might do hereafter. For it was acknowledged by their bitterest Enemies, even in their Treatises wrote against it, That the Bank had been serviceable to the Government, and that the Managers thereof had not been guilty of those Villainies and Knaveries, which they supposed their Successors might be: But that it was a necessary Consequence, that by a further Enlargement of their Time (if any such they should have) either they, or their Successors, might, for Time to come, so prevaricate, as to be guilty of those Crimes, which they took upon them to suppose; though hereof was not the least Proof brought.

This Vindication of the Bank thus concludes :
“ That it might be with Truth concluded, that “ since their first Establishment, (which was then “ about 12 or 13 Years) they never bought one “ Foot of Land, they never monopolized any “ one Commodity. That they had been so far “ from obstructing Trade, that they had very “ much encouraged and enlarged it, by discount“ tenancing Foreign and Inland Bills of Ex“ change; and by lending Money upon Notes,
“ to very great Sums, at very low Interest. That “ they had never put any Hardships upon the “ Government, as those Authors would insin“ ate; but had all Times served it to the utmost
“ of their Power. That they had been so far “ from raising the Interest of Money, that they “ were the great, if not the only, Cause of lower“ ing it. That they had never concerned them“ selves in the Election of any one Member of “ Parliament, nor ever advanced a single Penny “ to influence any Election. Neither could any “ Man complain, that he did not receive his “ Money on Demand, that called for it. In short,
“ that notwithstanding the Clamour and Noise “ their Adversaries made against them, they had “ not brought any Instance, that they had been “ guilty

"guilty of any base or unworthy Action, in any "one Fact committed by them, since their first "Establishment. So that all the Clamour of "their Ill-willers had been raised upon a bare "Suspicion of what their Successors might do
"hereafter."

The BANK of ENGLAND was incorporated A. D. 1693, and is managed by a Governor, Deputy-Governor, and twenty-four Directors, chosen annually in the first whole Week in April, under this Restriction, that eighteen Directors at least shall be chosen every Year.

South-
Sea-House

2. The South-Sea-House, which is situate at the N. E. Extremity of Threadneedle-street, and Part in Bishopsgate Ward, faces the Parish-Church of St. Martin Outwich forward, and the Parish-Church of St. Peter le Poor in Broad-street with its back Front, which was once the only Office of this Company; and, before its Institution, this Part was the Excise-Office. As to the new Building, it is a most magnificent Structure of Brick and Stone, about a Quadrangle, supported by Stone Pillars of the Tuscan Order, which form a fine Piazza. There is a beautiful Front of the Dorick Order in Threadneedle-street. The Walls are of a very great Thickness, and there are Vaults underneath the House, arched over, to preserve their Treasure and rich Merchandize from Fire. The several Offices for the Business of the Company are admirably well disposed; and the great Hall for Sales, the Dining-Room, Galleries, and Chambers, are hardly to be paralleled.

The Transactions of the South-Sea Company having made so much Noise in the World, and the Consequences of them having been so fatal to a great Number of People, of which many yet feel the unhappy Effects, a distinct Account of its Foundation, &c. cannot be thought improper in such a Collection as this:

Abstract of the Charter of the Governors and Company of Merchants of Great-Britain trading to the South-Seas, and other Parts of America, and for encouraging the Fishery, founded upon an Act of Parliament establishing the said Company.

Date and Recital of the Act.

"The Charter is dated the eighth of September, 1711, and recites the Act for paying the publick Debts, and settling the Trade to the "South-Seas and other Parts of America, and for encouraging the Fishery; and the Settlement thereby made of a Fund of five hundred and sixty-eight thousand two hundred and seventy-nine Pounds ten Shillings per Ann. to pay an Annuity of six Pounds per Cent. for all the publick Debts, to be provided for by the said Act, computed at nine Millions four hundred and seventy-one thousand three hundred and twenty-five Pounds, and the Power thereby granted to her Majesty to incorporate the Proprietors of the said Debts, and to appoint Commissioners for taking Subscriptions toward the joint Stock of the Corporation, by the said Act directed to be erected for carrying on the Trade to the South-Seas, and for encouraging the Fishery; and the Clause of the Act for allowing the Company eight thousand Pounds per Ann. towards the Charge of Management.

"And the Charter further recites, That two Commissions had been granted for taking the said Subscriptions; the one dated the twenty-seventh of June, and the other the eleventh of July, 1711. And that there appears to have been subscribed, pursuant to the said Act and Commissions, before the last Day of July 1711, the Sum of three Millions four hundred and five thousand five hundred and fifty-nine Pounds twelve Shillings and seven Pence, or thereabouts; and that the said Subscriptions have been paid and answered by Delivery, within the Time for that Purpose limited, in the several Species provided for by the Act, to the Amount in Principal Money of such Subscriptions.

"Then her Majesty incorporates the present Subscribers, and all the Proprietors of the several Species intended to be provided for by the Act who should hereafter subscribe, to be one Body Politick and Corporate, by the Name of The Governor and Company of Merchants of Great-Britain trading to the South-Seas and other Parts of America, and for encouraging the Fishery; with Power to purchase Lands, &c. not exceeding one thousand Pounds per Ann. and to sell, grant, or dispose of the same Lands, &c. and to sue and be sued.

"And that the total Sum of all Tallies, &c. and Sum of Money, with the Interest, to be computed as the said Act directs, subscribed or put into the joint Stock, and to be subscribed and put into the same, pursuant to the said Act, shall be deemed and called the Common Capital and Principal Stock of the said Company; and all Persons concerned to have a Share in the Annuity or Fund in Proportion to their Stock, and to become Members of the Company, and be admitted without Fee or Charge.

"Her Majesty commands the High Treasurer and Commissioners of the Treasury for the Time being, and the other Officers, to cause to be paid to the Company the aforesaid annual Sum of six Pounds per Cent. for the whole Capital Stock, and also the eight thousand Pounds per Ann. towards the Charge of Management of the said Company, according to the said Act, to such Person or Persons as the Company,

“ The Company to have from the first of August, 1711, for ever, the sole Trade and Traffick to America, within the Limits prescribed by the Act and Charter.

Not to call in above 10l. per Cent. &c.

“ That the Company may, at a General Court or Courts, call for from the Members such Money as the General Court shall think fit to carry on the Trade, in Proportion to each Person's Share in the Capital Stock, not exceeding ten Pounds per Cent., which Money so called in shall be deemed and called Additional Stock.

The Company's Bonds to be taken for Customs.

“ The Commissioners of the Customs are required to take the Company's Bonds, under their Common Seal, for the Customs of Goods bondable imported.

Privileges of the Company.

“ Her Majesty grants to the Company the Enjoyment of all Privileges in the City of London, as fully as any Company, established by Letters Patent granted by her Majesty or her Predecessors, at present do or may enjoy, or formerly did or might enjoy.

One per Cent. for the Fishery.

“ Her Majesty, pursuant to the Act, directs the Company to raise a Stock of One per Cent. on the Capital Stock; the same to be raised by the Members, in Proportion to their Stock; the said Stock to be kept apart, and always employed in the improving, enlarging, and carrying on the Fishery of this Realm, or other Fishery, for the Benefit and Use of the Members of the Company, in Proportion to their Stock: Nevertheless, no other of her Majesty's Subjects are to be excluded from the Fishing-Trade: And the said One per Cent. not to be called for, but by Order of a General Court, summoned and assembled for that Purpose, on fourteen Days publick Notice in the Gazette.

Members refusing to pay upon Call, &c. not to transfer or receive Dividends.

“ Members of the said Company neglecting to pay Money called in by General Courts, or being otherwise indebted to the Company, are not to be permitted to transfer their Stock, without Consent of the Court of Directors; neither shall such Defaulter receive any Dividend during their Default.

Clause in Favour of the Bank.

“ The Company shall not, at any Time or Times hereafter, borrow, owe, or take up any Sum or Sums of Money, on their Bills or Notes payable at Demand, or at any less Time than six Months from the borrowing thereof; or discount any Bills of Exchange, or other “ Bills or Notes whatsoever; or keep any Book or Cash for any Person or Persons, Bodies Politick or Corporate whatsoever, other than their own proper Books, Money, and Cash; neither shall any of the Powers, Privileges, Immunities, Exemptions, or Advantages granted to the said Company, extend, or be construed to extend, or be used to the Prejudice of the Privileges of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England. Then follows a Clause for securing the Privileges of the East-India Company; and another to make the yearly Fund subject to Redemption.

“ The Court of Directors may, pursuant to the said Act, at any Time after the twenty-fifth of December, 1711, if they think fit, admit and take into the joint Stock of the Company, or purchase, pay off, and discharge, in order to the Admission into the joint Stock of the said Corporation, and to admit the same accordingly, all or any the Tallies and Orders made forth in Pursuance of the Act of the eighth of her present Majesty, which, on the first of May, 1711, were not in the Hands of the Treasurers and Pay-masters of the publick Offices, and which shall not have been subscribed on or before the twenty-fifth of December, 1711; and that the said Tallies be admitted into the Stock for such Sums as the Principal and Interest which shall be due on the same shall amount to when admitted.”

See what has been already said of this Scheme and Company on Page 525, &c.

The Abuse of those Powers granted this Company by Parliament and the Royal Favour, brought on an Enquiry before the Parliament, in which Sir Joseph Jekyll set forth “ The Necessity of examining, without the least Delay, into the Conduct of the South-Sea Company, to see whether they had made good their Engagements, and strictly followed the Rules prescribed to them by the Act passed last Session of Parliament in their Favour; urging, that this was the most natural Way of proceeding in an Affair of so great Importance: That, on the contrary, it seemed absurd to attempt the Cure of a Distemper before they were acquainted with it; but that, as soon as it was thoroughly known, he hoped that wise Assembly should not want Schemes to apply proper Remedies to it.”

This Speech made so deep an Impression, that some Members, who offered to speak on the contrary Side, were not much listened to; and, on the other Hand, Wilfred Lawson, Esq; having supported Mr. Nevill's Motion, the Courtiers thought fit no longer to oppose it; so that, without coming to a Division, the House made the following Orders, viz.

“ 1. That the Directors of the South-Sea Company do forthwith lay before this House an Account of all their Proceedings whatsoever, relating to an Act passed the last Session of Parliament, intitled, An Act for enabling the South-Sea Company to increase their present Capital Stock and Fund, by redeeming such publick Debts and Incumbrances as are therein mentioned, and for raising Money to be applied for lessening several of East-India Company's Clause, and Redemption of the Fund.

Tallies, &c. of the 8th of the Queen how to be subscribed after the 25th of December, 1711.

Parliamentary Proceedings against this Company.

“ the publick Debts and Incumbrances, and for calling
“ in the present Exchequer Bills remaining uncan“ celled, and for making forth new Bills in lieu thereof, “ to be circulated and exchanged upon Demand at or “ near the Exchequer.

“ 2. That the Managers and Directors ap“ pointed by the Lords Commissioners of the “ Treasury, by Virtue of the said Act, do forth“ with lay before this House all such Matters
“ and Things as they have done and performed,
“ or ordered to be done and performed, in rela“ tion to the said Act.

“ 3. That the said Managers and Directors
“ do forthwith lay before this House an Account
“ of all Orders they have received from Time “ to Time from the Lords Commissioners of the “ Treasury.

“ 4. That the Directors of the South-Sea
“ Company do forthwith lay before this House
“ an Account of what Money and Exchequer
“ Bills have been received by or for the Use “ of the said Company, since the twenty-fifth “ Day of December, 1719, and the respective “ Uses and Purposes to which the same have been “ applied.

“ 5. That the said Directors do forthwith lay “ before this House an Abstract of what pub“ lick Debts and Incumbrances have been sub“ scribed to or discharged by the said Company, “ pursuant to any Act or Acts of Parliament in “ that Behalf, since the twenty fifth Day of De“ cember, 1719, and in what Manner such Sub“ scriptions were made.

“ 6. That the said Directors do forthwith “ lay before this House an Account of what “ Sum or Sums of Money have been taken up
“ or borrowed on Account of the said Company,
“ or which they stand engaged for upon Bills,
“ Bonds, or other Contracts, under their Com“ mon Seal or otherwise, since the twenty-fifth “ Day of December, 1719.”

And the House discovered so much Iniquity and Destruction to the Subscribers throughout all the Company's Proceedings, that it was thought proper, in the first place, to pass an Act to prevent the Governor, Sub-Governor, Directors, Cashier, &c. going out of the Kingdom.

In the mean time the House of Lords concurred in every Particular with the Commons, and came to the following Resolution:

Resolution of the Lords.

“ That the taking in of Stock, the transferring “ of Stock belonging to the South-Sea Company,
“ or giving Credit for the same, without a va“ luable Consideration actually paid, or suffi“ ciently secured; or the purchasing Stock by any “ Director or Agent of the South-Sea Company,
“ for the Use or Benefit of any Person in the Ad“ ministration, or any Member of either House
“ of Parliament, during such Time as the late “ Bill relating to the South-Sea Company was de“ pending last Year in Parliament, was a noto“ rious and most dangerous Corruption.”

The Directors and Value of their Estates, which on this Occasion were ordered and laid before the Parliament for their Censure, follow:

A compleat and exact Ballance of the Estates of the late
Sub-Governor, Deputy-Governor, &c. of the South-Sea Company, as delivered upon Oath to the Barons of the Exchequer; together with the Allowances out of each, thought proper, by the Grand Committee of the Honourable House of Commons, to be made to each Person respectively.

June 12. The Commons, in a Grand Committee, considered further of the State of the publick Credit, and came to several Resolutions, which, being the next Day reported by Mr. Farrer, were agreed to by the House, as follows, viz.

1. That such Persons as have borrowed Money from the South-Sea Company upon South-Sea Stock, actually transferred and pledged at the Time of borrowing, to or for the Use of the said Company; shall, upon Payment of 10 per Cent.
upon the respective Sums so borrowed, at a Time or Times to be limited, and not otherwise, be discharged from all farther Demands of the said Company, in respect of the Monies so borrowed;
and that all the Stock so transferred and pledged, together with all Dividends and Profits thereto belonging respectively, be absolutely vested in the said Company.

mons concerning

Credit.

2. That such Persons as have borrowed Money from the South-Sea Company upon Subscription-Receipts, actually pledged to the said Company at the Time of borrowing, shall, upon Payment of 10 per Cent. upon the respective Sums so borrowed, at a Time or Times to be limited, and not otherwise, be discharged of all farther Demands in respect of the Money so borrowed; and that all the Subscription-Receipts so pledged, together

gether with all Dividends and Profits thereunto belonging, be absolutely vested in the said Company.

An Author of Reputation, who wrote about the Year 1726, gives the following Account of the South-Sea Company :

"Many take this Company to have been originally intended, rather as a political Contrivance for raising a Fund of Money, to serve in the pressing Occasions of the State, than as a real Establishment for the sake of Commerce; for the Nation being exhausted of Money by the long Wars with France, it is no Wonder the Phantom of a new Company should be raised, to bring in the Subscriptions of the monied Men, as the only Expedient to be supplied with Money, without dissatisfying the People, already wore out with Subsidies, &c. Be this as it will, it is certain the Ministry never thought seriously, during the whole Course of the War, about making any Settlement on the Coasts of South America; which was the Thing wherewith the People were first flattered: Besides, that the Fund having been apparently perverted to defray the Expences of the War, its Value was so lowered, that it must in all Probability have sunk outright, but for the unexpected Help it met with in 1713.

By the Treaty of Utrecht, the Business of the French Affienta Company, which was to furnish the Spanish West-Indies with Negroes, was resigned to the English, in Favour of the South-Sea Company; which by this Turn relieved itself from its languishing Condition, and became in a Condition to vie with the most flourishing Companies of Commerce in England.

The Treaty of this Company with the Spaniards commences from May 1713, and is to hold 30 Years; during which Time, the Company is to furnish the Spanish America with 144000 Negroes of both Sexes, between fifteen and twenty-five Years of Age, found, &c. at the Rate of 4800 per Annum; and for all they furnish besides, only to pay Half the Dues to the King of Spain for the first twenty-five Years of the Farm, or Affienta. It may be added, that in Consideration of 200,000 Piafters, paid in Advance to the King of Spain, to be reimbursed as the Dues rise during the first ten Years, the Company is only to pay Dues for 4000: The King's Due is $33\frac{1}{3}$ Piafters per Head.

The chief Establishment of the French Affienta Company was Buenos Ayres, a Town of considerable Trade on the Coast of South America. The South-Sea Company, who, without changing their Name, took on them the Affienta, or Farm of Negroes, preserves the same Establishment; and it is here their Vessels disembark their Negroes, which they had purchased through all the Coasts of Africa within their Grant. The Company, it is certain, set out with good Success; and there was room to hope still better; since, besides that the Value of their Stock the first five Years rose faster, in Proportion, than that of any other Company; his Majesty, after purchasing 10,000 l. Sterling therein, was pleased to condescend to be their Governor, or first Director."

This Trade was interrupted by the late Spanish War, and has never been renewed.

In the sixth Sessions of the last Parliament, A. D. 1753, it was enacted, "That from and after the Expiration of the three Years for which the present Governors and Directors are chosen,

"the Court of Directors of the said Company do and shall consist of one Governor, one Sub-Governor, one Deputy-Governor, and twenty-one Directors only; and that the Majority of such Court of Directors, whereof the Governor, Sub-Governor, or Deputy-Governor (except as in the Charter of the said Company is excepted) to be always one, shall from thenceforth be deemed and be a Court of Directors.

"Provided always, and be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That at the next general Election of Directors, twenty-one Directors, and no more, who were at the last preceding general Election of Directors chosen into the Office of Directors, may be again appointed or chosen into the Office of Directors; and that at and in every subsequent Election, no more than fifteen, who were at the last preceding general Election of Directors chosen into the Office of Director, shall be again appointed or chosen into the Office of Directors; any By-law of the said Governor and Company to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.

"Provided always, and be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the Salaries of the Governors and Directors of the said Governor and Company shall continue and be the same as they now are; any By-law of the said Governor and Company to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding."

Of CANDLEWICK WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name, Bounds, and Extent. Modern State. Aldermen and Common-Councilmen. Parishes and Parish-Churches. A French Episcopal Church. Two Colleges. The Poet Lidiat's Account of East-cheap.

Name
and Bounds.

THIS Ward took its Name from a Street called Candlewick or Candlewright-street, a Place remarkable for Wax and Tallow-Chandlers or Candlewrights, as they were antiently named. It is bounded on the East by Bridge Ward; on the South by Bridge and Dowgate Wards; on the North by Langborn Ward; and on the West by Dowgate and Wallbrook Wards.

Extent.

It begins at the East End of Great East-cheap, and runs Westward thro' the said Street, and Candlewick-street, now Canon-street, to the North End of Green-lettice, formerly called Suffolk-lane, on the South Side, and down that Lane to the West End of St. Laurence Poultney Church-yard, including, on the South Side of Canon-street, half Crooked-Lane, and the greatest Part of all the other Lanes: But on the North Side it takes in not one fourth Part of those Lanes, which run into Lombard-street. Thus, Great East-cheap, the whole on both Sides, except a very small Part in the North Corner next to Graschurch-street: Candlewick (now commonly called Canon) street, from Green-lettice-lane on both Sides to Great East-cheap: Abchurch-lane, all, except 96 Feet on the West Side, and about 140 Feet on the East Side of the North End, towards Lombard-street. St. Nicholas-lane, about 200 Feet, at the South End, on both Sides. St. Clement's-lane, the South End, and about 180 Feet on the West Side, and 150 Feet on the East Side. St. Michael's-lane, all but about 140 Feet at the South End on both Sides. Crooked-lane, the West End, about Half. St. Martin's-lane, all, on both Sides, except about 95 Feet at the South End. St. Laurence Poultney-lane, or Hill, from Canon-street on both Sides, a little beyond St. Laurence Church-yard. Green-lettice-lane, the East Side. And all these Streets and

No. 72.

Lanes have several Courts and Alleys and small Passages, which shall be mentioned under each.

Great East-cheap begins by the Corner of Fish-street-hill, and runs Westward unto Clement's-lane, where Canon-street begins. It took its Name, East-cheap, from a Market antiently there kept for the serving the East Part of the City: Which Market was afterwards removed to Leadenball-street, and now is kept in Leadenball-square. But still Great East-cheap continues a Flesh-Market, and is a great Thoroughfare from the Eastern Parts to those in the West. In this Street is the Boar's-head Tavern, under the Sign of which is wrote, This is the oldest Tavern in London. It is in this Tavern where some of the Scenes of the Poet Shakespeare's Henry IV. are laid, in which he introduces Prince Henry, Falstaff, and his Companions.

Modern
State.

The Courts and Alleys are as followeth, beginning Eastwards, viz.

Small-alley, very ordinary, only for Stabling.

Maidenhead-court, but small, with a Meeting-House at the upper End.

Rat-alley, also narrow and very mean.

White Bell-alley, also small and ordinary.

Canon-street begins at East-cheap, and runs Westwards to Green-lettice-lane; a Street well built and inhabited by able Tradesmen: The Courts and Alleys are, Bell-alley, which hath a Passage into St. Nicholas-lane through the Bell Tavern. Black Swan-alley, but indifferent. Artichoke-court, a pretty good Place, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Clement's-lane, on the North Side of Canon-street, falls into Lombard-street, a Place well built and inhabited: The Part in this Ward goeth a little beyond St. Clement's East-cheap Church; which is a handsome Brick Building, with Free-stone Work at the Corners; adjoining to which Church is a good handsome Place called Church-alley, the North Side having a Row of Houses, and the South Side lying open to the Church and Church-yard.

Nicholas-lane, of which in Langborn Ward.

Abchurch-lane comes out of Lombard-street, and runs up to Canon-street, a Place well built and inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute. In this Lane are these Courts and Alleys:

Nicholas-alley, but narrow, with a Passage into Nicholas-lane.

Lamb-alley, but indifferently inhabited, and narrow, with a Passage into Sherborn-lane; and near unto this Alley is Lamb-court, which is but ordinary.

The Lanes on the South Side of Canon-street are Michael's-lane, and Crooked-lane, St. Martin's-lane, St. Laurence Poultney-lane, and Green-lettice-lane.

Michael's-lane goes out of Great East-cheap, and runs down into Thames-street, which Lane is almost all in this Ward; that Part towards Thames-street being in Dowgate Ward. It is a Place well built and inhabited. Crooked-lane comes out of Michael's-lane by St. Michael's Church, and falls into Fish-street-hill against the Monument: Which Part next Fish-street is in the Bridge Ward Within. It is a Place of great Note for the Tin-Ware, Fishing-Tackle, Turnery-Ware, Ware, Bird-Cages, Haberdashery and Cutlery-Ware.

On the West Side of Michael's-lane, over-against the Church, is Hockins-court, which is but small, containing two Houses. And on the same Side is Meeting-house-yard, so called from a Meeting-House, which takes up the greatest Part. Fen-court hath pretty good Houses, and a Free-stone Pavement.

Three-tun-court, a good square Place, with an open Entrance for Carts.

St. Martin's-lane also falls into Thames-street, and is well built, and inhabited by Merchants. On the East Side is St. Martin's Orgar Church-yard; the Church not being rebuilt since its burning down in the great Fire, the Parish is united unto St. Clement's East-cheap. Part of the Steeple remains, where there is a Dial, which hangs over into the Street.

Laurence Poultney-lane, so called from the Parish-Church there formerly standing on the West Side, that was consumed by the Fire of London, and is not since rebuilt.

Green Lettice-lane comes out of Canon-street, and falls into St. Laurence Poultney-bill; a Place well inhabited. The East Side is only in this Ward; the West in Wallbrook.

Watch.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward every Night a Constable, the Beadle, and twenty-four Watchmen. The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest are to serve on Juries for this Ward in Guildhall in the Month of December.

Jury.

Government.

It hath an Alderman, his Deputy, and seven more Common-Councilmen, Constables eight, Scavengers six, Wardmote Inquest Men twelve, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at 16 l.

Aldermen,
Common
Council.

The Alderman of this Ward is Sir Charles Afsill, Knight. The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Samuel Gordon, Deputy, Mr. George Cunick, Mr. George Middleton, Mr. George Dealtry, Mr. John Southby, Mr. Robert Kite, Mr. George Hoare, and Mr. Thomas Bowers.

Remarkable Things.

Parishes
and Parish-
Churches.

The remarkable Things in this Ward are, First, Three Parish-Churches; (1) St. Clement's East-cheap, (2) St. Mary's Abchurch, (3) St. Michael's Crooked-lane. But there are five Parishes; (1) St. Clement's East-cheap, (2) St. Martin's Orgar, (3) St. Mary's Abchurch, (4) St. Laurence's Poultney, (5) St. Michael's Crooked-lane: Of which more particularly hereafter in the parochial History of this City.

French Episcopal Church.

Secondly, An Episcopal French Church, which assembles in the small Remains of the antient Parish-Church of St. Martin's Orgar; Part of the Tower, and Nave thereof, being found capable of Repairs after the Fire of London: Of which the following is the best Account we are able to collect:

A Bill in Parliament being engrossed for the erecting a Church for the French Protestants, sojourning in London, in the Church-yard of this Parish of St. Martin Orgars, after the great Fire; the Parishioners offered Reasons to the Parliament against it; declaring, nevertheless, that they were not against erecting a Church, but only against erecting it in the Place mentioned in the Bill: Since, by the Act for rebuilding the City, the Site and Church-yard of St. Martin's Orgars, was directed to be enclosed with a Wall, and laid open for a Burying-place for the Parish. The said Act was for confirming a Lease of the Church-yard, made from the Parson and Church-wardens of the said Parish unto certain Trustees for 50 Years, to erect a Church there for French Protestants, with Liberty for the Parson and Church-wardens, during the said Term, to renew the said Lease for 50 Years, and so on. This was agreed on at a Vestry: But many of the Parishioners not knowing of this that was done, and so without and contrary to their Assent, now put up their Reasons against passing the Bill: But notwithstanding, the Bill passed; and there is a French Episcopal Church there at this Time. The Ministers are the Reverend Mr. David Durand, F. R. S. the Rev. Mr. Mauzy, and the Rev. Mr. Desprez, who perform the Service according to the Rites and Liturgy of the Church of England.

Thirdly, In this Ward, in ancient Times were two Colleges, one founded by Sir William Walworth, 4 Rich. II. in the Church of St. Michael's Crooked-lane, his own Parish, for one Master and nine Chaplains or Priests: The other was called the College of Jesus and of Corpus Christi, founded by John Poultney, several times Lord-Mayor of London, about the 20 Edw. III. near the Church of St. Laurence Poultney, for a Master, Warden, thirteen Priests, and four Choristers. After his Decease, it obtained the Name of the College of St. Laurence de Poultney.

The Face of this Ward is greatly changed, as may be collected from the following Song, called London Lickpenny, made by Lidgate a Monk of Bury, in the Reign of Henry V. in the Person of a Country-man coming to London, and travelling through the same. In West-cheap (saith the Song) he was called on to buy fine Lawne, Paris Thread, Cotton Umble, and other Linen Clothes, and such like, (he speaketh of no Silks): In Cornhill, to buy old Apparel, and Household-Stuff; where he was forced to buy his own Hood, which he had lost in Westminster-hall. In Candlewright-Street, Drapers profered him cheap Cloth: In East-cheap, the Cooks cryed Hot Ribs of Beef roasted, Pies well baked, and other Victuals: There was clattering of Pots, Harp, Pipe and Sawtrie; yea by cock, nay by cock, for other greater Oaths were spared: Some sang of Jenkin and Julian, &c. all which Melody liked well the Passenger, but he wanted Money to abide by it, and therefore gat him into Gravesend Barge, and home into Kent.

And the Eating-Houses in East-cheap at that Time were of such Note, that we read in the Annals of London, that the Royal Family used to frequent them. See p. 185.

and Offices, Doctors and Proctors. Baynard's Castle, and other remarkable Antiquities.

Name.

THIS Ward takes its Name from an ancient Castle built by one Baynard, a Nobleman of great Authority, who came from Normandy with the Conqueror. It was situate on the Bank near the Thames. Of which more at large amongst the remarkable Things of this Ward.

Bounds.

It is bounded on the East by Queenhithe and Bread-street Wards; on the South by the River Thames; on the West and on the North by the Ward of Farringdon within.

Extent.

This Ward begins in the East on the Thames Side, by where, of old Time, was a House called Huntington House, and runs by St. Paul's-wharf, by where old Baynard's-Castle stood, Puddle-wharf, and by the South Side of Black-fryars: Turns by the East Wall of the said Fryars, to the South-West End of Creed-lane: Then on the North Side of Thames-street, by where St. Peter's Church stood, and the Lane called St. Peter's-bill, along 'till over-against Puddle-wharf; and then North up by the Great Wardrobe to the West End of Carter-lane: Up Creed-lane, Ave-mary-lane, and a Piece of Pater-noster-row; and back again up Warwick-lane, all the East Side thereof, to the Sign of the Crown by New-gate-market; which is the farthest North Part of this Ward.

Out of Thames-street are Lanes ascending North to Knightrider's-street. The first is Peter-bill-lane, all of that Ward, (two Houses excepted.) The next is Paul's-wharf-bill, which crossing Knightrider's-street and Carter-lane, goes up to the South Chain of St. Paul's Church-yard: Addle-street, over-against the West Part of Baynard's-castle, going up the West End of Knightrider's-street, and to Carter-lane.

The one half of the West Side of Lambart-bill-lane is of this Ward. At the North-West End thereof, and at the West End of St. Mary Magdalen's Church, which stands on the North Side, begins Knightrider's-street, which runs West, on both Sides, to the Parish-Church of St. Andrew by the Wardrobe, all in this Ward. At the East End of St. Mary Magdalen's Church, goes up to the Old-exchange; all the West Side whereof, up to the South-East Gate, or Entrance into St. Paul's Church-yard, and by St. Austin's Church, is of this Ward.

About the Middle of the Old-exchange, on the West Side thereof, is Carter-lane, which runs West to the East Entry of the Black-fryars, and the South End of Creed-lane. Out of which Carter-lane descends a Lane called Do-little-lane, and comes into Knightrider's-street. More West is Sermon-lane. Then out of Carter-lane, on the North Side thereof, the South Chain of St. Paul's Church-yard, and the Church-yard itself, on the South-Side of St. Paul's Church, and Dean's-court, are all of this Ward; and these are the Bounds thereof.

Present State.

In describing the present State of this Ward, we shall begin with the South Part next the Thames, and Thames-street, with the Lanes, Hills, and Courts that fall into the said Street; as Lambeth, or Lambart-bill, St. Peter's-bill, St. Bennet's-bill, Addle-bill, and Puddle-dock-bill; then with Knightrider's-street, Carter-lane, Creed-lane, Ave-mary-lane, and Warwick-lane.

On the Banks of the River Thames are the Wharfs of Puddle-dock, used for a Laystall for the Soil of the Streets, and much frequented by Barges and Lighters for taking the same away, as also for landing of Corn and other Goods. Paul's-wharf, or St. Bennet Paul's-wharf, a noted Stairs for Watermen.

Puddle-dock.

Baynard's-castle had its Entrance out of Thames-street; which being all burnt down, except a little Tower next the Water-Side, in the Conflagration of London, 1666, was converted into Buildings and Wharfs, as now it is. Hereabouts, where antiently stood divers Noble-men's Houses fronting the Thames, are now generally Wharfs, Dyehouses, Brewhouses, Distillers, &c.

Castle-street, seated near to Paul's-wharf, a good broad Street, falling down to the Thames, but meanly inhabited, and of no Account for Trade.

Castle-street.

Westward from Castle-street are Common-lane and Dungbill-lane, both which run down to the Thames; and beyond Puddle-dock is Queen's-college-yard, and Bristol-street; both which fall into Duke Humphrey's; all Places of ordinary Account. It has a Passage into Puddle-dock, and another into Black-fryars.

Common-lane.

Thames-street begins at Puddle-dock, and runs Eastward to the Tower of London, which is above a Mile in Length, but is in several Wards. It is a Street, especially Eastward, of very great Trade, and inhabited by large and eminent Dealers in heavy Goods; besides the Dyers, Brewers, Woodmongers, and Timber yards, on the South Side, next the Thames: And by Reason thereof, and of the several Keys and Wharfs, it is much pestered with Carts, for lading and unlading of Goods. The first Place at the North-West End of this Street is Great Rutland-court, indifferent large and good, and has a Passage up Steps into Church bill alley. At the North-East Extremity of this Ward is Lambeth or Lambart-bill, a small Part, viz. on the West Side, from a little beyond Green-dragon-court to the Corner of Old-fish-street, over-against St. Mary Magdalen's Church, is in this Ward; all the rest is in Queenhithe Ward: But in this Ward here is St. Mary Magdalen's Church-yard, being the Place for the Burial of the Dead of that Parish. Here is Crane-court, which is long, and has a Passage into St. Peter's-bill, with a Free-stone Pavement, but the Houses are indifferent.

Thames-street.

Lambeth-hill.

More Westward is St. Peter's-bill, well built and inhabited, especially the End next to Old-fish-street. On this Hill are Alms-Houses for six poor Widows. On the West Side is the Back-Part of the Heralds-Office, with a Door leading into it.

St. Peter's-hill.

St. Bennet's-bill, or Paul's-wharf-bill, takes its Rise out of Thames-street, and runs up to Paul's-chain into St. Paul's Church yard. It is a Place much pestered with Carts to the Wharfs. Yet it is of Note, and well resorted to, by Reason of Doctors-commons, and the Heralds-Office there seated. The former on the West Side, possessed by the Doctors, and others professing the Civil Law, and practising it here. Out of this Place is a Back-door into Knight-riders-street.

The Heralds-Office, or College of Heralds, is seated on the East Side, of which hereafter.

Addle-hill.

Addle-hill comes out of Carter-lane, and runs down to Thames-street, leaving Knight-riders-street on the East Side, and Church-bill-alley on the West; which said Alley, with a turning Passage by St. Andrew's Wardrobe Church, falls into Puddle-dock. The Houses are only on the South Side, the North lying open to the Church and Church-yard. And in this Alley is Crown-court, which is indifferent good. Adjoining to this Church was the King's great Wardrobe, as being formerly employed for that Use. The Garden is converted into a large and square Court, with good Houses, and called Wardrobe-court.

On the West Side of Addle-hill, is White-bear-court, very large, containing two or three Courts of that Name; but all very ordinary, and meanly built and inhabited. Out of this Place is a Passage up Steps into Church-bill-alley; and another down Steps into Great Rutland-court. Likewise on this Hill are three small and ordinary Places, viz. Rose-court, White-horse-court, and Cock-and-hoop-court.

Knight-riders-street.

Knight-riders-street, of which there is the Great and the Little, being severed from each other by Bennet's-hill and Paul's-chain: The Less runneth towards Old-fish-street, and the Greater towards St. Andrew Wardrobe Church. And this Street is wider, and better built; and chiefly inhabited by Proctors, and such as have Dependance on Doctors-commons. Out of this Street is a Passage into Carter-lane, thro' Bell-yard, which is a very good open Court, with handsome Houses, well inhabited.

Little Knight-riders-street, but narrow, and not over well inhabited, especially the End next to Paul's-chain.

Over-against Lambeth-hill, in the Passage to the Old-change, is the Parish-Church of St. Mary Magdalen Old-fish-street.

A little Westward from this Church is Do-little-lane, then Sermon-lane; which fall into Carter-lane, and are of no great Account, either for Inhabitants or Buildings.

Carter-lane.

Carter-lane, of which there is the Great and the Little: The Little comes out of the Old-change, and falls into Great Carter-lane, but severed by Paul's-chain, and thence runs Westward to Puddle-dock and Creed-lane.

Great Carter-lane is the broadest, best built and inhabited. And in both these Lanes are these Courts, viz. Scollop-court, which has a Passage of Free-stone Pavement into Creed-lane. Dean's court, which will be mentioned hereafter. Wardrobe-court and Bell-yard, already mentioned. Mermaid-lane, large, and of a good Trade. King's-head-court, indifferent large, with a Passage into St. Paul's Church-yard. And within this Court is another, bearing the Name of Red-lion-court, handsome, with a Free-stone Pavement. Black-swan-court, indifferent good, also has a Passage into St. Paul's Church-yard.

Old-change has only the West Side, from St. Mary Magdalen's Church to St. Austin's Gate, in this Ward; so that there is little to say of it, more than what is said of it in Farringdon Ward Within.

Paul's-chain begins at the Corner of Knight-riders-street, and runs up to St. Paul's Church-Yard. A Street large and open, well built, and inhabited by Proctors and Tradesmen; and, by Reason of its near Situation to Doctors-commons, is of great Resort.

Paul's-chain.

Paul's-bakehouse, now a good square Court, with four handsome large Houses, especially two, which are well inhabited. At the East Corner of this Street, next to Little Carter-lane, is kept the Faculty-Office, for the granting of Licences for Marriages, &c.

The Part or Side of St. Paul's Church-yard in this Ward all lies open to St. Paul's; and is a spacious Street, graced with good Houses, loftily built and uniform, well inhabited by Woollen-Drapers, and some of the most eminent Masters in the Chair, Upholstery, and Cabinet Way.

St. Paul's Church-yard.

In this Row of Building, which reaches from St. Austin's Gate to Ludgate-hill, are these Courts, besides those already taken Notice of. In Carter-lane, Dean's-court, by many called the Prerogative-court; for that the Prerogative-Office is kept here. In which said Court is a very large House, the Seat of the Deans of St. Paul's successively. This Court is open and airy, and has a Passage into Great Carter-lane. More towards Ludgate-hill, and almost in the South-West Corner, is a new Court called St. Paul's-college, made Use of for the Singing Men and Petty Canon belonging to St. Paul's Cathedral.

St. Gregory's, seated by the South-West End of St. Paul's. It was destroyed by the great Fire, and is not rebuilt, that the Ground on which it stood might lie open to St. Paul's Church-yard; and the Parish is united to St. Mary Magdalen Old-fish-street.

St. Gregory's.

On the North-West Side of St. Paul's Cathedral was the Bishop of London's Palace, long since converted into Tenements, now called The Bishop of London's Yard. The Ground-Rents are the Bishop's.

Paul's-alley has a Free-stone Pavement, and a Passage into Pater-noster-row.

Creed-lane and Warwick-lane have the East Sides in this Ward; for the Account whereof, and for the Market, Part of which stands here, see Farringdon Ward Within. On this Side is the Bell-Inn, chiefly used by Market-People. Over-against the College of Physicians is Crown-court, which is but small and ordinary.

Creed-lane, and Warwick-lane.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward every Night, a Constable, with the Beadle and twenty-four Watchmen.

Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Inquest for this Ward, are to serve in the several Courts at Guild-hall in the Month of September.

Jury.

This Ward hath an Alderman, who at present is Sir Robert Ladbrooke, Knight, and one of the Representatives of this City; and ten Common-Councilmen, viz. Mr. Nathaniel Nass, Deputy, Mr. Benjamin Crook, Mr. John Willis, Mr. William Gyles, Mr. Robert Willis, Mr. Henry Major, Mr. John Pitway, Mr. John Wilson, Mr. John Hopkins,

It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at 12 l. in the Exchequer at 11 l. 13 s.

Remarkable Things.

The remarkable Things in this Ward at present are,

Parishes and Parish Churches.

First, Three Parish-Churches, dedicated, 1. to St. Bennet, Paul's-Wharf; 2. to St. Andrew Wardrobe; 3. to St. Mary Magdalen, in Old Fish-street. 4. Here is also another Parish without a Church, dedicated to St. Gregory, which is now united to St. Mary Magdalen's, as afore said; of which more particularly in our Parochial History.

Secondly, Between Peter's-bill and Bennet's-bill, about the Mid-way from Thames-street to Knight-riders-street, is the Heralds-Office; of which honourable and useful Foundation the Publick may depend upon the following Account, communicated by Stephen Martin Leake, Esq; the present Garter King of Arms:

The Arms of the Corporation, &c.

The College or Office of Arms, communicated by STEPHEN MARTIN LEAKE, Esq; Garter King of Arms.

The COLLEGE or OFFICE of ARMS, commonly called the HERALDS-OFFICE, is situate upon St. Bennet's-bill, in the Parish of St. Bennet, Paul's-wharf. The Corporation consists of thirteen Members, namely, three Kings of Arms, six Heralds at Arms, and four Pursuivants at Arms; who are all nominated by the Earl-Marshal of England, as Ministers subordinate to him in the Execution of their Offices, and hold their Places by Patent during their good Behaviour. They all are the King's Servants in Ordinary, and therefore, in the Vacancy of the Office of Earl-Marshal, have been sworn into their Offices by the Lord Chamberlain. Their Meetings are called Chapters, which they hold the first Thursday in every Month, or oftner, if necessary, wherein all Matters are determined by a Majority of Voices of the Kings and Heralds, each King having two Voices.

Kings of Arms.

The Kings are GARTER, CLARENCEUX, NORROY.

GARTER was instituted by King Henry V. A. D. 1417, for the Service of the most noble Order of the Garter; and, for the Dignity of the said Order, was made Sovereign within the Office of Arms over all the other Officers subject to the Crown of England, by the Name of Garter King of Arms of England. In his Patent he is stiled Principal King of English Arms, and Principal Officer of Arms of the noble Order of the Garter, and has Power to execute the said Office by himself, or Deputy, being an Herald. By the Constitutions of his Office he must be a Native of England, and a Gentleman bearing Arms. To him belongs the Correction of Arms, and all Ensigns of Honour, usurped or borne unjustly; and also to grant Arms to deserving Persons, and Supporters to the Nobility and Knights of the Bath; to go next before the Sword in solemn Proceedings, none interposing except the Constable and Marshal; to administer the Oath to all the Officers of Arms; to have a Habit like the Register of the Order; Barons Service in the Court; Lodgings in Windsor Castle; to bear his white Rod, with a Banner of the Ensigns of the Order thereon, before the Sovereign; also, when any Lord shall enter the Parliament-Chamber, to assign him his Place, according to his Dignity and Degree; to carry the Ensigns of the Order to foreign Princes, and to do, or procure to be done, what the Sovereign shall enjoin relating to the Order; with other Duties incident to his Office of Principal King of Arms; for the Execution whereof he has a Salary of one hundred Pounds per Ann. payable at the Exchequer, and an hundred Pounds more out of the Revenue of the Order; besides Fees.

Salary.

The other two Kings are called Provincial Kings, whose Provinces together comprize the whole Kingdom of England; that of Clarenceux comprehending all from the River Trent Southwards, that of Norroy all from the River Trent Northwards. These Provincials have existed Time immemorial, but were not instituted to those Offices by the Titles of Clarenceux and Norroy before Edward III.

Provincial Kings.

Clarenceux, so called from the Duke of Clarence, third Son of King Edward III. He is stiled in his Patent Clarenceux King of Arms, and principal Herald of the South-East and West Parts of that Part of Great-Britain called England. His particular Duty is to visit his Province, as expressed in the Commissions granted for that Purpose; "To take Knowledge, Survey, and View of all Arms, Cognizances, Crests, and other Devices of Arms, of all Persons, &c. with the Notes of their Descents, Pedigrees, and Marriages, and to register the same, according to such Order as is prescribed and set forth in the Charge and Oath taken by him at his Creation and Coronation." Likewise to marshal the Funerals of all Persons in his said Province, not under the Direction of Garter; and to grant Arms in his Province, with the Consent of the Earl-Marshal. Before the Institution of Garter, he was the principal Officer of Arms; and, in the Vacancy of Garter, executes his Office. By his Patent he has a Salary of forty Pounds per Ann. from the Exchequer, besides Fees.

Kings of Arms, how created.

The Kings of Arms were heretofore created with great Solemnity, upon some high Festival, by the Sovereign, with a Ceremony very nearly resembling that of the Nobility; but, since the Creation of Peers with Ceremony has been discontinued, as not necessary, the Kings of Arms have been created by the Earl-Marshal, by Virtue of the Sovereign's Warrant, directing him to perform that Ceremony for us and in our Name. A King of Arms is created by the Administration of his Oath, pouring Wine upon his Head out of a gilt Cup (having a Cover) and pronouncing his Title; investing him with a Tabart of the Royal Arms, richly embroidered upon Velvet; a Collar of SS. with two Portcullises of Silver gilt; a Gold Chain with the Badge of his Office, and crowning him with the Crown of a King of Arms; which Crown formerly resembled a Ducal Coronet, but, since the Restoration, has been composed of Leaves in the Shape of Oak Leaves, (probably in Memory of the Royal Oak) and circumscribed, according to antient Custom, with a Text of Scripture, Miserere mei Deus secundum magnam misericordiam tuam; which Crowns they antiently wore at all Times when the Sovereign wore his, but of late have worn them only at Coronations, when the Peers wear their Coronets. Garter has likewise a Mantle of crimson Satin, as an Officer of the Order; also a white Rod or Sceptre, with the Sovereign's Arms on the Top thereof, which he bears, the Sovereign being present; and is sworn in a Chapter of the Garter, the Sovereign investing him with the Ensigns of his Office.

How distinguished from each other.

Arms of Garter.

The Kings of Arms are distinguished from each other by their respective Badges, which they may wear at all Times, either in a Gold Chain or a Ribbon, the Garter's blue, the Provincials purple. The Badge of Garter is the Arms of the Order, viz. St. George's Cross, impaling the Royal Arms, within the Garter, under the Imperial Crown of Great-Britain. The same on both Sides. The Arms of his Office, Argent, St. George's Cross; upon a chief Gules, a Coronet, within a Garter of the Order, between a Lion of England and a Fleur de Lis Or.

Arms of Clarenceux.

The Arms of the Office of Clarenceux, Argent, St. George's Cross, upon a Chief Gules, a Lion of England crowned with an open Crown: The same in an Escuchen, crowned with the Crown of a King of Arms upon a green Ground, is the Badge of his Office; having on the other Side the Royal Arms crowned upon a white Ground.

Arms of Norroy.

The Arms of the Office of Norroy is, Argent, St. George's Cross, upon a Chief per pale Azure and Gules, a Lion of England, crowned with an open Crown, between a Fleur de Lis, in Pale, and a Key Or; which likewise is the Badge of his Office: In other Respects like that of Clarenceux.

These Arms of Office they bear in Pale with their own proper Arms, and crowned with a Crown of a King of Arms, as well upon their Seals as otherwise.

The Herald.

The six Heralds, antiently called Herebaughts, are, Windfor, Chester, Lancaster, York, Richmond, and Somerset, who take Place according to their Seniority in Office. They have each a Salary of twenty-six Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence per Ann. by their Patents, and Fees according to their Degree. They are created by the Earl-Marshal, with the same Ceremonies as the Kings, taking the Oath of an Herald, and are invested with a Tabart of the Royal Arms, embroidered upon Satin, not so rich as the Kings, but better than the Pursuivants, and a Silver Collar of SS. They are Esquires by Creation.

The Kings and Heralds are sworn upon a Sword as well as the Book, in Sign that they are Military as well as Civil Officers; which Sword in the Oath is called the Sword that belongeth to Knighthood, as being formerly the Royal Sword; and the Sword used at this Day was a Royal Sword, being the Sword taken by the Earl of Surry (afterwards Duke of Norfolk) from James V. King of Scotland, at the Battle of Floddon Field, in the Reign of King Henry VIII.

Sworn upon a Sword.

The four Pursuivants are, Rougecroix, Blue-mantle, Rougedragon, and Portcullis, who, by their Patents, have a Salary of twenty Pounds per Ann. and Fees according to their Degrees. They are likewise created by the Earl-Marshal, taking the Oath of a Pursuivant, and are invested with a Tabart of the Royal Arms upon Damask. It is the Duty of the Heralds and Pursuivants to attend in the publick Office, one of each Class together, by a monthly Rotation.

Duty.

Besides these particular Duties of the several Classes, it is the general Duty of the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants, to attend his Majesty at the House of Peers, and, upon certain high Festivals, to the Chapel Royal, to make Proclamations, to marshal the Proceedings at all publick Processions, to attend the Installation of the Knights of the Garter, &c.

General Duties of the Kings, Herald, and Pursuivants.

All these Officers have Apartments in the College annexed to their respective Offices. They have likewise a publick Hall, in which is a Court for the Earl-Marshal, where Courts of Chivalry are occasionally held, and the Officers of Arms attend in their Tabarts, his Lordship being present: Also a publick Library or Office, containing a large and valuable Collection of original Visitations and Records of the Pedigrees and Arms of Families, funeral Certificates of the Nobility and Gentry, publick Ceremonials, and other Branches of Heraldry and Antiquity; and there has hardly been any Work published, relating to the History or Antiquities of this Kingdom, that hath not received some Assistance from this Library. In this Library and Office Attendance is daily given by two Officers for the publick Emolument.

Their Apartments, Offices, &c. in this College.

There are likewise belonging to this College a Register, a Treasurer, and a Messenger; also two Watermen having Badges.

Servants.

The Arms of this College and Corporation are, Argent, St. George's Cross between four Doves Azure, one Wing open to fly, the other close, with a suitable Motto, Diligent and secret. Crest, upon a Ducal Coronet, a like Dove rising. Supported on either Side by a Lion Guardant Argent, Gorged with a Ducal Coronet. These Arms, Crest, and Supporters are upon the Common Seal, circumscribed Sigillum commune Corporationis Officii Armorum.

To this Account of the present State we shall briefly add some Memoirs of the Office and College of Arms, from the first Institution to the present Time.

When Officers of Arms began in this Kingdom is uncertain. Sir Henry Spelman has proved the Division of them into the several Classes of Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants, in the Reign of King Henry III. and the Statutum Armorum made by Edward I. refers to these different Orders as then existing; and, by the Household Accounts of the sixth Year of that King, it appears, that, at the Marriage of his Daughter to the Earl of Gloucester, there were present, besides foreign Heralds, two of our Kings and ten Heralds, which Kings could be no other than the two Provincials, who, according to Spelman, were stiled Kings of Heralds, South of Trent and North of Trent.

Though every Nation had their particular Institutions of Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants, they were all considered as one common Fraternity, and as such executed their Offices, and enjoyed the same Privileges in all Kingdoms. An Injury offered to them was esteemed an Infraction of the Law of Nations. They wore no Swords, or Swords without Points, because their Persons were sacred, and in Time of Battle were to be placed with the Priests; and, tho' they were not a religious Order like the Roman Feciales, they have been compared to the different Orders of the Church; for none could be a Herald till he had been a Pursuivant, nor a King till he had been an Herald. They were required to be of competent Age, to have a Certificate of their good Life and Conversation, to have a previous Examination, and by their Oaths were enjoined Secrecy, as Confessors of Arms, and their Characters were indelible, unless they took Orders in the Church, or became Knights; for they were considered both as Military and Civil Officers.

The principal Duty of the Kings of Arms, as specified in their Oaths, was "To have Knowledge of all who should bear Coats of Arms in the Field, and to register their Arms and Differences," (which Differences were assigned by them.) Now all our Antiquaries agree, that antiently none were entitled to Coat Arms, but those who themselves, or their Ancestors, had been actually in the Wars, wherein they were distinguished by their Coats of Arms; and, in Consequence of this first deriving a Right to Arms in the Field, they fell under the Cognizance of the Constable and Marshal, who were to examine that Right; and the Heralds, by that Means, became Officers subordinate to them.

Gerard Leigh tells us, that, in the Reign of King Edward I. the Earl of Lancaster, Constable of the Host, made an Order for the Regulation of Mourning Apparel, for the Preservation of Arms in Churches, and prohibiting Mechanicks from having to do with Arms, without the Consent of the King of Arms of the Province; that the Kings of Arms should make their Visitations in their Provinces, or their Marshals for them, every seven Years; and at the Interment of every Gentleman, when they were called to that Service, should take the Pedigree, and record the same. That is the very Duty enjoined them by their Oaths, and afterwards exemplified in Commissions; which Duties and Powers are there said to be according to the antient Laws and Statutes of Arms, and such as of Right they might have exercised by Force of their Offices.

Notwithstanding the Antiquity of these Officers, we have hardly any Memory of their Titles or Names before Edward III. In the Reign of this magnanimous Prince, military Glory and Heraldry were at their Meridian Height; and the Patents of the Kings of Arms to this Day refer to the Reign of King Edward III. as to such a remarkable Epoch of Time. This King created the two Provincials, by the Titles of Clarenceux and Norroy: He instituted Windsor and Chester Heralds, and Bluemantle Pursuivant; besides several others by foreign Titles, as Aquitaine, Ireland, and Guyenne Kings of Arms, &c. From this Time we find the Officers of Arms employed abroad and at home, both as Military and Civil Officers; as military, with our Kings and Generals in the Army, carrying Defiances and making Truces, or attending Tilts, Tournaments, and Duels; as Civil Officers, employed in Negotiations, and attending our Embassadors in foreign Courts; at home, waiting upon the King at Court and Parliament, and directing publick Ceremonies: And there was hardly any memorable Occurrence wherein some or other of them were not concerned.

As a Consequence of the military Glory of these Times, we find the Court Military in great Request, both in this and the following Reign. In the eighth Year of Richard II. the Jurisdiction of this Court was confirmed by Statute; but, having encroached upon Actions and Contracts pleadable at the Common Law, by another Act, in the thirteenth Year of the same Reign, it was limited to Contracts touching Feats of Arms and War without the Realm, and also Things which touch Arms or War within the Kingdom; which most effective Word Arms is omitted (perhaps designedly) in the printed Statutes.

In the fifth Year of King Henry V. Arms were regulated, and it was declared, that no Persons should bear Coat Arms, that could not justify their Right thereto by Prescription or Grant; and from this Time they were communicated to Court Persons, as the Insignia Gentilitia, and hereditary Marks of Noblesse. From this Time we have Grants of Arms by the Kings of Arms. The same same Year the Officers of Arms had an Exemplification of their Right to Fees upon Display of Banners; and, upon a Controversy, it was determined, "That, as often as the King shall ride "or go to the Church, on Foot or on Horse"back, or in any Army or Field, or in Town,

"or in other Place or Places where the King's "Honour ought to be maintained, That the "chief King of Arms, or Herald present, shall "keep his Place, and go straight before the "King's Person, or him that shall carry his Sword
"before him." About the same Time, or soon after, this victorious Prince instituted the Office of Garter King of Arms; and about three Years after, at a Chapter of the Kings and Heralds, held at the Siege of Roan in Normandy, on the fifth of January, 1420, they formed themselves into a regular Society, with a Common Seal, receiving Garter as their Chief.

Whether the Officers of Arms were a Corporation before this Time, has been disputed. It is certain, that for some Ages antecedent to this Time there had been in this Kingdom a Fraternity of Kings and Heralds, under the Denomination of the Office of Arms: It is so called in the Institution of Garter's Office, and, before this, in an Order of the Constable relating to Fees; and in the Chapter it is called, An Office which of old Time hath been founded. By which it seems as if this was not the original Institution of the Society, but a Renovation of it under the new-instituted Office of Garter, who by his Institution was declared to be Sovereign or Chief within the Office of Arms, as before this Clarenceux had been: And this further appears by the Patents of the Provincial Kings of Arms, which, from the first granting of those Offices by Patent to the present Time, are introduced with this Preamble: "Whereas "it hath been of antient Times accustomed,
"that, amongst other Officers and Minis"ters, who it is meet should be attendant
"upon the Persons of Princes, suitable to their "high Dignity and Glory, there should be more "especially proper Officers to whom the Care of "the Office of Arms both in Times of War and
"Peace may be committed."

King Richard III's Charter of Incorporation.

The first Charter incorporating the Heralds, bears Date the second of March, in the first of Richard III. whereby they were made one Body corporate, by the Name of the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms; and, that they might the more conveniently meet together for the Good of their Faculty, by the said Charter was granted to them a House in London, in the Parish of All-Saints the Less, called Cold Harbour, they finding a Chaplain to celebrate Mass every Day in the said House, or elsewhere, for the Health of King Richard, Anne his Wife, and Edward Prince of Wales his Progenitor, whilst he lived, and for their Souls when they died. Stow tells us it was a right fair and stately House, and, tho' several Noblemen had lived therein, was called Poulteney's-Inn, from Sir John Poulteney, who owned it temp. E. III. and was four Times Mayor. King Henry IV. by Patent, dated the eighteenth of March, 1410, and the eleventh Year of his Reign, granted this House to his Son Henry Prince of Wales; and, in the twenty-second of King Henry VI. it was granted to John Holland, Duke of Exeter, whose Son Henry afterwards possessed it, and, taking Part with the Lancastrians, was attainted by Act of Parliament in the first of Edward IV. By this Forfeiture it came into the Hands of the Crown, and was by King Richard III. granted to the Heralds, at the Instance of John Lord Howard, whom the said King had created Duke of Norfolk and Earl-Marshal: But, upon the Accession of King Henry VII. they were dispossessed of this House, as being supposed to be the House of John Writhe, Garter, who then lived in it; and, tho' they afterwards petitioned, they could not obtain the Restitution of it.

In the Reign of King Henry VII. agreeable to the State of that King, a new Regulation was made for the Attendance of the Officers of Arms at Court. Besides the four usual Festivals, they were to wait at every other principal Feast, and every great Council, and at every great Business, with the daily Attendance of a King, Herald, and Pursuivant; for which they had their Liveries at Court, as of old accustomed, the Kings being served with Knights Service. And by another Regulation in the Time of King Henry VIII. it was ordained, That every King of Arms, at the Charge of the Crown, should keep within the Court three Servants and three Horses, the six Heralds each one Servant and two Horses, and the four Pursuivants each one Horse. Likewise Commissions under the Great Seal were granted to the Provincial Kings, for the better Execution of their Offices in Visitations, whereby all Officers and other Persons whatsoever were required to be assistant to them; and all Painters, and other Artificers whatsoever, were prohibited to set forth any Arms, Crests, Cognizances, Pedigrees, and other Devices pertaining to the Office of Arms, otherwise than they might lawfully do, and should be allowed by the said Kings respectively, or their Deputies, according to the antient Laws and Statutes of Arms. Such Commissions were granted in every Reign afterwards till the Revolution. Also in the fourteenth Year of King Henry VIII. there being a new Exemplification of the Statutes of the Garter, certain Constitutions were appointed for the Officers of the Order, wherein the Rights of Garter are particularly specified, the Annuities payable to him from the Knights are ascertained, his Habit in the Order appointed, and Lodgings in Windsor Castle assigned him; which Lodgings were afterwards by Decree in Chapter for ever annexed to that Office, and from thence obtained the Name of Garter's Tower.

Though the Officers of Arms could not obtain any Recompence for the Loss of their House in Cold Harbour during the Reign of King Henry VII. and King Henry VIII. King Edward VI. made them ample Amends: By his Charter, dated the fourth of June, in the third Year of his Reign, he exemplified and confirmed to them all their antient Privileges, as, "To be free and dis"charged from all Subsidies in all Realms where "they make their Demoure; as also from all "Tolls, Taxes, Customs, Impositions, and De"mands; and as well from Watch and Ward,

"Degree, Nature, or Condition whatsoever." And though their second Charter of Incorporation, with the Grant of Derby-House, was made by King Philip and Queen Mary, yet it was first designed and procured by King Edward VI. as appears by the Charter itself, tho' his untimely Death did not permit him to compleat it. By Indenture, dated the twenty-fourth of November, in his sixth Year, he made over certain Lands called Leonard's Lands, joining to the Earl of Derby's Park, called Knowsley Park, in the County of Lancaster, and others to the said Earl, in Exchange for the said House called Derby Place; which Exchange is mentioned in the Charter. It was called Derby Place, from Sir Thomas Stanley, first Earl of Derby of that Name, who built it; and, at the Time of the Exchange, was inhabited by Sir Richard Sackville. King Edward lived but a short Time after this, and the Design rested till the third Year of Queen Mary, when it was revived, upon the Application of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marshal, who was restored in Blood by this Queen, in the first Year of her Reign.

P. & M.
Charter
of Incorporation.

The Charter of King Philip and Queen Mary is dated the eighteenth Day of July, in the first and third Year of their Reign, incorporating "the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms, by "the Name of Le Garter Regis Armorum Anglico-rum, Clarenceux Regis Armorum partium Austrialium, Norroy Regis Armorum partium Borealiu, et Heraldorum, Prosecutorum sive Pursuivandorum Armorum: And that they might assemble together, and consult and agree amongst themselves, for the Good of their Faculty; and that "the Records and Rolls might be more safely "and conveniently deposited: And, that they "might have a suitable House for that Purpose, "grants them all that Capital Messuage or House "called Derby Place, situate in the Parishes of St. Bennet and St. Peter, in a certain Street leading "from the South Gate of the Cathedral Church "of St. Paul to a Place called Paul's-Wharf, as "the same had been occupied by Sir Richard Sackville, Knt. and belonging to the Estate of "Edward Earl of Derby, and in as ample Manner as the said Edward Earl of Derby possessed "the same, or as her Majesty held it, or was held "by K. Edw. VI. by Reason of the Exchange, and "to hold the same from the Feast of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary last past."

Orders for its good Government.

In 1568, Orders were made, and approved by Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marshal of England, for the good Government of the College of Arms, and the Preservation of their Records; and by these Orders a monthly Waiting was appointed in the Library, of an Herald and a Pursuivant together, by Rotation. And, in the twenty-sixth of Elizabeth, one Daukins, for usurping the Office of a King of Arms, was whipped, pilloried, and lost his Ears.

the Salaries

Anno 1617, and the fifteenth of King James I. his Majesty granted an Augmentation to the Salaries of the Officers of Arms; whereby Garter's, which at first was but twenty Pounds, and afterwards raised to forty Pounds, was now made fifty Pounds per Ann.; Clarenceux and Norroy's were made from twenty to forty Pounds; the Heralds each from thirteen Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence to twenty-six Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence; and the Pursuivants from ten to twenty Pounds per Ann.

In 1618, an Order was made by the Commissioners for executing the Office of Earl-Marshal, appointing the Fees to be paid by all Degrees to the Officers of Arms for registering their Funeral Certificates, and the Prices for all Funeral Work were settled; which Prices being certified to Ireland by two Kings of Arms, according to the said Order, were published by Proclamation in that Kingdom. These Funeral Certificates were continued till the Civil War, and in some Degree afterwards, and are some of the fairest Records perhaps in the Kingdom.

Order for registering Funeral
Certificates

During the Reign of King Charles I. (who, as Lord Clarendon observes, kept State to the full, which made his Court very orderly) the Officers of Arms were in great Request, and obtained an Order for restoring to them their antient Rights, which they would probably have recovered, had not the Rebellion put a Stop to it.

During the Rebellion, the three Kings, three Heralds, and one Pursuivant attended the Fortune of their Sovereign; the rest entered into the Service of the Commonwealth: And it is remarkable, that some of those very Members of the Committee of Parliament which had voted the Earl-Marshal's Court a Grievance, arbitrary, and illegal, were appointed by the same Parliament Commissioners for executing the Office of Constable and Marshal, and they held their Courts accordingly. In the mean Time the Committee of Sequestration took Possession of the College of Arms, and kept it, till, by an Order of this Court, August 13, 1646, they were directed to remove. At the same Court Sir Edward Bysshe, one of the Members, was appointed Garter, Arthur Squebb, Clarenceux, and William Ryley, Lancaster Herald, petitioned to be Norroy; to which he was admitted the next Court Day; and others, upon their Petitions, were appointed Heralds and Pursuivants: But soon after Squebb dying, Bysshe was appointed to execute the Office of Clarenceux, which he held, with the Place of Garter, till 1658, when Ryley had a Grant of it from Oliver: Nevertheless, at the Restoration of King Charles II. this Ryley Lancaster, as also Owen York, and Crown Rougecroix, all under the same Circumstances of Disloyalty, were reinstated in those Offices; and Edward Bysshe, notwithstanding the eminent Part he had acted in the Rebellion, was soon after made Clarenceux, and knighted. Sir Edward Walker, Garter, who had faithfully adhered to King Charles I. and II. during the whole Course of the Rebellion, upon the Restoration had the Salary of Garter augmented from fifty to an hundred Pounds per Ann. and in 1664, by a Decree in a Chapter of the Garter, obtained a Settlement of an hundred Pounds per Ann. out of the Revenue of the Order, in lieu of the Annuities payable to him by the Sovereign and Knights.

In the great Fire of London, Anno 1666, the College was wholly consumed; but they had the good Fortune to save all their Records and Books, except one or two, which they deposited in a Room in the Palace of Whitehall, but afterwards removed them to another Room in the Palace of Westminster, near the Court of Requests, formerly called the Queen's Court; and publick Notice was given in the Gazette, that the Heralds Office was kept there. In the mean Time Clarenceux and Norroy made their Visitations; and the latter, in order to put a Stop to the Usurpations of the Painters in his Province, brought his Action against one Randal Holmes, a Painter, at the Stafford Assizes, in March, 1667, for marshalling the Funeral of Sir Ralph Ashton, and hanging up his Atchievements, and obtained a Verdict, with twenty Pounds Damages.

The College, now in Ruins, was, by the Act for rebuilding the City, to be begun to be rebuilt within three Years. The Estimate, at a moderate Computation, amounted to five thousand Pounds; and, as a Corporation, they had not one Shilling to do it: This obliged them to petition his Majesty for a Commission to receive the Subscriptions of the Nobility and Gentry. This Petition was referred to the Commissioners for executing the Office of Earl-Marshal, and, upon their Lordships Report, a Commission was granted, bearing Date the sixth of December, 1672: But the Commission directing the Money so collected to be paid to such Persons, and laid out in such Manner, as the Earl-Marshal should appoint, it disgusted the Officers so much, that it caused a Coldness and Inactivity in them to promote the Subscription; so that, altho' they had Reason to hope for large Contributions, little more than seven hundred Pounds was raised by this Commission: What further Sums were necessary were made up out of the General Fees and Profits of the Office, or by the Contribution of particular Members. Sir William Dugdale built the North-West Corner at his own Charge; and Sir Henry St. George, Clarenceux, gave the Profits of some Visitations, made by Deputies appointed by him for that Purpose, amounting to five hundred and thirty Pounds; the Houses on the East Side, and South-East Corner, were erected upon a Building Lease, agreeable to the original Plan; by which Means the whole was made one uniform quadrangular Building, as it now appears, and is one of the best-designed and handsomest Brick Buildings in London: (See the Elevation annexed.) And the hollow Arch of the Gateway is esteemed a Curiosity. In November, 1683, the College Part of the Building being finished, the Rooms were divided amongst the Officers, according to their Degrees, by Agreement amongst themselves, and afterwards confirmed by the Earl-Marshal; which Apartments have been ever since annexed to their respective Offices. The Inside of the Lodgings were finished at different Times by the Officers to whom they belonged.

Exempt from Taxes.

In 1682, a Suit was commenced with the College by the Ward of Castle-Baynard for Trophy Money, the Officers of Arms insisting upon their Exemption by the Charter of King Edward VI. and never having paid Trophy Money; and, upon a Hearing, they obtained a Verdict for seventeen Pounds fifteen Shillings against the said Ward.

to Mass.

In the Reign of King James II. it was not the least Mark of that King's Resolution to establish the Popish Religion, that the Officers of Arms were required to attend him to Mass, not only upon the usual Festivals, but upon Popish Festivals, which had not been done, even when Papery was the established Religion; as, upon Corpus-Christi-Day, the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, Christmas Eve, (when they attended from Eleven at Night till Three the next Morning) Easter Eve, &c. Upon King James's Abdication, the Officers all concurred in the Revolution, and, by Virtue of an Order of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, accompanying the Proclamation which had been agreed to by the House of Parliament, and delivered to Garter by the Lord Halifax, they proclaimed King William and Queen Mary.

The Provincial Kings of Arms had hitherto visited their Provinces, under Commissions granted by the Crown for that Purpose; and such at this Time subsisted; by which Means, and Funeral Certificates, the Descents and Alliances of the Nobility and Gentry had been duly recorded: But such Commissions after the Revolution being refused, the College, to supply that Defect, in 1693, applied to Parliament for a Bill for registering Certificates of the Deceases, Burials, Marriages, and Issues of the Nobility and Gentry, founded upon the former Usage of such Certificates taken by the Officers of Arms, and the Discontinuance of Visitations, and Inquisitions post mortem. But the Ministry, at that Time being distressed for Ways and Means to raise the Supply for the publick Service, converted the same into a Money Bill, by the Title of an Act for granting to his Majesty certain Rates and Duties upon Marriages, Births, Burials, &c. without any Regard to the Utility and Benefit proposed by the Heralds Bill, to make all Ranks and Degrees some Amends for those exorbitant Duties. Certificates were indeed made returnable to the Office, but no Penalty laid for not doing it, and therefore no Certificates were returned.

In 1727, one Robert Harman, having taken upon himself the Title and Office of an Herald, was prosecuted by the College at the Quarter Sessions for the County of Suffolk, held at Beckles, and for his Offence was sentenced to stand on the Pillory in three several Market Towns, on publick Market Days, and afterwards to be imprisoned, and pay a Fine; which Sentence was accordingly executed.

By this Account it appears, the Office of Arms has subsisted in this Kingdom above five hundred Years with Reputation. These Officers had antiently the Character of surpassing foreign Heralds in Knowledge and Practice: Hector Boetius owns, that this Superiority was universally given them; and Menestrier, a Frenchman, acknowledges, that, after the French, the English are the most knowing; both Writers that cannot be suspected of Partiality: Nor would it be difficult to enumerate Officers of Arms, of every Degree in the College, who have excelled and distinguished themselves in their respective Offices; and, notwithstanding the Discouragement they have met with, there is not an Office of Arms at this Time in Europe, wherein the publick Ceremonials, the Arms and Pedigrees of Families, and all other Matters relating to the Science of Heraldry, are so regularly disposed, and so well preserved; and if the Descents of Families have not been continued so well since the Revolution as before, by Reason of the Discontinuance of Visitations and Funeral Certificates, it is not the Heralds Fault; Gentlemen may

may supply that Defect themselves, if they please; the publick Office is always open for that Purpose.

The continuing Descents in the Office of Arms is not only for the Honour of Families, but of great Use and Benefit with Regard to their Inheritances. Lord Chief Justice Coke observes, that the Dealings of the Kings of Arms in Descents and Pedigrees may be a Means to quiet many Controversies about Titles of Honour, Dignities, and Inheritances: And this is confirmed by Experience. The Heralds Books have always been allowed as Evidence at the Common Law, in the House of Lords, and in Proceedings according to the Ecclesiastical Law; and with Regard to Precedency, publick Ceremonials, and Arms, their Books are conclusive.

As to Arms, no Person, who hath the least Knowledge in our History or Laws, can be ignorant of the Value put upon them by our Ancestors, as being the hereditary Marks of their Noblesse. They are the most permanent and lasting Honours, whereby the Memory of Families is preserved, many of which, but for them, would be buried in Oblivion. Lord Chief Justice Coke, speaking of Arms, asserts, that "every Gentleman must be Arma gerens, and that the best Trial of a Gentleman in Blood is by bearing Arms; that they are the most certain Proofs and Evidences of Nobility and Gentry." And again, "Nobiles sunt, qui arma gentilitia antecessorum suorum proferre possunt. Every Gentleman therefore must be distinguished by his proper Arms, as without Arms he cannot be a Gentleman." Nevertheless it is but too common to see Apocryphate Gentlemen with false or fictitious Arms; which, however, is not to be wondered at, when we may daily observe our best Laws evaded. Every Person who thus usurps Arms invades the Prerogative, and very frequently the Property of another. It is not only dishonourable, but dishonest, and an indelible Mark of a base Mind, as well as of a low Extraction: At the same Time, by this Instance of low Pride he publishes his own Dishonour, and injures his Posterity, making them thereby at least one Step lower in Rank as Gentlemen. But the Usurpation of Arms is still worse by Persons in high Stations: To see Men of the first Rank in all Professions using false or fictitious Arms; to see even those who ought to enforce the Laws of their Country, acting contrary to the Laws of Arms, (which are the Laws of the Land as much as the Common Law;) to see Churches, Colleges, Halls, the Court, the City, and the Camp, displaying false Arms, is an Offence to the Publick, and a Dishonour to the Nation.

There is nothing more universally acknowledged than the Use of Arms: They are the Property of Gentlemen, which ought to be preserved to them inviolable. Even those who usurp these Ensigns of Honour as Gentlemen, must desire, in that Respect, to be what they seem. Therefore Arms being duly regulated, and with the Pedigrees and Descents of the Bearers recorded in the Office of Arms, must be desired by every Gentleman, would add a Lustre even to Nobility, preserve Inheritances, be an Honour to the Kingdom, and a lasting Benefit to Posterity.

To this authentick Account we are desired to subjoin what Mr. JOHN GYBBON, Bluemantle, in the Year 1674, collected concerning the same Office and Officers.

In former Times, the Number of the Officers that belonged to this Corporation was not fixed, the Precedency uncertain; and Contentions and Differences sprung up among them, concerning their Rights and Privileges.

Besides the three Kings of Arms, there was a fourth, who was called Ulster, first created by King Edward VI. chiefly for the Use of Ireland; and the first that enjoyed it was Bartholomew Butler, (Anno 6 Edward VI.) York Herald; then was made also Philip Butler, alias Athlone Pursuivant of Arms there; and upon their Creation a Warrant was issued to Sir Ralph Sadler, Knt. of the King's Wardrobe, to deliver to Bar. Butler, alias Ulster King at Arms of Ireland, one Coat of blue and crimson Velvet, embroidered with Gold and Silver upon the same with the King's Arms; and to Philip Butler, alias Athlone Pursuivant at Arms there, one Coat of Sarsnet of the King's Colours, with the Arms laid on with Gold and Purple.

This Place was possessed in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth by one Nicholas Narboon, who was raised from being Richmond Herald to be Ulster King.

And, besides the six Heralds, there were formerly Exeter, Leopard, Faulcon, Carlisle, &c.

The Pursuivants formerly were of two Ranks, Ordinary and Extraordinary. The Ordinary were the six before mentioned. The Extraordinary were these: Faulcon, (afterwards made an Herald) Antelope, Cadran, Guisnes, Hammes, Berwick, Comfort, Roseblanch, Callis, Ricebank, Wallingford, Mountorguile, Nottingham, Barnes, Boloign. But these Extraordinary Pursuivants in the Beginning of Queen Elizabeth's Reign ceased.

In Queen Elizabeth's Reign were great Diffensions and Animosities among the Heralds concerning their Rights, Fees and Precedencies: In-somuch that they presented Petitions and Informations one against another unto the Lord Treasurer Burghley, and the Lord Admiral, who executed then the Office of Earl-Marshal. Which occasioned the said Lords to make an Order, dated October 22, 1597, intituled,

The ORDER of the placing of the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants at Arms, by the Lord Burghley, Lord High-Treasurer of England, and the Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England; exercising the Place of Earl-Marshal of England, by Force of her Majesty's Commission under the Great Seal of England to Us directed in that Behalf.

To this Order were subscribed the Names of William Burghley and C. Howard, confirming the same.

But it may not be amiss to take some Cognizance of the Controversies of these Gentlemen.

The Case between Garter and Clarencieux.

It was the proper Office and Benefit of Clarencieux, King of Arms, to give Arms, and go in Visitations. But Detbick (who was made Garter in the 29th Year of Queen Elizabeth) claimed the same Privileges, as additional to his Office: And that by Virtue of two Commissions, one of Henry VII. and another of Henry VIII. to his Predecessors, to be joined in Commission with Clarencieux. And accordingly had procured of Queen Elizabeth her Letters Patents under her Great Seal for the Office of Garter, with Words expressive of more Power than ever were in any Garter's Patents before; viz. to visit, correct, and give Arms, absolutely of himself: Whereas Clarencieux and Norroy, being Provincial Kings of Arms, could not give Arms without Consent of the Earl-Marshal: Which was an Abuse.

But Cook, Clarencieux, in a Paper to the Commissioners of the Office of the Earl-Marshal, shewed the true Reason of those Commissions; namely, That Roger Macado, a Briton born, was Clarencieux i Henry VII. [and so continued all that Reign:] Who being an old and impotent Man, and not well understanding our Language, did agree with Garter that then was, (viz. Sir John Wrythe, or Wriothesley) to take the Office upon him, and to give Arms, and go in Visitations. For which Garter paid to Clarencieux 40 Marks per Annum: Which was to be paid out of the said Garter's Fee. And this appeared by the said Garter's Letters Patents. And because Garter would have some Authority of himself to shew; and also for that he thought it not for his Credit to be Deputy to Clarencieux; he procured a Bill, signed by Henry VII. wherein Garter was joined with Clarencieux.

There was also a second Commission obtained by the same Garter of King Henry VIII. to the same Import with the former; empowering him to give Arms, and go in Visitation with Clarencieux that then was; viz. Thomas Benolt, who was for the most part employed beyond the Seas, and had no Books to execute his Office. For that at that Time Garter had gotten all the Books of Office into his own Custody, by reason of his former Dealings with Macado. So that in truth he was driven of Necessity to agree with Garter, in like Order to execute his Office as Macado had done. And thereupon Garter shewing to the King the Agreement and Consent of Clarencieux, obtained of the King the said Commission; Clarencieux being then beyond the Seas. At whose Return, finding himself not well used by Garter, and that the Credit of his Office [of Clarencieux] was greatly diminished by the said Garter, he would have broken off with him for dealing any further with him. Which Thing Garter would not by any means consent unto, but stood upon the Authority of the King's Bill assigned. Benolt then was forced to acquaint the King with some of the Abuses of Garter; and, among others, how he had given Arms to a Bondman. Hereupon the King examining the Cause of Clarencieux's Grief and Complaint, and finding that Garter had wronged him, devised and granted to him a Commission under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date the 21st of Henry VIII. Wherein he did inhibit the said Garter, and all others, to deal or meddle either in giving of Arms, or going in Visitations, in the said Clarencieux's Province. Since which Time, all the Clarencieux's have had their Commissions successively one after another, and have ever since gone in Visitation, and given Arms; as by the Books of Visitation, and Grants of Patents, may appear.

Add, That long before those two Bills signed by those two Kings, Clarencieux did give Arms, and go in Visitations, without Garter, by virtue of his Office, and without any Commission; as appeared by divers Visitations and Gifts of Arms. And for these Reasons he earnestly petitioned the Lord Burghley and Lord Howard to obtain of the Queen a Redress of Garter's Patent.

These, and the like Matters, gave great Offence to Garter; and, to be even with Cook, Clarencieux, spared not to impeach him, in another Address to the said Noblemen: As, Concerning his Birth, being sprung of a Tanner: His Ignorance of Languages, not being able to speak French: Of his dissolute Life; being guilty of haunting Taverns, marrying another Man's Wife, Prodigality, and running into Debt: Injuring the Office; in that He and Chester had spoiled the Library in the Office of Arms of more than forty or fifty Books at one Time. That he made a Multitude of Gentlemen by himself, under the Name of Principal King of Arms, [being but Clarencieux.] That his Deputy ranged over all the Realm, giving, altering, and changing Shields of Arms, and Cognizances of Honour, to all Sorts of Men, and of all Faculties; obtruding Arms to some, and exacting Fees exceeding the Queen's Fifteens: And many Pedigrees were unregistered. And as his Deputy went about in fundry Shires of England, so he went about in London, into all Companies and Societies, and in every Street; commanding Merchants, mechanical Men and Artificers before him at fundry Taverns; and gave and allowed Arms to all Manner of Persons, at all Prices, and for good Cheer, contrary to all Honour; and yet wasted all. That he had a Grant of the Queen worth a thousand Pounds, but consumed it. He was charged also for giving the Earl of Desmond's Arms to one Captain Cheston.

Of these Matters Garter complained; and, by Authority granted of the Queen, restrained and reformed them. But Secretary Walsingham took and detained the Queen's Letters Patents of the same; permitting this Man, and others, Garter's Enemies, to proceed in that Abuse. He petitioned then her Majesty, That a Commission might be given to examine this, to the Lord Hunsdon, Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Treasurer, Lord Howard, Lord Admiral, the Earl of Ormond, Sir Christopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor of England, Baron Buckhurst, and Sir John Wolley, Chancellor of the Garter.

It was charged also upon this Officer, That in the Year 1571 he contrived and set out a great Pedigree, painted on Vellom, for the Duke of Norfolk, since his first Imprisonment in the Tower, for his Design of marrying with Mary, Queen of passionate.

How much there was of Truth in these Things, I cannot determine. For Detbick was a Man of great Pride and Passion, (whereby he procured to himself many Enemies) otherwise a Man of Worth and Learning. His Father, Sir Gilbert Detbick, Garter, had been in the Office of Arms sixty-two Years: And he himself had been sent in her Majesty's Service of the Garter, with the Right Honourable the Lord Hunsdon to Lyons in France, and with the Earl of Suffex to the Emperor at Vienna, and with the Lord Buckhurst to the French King, Charles.

Office.

And as these publick Employments were for his Honour, so it must be recorded for his Commendation, that he endeavoured to redress many Things amiss in the Office and Officers, reducible to these Articles following:

I. The Contents of their Corporation in all Points, for the Assembly, Government, Erudition, &c. in the Office of Arms, to be kept and observed.

II. Chapters General and Particular to be had and summoned.

III. The Order and Attendance for waiting at the Court in high Feasts to be dutifully performed.

IV. The House and College of the Office of Arms to be in good Order, inhabited, and repaired.

V. The General Library in the Office, and Records there, to be preserved, ratified, and augmented.

VI. The Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms, to be there at convenient Times attendant, upon Pain.

VII. The Visitations made by Garter, Clarencieux, and Norroy, to be limited or appointed to the Heralds, or Pursuivants, and no other.

VIII. The Burials, or Funerals, to be orderly and duly served, and Certificates entered.

IX. All Painters, Glaziers, Goldsmiths, &c. for dealing in Arms and Pedigrees, to be inhibited.

X. Arms, Crests, Pedigrees, Searches, and all Precedents and Acts of Honour and Gentility, and all other Things, with the Consents of the three Kings of Arms, in the General Office, to be set out and registered.

XI. The Profits and Commodities faithfully collected, and generally to such as deserve well duly parted.

the setting

the Wards.

Moreover this Detbick, Anno 1584, being then York Herald, propounded the setting up of an Office in the Court of Wards, for the Enrolling of Descents and Pedigrees of every one that was Ward, or sued Livery; for the politick Preservation of the Remembrance of Parents and Progenitors, and of the Conjunction of Blood and Kindred with good Proportion; to preserve that Law in Magna Charta, Cap. V. and the Statutes at Marton, Capitul. VI and VII. wherein the Disparagements for Marriages are especially forbidden. The Wards did not enjoy the Benefit of Law in that Point. So that some Preservation in Blood, in the Course of that Court, might go jointly together with the Preservation of the Inheritances.

The establishing of such an Office in the said Court of Wards, as he shewed to the Lord Treasurer Burghley, Master of that Court, would, first, tend to the adorning of it, for the Honour and Renown of the Queen, tending to a more perfect Preservation of the Genealogies and Descents of her Wards, and to perpetuate the same; and most convenient for the Nobility and Gentry of her Realm. And, secondly, it would be a good and direct Means to try and keep the Records of the Truth, against fundry Occurrences and Subtilties, contrived in Prejudice of the Minors and Heirs in the said Court.

His Reasons for it

Master of this Court.

And whereas it might be objected, that such an Office seemed to be needless, since the Heralds in their own Office were diligent to search and register all Pedigrees: To this he answered, that the Heralds of Arms had been long Time past Messengers of Princes, allowed for their Languages, Travel, and Experience: But as for their Dealings in Pedigrees of Nobility, they did but privately collect and observe the Marriages and Issues of Princes, Nobles, and Gentlemen, for their better Knowledge and Remembrance; whereof they took notice upon Sight, Relation, or slender Surmises. But this Action was intended to be committed to the Custody of one private, secret, and sworn Officer, a Herald. And the Pedigrees and Consanguinities to be registered in this Court should be grounded upon Matter of Record and Warrant, provided by Offices, Traverses and Inquests, containing the Names of the Persons, Times and Ages. Secondly, The Form and Manner of the Pedigrees in this Court should contain, in the Roundel or Circle of each Descent, a certain Notice of the Age, Time, Liveries and Obit of each Person, convenient only for this Court. Thirdly, This would be very grateful to the Ward in his Minority, for so careful a Remembrance of his Pedigree; and it would carry with it a Proof of the Deserts of the Ancestors towards their Posterity. For herein some Note should be made of the Tenure of the Lands and Manors, (if it seemed good) with this Addition, primus Acquisitor. Which might affect Children with a grateful and respectful Sense of those from whom they are sprung, and from whom they derived their Estates and Honours. This was an ingenious Project of Mr. Detbick, and might, had it taken, have redounded considerably to his Advantage, who had now been an attendant Officer of Arms twenty Years, and complained of the mean Profits thereof to be very small and uncertain; though with Patience he at length got Advancement.

This Garter, in the Year 1595, fell into new Troubles, being cited by Earl-Marshal Commissioners, for giving George Rotheram, Esq; the Lord Grey of Ruthyn's Coat of Arms, belonging to Henry, then Earl of Kent. To which, by a Letter to Sir John Pickering, Lord Keeper, he answered, that the said Rotheram a Year ago had requested him to take notice, according to the Custom of his Office, of certain Records; one out of the Tower, and other Evidences; and by an antient Book, and a Monument or Tomb-stone with Arms in the Church of Luyton, to set down his Pedigree, pretended from Anthony Lord Grey of Ruthyn. Which Pedigree he did exemplify for him, without any further Approbation or Confirmation to the same, to be true; but only according to his Proofs shewn him, which he, the said Rotheram, was to produce or defend by Laws, and not by his Office. And so he, the said Garter, reckoned himself to stand discharged.

Sentence against Garter in Favour of the Earl of Kent.

But the Complaint made by the Earl of Kent to the Court of Earl-Marshall ran against both, as well Garter as Rotheram. And the Sentence also was against both, which was given in Favour of the Earl in June, Anno 1597, after long hearing on both Parts at sundry Times; whereby it was judged, "That the said Detbick (Garter) and Rotheram had manifestly done wrong to the Complainant, (for so are the Words of the Sentence) in making and publishing that Pedigree, in a Case so long suspended without Claim, to make a Shew that the said Rotheram was descended lineally of Katharine, a Daughter of Anthony Lord Grey of Ruthyn, who was proved before them by divers Means of good Credit to have died without Issue. And they, the Commissioners of the Office of Earl-Marshall, (Judges in this Cause) did revoke and annul the bearing of the said Arms of the Earl of Kent quarterly by Rotheram, and judged them to be unlawfully borne; and determined that Part of the Pedigree made by Garter to be unlawful, by which the said Rotheram was made the Cousin and Heir general of Edmund Earl of Kent, by Anthony eldest Son of the said Earl; reserving to themselves Power to tax the Costs and Expenses of the Complainant against the Defendants."

Garter deposed.

Wev. Mon

How Garter got off from this troublesome Business, I cannot tell; but I find he was knighted, and after some Time deposed in the first Year of King James. For indeed his rough Carriage had procured him many Enemies in this Office. He was buried, Anno 1612, in St. Paul's, near Sir Pain Roet, King of Arms, named Guyon, that lived in the Reign of Edward III.

A Motion of uniting the Offices of Garter and Clarencieux.

The Quarrel in these Times between the two Kings, Garter and Clarencieux, in regard of their Rights and Encroachments upon each other, made the Lord Treasurer Burghley bethink himself of joining them both into one, that the Office might hereafter be enjoyed by one Person, Cook Clarencieux being now dead. But the Establishment of the Corporation by Parliament, whereby these two Kings were appointed, obstructed this Design; and other Considerations made it inconvenient: Wherefore some other Expedient was propounded for the begetting and continuing of better Agreement between these Kings: And particularly, that the Earl-Marshall, in preferring Clarencieux to the room of Garter, would take Order, that his Successor in the Office of Clarencieux might remit some Part of his Interest in Matters of Profit. Then Garter might be well provided for, and the Corporation no whit altered.

Clarencieux dies.

Robert Cook, Clarencieux, died in the 37th Year of Queen Elizabeth, that is, about the Year 1593. Then the Lord Burghley, acting as Earl-Marshall, knowing he had many Books of Heraldry (some whereof he had taken out of the Office violently) sent to the Lord-Mayor and Sheriffs to take an Inventory of his Books; which they did, and returned a Catalogue of them. Then Detbick, Garter, propounded to the said Lord, that they might have them at a reasonable Price to the Office; being sorry, as he said, that the Mayor and Merchants of London should have the Perusal of the honourable Secrets of the Office of Arms, and have the Custody thereof; who might not arrest their Bodies, and yet kept their Records. By this Catalogue, Cook seems to have been a very diligent Man in his Science, consisting of a vast Collection of Descents and Pedigrees of English Noblemen, Gentlemen and Strangers, Statutes of the Order of the Garter, antient Patents, Evidences, Certificates, Visitations of the Counties of Leicester, Warwick, Lincoln, the City of London, Surry, Kent, Hampshire, Sussex, Cornwall, Cambridge, Hertford, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Jufts, Proceedings to Coronations and Combats, divers Books of Tricks of Arms, Escripts, Writings, Muniments with Seals to the same, Notes of the Wars of King Edward III. and many other old Papers and Offices from Henry III. to Henry VI.

Richard Lee, Richmond Herald, succeeded Cook in the Office of Clarencieux. Against him also Garter took great Offence, accusing him to have invaded his Office for the Burial of Bishops, and the Lord-Mayor of London. He accused him also to the Commissioners of the Earl-Marshall's Office, for using an Hearse in the Funeral of a Knight Batchelor, viz. Sir Richard Baker. To which he answered for himself, That Knights Funerals had, according to Custom, Hearses, as well as Barons. Nor did Hearses make Difference or Distinction between those two Degrees; and that the using thereof was left to the Discretion of the Officers at Arms, as more indifferent. And that the said Hearse of that Knight wanted Ornaments, wherewith properly the Hearses of Barons were garnished. Garter also accused the said Lee, that he had allowed and set out the Arms and Funerals of one Bucher, a Mercer of London, a Man of small Parentage, with Helmet, Crest, Coat of Arms, Penon, and a Pall, and himself attendant in his rich Coat.

There was another Herald belonging to this College at this Time, and a Man of Note (I do not say for his Virtues.) His Name was Brookes, or Brokefmouth, York Herald, being preferred thither from being Rougecross Pursuivant about the Year 1592. He understood neither Latin nor French, to qualify him for his Place; but having been once a Painter, he had an excellent Hand in tricking Coats of Arms, hardly to be equalled by any of the rest, as appears by a Book still remaining in the Office of his own doing, containing the Arms of the Nobility, if I rightly remember. Which curious Skill of his was, I suppose, the Reason that the Lord Burghley bare a Favour to him, and once gave his Hand for him to be preferred to be Norroy against Camden, namely, Anno 1593, when Edmund Knight, Norroy, was very sick, and Camden was nominated to the Place.

This Brokefmouth is best known for his presumptuous Attempt to confute several of the learned learned Camden's Genealogies of the Nobility in his Britannia. Against whom that excellent Man (an unequal Match for him) vindicated himself so fully, and shewed so plainly the Ignorance and Malice of his Antagonist, (and yet with much Gentleness and Modesty) that he was thenceforth esteemed a very ignorant Man in Heraldry, and a notorious Calumniator to all Posterity. Besides this, he was of a very scandalous and evil Life. He once brake open the Office, and took away all the Books belonging to it, and an Iron Chest, and took thence the Order and other Muniments. He was once condemned at Newgate for two Felonies, and burnt in the Hand. He was also guilty of Whoredom and Uncleaness. He was supposed to be a Procurer of perjured Persons in the Star-Chamber, detected in the Court of Requests, twice degraded, and the Queen's Coat of Arms which he wore was pulled over his Ears; and for his Ignorance of Languages and Learning, and other Misdemeanors, by the Judgment of the Earl of Leicester, and all wise Men, thought to be unfit to be an Officer of Arms, or to be permitted to come to her Majesty's Presence, being a Vagabond, and not worth 3*l*. But after Leicester's Death he began to shew himself again; and afterwards got such Friends and Credit, that he dared to oppose himself against Garter; and vexed him both in the Exchequer and Star-Chamber, by slanderous Acts and Suits commenced against him, and a great many vexatious Interrogatories, chiefly taken out of Informations the said Garter had, in Conscience and Care of the Office, given the Lord Treasurer concerning him. So that he was fain, Anno 1594, to beseech the said Lord to consider of his Credit and Service to the Queen for thirty Years, trusting that he would have Respect to him for his Office, Place, and Parents; and how Brokefmoth spared not Time, Means, Place or Persons to discredit him. In short, he rendered himself uneasy to all the Society, so turbulent was he in the Office, impugning all their honest Proceedings in Matters of Funerals, and other Cases of Office. Infomuch, that Sir Edward Hoby, Knt. deputed by the Lords in Commission for the Office of Earl-Marshal, writ to them in this Manner: "There is one Brokefmoth, now York, a wonderful lewd Fellow, untemperate, quarrelsome, and all the Office weary of him." Yet he endeavoured afterwards to obtain that Place of Norroy, with much Assurance of his own Qualifications; tho' he missed it.

In the Years 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, the Office was much neglected by reason of the great Quarrels of the Kings and Heralds among themselves, as we have heard in Part. The College went into Ruin for want of Reparation, the Office was discontinued, and the Books of the Office embezzelled. Some of these Officers (however learned) were hasty and passionate, others of them debauched in their Lives, or ignorant in Languages and Heraldry. The Lord Treasurer Burghley, and Lord Howard, Lord High Admiral, were commissioned by the Queen to act in the Office of Earl-Marshal of England; being authorized with full Power, from Time to Time, to call before them all Officers of Arms, both Kings of Arms, Heralds and Pursuivants; and to cause due Inquisition to be made of all Manner of Arms by them given to any Person without good Warrant, or usurped and taken by any Person without the like Warrant; and, upon due Examination and Trial thereof, to revoke and disannul all such as should be so tried, unlawfully assigned or usurped. By virtue of this Commission and Authority, in this decayed Estate of the Heralds College, they deputed Sir Edward Hoby and Sir George Carew, Knts. to view the present State of the Office, and to make Statutes and Orders for the better Regulation of it for the future: Which they did, laying before them the true Intent of their first Charter, and drew up a Book for the Reformation of the Office; and September, 1596, presented it to the said two Peers, desiring them to subscribe it, that so it might be of Force; which whether it was so subscribed or no by them, I cannot tell. But the Exemplification of this Book would be too large here to insert.

The Book bore this Title: "ORDERS to be observed and kept by the Kings, Heralds, and Pursuivants of Arms that now are, or hereafter shall be, and established by us, the Right Honourable Lord Burghley, Lord High Treasurer of England; Charles Lord Howard of Effingham, Lord High Admiral of England; and Henry Baron of Hunsdon, Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household; Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and deputed by Commission for the Office of Earl-Marshal of England."

The Dedication of these Orders (which was made to the Lord Treasurer, and the Lord Howard of Effingham) giving an Account of the Reason and Occasion of making them, I shall insert, being to this Tenor: "That whereas it had pleased their Lordships, by Virtue of her Majesty's Commission to their Lordships granted for the Exercise of the Earl-Marshal's Office of England, to authorise, ordain, and depute them, Sir Edward Hobbie, and Sir George Carewe, Knts. for the View of the present State of the Office of Arms, commonly called Darby-House, in London: These were to signify unto their Lordships, that, according to the Instructions and Charge given in that Behalf unto them, they had oftentimes made their Repair unto the said Office; and, as far forth as they might, had accomplished the same in all Points.

"And forasmuch as they found the House itself to be fallen into great Ruin, through want of due Reparations and habitable Use, the Office discontinued, and in as great Decay for lack of Books, and general Exercise therein, Garter and Clarencieux at open Wars for their Livings and Profits, and the Heralds and Pursuivants (Factions between them) daily arresting, suing and undoing one another: Their Opinions therefore were, that there could be no speedier Reformation of all their Errors and Abuses, than the Re-establishment of the general Office, according to the true Extent of their Charter and Corporation, which appointed one Place, one common Seal, and mutual Consent for all their Doings; and to be governed by the Earl-Marshal or Marshals for the Time being, as had been accustomed. Out of whose Ordinances, Statutes and Decrees heretofore made, they

missioners for Earl-Marshal.

Their Power.

“ they [Sir Edmund Hobby and Sir George Carew]
 “ had also gathered a Method, or Form of Go“ vernment, which they held very expedient and “ necessary.

“ All which (standing with their Lordships
 “ good Likings) they humbly presented to be ra“ tified by their present Authorities under their “ Hands and Seals. So that from henceforth the “ same might not be altered, nor frustrated. But “ to be recorded into the Chancery, until by Par“ liament it might be made an Act irrevocable, “ to their Lordships perpetual Memory.” It was dated Sept. 28, 1596.

The Exordium of the Book shewed some Antiquities of this Office, viz.

“ First, That it appeared unto them, the Com“ missioners, that sundry antient Ordinances, Sta“ tutes and Decrees had been made and establish“ ed (as well by the most High and Mighty
 “ Prince Thomas of Lancaster, Duke of Clarence,
 “ &c. as by divers other Constables and Earl-“ Marshals of England succeeding, until the Time “ of Thomas late Duke of Norfolk) for the good “ Estate, Rule and Government of the Office
 “ and Officers of Arms.

“ That it was manifest also by a memorable “ Chapter, holden by the Kings, Herald and “ Pursuivants at Roan in Normandy, Tempore “ Hen. V. what necessary Orders were to be had “ and observed amongst themselves, and their “ Successors for ever.

“ Further, That in the Time of Rich. III. the “ Kings, Herald, Pursuivants of Arms, were,
 “ by special Charter, under the Great Seal of “ England, made one Body Politick in Name
 “ and Fact, and Collegiate, at Colebarbour in the “ City of London; confirming therein Garter “ Principal King of Arms of English Men, and “ Clarencieux and Norroy Provincial Kings, by “ the Name of King of the South, and King of “ the North, to be continued in Succession.

“ Henry VII. and Henry VIII. confirmed and “ allowed their Letters Patents, and by Signa“ tures licensed their Authorities.

“ Edward VI. amplified their Liberties and “ Privileges under his Great Seal.

“ And Q. Mary re-established their Corporation “ in Derby-House in London, as a College wherein “ the Kings, Herald, and Pursuivants should “ inhabit, assemble, communicate, exercise, and “ keep all their Books, Rolls and Muniments, “ for their better Erudition, and good Estate of “ her Majesty's Office of Arms.

“ All which being for many Years discontinued
 “ through great Disorders amongst themselves,
 “ and the Non-residence of late Earl-Marshals, “ whereby many gross Absurdities and Abuses “ had been ingendered and committed; it was “ now her Majesty's high Will and Pleasure, that “ they, the said Commissioners, should inquire,
 “ see into, and reform all such Errors and Abu“ ses as they found in the said Office and Officers “ of Arms; and therefore had established such “ good Orders and Decrees, as might from hence“ forth by no Remove, Change or Election of “ any Earl-Marshal or Marshals, be revoked, al“ tered, or made void; any Ordinance, Statute, “ Act of Office, Charter, or Decree heretofore “ made to the contrary hereof notwithstanding.”

And then follow the Orders. The Titles whereof are, I. The Site of the House appropriated to the College of Heralds. II. Records to be safely kept. III. Daily Attendance in the Office. IV. Prerogative and Office of Garter.
 V. Burials, &c. for Garter. VI. Office of Provincial Kings. VII. Burials, &c. for the Provincial Kings. VIII. Arms to be given with Consent of the Earl-Marshal. IX. None to trick or publish Arms to Posterity, without Privy of the Office. X. Chapters to be holden for Learning, Knowledge, and Doubts. XI. Allowance of Pursuivants. XII. Avoiding of Controversies, the Gall hitherto among them. XIII. How far Authority is yielded to the King's Chapter. XIV.
 Power in Visitations. XV. Oath for Performance and due Keeping of these Statutes.

The common Practice of attaining to Preferment in this Office is gradual: First a Pursuivant, then a Herald, before any arrive to the Profit and Honour of a King at Arms. A very proper and reasonable Method, that the Heralds should be taken from the Pursuivants, and the Kings out of the Number of the Heralds; and that generally by Antiquity of Standing; whereby the Hope of future Advancement might be a Spur to their Diligence in the Study of Arms; and that Kings, by long training up in that Science, might be substantially learned and exercised in the History of Honour and Arms, of whom the greatest Knowledge in such Points was reasonably looked for, so as to be the Arbitrators of those Matters, and to whom the rest were to apply themselves for Resolution in any Difficulties or Questions thereof.

And therefore, when Mr. St George (afterward Sir Richard St. George) a learned Man, and of great acquired Knowledge, particularly in Heraldry, was recommended to the Lords Commissioners, and petitioned for the Place of Norroy, the Heralds and Pursuivants petitioned the same Lords; shewing, “ That it was contrary to all “ Order of the Office, nor Precedent of the like, “ since their first Corporation; and a great Wrong
 “ and Disgrace to them, that a Man who had ne“ ver been employed in her Majesty's Service one “ Day, should overgo so many that had spent “ both their Youth and Wealth in her Service,
 “ and overthrown their better Fortunes by the “ Hopes and Expectations of Preferment here,
 “ when it fell.”

And that this was for a long Series of Time the constant Practice, may appear to the Eye in a Table drawn out by Lant, Portcullis, in the Year 1595, when himself stood for Advancement to a Herald's Place upon a Vacation, in a Petition to the Lords in Commission. By which Table may be seen the Names of all this College, from the Times of King Edward IV. and their gradual Preferments, unto the latter End of Queen Elizabeth. It is intitled, A Catalogue of all the Officers of Arms, shewing how they have risen by Degrees:
 “ First to be a Pursuivant Extraordinary; then a “ Pursuivant in Ordinary; after that an Herald;
 “ and, lastly, a King of Arms. Which Order “ hath been observed, as herein appeareth, since “ King Edward IV. and long before, unto this “ Year; confirmed by many Precedents, gather“ ed and collected by Thomas Lant, now Pursui“ vant

 Baronage,
 Vol. II.
 p. 383.

It may be mentioned, for the Honour of the Heralds, that from some of them have sprung very noble Families; and others have been adorned with excellent Learning. The Right Noble Family of the Wriothesleys, Earls of Southampton, was derived from John Wrythe, or Wriothesley, in the Reign of Edward IV. who was first Antelope Pursuivant, or Faulcon, according to Dugdale’s Baronage; and after by degrees came to be Garter, and received Knighthood.
 He had Issue Thomas, Garter, and William Wrio- thesley, York Herald; whose Son, Sir Thomas, was first a Clerk of the Signet in the Reign of King Henry VIII. then made Coroner and Attorney in the Court of Common-Pleas; soon after principal Secretary of State; and in the 30th of Hen. VIII.
 was sent Ambassador to the Lady Regent in the Netherlands, to treat of a Marriage between King Henry and Christiana Dutcheß of Milan, a beautiful Lady, then in those Parts. Two Years after he was made Constable of the Castle of Southamp- ton: And two Years after that, had the like Command for the Castle of Portchester; and was made one of the Chamberlains of the Exchequer. A Year after that, viz. 35 Hen. VIII. upon the League made by King Henry and the Emperor
Charles, he was appointed one of the Commissioners for managing the Treaty conducing there-unto. And the first Day of January, the same Year, he was advanced to be a Baron, by the Title of Lord Wriothesley of Titchfield in the County of Southampton. Which Titchfield was a Monastery newly dissolved, which he had obtained.
 In the 36th of this King, he was made Lord Chancellor of England. At the End of this Year he was installed Knight of the Garter. And the King, on his Death-bed, constituted him one of his Executors, and appointed him of Council to Edward the Prince, his Son, that was to succeed him. And three Days before the said Ed- ward’s Coronation, he had the Title and Honour of Earl of Southampton; as appears by Patents, bearing Date the 16th of February, in the 1st Year of Edward VI. But, by Reason of the great Factions in this Reign, he was divested of his Office of Lord Chancellor, and put from the Council, and afterwards confined. And the Honour continued in his Family for three or four Generations, till within our Memory.

Sir Pain
 Roet,
 Guienne
 King.

 p. 661.

Yet higher Honour did the Posterity of another Herald arrive to; viz. Pain Roet, Knight, Guienne King of Arms. Who had two Daughters: Anne, the younger, whom Geofrey Chaucer (our antient famous Poet) married. By whom he had Sir Thomas Chaucer, Knight. Whose Daughter Alice was matched with Thomas Mon- tacute, Earl of Salisbury, (by whom she had no Issue) and afterward with William De La Pole, Earl of Suffolk; who had by her John Duke of Suffolk, and others. Roet’s other Daughter, Ka- tharine, who was the elder, married to Sir Otes

Swinford, and afterwards to John of Gaunt, the Great Duke of Lancaster: Of whose Issue by her came a most Royal and Illustrious Offspring, viz. eight Kings, four Queens, and five Princes of England; six Kings, and three Queens of Scotland; two Cardinals, above twenty Dukes, and almost as many Dutcheßes, of the Kingdom of England; divers Dukes of Scotland, and most of all the now antient Nobility of both these Kingdoms; many other potent Princes, and eminent Nobility of foreign Parts.

Those that brought Honour to this Office, for their Learning or Writings, were divers in the latter Days of Queen Elizabeth. Of these I shall mention some.

Men of Learning in this Office.

Robert Glover, Somerset Herald; a Man, as of a good Wit and great Reading, so of infinite Industry and Pains. He began the Book called The Catalogue of Honour, in Latin; but finished by Mills, his Kinsman: Wherein he undertook to clear the Descents from Royal Pedigrees of our Kings and Queens. He had Abundance of Rolls and Pedigrees, and antient Writings of Heraldry, which he had gathered together for his Use;
 besides vast Collections made by his own Hands, and Travel, touching Arms; Books of Visitation of XXIV Shires; and Miscellanea, wrote by himself. Camden mentions him oft with Honour, and acknowledged he made much Use of him in Genealogies. Glover also communicated to Dr.
David Powell a Copy of the History of Cambria, translated by H. Lloyd. He was thus useful in promoting the Knowledge of the antient History of Britain; and would doubtless have been much more, had he not been taken away so early; being at his Death but forty-five Years old.
 In the Parish Church of Cripplegate, (where he was interred) is a decent Monument set up to his Memory, with an Inscription in Latin.

Glover,
 Somerset.

Francis Thynne, Lancaster Herald, was well versed in our English History, and thoroughly studied in Heraldry, before he sued (Anno 1593) to be admitted into this Office: When he offered himself to the Lord Burghley, for his Skill in that Learning, to be examined even in the deepest Points of Armoury, which he thought could not be attained to without Knowledge of Philosophy and History; he signified then, that he had drawn out a Series of the Lord Treasurers, and composed a certain circulary Pedigree of the Earls and Viscounts of England.

Francis
 Thynne.

A late Author mentioneth several other of his Works, some printed, and some in MS. Of the former Sort are the Annals of Scotland, continued where Hollingshed left off, viz. to the Year 1586.
 He was a great Catalogist: For, besides the Catalogue of the Lord Treasurers of England, before-mentioned, he drew up a Catalogue of the English Cardinals, which is printed in Hollingshed, at the End of Queen Mary. Likewise a Catalogue of the Lord Chancellors in MS. A Catalogue also (alphabetically disposed) of such as had wrote purposely of the English History, whether Englishmen, or Foreigners: Which is printed at the End of Hollingshed’s History. There be also remaining in MS. Thynne’s Discourses of Arms; Collections of Antiquities; Sepulchral Inscriptions, collected by him as well in the Churches of England, as other Parts; Notes on Chaucer’s

Writings of Thynne.

Chaucer's Work, with which he intended to put out that Author with a Comment, tho' he performed it not. But he assisted Speght with his Notes and Directions, and with considerable Materials for writing Chaucer's Life.

Sir W.
Segar.

Sir William Segar, Garter, wrote a Book entitled Honour Military and Civil.

Sir Rich.
St. George

Sir Richard St. George, Clarencieux, another learned Man of this Office. This Gentleman was Confort with the great Antiquarians of those Times, Sir Robert Cotton, Camden, Spelman, and others; and was one of those that endeavoured to revive the College or Society of the studious of Antiquity, and their learned Meetings, that had been for some Time omitted. Of him Wever makes mention with Honour; and particularly, that he was ready to give him his Assistance, in his Book of Antient Funeral Monuments that he was writing.

John Hart, Chester Herald, wrote a Book of the English Orthography.

To these may be added, Vincent, Brook, Lant, Sandford, and the elaborate Antiquarian, Sir William Dugdale; and lastly, Elias Ashmole, Esq; Windsor Herald.

Camden Clarencieux.

But instead of all, Camden, Clarencieux, furnished The Learned, is an eternal Monument of Honour to this Society. Who, besides his Modesty, and Simplicity of Manners, that adorned his great Learning, left two most incomparable Books to Posterity; his Britannia, and his Annals of Queen Elizabeth. To which his Remains may be added, set forth after his Death by John Philpot, Somerset Herald. Who also may be reckoned among the Learned of this College; being the Author of an History of the County and Families of Kent, called Villare Cantianum.

Gybbon's
Heraldo-Memo-riale.

Mr. Gybbon, a learned Pursuivant, (lately deceased) hath diligently collected out of the English and Scotch Authors, and other foreign Writers, a large Account of the great and important Services of the Heralds in former Times. Which Collections (communicated by himself to me) he entitled Heraldo-Memoriale; which had been worthy to have been here inserted, had it not been too large. Yet the Sum I shall digest as briefly as I can; by shewing thence, How antient Heraldry hath been; Their Retaining to Princes; Their Employments in War and Peace, and in Proclaiming and Publishing weighty Things; The great Esteem of them, with their Rewards; and other Accidents that have happened to them.

Heralds
antient.

And first, as for their Antiquity; They were in Request among the antient Grecians. Homer, in his second Book, speaks of nine Heralds in the Grecian Army. And the Romans made great Use of them: And as in Messages of War, and the like, so in Funerals, it was a Custom among them, That the Heralds dismissed the Mourners with the Word I licet, or Ire licet; i. e. You may withdraw. And this Ceremony is taken notice of by the Describer of the Funeral Solemnity of the Lord Henry de la Tour, Marshal General of the Field and Armies of Lewis the XIVth of France.

Retain to Kings, and great Nobles.

They have immediately retained to Kings and Princes; and have gone abroad with them to their Wars, and in their Progresses; and have been dispatched by them to other Princes upon important Messages, and especially upon war-like Occasions. The chiefest Nobility also have had their Heralds. The Earl of Northumberland sent an Herald, named Northumberland, to King Richard II. (ultimo Reg.) for a safe Conduct, to come and commune with him. The Duke of Bedford had his Herald, named Bedford; whom he sent after the Crowning of Charles VII. of France, to defy him. The same sent the same Herald, Anno 1433, from Laigny, to the Lord Gaucourt, to offer him Battle; which was warily refused. The Duke of Gloucester and Earl of Pembroke had his Herald named Pembroke; whom he sent, Anno 1436, to defy the Duke of Burgundy. Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, had Suffolk Herald, and Marteon Pursuivant. The Marquis of Dorset kept Grooby Herald. Arthur Plantagenet, Viscount Lisle, had Lisle Pursuivant. Baron Hastings had Hastings Pursuivant. And Sir John Chandois and Sir John Falstolph had their Heralds; and so had Cardinal Woolsey, according to Stow.

Holling-
shed.

Wever,
P. 683.

The French King contemporary with our King Henry V. had his King at Arms, named Montjoy. The Duke of Burgundy, about that Time, had Toison d'Or, his King at Arms. And the Scotch King hath his King of Arms, stiled Lion. And they have commonly been about Princes in their Courts: And it is noted by the Historian, as a strange Piece of Negligence in King Lewis XI. of France, That he had oftentimes neither Officers of Arms, nor Trumpeters in his Court: And therefore (when he had Occasion for an Herald) sent a Varlet, or Yeoman, in a Coat of Arms, made of a Trumpet Banner, to K. Edward IV.

Stow's
Chron.

They have been chiefly made use of in great Wars, between Princes in Hostility, for carrying Messages, Defiances, &c. Henry King of Castile sends an Herald to the Black Prince, to know why he invaded his Kingdom.

Employed in War.

Montjoy, King of Arms, sent from Roan from the French King, and thirty-five of his Council, to assure K. Henry V. he should have Battle given him. And King Henry gave him a great Reward, as well as a gallant Answer.

Again, they sent an Herald to the said King, in a scoffing way, to demand what Ransom he was willing to give. To which he returned a stay'd and sober Answer. This was before the Battle of Agincourt, Anno 1403.

After they were broken and defeated, K. Henry perceiving they began to rally, sent an Herald to them; assuring them, That if they persisted, he would not only slay all the Prisoners already taken, but all such as he should take hereafter.

After the Battle, Montjoy, and four other Heralds, came to know the Number of the Prisoners, and to desire Burial of the Dead. And the King granted their Request, and feasted them.

Messages previous to War, and Defiances, were used to be done by Heralds.

Denunciation of War between Princes was by Heralds.

Denounce War.

The French King's Marshal, Bonciquant, by an Herald, denounced War against Pope Benedict the XIIIth, upon his Refusal to surrender the Popedom.

A

Howell's
Ep. P.
204.
A French Herald at Arms, Anno 1635, sent from Paris to Flanders, by Sound of Trumpet denounced and proclaimed War against the King of Spain, and all his Dominions. This Herald fixed up, and left the Defiance in all the Towns as he passed.

Henry V. in the third of his Reign, sent Antelope Pursuivant at Arms from Southampton, to the French King, to demand Restitution of what he detained wrongfully from him.

Windsor Herald was sent, Anno 1418, to summon Roan.

Edward IV. sent an Officer at Arms, a Norman born, to defy the French King, Lewis the XIth, Anno 1474.

The Duke of Bedford sends Bedford his Herald to defy Charles VII. the French King. And Humphry Duke of Gloucester, by his Herald, defies the Duke of Burgundy.

Heyl.
Geogr.
p. 104.
The Emperor's Herald defies Francis, the first King of France: And giving his Master all his Titles, of Castile, Leon, Arragon, Naples, &c. in a long Roll, K. Francis commanded his Heralds to receive the Challenge, and repeat France as many times, as the other had Kingdoms and petty Titles.

The Earl of Surrey, 13 Henry VII. sent Norroy King of Arms to the Captain of Hayton Castle, (which was one of the strongest Places between Berwick and Edinburgh) to deliver him the said Castle; which he refused, affirming, he was assured of ready Succours.

Whilst the said Earl lay at Hayton, the King of Scotland sent to him Marehamont and another Herald, with a Challenge either to fight Army to Army, or Person to Person, upon certain Conditions. Which Conditions were refused upon discreet Considerations. And the Earl sent back the Herald well rewarded.

The Duke of Bedford, primo H. VII. marching against the Rebels, headed by the L. Lovel, commanded the Heralds to make Proclamation, that if they would lay down their Arms, they should have Pardon.

Heralds in and after Battles.
Heralds also have been employed in and after Battles fought; as in some Instances before. The Battel of Veruol, Anno 1424, in the Reign of Henry VI. was so uncertain for a while, that no Herald could tell to which Party Fortune would be favourable. Afterwards, by Report of Montjoy, King of Arms for France, and the English Heralds, there present, were slain of the French and Scots 9700, and of the English 2100.

And in Combats.
As in publick Wars, so they have been concerned about private Combats and Challenges. In the Year 1380, was a Combat between Sir John Annesley and Thomas Katrington; who was accused by the said Knight for betraying the Fortrefs of S. Saviour, in the Isle of Constantine in Normandy. The Heralds in this Combat did their Duty, in calling the Combatants to the Performance thereof.

Holling-
shed.
The Heralds did the same likewise in the famous Combat intended between the Dukes of Hereford and Norfolk; which the King took up. The Ceremonial Circumstances and Proceedings are well worthy the Reading.

In a Combat, Anno 1467, between the Bastard of Burgoine and the L. Scales, the Advice of the Officers of Arms, as well as of the Constable and Marshal, was asked and followed.

They have likewise been employed in Jufts and Turnaments. In Jufts.

Nor have they only been used in War, but in Peace also; as in Proclamations and Cavalcades, in attending Funerals, in giving Coats of Arms, and such like. Employed in Peace.

When Knights have been created, they have been proclaimed by the Voice of Heralds. So Camden shews in his learned Book, that Knights made in Scotland are proclaimed by the publick Voice of an Herald. Britannia.

At the Baptism of Madame de Isabelle de France, to whom our King Henry VIII. was Godfather, the Infant's Name was proclaimed by the Kings and Heralds of Arms, both of France and England; having their Coats of Arms adorned with the Arms of both Kings. Paradine.
At Christenings of Princes.

Heralds attended at the Christening of Queen Elizabeth and King Edward.

The Proclamation of the Truce between King Henry II. of France, and Charles V. Emperor, with his Son Philip King of England, was performed by four Heralds.

When Pope Clement VII. was received at Mar-seilles, three Heralds at Arms marched just after fifty Swissers, bravely apparelled; the Heralds having their Coats of Arms blue, with Fleurs de Lys of Gold.

And when Ferdinand, Anno 1527, was to be made King of the Romans, before him went ten Troops, and an Herald at Arms, whom followed the Master of the Ceremonies with the Royal Banner. Paradine.

But lately, when Frederick Duke of Prussia was to be proclaimed King of that Country, the Grand Marshal of the Court, and the Grand Marshal of Prussia, went at the Head of a great Number of Gentlemen, richly clad and well mounted. Then followed twelve Heralds at Arms, preceded by four and twenty Trumpets and two Kettle-Drums, and followed by a Squadron of Dragoons. The Cavalcade having shewed itself in the principal Streets of the City of Coningsbergh, the Heralds made the Proclamation. A great deal of Difference as to Heralds, between King Ferdinand and King Frederick.

The King of the Heralds and his Fellows proclaimed the King's new Style of Defender of the Faith. Foxe's Martyrol.

They are honourably employed also in attending at and marshalling Funerals of the Nobility and Gentry, tho' that considerable Part of their Office is now-a-days unjustly invaded by Tradesmen and Shopkeepers. Marshal Funerals.

Mercator in Loreine shews how the Body of Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, was by Boiset, Herald of the Golden Fleece (at the Command of Charles V.) transported from Nancy to Bruges. Atlas.

And as they give, so they sometimes take away Coats of Arms. Give, and change, and abate Coats.

Non solum potestas conferendi nova Insignia, sed potestas augendi, mutandi, diminuendi Insignia vetera, est penes Principem, & ejus Heraldos, i. e. It is in the Power of Princes and their Heralds not only to give new Arms, but to increase, change, abate antient Coats. And so Leigh in his Accedence of Armoury. Macken-zy, p. 12

Mack- 115.

Mackenzey faith from Cassaneus, that Heralds devised Godfrey of Boilein's Coat.

When any Person is forfeited in Parliament in Scotland, Lion and his Brethren, Heralds, come in with their Coats and Formalities; and Lion doth publicly tear the Arms of the Party forfeited. And if he be a Cadet of a Family, he faith openly, The tearing of these Arms shall be without Prejudice to the Nobleman or Chief, whose Arms these are. After which, he and his Brethren go to the Cross, and there hang up the Shield reversed, the Base or lowest Point upward.

Princes Value of their Heralds.

Hollings-
shed.

The Esteem and Value Princes have had for, their Heralds, appears from hence; namely, How they have resented Violences and Affronts used towards them. An Instance of this happened in the seventh of Richard II. Henry Spencer, the warlike Bishop of Norwich, undertaking Pope Urban's Quarrel against Pope Clement, raised 2000 Horses and 15000 Foot, and landed at Calais; and performed great Feats of Arms in Flanders. At length a Flemish Army approaching, he sent an Herald to know what Pope they adhered to. But the Army being of West Flanders (raised by themselves) and not understanding the Law of Arms, slew the Herald. At which the English were so enraged, that joining Battel, 9000 Flemings were slain, as faith Thomas Walsingham.

Honourably
presented.

They have usually had high Respects and honorary Presents from those Princes to whom they have been sent, whatever their Messages have been.

The King of Scots sent an Herald to King Henry IV. to deliver up George of Dunbarre, Earl of March, that was fled into England. The Herald had an honest, honourable and discreet Answer; but negative.

When Montjoy the French King's Herald brought King Henry V. word from his Master, that he should have Battle given him, the King gave him a great Reward.

When the Duke of Gloucester sent his Herald Pembroke to the Duke of Burgundy, though it were to defy him, he was rewarded with a Cup, and an hundred Guldens.

King Henry VIII. Anno 1513, being at Tours, a King of Arms of Scotland, called Lion, with his Coat of Arms on, was by Garther King of Arms brought to the King's Presence, and delivered a Letter to him from the Scotch King. And notwithstanding the King was angry at some Words of the Herald, yet he commanded Garther to take him to his Tent, and make him good Cheer. After this, were the Letters read and answered, and an hundred Angels given to Lion at his Departure.

Rouge-Croix, a Pursuivant at Arms, in the Reign of King Henry VIII. was sent to the Scotch King invading England. Who detained him, and sent one Hay, an Herald at Arms, to the Earl of Surrey; who, hearing of his coming, sent York Herald to accompany him. And the consequent Discourse is very remarkable; shewing what Respect in those Days was used to Heralds.

To all this may be added some memorable Things that have happened to this honourable and useful Rank of Men.

They have been sent upon Messages so unwelcome to them to whom they came, that they have sometimes been slain, and sometimes ill treated;

as the Flemings served Henry Spencer's Herald, before spoken of; whom they slew.

Sabellicus, in his History of the Venetians, mentioneth an Herald of theirs sent to Francis Carrera; who cut off his Nose and Ears.

Laurentius Valentius mentioneth an Herald belonging to the Earl of Urgelles; who, carrying a Defiance to the Earl of Cordouna, was ill treated by the said King.

In Kett's Rebellion under King Edward VI. an Herald was sent to proclaim a Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which was returned a saucy Answer by Kett; maintaining himself a true Subject, and that he needed no Pardon, being no Offender.

After three Hours Fight, and a sturdy one, Norroy King at Arms was sent with a Trumpeter to 4000 or 5000, which were at Parkthorpe Gate, to proclaim Pardon, if they would lay down their Arms. To which one Floteman, a bold Knave, gave as base an Answer, as was given by Kett before.

After the Earl of Warwick was come with a Reinforcement to the Army, Norroy was sent to summon the Rebels to surrender the City. Which was refused; and some told him, he was a counterfeit Herald, sent to deceive them. This Norroy was employed often in this Rebellion; who was Gilbert Dethick, afterwards Garther, and knighted, and was Great Grandfather to H. Dethick, Richmond Herald at Arms.

The Scotch Rebels spoiled the King's Herald of his Coat and the Letters, when he was about to proclaim them Traitors.

John Cook, Lancaster Herald, sometime Servant to John Dudley Duke of Northumberland, (beheaded primo Mariæ) took upon him to beg the Head of his old Master, to be buried in the Tower of London: Which was granted with the whole Body, and performed accordingly. In remembrance whereof the said Cook did bear for his Crest a Bear's Head Silver, crowned Gold, in Allusion to the said Duke's Badge, which was the Bear and ragged Staff.

A Pursuivant that brought News to Edward III. at Dover, of a Victory gained by Sir John Chandois against Charles de Blois, that invaded Britain, was made an Herald by the Name of Windsor.

A Pursuivant was permitted to wear a King of Arms' Coat. John Cook, Lancaster Herald, should have worn it; but he died before the Solemnity.

Casper Sturme, the Emperor's Herald, was sent to conduct Martin Luther from Wittenbergh to Wormes.

Clarencieux and Guienne, Kings of Arms, appearing before the Emperor from K. Henry VIII. Anno 1527, the first made a Speech, and the second read a Writing, ending in a Defiance. To which the Emperor made an Answer. And so between the Emperor and the two Kings was a long Discourse, recited at large by my Author, and very much worth the reading. This Clarencieux was Thomas Benolt; whose Monument remains at this Day, May 1, 1703, in St. Helen's Church in Bishopsgate-street.

King Richard III. his Corpse, after he was slain in Bosworth Field, was stark naked trussed behind a Pursuivant at Arms, called Blanch Sanglier, (that I will conclude (saith the diligent Collector of the foresaid Historical Passages) with the Passage following: "Anno 1674, in the Month of February, at the Countess of Devonshire's famous Funeral, I served for Elias Ashmole, Esq; Windsor Herald; and lying at Leicester, in our Way to Darby, I had the Curiosity to go to an Inn, and see the Stone Coffin, wherein once lay the Body of the said King Richard: Which, at the Suppression and Demolition of the Gray-Friars in the said Town of Leicester, was digged up, and after turned to an Horsetrough. At which Spectacle I could not but be smitten with a melancholy Reflection; and call to mind the last Part of that known Hexameter, mentioned by Wever, with a little Variation to his Purpose:

Sic transit Gloria mundi.

John Gybbon, Blue Mantle."

In favour of the College, as also to preserve the Honour of the Nobility and Gentry from Persons of meaner Rank intruding into their Families, and unjustly assuming their Arms, and for preventing false Blazonry, the Queen issued out her Command and Pleasure in June, An. Dom. 1707, confirming the Deputy Earl-Marshall's Order following:

An Order of Bindon, Deputy Earl-
Marshal.

"Whereas the ordering, judging, and determining all Matters concerning Arms, Crests, Supporters, Cognizances, Pedigrees, Devices and Ensigns Armorial; the making and prescribing Rules, Ordinances and Decrees, for the granting, controlling and regulating thereof; and the putting in Execution the Laws and Ordinances relating thereunto; are, among other Powers and Authorities, with her Majesty's Approbation, invested in me, Henry Earl of Bindon, Deputy to his Grace Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Earl-Marshall and Hereditary Marshal of England: And whereas divers Abuses, Disorders, and Irregularities, have been committed and done by Painters, Funeral-Undertakers, Glaziers, Goldsmiths, Engravers, Carvers, Chaciers, Stonecutters, Coachmakers, and others, in the Premises: For Remedy whereof, for the Time coming, these are to warn, charge and require all and every the said Artificers, and others concerned, that they forbear to design and appoint, to or for any Persons, any Arms or Ensigns Armorial, by making any Arms, Crests, Supporters, Cognizances, Pedigrees and Devices in Coat-Armour, Helm, Banners, Standards, Penons and Hatchments, Tents and Pavilions: As also in Plate, Metals, Jewels, Glass, Paper, Parchment, or otherwise in Windows, Grave-Stones, Tombs, and Monuments, or elsewhere, without sufficient Direction and Authority so to do: And likewise strictly to prohibit and forbid all Coachmakers, and others, concerned in making Mourning Coaches and Chairs for the Nobility and Gentry, that they do not use varnished Bullion Nails; as they the said several Artificers and others, herein afore-mentioned and intended, will answer the Contempt hereof at their Peril.

By her Majesty's Command,

BINDON M."

No. 74.

Thirdly, Facing the North-West Corner of the College of Arms is a Passage into Doctors Commons, to which you ascend by several Steps, from Bennet's-bill; with a Passage thro' two square Courts into Great Knight-riding-street. This is properly a College for such as study and practise the Civil Law, and decide Causes within their own Walls; and the Addition of Commons is taken from the Manner in which the Civilians live here, Commoning together, as practised in Colleges. And all Persons that have Business relating to the Civil or Ecclesiastical Laws, or have Occasion to consult with learned Men in that Faculty, may repair hither, where their several Chambers, Apartments, and Offices be.

Doctors
Commons

Here is a fair spacious Room for a Library, replenished with a great Number of Books of all Sorts, but especially of History, and of that Faculty, given by divers of this College: And among the rest, the whole Library of Sir John Gibson, Knight, sometime Chancellor to Archbishop Grindal, and his two Successors of York, and Judge of the Prerogative Office; Ancestor to James Gibson, Esq; the late worthy Town-Clerk, who bestowed it.

A Library
here.

I shall first set down the original Foundation of this Place; next, specify the Causes belonging to the Cognizance of these Civilians; then, shew the several Courts that are kept here, or belong to it; and who the Practisers in them be; And lastly, the Terms and Times when these Courts are kept.

I. Dr. Henry Harvey, Doctor of the Civil and Canon Law, and Master of Trinity-hall in Cambridge, Prebendary of Ely, and Dean of the Arches; a Reverend, Learned and Good Man; purchased and provided this House for the Civilians and Canonists to dwell in; being then an old Stone Building belonging to St. Paul's Church, but let out. They beforetime were lodged in Pater-noster-row, in a meaner and less House; afterwards, and still a Tavern, known by the Name of the Queen's-head; which had sometime been an House for a Residentiary of St. Paul's.

Dr. Harvey Founder of Doctors
Commons.

Here are the Courts kept for the Practice of Civil or Ecclesiastical Causes. Several Offices are also here kept; as the Registry of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Registry of the Bishop of London.

The Courts
kept here.

II. The Causes, whereof the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law take Cognizance, are these that follow; as they are enumerated in the Present State of England: Blasphemy, Apostasy from Christianity, Heresy, Schism; Ordinations, Institutions of Clerks to Benefices, Celebration of Divine Service, Matrimony, Divorces, Bastardy, Tythes, Oblations, Obventions, Mortuaries, Dilapidations, Reparation of Churches, Probate of Wills, Administrations; Simony, Incests, Fornications, Adulteries, Solicitation of Chastity; Pensions, Procurations, Commutation of Penance, Right of Pews, and other such like, reducible to these Matters.

Causes belonging to the Civil Law.

III. The Courts belonging to the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law are divers.

The Courts.

First, The Court of Arches. Which is the highest Court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury. It was a Court formerly kept in Bow-Church.

The Arches.

Church in Cheapside: And the Church and Tower thereof being arched, the Court was from hence called The Arches, and so still is called. Hither are all Appeals directed in Ecclesiastical Matters within the Province of Canterbury. To this Court belongs a Judge, who is stiled The Dean of the Arches; so called, because he hath a Jurisdiction over a Deanry in London, consisting of thirteen Parishes, exempt from the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of London. This Court hath (besides this Judge) a Register, or Examiner, an Actuary, a Beadle or Crier, and an Apparitor; besides Advocates, and Procurators, or Proctors. These, after they be once admitted by Warrant and Commission, directed from the Archbishop, and by the Dean of the Arches, may then (and not before) exercise as Advocates and Proctors there, and in any other Court.

The Audience.

Secondly, The Court of Audience. This was a Court likewise of the Archbishop's: Which he used to hold in his own House; where he received Causes, Complaints and Appeals; and had learned Civilians living with him, that were Auditors of the said Causes, before the Archbishop gave Sentence. This Court was kept in later Times at St. Paul's. The Judge belonging to this Court was stiled, Causarum, Negotiorumque Cantuarien. Auditor Officialis. It had also other Officers, as the other Courts.

Complaints of this Court.

There were antiently Complaints made of this Court; once in the Reign of King Henry VIII. as of the Troubles and Inconveniences it caused both to Clergy and Laity; and that Men were forced up to London oftentimes from the remotest Parts, for a slanderous Word, or a Farthing Candle. Since the Civil Wars under King Charles the First, it hath been disused.

Prerogative Court.

Thirdly, The next Court for Civil Causes belonging to the Archbishop, is the Prerogative Court. Wherein Wills and Testaments are proved, and all Administrations taken. Which belongs to the Archbishop by his Prerogative; that is, by a Special Preeminence, that this See hath in certain Causes above ordinary Bishops within his Province: This takes place, where the Deceased hath Goods to the Value of five Pounds out of the Diocese; and being of the Diocese of London, to the Value of ten Pounds. If any Contention grow touching any such Wills or Administrations, the Causes are debated and decided in this Court.

Officers of
this Court.

To it belongs a Judge; who is stiled Judex Curie Prerogative Cantuariensis: And a Register; who hath convenient Rooms in his Office, for the disposing and laying up safe all original Wills and Testaments; and whither any may have Recourse, that have Occasion to search such Wills; and for a Shilling may read any one of them over; and for other moderate Prices, at so much a Sheet, may have the whole, or some Part of any of them, transcribed and copied for his Use. This Register also hath his Deputy, besides several Clerks.

This Prerogative Office, formerly kept in the Dean of St. Paul's Court, is now in Great Knightrider's-street.

The Faculty Court.

To these add, Fourthly, The Court of Faculties and Dispensations: Whereby a Privilege or Special Power is granted to a Person, by Favour and Indulgence, to do that which by Law otherwise he could not: As, To marry, without Banns first asked in the Church three several Sundays, or Holy-days: The Son to succeed his Father in his Benefice: For one to have two, or more Benefices, incompatible: For Non-Residence; and in other such like Cases.

This Authority was given to the Archbishop by the Statute, 25 Hen. VIII. Cap. 21. And the chief Officer of this Court is called Magister ad Facultates. There is a Register also belonging to this Court.

Besides these Courts peculiarly pertaining to the Archbishop of Canterbury, there is,

Fifthly, The Court of Admiralty: Which was erected in the Reign of Edward the Third. This Court belongs to the Lord High Admiral of England, a high Officer, that hath the Government of the King's Navy, and the Hearing of all Causes relating to Merchants and Mariners. He takes Cognizance of the Death or Mayhem of any Man, committed in the great Ships riding in great Rivers, beneath the Bridges of the same next the Sea. Also he hath Power to arrest Ships in great Streams, for the Use of the King, or his Wars. And in these Things this Court is concerned.

The Admiralty.

There is a Judge of this Court, who must be a Civilian; and his Title is, Supreme Curie Admiraltatis Angliæ Locumtenens Judex. The other Officers of this Court are, a Register, and a Marshal, who carrieth a Silver Oar before the Judge; besides an Advocate, and Proctor of the Admirals.

Officers of this Court.

This Court was, in former Times, kept at St. Margaret's-hill in Southwark; but now it is held in the Hall in Doctors Commons, where the other Civil Courts are kept. Only upon the Trial of Pirates, and Crimes committed at Sea, the Court sits at the Sessions-house in the Old-Bailey.

This Court formerly kept in
wark.

To these I add the Court of Delegates. To which high Court Appeals do lie from any of the former Courts. This is the highest Court for Civil Causes. It was established by an Act in the 25th of Henry VIII. Cap. 19. Wherein it was enacted, "That it should be lawful, for lack of Justice at or in any of the Archbishop's Courts, for the Parties grieved to appeal to the King's Majesty in his Court of Chancery. And that, upon every such Appeal, a Commission under the Great Seal should be directed to such Persons as should be named by the King's Highness (like as in case of Appeals from the Admiralty Court) to determine such Appeals; and the Causes concerning the same. And no further Appeals to be had or made from the said Commissioners for the same." These Commissioners are appointed Judges only for that Turn. And they are commonly of the Spirituality, as Bishops; of the Common Law, as Judges of Westminster-hall; as well as those of the Civil Law. And these are mixed one with another, according to the Nature of the Cause.

The Court of Delegates.

This Commission of Appeal may be granted in three Cases: I. When any Sentence is given in any Ecclesiastical Cause by the Archbishop, or his Official. II. When any Sentence is given in any Ecclesiastical Cause in Places exempt. III. When mission

Sen-

Sentence is given in the Admiralty in Suits Civil and Marine.

Commission of Review. Lastly, Sometimes a Commission of Review is granted by the King under the Broad Seal, to consider and judge again what was decreed in the Court of Delegates. But this is but seldom, and upon great, and such as shall be judged just Causes by the Lord Keeper, or High Chancellor. And this done purely by the King's Prerogative; since by the Act for Delegates, no farther Appeals were to be laid or made from those Commissioners, as was mentioned before.

Practisers in these Courts. IV. The Practisers in these } Advocates, Courts are of two sorts, } Proctors.

Advocates are such as have taken their Degree of Doctor in the Faculty of the Civil Law; or (when this Kingdom submitted to the Papal See) of the Canon Law, or of the Decrees; that is, Canons and Decrees made and enjoined by Popes. These are retained as Counsellors or Pleaders. And they must first, upon their Petitions to the Archbishop, have his Fiat; and then they are admitted by the Judge to practise. The Manner of their Admission is solemn. Two Senior Advocates in their Scarlet Robes, with the Mace carried before them, conduct the Doctor up the Court with three low Reverences; and present him with a short Latin Speech, together with the Archbishop's Rescript. And then, having taken the Oaths, the Judge admits him, and assigns him a Place or Seat in the Court; which he is ever to keep, when he pleads.

Their Habits. The Habits they use in Court, both Judges and Advocates, are a Scarlet Robe, and a Hood lined with Taffata, if they be of Oxford; if of Cambridge, White Minever, and round Caps of Black Velvet.

Their Number. Anno 1585, the Doctors then inhabiting the Commons, and Exercent in these Courts, were but sixteen or seventeen in all. In the Year 1694, they were forty-four.

Proctors. Proctors, or Procurators, the other sort of Practisers, are they that exhibit their Proxies for their Clients, and make themselves Parties for them, who draw and give Pleas, or Libels and Allegations in behalf of their Clients; produce Witnesses, prepare Causes for Sentence, and attend the Advocates with the Proceedings. They are admitted also by the Archbishop's Fiat, introduced by two Senior Proctors. They wear Black Robes, and Hoods lined with White Fur.

Anno 1585, the Number of the Proctors who were Practisers then, and lived about the Commons, were only five.

In the Year 1694, the Number of the Proctors were forty-three.

Numbers of the Proctors reduced by Archbishop Cranmer. Yet in Henry the VIIIth's Time, the Numbers of the Proctors were found a Grievance: And that they were so clamorous, by reason of the Plenty of them, that neither Judges nor Advocates could be heard. That they retained and concluded Causes oftentimes without the Advocates, and thrust themselves into Causes without the Knowledge or Will of the Parties. In order to the reducing these Evils, Archbishop Cranmer (that great and ever-memorable Reformer of Abuses) thought good to begin with restraining of the Numbers of them. And whereas they were about twenty in the Court of the Archies, and twenty-four more, he made an Order that thenceforth there should be no more admitted till the Number were reduced to ten; and then that Number never to be increased. And this was confirmed by the Chapter and Convent of Christ-Church, Canterbury. Though some looked upon this as a Craft of the Proctors of that Time, that, all others being excluded from being Proctors, they might have all the Business of the Archies in their own Hands. But this Order gave Offence to many; and a Petition was drawn up against it, and presented to the Parliament. Therein they shewed how prejudicial this would be to the Commonwealth; because the Number of ten Persons was not sufficient to dispatch the Causes that came into that Court. And so there must be Delays and prolix Suits; and that it was a great Discouragement to young Men in studying the Law; and contrary to the Canon and Civil Law, that permits any Man to be Proctor for another, a few excepted.

V. The Terms for the pleading and ending of Causes in these Civil Courts, are little different from the Term-times of the Common Law. The Order as to the Time of the sitting of these Courts is thus. The Sitting of the Court of Archies hath the Preeminence of sitting first, according to the Quality of that Court, and regulates the Sittings of the others. The Sitting of the Court of Audience was the Morning next after the Sitting of the Court of Archies. The Prerogative Court sits in the Afternoon, as the Audience sat in the Morning. The Court of the Admiralty is held on the same Day with the Archies, but in the Afternoon.

This College was consumed by the general Devastation that happened by Fire to the City, Anno 1666. And then Exeter-house in the Strand was employed for the same Use. Where the Civilians had their Chambers and Offices; and the Courts were kept in the Hall. But after some Years the Commons being rebuilt far more conveniently and more sumptuously than before, the Civilians removed thither again.

For the Relief of the Subjects, in case of any hard Dealings feared from Civil or Ecclesiastick Laws, the Lords Chief Justices may stop Proceedings in these Courts, and call the Matters in Controversy to be heard before them, by a Writ of Prohibition. Which lies of one that is impleaded in the Court Christian for a Cause that belongeth to the Temporal Jurisdiction. Whereby, as well the Party and his Council, as the Judge himself and the Register, are forbidden to proceed any further in that Cause. The Law Books shew the Causes for which this Prohibition lies. Practition saith, it lies not after a Sentence given in any Cause.

The following are, (Jan. 1, 1755.) the Judges Advocates, Proctors, and Registers.

The Right Honourable Sir Geo. Lee, Knt. Dean of the Archies, Judge of the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, one of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, and Treasurer to the Princess of Wales.

Fourthly, in Little Carter-lane is a very handsome Meeting-house for Protestants dissenting, by Name of Presbyterians, from the Church of England.

Fifthly, This Ward in antient Times boasted of several noble Palaces and Castles. (1.) Near the South-West End of Thames-street was a very large House called Beaumont's-Inn, belonging to the noble Family of that Name in 4 Edw. III. It afterwards fell into the Hands of the Crown; and King Edw. IV. Ann. 5 Reg. gave it to William Hastings, Lord Chamberlain, Master of his Mints; from whom it descended to the Earls of Huntingdon; and by that Family's Residence it obtained the Name of Huntingdon-house in the Reign of Hen. VIII. (2) Near to St. Paul's Wharf was another great House, called Scroop's-Inn, belonging to the noble Family of that Name 31 Hen. VI. (3) Then was another great Messuage sometime belonging to the Abbey of Fiscampe beyond the Sea. And by Reason of the Wars, it coming to the Hands of King Edward III. the same was given to Sir Simon Burley, Knight of the Garter, and therefore called Burley-house in Thames-street, between Baynard's-castle and Paul's Wharf. (4) Baynard's-castle, whereof this whole Ward Burley-house.

Baynard's-Castle. Ward taketh Name. This Castle banketh on the River Thames, and was called Baynard's-Castle, from Baynard, a Nobleman, that came in with William the Conqueror.

William Fitz-Stephen faith, in the West Part of this City were two most strong Castles; and Gervasius Tilbury, in the Reign of Henry II. faith, two Castles were built, with Walls and Ramparts, whereof one was in Right of Possession Baynard's, the other the Barons of Mountfitchet. The first of these Castles, banking on the River Thames, was called Baynard's-Castle, from Baynard, a Nobleman, who came in with William the Conqueror, and then built it. He died in the Reign of William Rufus; after whose Decease Geoffrey Baynard succeeded; and then William Baynard, in the Year 1111, who, by Forfeiture for Felony, lost his Barony of Little Dunmow, and King Henry gave it wholly to Robert Fitz-Richard, the Son of Gilbert Earl of Clare, and to his Heirs, together with the Honour of Baynard's-Castle. This Robert married Maude de Sent-Licio, Lady of Bradbam, and, dying in the Year 1134, was buried at St. Need's, by Richard Earl of Clare. Walter, his Son, succeeded him, and married Matilda de Becham; after whose Decease he married Matilda, the Daughter and Coheir of Richard de Lucy, on whom he begat Robert and others. He died in the Year 1198, and was buried at Dunmow; to him succeeded Robert Fitz-Water, a valiant Knight.

About the Year 1213 there arose a great Contention betwixt King John and his Barons on Account of Matilda, called The Fair, a Daughter of the aforefaid Robert Fitz-Water, whom the King unlawfully loved, but could not obtain; whereupon, and for other Causes of the like Sort, there ensued a War throughout the Realm. The Barons being received into London did great Damage to the King; but, in the End, the King did not only banish the said Fitz-Water, among others, out of the Realm, but also caused his Castle, called Baynard's-Castle, and his other Houses, to be demolished. After this a Messenger was sent to Matilda the Fair about the King's Suit; but she, not consenting to it, was poisoned; Robert Fitz-Water being then gone, with others, into France, and some went into Scotland.

In the Year 1214, King John being in France with a great Army, a Truce was made between the two Kings of England and France for five Years. There being a River or Arm of the Sea between the two Armies, a Knight among the English called out to those on the other Side, to challenge any one among them to come and take a Just or two with him; whereupon, without any Delay, Robert Fitz-Water, who was on the French Side, ferried over, and got on Horseback, without any one to help him, and shewed himself ready to the Face of this Challenger, whom at the first Course he struck so violently with his great Spear, that Horse and Man fell to the Ground; and when his Spear was broken he went back again to the King of France. King John seeing this, cried out, By God's Tooth, his usual Oath, be were a King indeed who had such a Knight. The Friends of Robert, hearing these Words, kneeled down, and said, O King! he is your Knight; it is Robert Fitz-Water. Whereupon he was sent for the next Day, and restored to the King's Favour; by which Means a Peace was concluded, Fitz-Water was restored to his Estates, and had Leave given him to repair his Castle of Baynard, and other Castles.

This Robert died in the Year 1234, and was buried at Dunmow, and Walter his Son succeeded him. This Barony of Baynard was in the Ward of King Henry during the Non-age of another Robert Fitz-Water, who, in the Year 1289, married Eleanor, Daughter and Heir to the Earl of Ferrers.

On the twelfth of March, 1303, the said Robert Fitz-Water did acknowledge his Service to the City for his Castle of Baynard, before Sir John Blunt, Mayor of London; and swore upon the Evangelists, That he would be true to the Liberties thereof, and maintain the same, to his Power, and keep the Counfel of the same, &c.

The Rights that belonged to Robert Fitz-Water, Chastilian and Banner-Bearer of London, Lord of Wodeham, were these:

"The said Robert and his Heirs ought to be and are chief Banners of London, in Fee for the Chastiliary, which he and his Ancestors had by Castle-Baynard, in the said City. In Time of War the said Robert and his Heirs ought to serve the City in Manner as followeth; that is,

Robert Fitz-Water, Chastilian and Banner-Bearer of London.

"The said Robert ought to come, he being the twentieth Man of Arms on Horseback, covered with Cloth or Armour, unto the great West Door of St. Paul, with his Banner displayed before him of his Arms. And when he is come to the said Door, mounted and apparelled, as before is said, the Mayor, with his Aldermen and Sheriffs, armed in their Arms, shall come out of the said Church of St. Paul unto the said Door, with a Banner in his Hand, all on Foot; which Banner shall be Gules, the Image of St. Paul, Gold; the Face, Hands, Feet, and Sword, of Silver: And as soon as the said Robert shall see the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs come on Foot out of the Church, armed with such a Banner, he shall alight from his Horse, and salute the Mayor, and say to him, Sir Mayor, I am come to do my Service which I owe to the City.

The Banner of St. Paul.

"And the Mayor and Aldermen shall answer, We give to you, as to our Banneret of Fee in this City, the Banner of this City to bear and govern, to the Honour and Profit of this City, to your Power.

"And the said Robert and his Heirs shall receive the Banner in his Hands, and go on Foot out of the Gate, with the Banner in his Hands; and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Sheriffs shall follow to the Door, and shall bring an Horse to the said Robert, worth twenty Pounds; which Horse shall be saddled with a Saddle of the Arms of the said Robert, and shall be covered with Sindals of the said Arms.

"Also they shall present to him twenty Pounds Sterling, and deliver it to the Chamberlain of the said Robert, for his Expences that Day. Then the said Robert shall mount upon the Horse “ Horse which the Mayor presented to him,

 “ with the Banner in his Hand; and, as soon as “ he is up, he shall say to the Mayor, that he “ must cause a Marshal to be chosen for the “ Host, one of the City; which being done, the “ said Robert shall command the Mayor and “ Burgeffes of the City to warn the Commons
 “ to assemble, and all go under the Banner of St.
 “ Paul; and the said Robert shall bear it himself
 “ to Aldgate, and there the said Robert and Mayor “ shall deliver the said Banner of St. Paul to “ whom they think proper. And, if they are to “ go out of the City, then the said Robert ought “ to chuse two out of every Ward, the most “ sage Persons, to look to the Keeping of the “ City after they are gone out. And this Coun“ sel shall be taken in the Priory of the Trinity “ near Aldgate. And before every Town or “ Castle which the Host of London shall besiege,
 “ if the Siege continue a whole Year, the said
 “ Robert shall have for every Siege, of the Com“ monalty of London, one hundred Shillings, and “ no more.”

These were the Rights that Robert Fitz-Water had in Time of War: The Rights belonging to him and his Heirs in the City of London, in Time of Peace, were as follow:

“ That is to say, the said Robert Fitz-Water
 “ had a Soke or Ward in the City, where was a “ Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul, which led “ down by a Brewhouse of St. Paul to the “ Thames, and so to the Side of the Mill which “ was in the Water coming down from Fleet- “ Bridge, and went by London-Wall betwixt the “ Friars Preachers and Ludgate, and so returned
 “ by the House of the said Friars to the said “ Wall of the Canonry of St. Paul; that is,
 “ all the Parish of St. Andrew, which was in “ the Gift of his Ancestors by the said Se“ niority; and so the said Robert had appen“ dant unto the said Soke all the Things under“ written:

“ That he ought to have a Sokeman, and to “ place what Sokeman he will, so he be of the “ Sokemanry, or the same Ward: And if any of “ the Sokemanry be impleaded in the Guildball
 “ of any Thing that toucheth not the Body of “ the Mayor that for the Time is, or that touch“ eth the Body of no Sheriff, it is not lawful for
 “ the Sokeman of the Sokemanry of the said “ Robert Fitz-Water to demand a Court of the “ said Robert; and the Mayor and his Citizens
 “ of London ought to grant him to have a Court;
 “ and in his Court he ought to bring his Judg“ ments, as it is assented and agreed upon in the “ Guildball, that shall be given him.

“ If any therefore be taken in his Sokemanry,
 “ he ought to have his Stocks and Imprisonment
 “ in his Soken; and he shall be brought from “ thence to the Guildball before the Mayor, and “ there they shall provide him his Judgment that “ ought to be given of him; but his Judgment “ shall not be published till he come into the “ Court of the said Robert, and in his Liberty.

“ And the Judgment shall be such, that if he “ have deserved Death by Treason, he to be tied “ to a Post in the Thames at a good Wharf, where “ Boats are fastened, two Ebbings and two Flow“ ings of the Water.

“ And if he be condemned for a common “ Thief, he ought to be led to the Elms, and “ there suffer his Judgment as other Thieves.
 “ And so the said Robert and his Heirs hath Ho“ nour, that he holdeth a great Franchise within “ the City, that the Mayor of the City and Ci“ tizens are bound to do him of Right; that is “ to say, that when the Mayor will hold a great “ Council, he ought to call the said Robert and “ his Heirs to be with him in Council of the “ City; and the said Robert ought to be sworn “ to be of Council with the City against all Peo“ ple, saving the King and his Heirs. And “ when the said Robert cometh to the Hustings of “ the Guildball of the City, the Mayor, or his “ Lieutenant, ought to rise against him, and set “ him down near unto him; and, so long as he “ is in the Guildball, all the Judgments ought to “ be given by his Mouth, according to the Re“ cord of the Recorders of the said Guildball:
 “ And so many Waifes as come so long as he is “ there, he ought to give them to the Bailiffs of “ the Town, or to whom he will, by the Council
 “ of the Mayor of the City.”

This Robert died in the Year 1305, leaving Issue Walter Fitz-Robert, who had Issue Robert Fitz-Water; to whom the Citizens of London, in the Year 1320, acknowledged the Right which they owed to him and his Heirs for the Castle- Baynard. He died in the Year 1325, and was succeeded by Robert Fitz-Robert Fitz-Water, &c.
 But how the Honour of Baynard's-Castle, with the Appurtenances, fell from the Possession of the Fitz-Waters, Mr. Stow can give no Account.

In the Year 1428, the seventh of Henry VI. Baynard's-a great Fire happening at Baynard's-Castle, it Castle was new built by Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; burnt, and and, after his Attainder and Death, in the rebuilt by Hum-
 Year 1446, it came into the Hands of Henry phrey Duke
VI. and from him to Richard Duke of York, of Glouwho, in the Year 1457, lodged there in his own castle.
 House.

On the twenty-eighth of February, in the Year 1460, the Earls of March and of Warwick, with a great Number of Men, tho' but few of Note, entered the City of London, where they were joyfully received by the Citizens; and, upon the third of March, the Earl of Warwick mustered his Men in St. John's-Field, in the Midst of Throngs of People, whom ordering to be cast into a Ring about him, he read aloud the Agreement between the King and the late Duke of York, with the Act of Parliament by which it was confirmed. That done, he told the People Henry had notoriously violated this Agreement, and so forfeited, according to the Act of Parliament, his Right to the Crown: Then raising his Voice, he asked the People that stood round him, Whether they would have Henry of Lancaster for King? The whole Multitude crying out, No,
 No; he asked, Whether, according to that Settlement, they would have Edward, Son of the late Duke of York, to reign over them? To which all the People answered with Acclamations, expressing their Consent. Upon this, certain Captains were appointed to carry the Relation of what had been done to the said Edward Earl of March, then lodged at his Castle of Baynard; where a great Rich. III. took upon him the Title of King in Baynard's-Castle.

Edward IV. being dead, leaving his eldest Son Edward, and his second Son Richard, both Infants, Richard Duke of Gloucester, then Protector, began to plot for the Crown; and, as it were, by the Election of the Commons in the Guildhall of London, took upon him the Title of King in this Baynard's-Castle.

Henry VII. about the Year 1487, the thirty-first of his Reign, repaired, or rather new built, this House; not imbattelled, or so strongly fortified, like a Castle; but far more beautiful and commodious, fit for the Entertainment of any Prince. In the seventh Year of his Reign he and his Queen were lodged there, and came from thence to St. Paul's Church, where they made their Offering, dined in the Bishop's Palace, and so returned.

In the eighteenth Year of his Reign he was lodged there; and the Ambassadors from the King of the Romans were brought thither to an Audience, and from thence the King went to St. Paul's, and was there sworn to the King of the Romans, as the said King had sworn to him.

In the twentieth Year of his Reign, he, with the Knights of the Garter, in all their Habits of the Order, rode from the Tower of London, through the City, to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, and there heard Even-Song; and from thence rode to Baynard's-Castle, where the King lodged; and the next Day, in the same Habits, they rode again to St. Paul's in Procession, heard Divine Service, offered, and returned. The same Year the King of Castile was lodged there.

This Castle came afterwards to the Earls of Pembroke.

On the nineteenth of July, in the Year 1553, the Council, being partly moved by the Right of the Lady Mary, and considering that most of the Realm were inclined to her Side, changed their Opinion with Respect to the Lady Jane Gray, newly proclaimed Queen; and, assembling themselves at Baynard's-Castle, consulted with the Earl of Pembroke, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and Sir John Mason, Clerk of the Council; and, sending for the Lord-Mayor, rode to the Cross in Cheap-side, where Garter King at Arms, with Trumpets sounding, proclaimed the Lady Mary, Daughter to King Henry VIII. and Queen Catharine, Queen of England, &c.

This Baynard's-Castle, as also that of Mount-fitchet, near adjoining, have been long since pulled down, and converted into Timber-Yards, Wood-Wharfs, and private Buildings.

There was antiently a publick Laystall near this Castle, the Stink of which could not but be an Annoyance to it; which, in the Reign of Queen Mary I. was removed, the Earl of Pembroke then living there: And at a Common Council, the seventh of August, in the third and fourth of Philip and Mary, it was agreed, at the Request of the Earl of Pembroke, that the City's Laystall adjoining to his Lordship's House, and being noisome to the same, should be removed; upon Condition that he should give the City, toward the making of a new Laystall in another Place, two thousand Feet of hard Stone, to make the Vault and Wharf thereof, or else forty Marks in ready Money, to buy the same Stone withal.

(5.) There was also another Tower by Baynard's-Castle, built by King Edward II. Edward III. in the second of his Reign, gave it to William Duke of Hamelake, in the County of York, and his Heirs, for one Rose yearly to be paid for all Services. The same Place was afterwards called Legates-Inn, in the seventh of Edward IV. where now divers Wood-Wharfs are.

(6.) Where Puddle-wharf now stands was a Water-Gate into the Thames, where Horses used to be watered; and therefore, being defiled with their Trampling, and made Puddle-like, as also from one Puddle dwelling there, it was called Puddle-wharf.

(7.) In Castle-lane was one great Messuage, of old Time, belonging to the Priory of Okeborn in Wiltshire, and was the Prior's Lodging when he repaired to London. This Priory, being of the French Order, was suppressed by Henry V. and, with other Lands and Tenements pertaining to the said Priory, was by Henry VI. given to his College in Cambridge, called now King's College.

(8.) In the Parish of St. Bennet, in Thames-street, stood Le Neve Inn, belonging formerly to John de Montague, Earl of Salisbury; and after to John de Beauchamp, Knt. granted to Sir Thomas Erpingham, Knt. of Erpingham in Norfolk, and Warden of the Cinque Ports, Knight of the Garter.

9. The next Place was the King's great Wardrobe. Sir John Beauchamp, Knight of the Garter, Constable of Dover, Warden of the Cinque Ports, Son to Guido de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, built this House, and was lodged there, the House then bearing the Name of the King's Wardrobe, in the fifth of Edward III. The said Sir John Beauchamp deceased in the Year 1359, and was buried on the South Side of the Middle Isle of St. Paul's Church. His Executors sold the House to King Edward III. to whom the Parson of St. Andrew's complaining, that the said Beauchamp had pulled down divers Houses in their Places to build the same House, whereby he was hindered of his accustomed Tithes paid by the Tenants of old Time, granted him forty Shillings by the Year out of that House for ever. King Richard III. was lodged there in the second of his Reign.

In this House was lodged Sir John Fortescue, Knt. Master of the Wardrobe, Chancellor and Under-Treasurer of the Exchequer, and one of the Privy-Council to Queen Elizabeth. The secret Letters and Writings touching the Estate of the Realm were wont to be inrolled in the King's Wardrobe, and not in the Chancery, as appears by the Records, Claus. 18. E. 4. 1 Memb. 13. Claus. 33. E. 1. Memb. 3. Et liberat. 1. E. 2. Memb. 4. &c.

(10.) On the East Side of Paul's-Wharf-Hill, near the Bottom, was antiently, before the Fire of London, Woodmongers-Hall, which has never been rebuilt.

mongers-

(11.) Upon

Diana's
Chamber.

(11.) Upon Paul's-Wharf-Hill, within a great Gate, and belonging to that Gate next to the Doctors-Commons, were many fair Tenements, which, in their Leases made from the Dean and Chapter, went by the Name of Camera DIANÆ, i. e. Diana's Chamber, so denominated from a spacious Building, that in the Time of Henry II. stood where they were. In this Camera, or arched and vaulted Structure, full of intricate Ways and Windings, this Henry II. (as some Time he did at Woodstock) kept, or was supposed to have kept, that Jewel of his Heart, fair Rosamund; she whom there he called Rosamundi, and here by the Name of Diana; and from hence had this House that Title.

For a long Time there remained some evident Testifications of tedious Turnings and Windings, as also of a Passage under Ground from this House to Castle-Baynard; which was, no doubt, the King's Way from thence to his Camera Dianæ, or the Chamber of his brightest Diana.

(12.) In Sermon-lane, corruptly called Sheremoniers-lane, so called in the fourth of Edward I. was a Place called the Black-loft, of melting Silver, with four Shops adjoining. It may therefore be well supposed that Lane to take Name of Sheremoniers, such as cut and rounded the Plates to be coined or stamped into Sterling Pence; for the Place of Coining was the Old-Exchange, near unto the said Sheremoniers-lane. In the thirteenth of Richard II. William de la Pole, whose Father or Ancestor was the King's Merchant, had an House there.

(13.) In Knightriders-street was the College of Physicians, wherein was founded, in the Year 1582, a publick Lecture in Surgery, to be read twice every Week, &c.

(14.) In the South Church-yard of St. Paul's was the South Side and West End of the said Church, at which End were three stately Gates or Entries curiously wrought of Stone: In the Midst of the middle Gate was placed a massive Pillar of Brass, in which the Leaves of the said great Gate closed, and were fastened with Locks, Bolts, and Bars of Irons; notwithstanding all which, on the twenty-fourth of December, in the Year 1565, by a Tempest of Wind, these Gates were blown open, and the Bars, Bolts, and Locks broken asunder, or greatly bent.

At each Corner of this West End was a strong Tower of Stone, made for Bell-Towers; one of them, viz. that next the Bishop's Palace was used by the Palace in Stow's Time; and the other, towards the South, was called the Lollard's-Tower, and used as the Bishop's Prison, for such as were detected for Opinions in Religion contrary to the Faith of the Church.

It was in this Lollard's-Tower that Richard Hunne, a Citizen of London, Anno Dom. 1515, a Man of a fair Character, and well beloved, was made Prisoner, on Pretence of having Wickliffe's Bible; but, indeed, the Occasion of his Ruin was a Dispute he had with a Clerk about a Mortuary, which was made the Cause of the whole Clergy. He submitted to the Bishop's Correction, upon which he ought to have been enjoined Penance, and set at Liberty; but he was found hanging in his Chamber, and his Neck broken; which Murder the Bishop's Sumner owned that he, and the Chancellor, Dr. Horsley, and the Bell-ringer, had committed: And when the Coroner's Inquest proceeded to Trial, the Bishop began a new Process against the dead Body for Heresy, which, not contented to have murdered, they afterwards burnt in Smithfield. See more of this Tower in Foxe's Martyrology.

The last Prisoner, whom Stow says he remembered to be committed there, was, in the Year 1573, one Peter Burchet, a Gentleman of the Middle Temple, for having desperately wounded and designing to murder John Hawkins, Esq; in the high Street near the Strand; who being taken and examined, was found to hold certain erroneous Opinions, and therefore committed thither, and convicted: But in the End, by Permission, he promised to abjure his Heresies, and was, by Commandment of the Council, removed from thence to the Tower of London.

(15.) On the North-West Side of St. Paul's Church-yard was the Bishop of London's Palace, very large, wherein divers Kings were lodged, and great Household was kept.

In the Year 1546 the Admiral of France, the French Ambassador, lodged here; and, before that, here Edward V. took up his Lodging when he was brought to London to take Possession of the Crown; and, under King Edward VI. the Scotch Queen was here entertained.

The Dean's Lodging on the other Side, directly against the Palace, was a fair old House; and also divers large Houses were on the same Side built, which, of old Time, were the Lodgings of Prebendaries and Residentaries, who kept great Households, and liberal Hospitality, but now decayed, and otherwise converted.

Of CHEAP WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a New Survey.

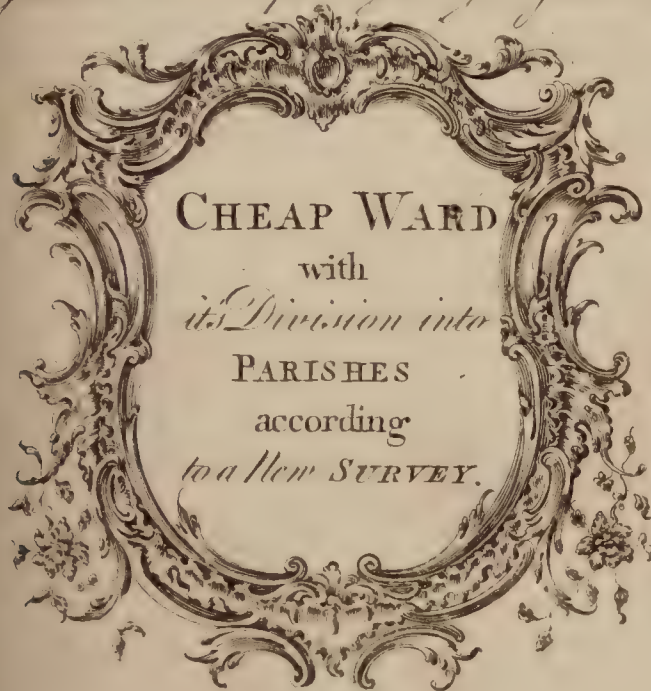

Its Name, Bounds and Extent. Modern State.
The Alderman and Common-Council-Men.
Remarkable Things. Parishes and Churches.
The Guildhall. Guildhall-Chapel. Merchants-Hall and Chapel. Grocers-Hall.
Poultry-Compter. Cornet's Tower. Standard, Cross and Conduit in Cheapside.

THIS Ward takes its Name from the Saxon Its Name, Word Chepe, a Market, kept in this Division of the City in those Days; and though Posterity has altered the Way of spelling from Chepe to Cheap, we still retain the true Signification of the Word in the Word cheapen or to cheap, when we ask the Price of Goods or Wares at Market. This Market was peculiarly known by the Name of West-Cheap from its Situation, to distinguish it from the Market between Candlewicke-street and Tower-street, which from its Situation also was called East-Cheap.

This Plan is most humbly inscribed to Samuel Fludger Esq. Alderman of Cheap Ward, and one of the Sheriffs of London, in 1755.

B. Cole Sculp.

Bounds.

On the East this Ward is bounded by Broad-street Ward and Wallbrook Ward; on the South by Cordwainers Ward; on the West by Queen-bitch Ward and Cripplegate Ward; and on the North by Coleman-street Ward, Bassishaw Ward, and Cripplegate Ward.

Extent.

This Ward extends from the Entrance into Scalding-alley in the North-East, to the middle Way between the paved Passage into Honey-lane Market and Milk-street, or about 54 Feet from the East Corner of Milk-street, on the North-West; and from a few Yards East of Barge-yard at the lower End of Bucklersbury, and the West Corner of the Mansion-House, on the South-East, to 33 Feet West of Bow-lane on the South-West; including on the South Side of West-Cheap, commonly called Cheapside, and the Poultry, Pancras-lane on both Sides for 60 Feet, and then its North Side only to Queen-street; as much of Queen-street, as to about 50 Feet South-East of Pancras-lane, but no further than George-yard, which passeth into Bow-lane on the South-West. From whence with a slant Cut it turns to within 60 Feet of the North-East End of Bow-lane; and crossing over still upon the Slant, ends near the Church in Cheapside, as noted above: And on the North Side it takes in the Parish-Church of St. Mildred in the Poultry, Grocers-alley, Hall and Gardens, about 136 Feet of the Old Jewry at the South End, Mercers-chapel, Ironmonger-lane, King-street, Guildhall, St. Laurence-lane and Church, three Fourths of Honey-lane Market, Cateaton-street from St. Laurence's-alley to within 25 Feet of Basinghall-street on the North Side, and from about 96 Feet West of St. Laurence's Church to about 40 Feet beyond Ironmonger-lane Eastward, and all Courts and Alleys within these Limits.

Modern State.

Cheap-side.

Cheapside is a very stately spacious Street, adorned with lofty Buildings, well inhabited by Goldsmiths, Linen-Drapers, Haberdashers, and other great Dealers. The Street (which is throughout of an equal Breadth) begins Westward at Pater-noster-row, by which the Conduit stood, and in a strait Line runs to the Poultry; and from thence to the Royal-Exchange in Cornhill. But the whole Street lying in several Wards, the Courts and Alleys are taken Notice of as they lie in their respective Wards. And as this Street is yet esteemed the principal High Street in the City, so it was formerly graced with a great Conduit, a Standard, and a stately Cross; which last was pulled down in the Civil Wars. In the last Part, almost over-against Mercers-Chapel, stood a great Conduit; but this Conduit standing almost in the Middle of the Street, being incommodious for Coaches and Carts, was thought fit by the Magistracy, after the great Fire, to be taken down, and not rebuilt.

Near adjoining to this Street, on the North Side, facing Bow Church, is Honey-lane Market; Honey-lane and other Buildings being, since the Fire of London, converted into this Market; among which Buildings was the Parish-Church of Alballows Honey-lane.

Honey-lane Market.

This Market is well served every Week, on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, with Provisions. The Place taken up by this Market is spacious, being in Length, from East to West, 193 Feet; and from North to South, 97 Feet.

VOL. II. NUMB. LXXV.

In the Middle is a large and square Market-house, standing on Pillars, with Rooms over it, and a Bell-Tower in the Midst. There are in the Market 135 standing Stalls for Butchers, with Racks, Blocks, and other Necessaries; all covered over, to shelter them from the Injury of the Weather; and also several Stalls for Fruiterers. The West End of the Market lieth open to Milk-street. There are two other Passages unto it, that is, one out of St. Laurence-lane and King-street, besides that which comes out of Cheapside; which Passages are inhabited by Grocers, Fishmongers, Poulterers, Victuallers and Cheesemongers. On the North-West Corner of this Market is Robin-Hood-alley, being a Passage into Milk-street. Trump-alley lieth against Bow Church, which, turning Eastward, falleth into St. Laurence-lane: This Alley is indifferent in the middle Part, but the Entrances are but narrow.

The Old Jewry hath but a little Part in this Ward; the rest is in Coleman-street Ward. Old Jewry.

On the South End and West Side of this Street stood the Parish-Church of St. Mary Colechurch. In this Part of the Old Jewry is Dove-court, being but ordinary, and is a Passage into Grocers-alley.

Then on the South Side of Cheapside, and over-against Mercers Chapel, is Bird-in-hand-alley, which is but indifferent. Feathers-court, which is also but ordinary. Golden-leg-court, or Leg-court, over-against St. Laurence-lane, but narrow, and none of the best. Crown-court, also opposite to St. Laurence-lane; a very handsome open Place, with good Houses, neatly kept, and well inhabited.

Bucklersbury, turning to the South-East out of Cheapside, runs on the Back-side of the Poultry unto Wallbrook; and is a Street very well built, and inhabited by Merchants and wholesale Dealers in Norwich Stuffs.

Barge-yard, a handsome open Place, well inhabited by Merchants, &c.

Towards the West End of this Street, and on the South Side, is Pancras-lane, which falleth into Queen-street. The North Side of which Lane is in this Ward, and the South in Cordwainers Ward. On this North Side of the Lane were two Parish-Churches, viz. St. Pancras Soper-lane, and St. Bennet Sherehog. That of St. Pancras was consumed in the Fire of London, and not rebuilt; but the Parish was united to St. Mary Le Bow: And the Place where the Church stood, is inclosed for a Burial-Place for the Parishioners. And over Part of it, upon Columns, stands a Cistern to receive Water, which formerly came to the great Conduit at the East End of Cheapside. Pancras-lane.

The Parish-Church of St. Bennet Sherehog was seated also on the North Side of Pancras-lane, and formerly called St. Sithe's Church. The Prior of St. Mary Overy was Patron of this Church: It was burnt down in the great Fire, and not rebuilt. But the small Parish is united unto St. Stephen Wallbrook; and the Place where the Church stood is severed with a Brick Wall, for a Burying-place for the Inhabitants.

New Queen-street, so called, as being a new Street since the Fire of London, built in the Place of Soper-lane, but much broader. Which said Street fronts New King-street; which was also made so spacious for the Grace of Guildhall, that fronteth both. Queen-street.

10 O

The

Poultry.

The Poultry, a very great Thoroughfare for Coaches, Carts, and Foot-Passengers, being seated in the Heart of the City, and leading to and from the Royal-Exchange; and from thence to Fleetstreet, the Strand, Westminster, and the Western Parts: And therefore well inhabited by great Tradesmen. It begins on the West, by the Old Jewry, where Cheapside ends, and reaches to the Mansion-House by Cornhill. On the North Side is Scalding-alley; a large Place, containing two or three Alleys, and a square Court with good Buildings, and well inhabited; but the greatest Part is in Broad-street Ward, where it is mentioned.

Grocers-alley.

Grocers-alley. This Alley is ordinary, and generally inhabited by Alehouse-keepers, called Spunging-houses; for that the Serjeants belonging to the Poultry-Compter bring their Prisoners to these Houses, and there lock them up, until such Time as they do make an Agreement with their Creditors, and not be run into the Prison; which sometimes is a great Conveniency. It was antiently called Coney-Hope-alley; being the Market for Rabbits.

On the West Side of this Alley is a Passage into the Old Jewry through Dove-court; and at the upper End of this Alley is Grocers-hall.

Old Jewry.

Ironmonger lane.

More to the West is Old Jewry, and then Ironmonger-lane. This Lane cometh out of Cateaton-street, and falleth into Cheapside. Both these Lanes are well built, and inhabited by Wholesale Dealers. On the East Side of Ironmonger-lane is Church-alley, which hath an open Free-stone Passage on the South Side of St. Olave's Church-yard into the Old Jewry; and on the West Side of this Lane is a Passage into New King-street. In this Lane was the Parish-Church of St. Martin's Ironmonger-lane, which being burnt down in the Fire of London is not rebuilt, but the Parish is united to St. Olave's Jewry.

King-street.

More West is New King-street, built since the Fire of London; a very spacious Street, garnished with very good Buildings, which are well inhabited by Norwich Factors, and Wholesale Dealers in Whale-bone, and other Commodities.

It comes out of Cheapside, and falls into Cateaton-street, right against Guildhall. On the West Side of this Street is an open Passage, or rather a short Street, which goes into St. Laurence-lane, without a Name.

Laurence-lane.

Still West, the next Lane is St. Laurence-lane, so called from St. Laurence's Church, seated at the lower End fronting the Lane, and standing in Cateaton-street. This Lane is well built, and inhabited by Wholesale Dealers. On the West Side is an open Passage, which leadeth to Honey-lane Market. On the same Side is the old Inn called Blossom's-Inn: It hath the Sign of St. Laurence upon a Grid-iron in a Border of Flowers and Blossoms. This Inn is very large, and much resorted to by Carriers, &c. and has a Back-gate into Honey-lane Market.

Castle-court.

More Westward, and on the same Side, is Castle-court, which is indifferent broad, with good Houses. It has a Passage into Montford's-court, which leads into Milk-street.

Cateaton-street.

Cateaton-street comes from the Corner of Milk-street, and goes to Bassishaw-street. It is a Street of good Trade, and well inhabited. On the North Side, somewhat East from St. Laurence-lane, is Blackwell-ball-court, so called as adjoining to Blackwell-ball, into which it hath an Entrance.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, one Constable and a Beadle, with twenty-five Watchmen. Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of February. Jury.

This Ward hath an Alderman, who is at present Samuel Fludyer, Esq; and twelve Common-Council-Men, who are, J. Skinner, Esq; Deputy, Mr. Samuel Sedgwick, Mr. Robert Waite, Mr. Charles Worral, Mr. Philip Cooke, Mr. Thomas Wilkinson, Mr. Samuel Bridgman, Mr. Leonard Pead, Mr. Thomas Nash, Mr. Robert Liddal, Mr. Thomas Burfoot, and Mr. John Smith: Under whom are eleven Constables, nine Scavengers, twelve Men for the Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at 72*l.* 16*s.* and in the Exchequer at 72*l.* 11*s.* Government.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are, Remarkable Things.

First, Seven Parishes, but only two Parish-Churches. (1.) The Parish and Parish-Church of St. Mildred in the Poultry. (2.) St. Mary's Cole-church. (3.) St. Bennet's Sherebog. (4.) St. Pancras Soper-lane. (5.) St. Martin's Ironmonger-lane. (6.) Allhallows Honey-lane. And, (7.) The Parish and Parish-Church of St. Laurence Jewry. Of which more particularly in our Parochial History. Parishes and Churches.

Secondly, The Guildhall of the City of London, situate at the North Extremity of King-street, wherein the nine Courts of the City are kept, viz. 1. The Court of Common-Council. 2. The Court of the Lord-Mayor, and his Brethren the Aldermen. 3. The Court of Hustings. 4. The Court of Orphans. 5. The two Courts of the Sheriffs. 6. The Court of the Wardmote. 7. The Court of Hallmote. 8. The Court of Requests, commonly called the Court of Conscience. 9. The Chamberlain's Court for binding Apprentices, and making them free. Guildhall.

The Guildhall stood formerly in or near Aldermanbury, or Aldermens-court, from which Situation of this Hall the Street is said to take its Denomination, and consequently the Hall must have been founded before the Year 1189; for then we find this Street to have had that Name, as will be mentioned in Cripplegate Ward. And it is not unlikely that Edward the Confessor, who began to reign 1042, had a considerable Share in the first Foundation, his Arms being in several Places of this present Hall, which, Robert Fabian saith, was begun to be new-built in the Year 1411, the 12th of Henry IV. by Thomas Knowles, then Mayor, and by his Brethren the Aldermen. The same was made, of a little Cottage, a large and great House, as it now stands. Towards the Charge whereof, the Companies gave great Benevolences. Also, Offences of Men were pardoned for Sums of Money, towards this Work: And extraordinary Fees were raised, Fines, Amerciaments, and other Things employed, during seven Years, and a Continuation thereof three Years more; all to be employed to this Building.

King Henry V. in the 3d Year of his Reign, which was about the Year 1415, granted the City free Passage for four Boats by Water, and as many many Carts by Land, with Servants to each, to bring Lime, Rag-stone and Free-stone, for the Work of Guildhall; as appears by these Letters Patents :

The first Year of Henry VI. John Coventry and John Carpenter, Executors to Richard Whittington, gave towards the paving of this great Hall 20 l. and the next Year 15 l. more to the said Pavement, with hard Stone of Purbecke. They also glazed some Windows thereof, and of the Mayor's Court; on every of which Windows the Arms of Richard Whittington are placed. The Foundation of the Mayor's Court was laid in the third Year of the Reign of Henry VI. and of the Porch, on the South Side of the Mayor's Court, in the 4th of the said King. Then was built the Mayor's Chamber, and the Council Chamber, with other Rooms above Stairs.

Another new Council-Chamber, with a handsome Room over it, appointed for an Archive to preserve the Books and Records belonging to the City, and another under it, were begun to be built the first Week after Easter, in the Time of the Mayoralty of Sir Tho. Middilton, Knight and Alderman, in the Year of our Lord 1614. It was fully finished shortly after Michaelmas, 1615, at the latter End of the Mayoralty of Sir Thomas Hayes, Knight and Alderman: But the Lord-Mayor, and the Aldermen his Brethren, kept their first Court in the said new Council-Chamber, on the seventh Day of November, in the Year of our Lord 1625; Sir John Jolles, Knight and Alderman, being then Lord-Mayor: By whose Order and Direction the said Building was performed, from the first Beginning thereof, to the final Finishing of the same, amounting to the Charge of 1740 l.

Last of all, in the said King Henry VIth's Time, a stately Porch, entering the great Hall, was erected; the Front thereof, towards the South, being beautified with Images of Stone; such as is shewed by these Verses following, (in black Characters) made about Anno 1568 by William Elderton, at that Time an Attorney in the Sheriffs Courts there :

Though most Images be pulled downe,
 And none be thought
 remaine in Towne,
 I am sure there be in LONDON yet
 Seven Images, such,
 and in such Place,

As few or none,
 I thinke, will hit :
 Yet every Day
 they shew their Face,
 And thousands see them
 every Yeere.
 But few, I thinke,
 can tell me where :
 Where JESUS CHRIST
 aloft doth stand,
 Law and Learning
 on either Hand :
 Discipline in the Divel's Necke,
 And hard by her are three direct ;
 There Justice, Fortitude,
 and Temperance stand.
 Where finde ye the like in all this Land ?

There are still remaining the Figures of Moses and Aaron above the Balcony ; and below are the four Figures, which some have called, The four Cardinal Virtues ; but Mr. Strype says,

“ The four lesser Figures, two on each Side
 “ the Porch, shew them to be four noble Ladies ;
 “ and, by their Dress and Habit, of great No“ bility and Religion. Who they were, I do “ not pretend to assign, leaving it to the Con“ jecture of Antiquarians : But it is very pro“ bable they were some eminent Benefactresses “ or Friends to the City. One of these might be “ Maud the Empress, who was born in London ;
 “ and another might be Queen Philippa, Wife to “ King Edward III. who gained great Love of “ the Citizens, by Reason of a Request she once “ made for some of them, on her Knees, before
 “ the King and his Council.”

He that made the former Verses might perhaps have this crafty Design hereby, namely, the better to preserve these antient and curious Statues from the Violence of the People, by concealing them under these feigned Fancies of his, whereby they might escape the ignorant Zeal of the Vulgar, who were in those Times, wherein he wrote his Verses, viz. 1568, very busy in pulling down and defacing all the Images, as Popish Saints, and Monuments of Idolatry.

These Stone Statues are venerable for their Antiquity, and over-living the great Fire of London ; which, 'tis likely, were set up first when the Porch was built and finished, which was not far from the Beginning of King Henry VIIIth's Reign ; that is, by Computation, above three hundred Years ago.

Divers Aldermen glazed the Windows of the great old Hall, and other Courts, which was to be seen by their Arms in each. William Hariot, Draper, Mayor Anno 1411, gave 40 l. towards this Work. The Kitchens, and other Offices adjoining, were built afterwards, viz. about the Year 1501, by Procurement of Sir John Shaa, Goldsmith, Mayor, who was the first that kept his Feast there. The Mayors, before that, usually had their Feasts at Merchant-Taylors or Grocers-Hall.

Towards the Charges of this last Work, the Mayor had of the Fellowships of the City, by their own Agreement, certain Sums of Money, as of the Mercers 40*l.* the Grocers 20*l.* the Drapers 30*l.* and so of the other Fellowships through the City, according to their Power.

Also Widows, and other well-disposed Persons, gave certain Sums of Money; as the Lady Hill 10*l.* the Lady Austrie 10*l.* and many others, till the Work was finished.

Nicholas Alwin, Grocer, Mayor Anno 1499, deceased 1505, gave by his Testament, for a Hanging of Tapestry, to serve for principal Days in the Guild-hall, 73*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* "How this Gift was performed, faith Stow, I have not heard; for Executors of our Time, having no Conscience, (I speak of my own Knowledge) prove more Testaments than they perform."

This stately Hall, being much damnified by the unhappy Conflagration of the City in the Year 1666, was rebuilt Anno 1669, and extremely well beautified and repaired both in and outside, which cost about 2500*l.* This Structure appears at present thus: The Portico is adorned with a stately Gothick Frontispiece, enriched with the King's Arms under a Cornice, Pediment and Vase, and between two Cartouches and the City Supporters, on Acroters, and these between two other Vases, under which are Niches; and in the Middle of this Front are depenciled in Gold these Words:

Reparata & ornata Thoma Rawlinson, Milit. Majore, An. Dom. MDCCVI.

Above the Balcony are the Figures of Moses and Aaron; and on the Sides beneath are the four Cardinal Virtues, already mentioned, over the Aperture; and below the Balcony are depicted the Arms of the twenty-four Companies.

The Roof of the Inside is flat, divided into Pannels; the Walls on the North and South Sides adorned with four Gothick Demi-Pillars, painted White, and veined with Blue, and the Capitals gilt with Gold, upon which are the Royal Arms, and those of Edward the Confessor. Going up nine or ten Steps to the Mayor's Court, on each Side, at some Height, are two Giants of an enormous Size, the one holding a Pole-ax, the other an Halbert, supposed by Mr. Strype to be an antient Briton and a Saxon.

Between these, and over the Steps and Aperture leading to the Mayor's Court, is a Balcony, supported at each End by four Iron Pillars in the Form of Palm-Trees, which compose something like two Arbours; and these are used, on some Occasions, as Offices for Clerks to write in: Under these are the following large Capital Letters, S. P. Q. L. i. e. Senatus Populus Que Londinensis.

In the Front of the Balcony is a very fine Clock and Dial, in a curious Frame of Oak, at the four Corners of which are carved the four Cardinal Virtues, on the Top the Figure of Time, with a Cock on each Side of him.

Round the Hall are Colours and Standards, taken from the French, &c. On fourteen Demi-Pillars (above the Capitals) are the King's Arms on the North-Eastward, and the Arms of London on the South-Eastward Pillar; and Westward from them are the Arms of the twelve Companies; at the East End are the King's Arms, between the Portraits, finely painted, of his present Majesty King George II. and her late Majesty Queen Caroline: Close by the first is the Picture of Queen Anne, at the Foot of an Anabathrum, under a rich Canopy; by the latter, his late Majesty King George I. and at the same End of the Hall, but on the North and South Sides, the Pictures of King William III. and Queen Mary, fronting each other. The Intercolumns are painted in Imitation of Porphyry, and embellished with the Pictures, in full Proportion, of eighteen Judges, which were there put up by the City in Gratitude for their signal Services done in determining Differences between Landlord and Tenant (without the Expence of Law-Suits) in Re-building the City, pursuant to an Act of Parliament, after the Fire in 1666.

Those on the South Side are,

Sir Heneage Finch.	Sir Francis North.
Sir Orlando Bridgman.	Sir John Archer.
Sir Matthew Hale.	Sir Thomas Twissden.
Sir Richard Rainsford.	Sir Christopher Turner.
Sir Edward Turner.	Sir William Wyld.
Sir Thomas Tyrrel.	Sir Hugh Windham.
Sir John Archer.	At the West End.
Sir William Merton.	Sir William Ellys.
On the North Side.	Sir Edward Thurland.
Sir Robert Atkins.	Sir Timothy Littleton.
Sir John Vaughan.

And in the Lord-Mayor's Court (which is adorned with Fleakstone, and other Painting and Gilding, and also the Figures of the four Cardinal Virtues) are the Portraits of Sir Samuel Brown, Sir John Kelynge, Sir Edward Atkins, and Sir William Windham, all (as those above) painted in full Proportion in their Scarlet Robes as Judges.

And in December, 1706, there were given by the Queen to the City, to be put up in this Hall, 26 Standards or Guidons, and 63 Colours; but there was Room only for 46 Colours, 19 Standards, and one Trophy of a Kettle-Drum, of the late Elector of Bavaria, which is very rich. That Ensign over Queen Anne's Portrait is accounted a great Rarity, being taken from the first Battalion of the French Foot Guards. These were all taken by the Army of her Majesty and her Allies, under the Command of his late Grace the Duke of Marlborough, at the Battle of Ramellies in Flanders, fought on Whitsunday, 1706, upon a total Defeat of the French and Bavarian Forces, who had 10000 Men killed, 6000 taken Prisoners; among whom were two Major-Generals, one Brigadier-General of Horse, one of Foot, several others of Distinction, and 500 Officers of less Note; with all their Tents, Baggage, and Ammunition; fifty-one Pieces of Cannon, several Kettle-Drums, and upwards of 120 Standards and Colours; the Consequences whereof was the Reduction of all Brabant, gaining the Towns of Brussels, Antwerp, Ghent, Bruges, Menin, Ostend, Aeth, Dendermond, Mecklin, Louvain, Audenard, Courtray, Alost, &c. in the same Campaign.

These Colours, Standards, &c. were all brought in great Magnificence through Westminster and London. A Detachment of her Majesty's Horse-Guards, and Horse-Grenadiers, and a Battalion drawn out of both Regiments of her Foot-Guards, drawn up on the Parade in St. James's, having received the said Colours and Standards, (which had been laid up in Whitehall) they proceeded; twenty-six of the Gentlemen, in the Centre of the Horse-Guards, carrying each a Standard taken ken from the Enemy; and sixty-three of the Pike-Men, in a Battalion of Foot-Guards, instead of their Pikes, carrying one of the Enemy's Colours. They marched through the Park, and St. James's Meuse; where the Queen, from the Lady Fitzbarding's Lodgings, saw them pass, the Guns being fired at the same Time. And so they proceeded down Pall-mall, the Strand, &c. to Guildhall, where they were set up, to remain as Trophies of that signal Victory.

The same Month the great Duke of Marlborough, to whom this Victory was owing, was invited to Dinner at the Charge of the City, Sir Robert Bedingfield being Lord-Mayor; upon which Occasion a very grand Entertainment was made; at which a Song, wrote for the Purpose by Dursley the Poet, and set to Musick by Mr. Weldon, was performed by Mr. Elford, of the Queen's Chapel, and Mr. Leveridge.

This Hall is in Length 153 Feet, Breadth 48, and Altitude within 55 Feet. It is used by the City for the Session of the several Courts of Judicature before named; for feasting our Kings, Queens, and other Potentates, Foreign Ministers, &c. and, lastly, for chusing the Lord-Mayors, Sheriffs, Members of Parliament, &c. it being capacious enough to contain 7000 Persons.

Guildhall-Chapel.

Thirdly, The Chapel situate between Blackwell-ball and Guildhall, is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene and All Saints, was founded in the Year 1299, and called London-college.

Peter Fanelore, Adam Frauncis, and Henry Frowicke, Citizens, gave one Messuage, with the Appurtenances, in the Parish of St. Foster, to William Brampton, Custos of the Chantry by them founded in the said Chapel, with four Chaplains; and one other House in the Parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, the 27th of Edward III. was given to them; which was about the Year 1353.

Richard II. in the 20th of his Reign, granted to Stephen Spilman, Mercer, Licence to give one Messuage, three Shops, and one Garden, with the Appurtenances belonging, in the Parish of St. Andrew Hubbard, to the Custos and Chaplains of the said Chapel, and to their Successors, for their better Relief and Maintenance for ever.

King Henry VI. in the 8th of his Reign, gave Licence to John Barnard, Custos, and the Chaplains, to build a-new the said Chapel or College of Guildhall. And the same Henry, in the 27th of his Reign, granted to the Parish-Clerks in London a Guild of St. Nicholas, for two Chaplains, by them to be kept in the said Chapel of St. Mary Magdalene, near Guildhall, and to keep seven Alms-People. Henry Barton, Skinner, Mayor, founded a Chaplain there. Roger Depham, Mercer, and Sir William Langford, Kt. had also Chaplains there. This Chapel or College had a Custos, seven Chaplains, three Clerks, and four Choristers.

This Chapel or College, valued to dispend 12 l. 8 s. 9 d. per Year, was surrendered amongst others. The Chapel remaineth to the Mayor and Commonalty, wherein they have Service weekly; as also at the Election of the Mayor, and at the Mayor's Feast, &c. who bought it of King Edward VI. and divers other Messuages, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments in the City of

No. 75.

London, for the Sum of 456 l. 13 s. 4 d. upon their humble Petition, the yearly Value being computed to be 40 l. 6 s. 8 d. The Date of the Patent was April 10, to commence from the Feast of the Annunciation of the blessed Virgin, in the 3d of the said King's Reign; and the City holds it in Soccage of the Manor of Greenwich.

Upon the Front of this Chapel, are set up, of latter Times, the Figures, in Stone, of the said King Edward VI. Queen Elizabeth, with a Phoenix under her, and of King Charles I. treading upon a Globe.

Adjoining to this Chapel, on the South Side, was formerly a large Library, furnished with Books, pertaining to the Guildhall and College, which Books (as it is said) were, in the Reign of Edward VI. sent for by Edward Duke of Somerset, Lord Protector, with Promise to be restored shortly. Men loaded from thence three Carriages with them; but they were never returned. This Library was built by the Executors of Richard Whittington, and by William Bury. The Arms of Whittington are placed on the one Side in the Stone-work, and two Letters, to wit, W. and B. for William Bury, on the other Side. It was afterwards lofted through, and made a Store-house for Cloths.

This Chapel was much defaced, but not burnt down, in the Fire of London, A. D. 1666. It has been since rebuilt, and is very handsome. The Windows are spacious; there is a Gallery at the West End; the Walls are hung with Tapestry; there is a Wainscot Covering over the Aldermen's Seats; and a particular Seat for the Lord-Mayor, adorned with Cartouches, a handsome Wainscot Pulpit and Desk, and a neat Altar-Piece inclosed with Rails and Banisters.

The Monuments which were erected before that Fire, and are not now to be found in this Chapel, were (1) a Tomb with the Figure of John Wells, Grocer, and Mayor in the Year 1431, erected on the South Side of the Choir above the Revestry Door. (2) The Tomb of Thomas Knesworth, Fishmonger, and Mayor in the Year 1505, erected on the North Side of the Choir. (3) There were several Flat Stones with Inscriptions; most of which were only in Memory of the Custodes, or Wardens, and of Chaplains, and Officers of the Chamber; and of Sir John Langley, Knight, Goldsmith, and Mayor in 1576, who was buried in the Vault under the Tomb of John Wells aforesaid.

The Monuments which now are legible are to the Memory of Catharine Lightfoot, Daughter of Robert Abbot, and Wife to William Lightfoot, Attorney, who died in Childbed, A. D. 1673. (2) Of her Husband William Lightfoot, one of the four Attorneys in the Lord-Mayor's Court, and Register of Sutton's-hospital, who died A. D. 1699. (3) Of William Man, Esq; who being admitted Sword-bearer to the Lord-Mayor in 1659, held that Place to his Death, which happened in April 30, 1705. Æt. 77, having officiated in that Office for forty-six Years. He had five Wives. (4) Of William Fluellen, Esq; Alderman of this City, who died Sept. 11, 1675; and (5) of William Avery, with this Inscription, Gulielmus Avery, dum vixit celeberrime huic Civitati a Commentariis, mentarius, (i. e.) Secretary and Comptroller of this City, Ob. 1671.

Halls of Companies.

In this Ward are two Company's Halls: (1) On the North of Cheapside, almost in the Center between the Old-jewry and Ironmonger-lane, is situate Mercers-hall, more commonly known by the Name of Mercers-chapel, which makes a Part of that magnificent Building. On this Spot in antient Times was founded an Hospital dedicated to St. Thomas of Acars, or Acons, for a Master and Brethren, Militiæ Hospitalis, &c. faith the Record of Edward III. the fourteenth Year; by Thomas Fitz-Theobald de Heiley, and Agnes his Wife, Sister to Thomas a Becket, in the Reign of Henry II. They gave to the Master and Brethren the Lands with the Appurtenances, that some Time were Gilbert a Becket's, Father of the said Thomas, in the which he was born; there to make a Church. There was a Charnel, and a Chapel over it of St. Nicholas and St. Stephen.

The Life of Thomas
a Becket.

The Life of Thomas a Becket (to whom this Hospital or Chapel was probably dedicated) is written by divers Authors, and diversly, according to their Affection; we shall therefore only give a short Account of his Birth and Parentage, also of his Death, and why this Hospital was dedicated by the Name of St. Thomas of Acars or Acons.

This Thomas a Becket was a Son of Gilbert Becket, a Citizen of London, and of Matildis his Wife, who was the Daughter of a Pagan Prince, under whose Custody, Gilbert being taken Prisoner, when he travelled into the Holy Land, was for a Year and a half kept Prisoner, and at last escaping, by the Help of this Matildis (who fell in Love with him, being converted by him to the Christian Religion) he came again safe into England, whom Matildis, not long after, for Love of him, adventured to follow, and getting away from her Father, came at last to London, where finding Gilbert, he married her, and of her begat this Thomas, who was born in his Father's House, which then was in the Place where Mercers-Chapel in Cheapside now stands.

He was murdered in his own Cathedral Church at Canterbury, on Innocent's Day, at Even, Anno 1170, as he was going up the Steps towards the Choir, by four Knights, named Reynald Fitz-Urse, Hugh de Morienill, William de Tracy, and Richard Briton, none of which (as the Report is) lived above three Years after, and then died very penitent. And as he suffered for his Zeal in Defence of the Papacy, we find him soon after canonized, and worshipped by the Pope's Command.

Why this Chapel was dedicated to St. Thomas a Becket, by the Name of St. Thomas of Acars, is not perfectly known; but the following Account, from the X. Scriptores, seems very probable: "When the City of Acars, or Acon, in the Holy Land (called also Prolematis) was besieged by the Christians, one William, an Englishman by Nation, being Chaplain to Radulphus de Dico, Dean of London, when he went to Jerusalem, bound himself by a Vow, that if he should prosperously enter Acon, he would build a Chapel to St. Thomas the Martyr, at his own Charge, according to his Ability; and "would procure there, to the Honour of the said Martyr, a Church-yard to be consecrated; which was done. Then many flocking from all Parts to serve in this Chapel, William himself, as a Token of his Christianity, took on him the Name of Prior; who, whilst he served bodily, as a Soldier of CHRIST, had an especial Care of the Poor, and he freely bestowed all his Diligence and Labour, in burying of the Bodies of such as died, as well naturally, as of others who were slain with the Sword, representing himself in Man's Sight the next Successor of that great Tobias."

There is another Testimony out of the Theatre of Honour, Lib. 9. Cap. 11. where the Author repeating the military Orders of the Holy Land, faith thus: "The Order of St. Thomas was instituted by the King of England, Richard, surnamed Cœur de Lyon, after the Surprizal of Acars, and being of the English Nation, they held the Rule of St. Augustine, wore a white Habit, and a full red Cross, charged in the Middle with a white Scallop; they took for their Patron the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Metropolitan of England, Thomas a Becket, who suffered Martyrdom (as his Favourers say) under the King of England, Henry II. of that Name. Peter de Rupibus, Bishop of Winchester, who had been five Years in the Holy Land, removed the Church there of St. Thomas the Martyr, from an unfit Place to a more convenient, and caused the Patriarch of Jerusalem to take Order, that the Brethren of this Church, who were before Laymen, might be under the Order of the Templers, wearing a Cross on their Breast. He bequeathed also to this House of St. Thomas of Acons, 500 Marks." So much M. Paris in vita Hen. III. p. 472. sub anno 1238.

Hereby it is clear, that the Dedication of this Hospital, or Chapel, to St. Thomas of Acars, must have relation to the like Dedication of the Chapel and Holy Order in the City of Acars, in the Holy Land, to the same Archbishop; all these three Dedications being near about one and the same Time, within few Years after the Archbishop's Death. And it is probable, that in Imitation of those Dedications at Acars, this in London might do the like.

From this St. Thomas antiently was a solemn Procession used by the new Mayor; who, the Afternoon of the Day he was sworn at the Exchequer, met with the Aldermen here; whence they repaired together to St. Paul's, and there prayed for the Soul of the Bishop William at his Tomb; who was Bishop of London in the Time of William the Conqueror. Then they went to the Church-yard, to a Place where Thomas a Becket's Parents lay; and there they prayed for all faithful Souls departed. And then they went all back to St. Thomas of Acars again; and both Mayor and Aldermen offered each a Penny.

William Bouyndon, Magister Domus Sancti Thomæ Martyris de Acon, March 1419. Johan Chadde, Civis & Cuttelar, London, by his last Will dated June 13, 1482, gave to John Nute, Master of the House of St. Thomas the Martyr of Acars,

Its Use on Lord-Mayor's Day.

Acons, and to the Brethren of the said Place, and their Successors, his Tenement in Bershaw-lane, in the Parish of St. Mary de Cole Church.

This Hospital was valued to dispend 277 l. 3 s. 4 d. It was surrendered the 30th of Henry VIII. the 21st of October, and was since purchased by the Mercers, by means of Sir Richard Gresham, and was again set open on the Eve of St. Michael 1541, the 33d of Henry VIII.

The Image of Thomas a Becket, to which Pope Saint this Chapel was dedicated, stood over the Gate. But in the Month of January, the first of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, somebody threw it down and broke it; and set a Writing on the Church Door, reflecting on them that placed it there. It is now called the Mercers-chapel; and there is kept a free Grammar-School, as of old Time had been accustomed and commanded by Parliament; of which hereafter.

There were several Monuments here for the following Persons; tho' many of them are defaced.

Monuments.

James Butler, Earl of Ormond, and Dame Johan his Countess, 8 Henry VI. John Norton, Esq; Stephen Cavendish, Draper, Mayor, 1362; Thomas Cavendish, and William Cavendish. The former, viz. Thomas Cavendish, bequeathed his Body to be laid here in these Words (by his Will, proved 1524.) "I Thomas Cavendish, of the King's Exchequer, bequeath my Body to be buried in the Church of Thomas Acars within London, in the North Isle of the Choir, next my Grandfather William Cavendish."

Thomas Canon (or Gernon) called Pike, one of the Sheriffs 1410. Hungate of Yorkshire. William Rule, Civis & Pannarius, buried in the Church of St. Thomas the Martyr de Acon, London. This Will bore Date March 1390; wherein are these Words: Item, omnia illa terras & tenementa nuper Johannis Lenne in Stratford Lantherne in Parochia de West Ham, que perquisivi ex feoffamento Johannis Northbury, Arm. & Johannis de Kent, Arm. volo quod Executores mei vendant & distribuunt, &c. ad Emendationem Viarum a Carebregge usque ad Domum Johannis Wallere in Stratford.

Ambrose Cresacre, (John Chester, Draper) John Trusbut, Mercer, 1437. Thomas Norland, Sheriff, 1483. Sir Edmund Shaa, Goldsmith, Mayor, 1482. Sir Thomas Hill, Knt. Mayor, 1485. Henry Frowicke. Thomas Ilam, Sheriff, 1479. Lancelot Laken, Esq; Ralph Tilney, Sheriff, 1488. — Garth, Esq; John Rich. Tho. Butler, Earl of Ormond, 1515. Sir William Butler, Grocer, Mayor, 1515. William Browne, Mercer, Mayor, 1513. John Locke, 1519. Sir Thomas Baldry, Mercer, Mayor, 1523. Sir William Locke, Mercer, Sheriff, 1548. Sir John Allen, Mercer, Mayor, 1525, deceased, 1544. Sir Thomas Leigh, Mercer, Mayor, 1558. Sir Richard Malory, Mercer, Mayor, 1564. Humphrey Baskerville, Mercer, Sheriff, 1561. Sir George Bond, Mayor, 1587, &c.

Add to the former these Persons here also buried, whose Monuments were defaced long before the Fire: — Hells. Henry Frowicke. John Amerce. Richard Wayte of Hampshire, 10 July, 1492. William Goldwyn, 1482. Henry Cumber. Richard Laundsey, 1461. Rosse Cryspe, under the same Stone, 1514. William Jenkes, and Christian his Wife, 1475. John Perys, and Margaret his Wife. Will. Goodwyn. Nic. Arguz, 1494. John Taune. Richard Martys and Agnys. Tho. Morris, and Joan his Wife.

William Downer, of London, Gent. by his Last Will, dated 26 June, 1484, willed his Body to be buried within the Church of St. Thomas Acars of London. — To the Disposition and Ordinance of all that his Tenement, with the Appurtenances, set in Eastcheap of London, "First, He willed that Agnes his Wife have and hold to her during her Life, &c. all the same Tenement, &c. and after her Decease, I will that it remain to the Master and Brethren of Thomas Acars, and to their Successors for evermore: So that they every Year, for evermore, in their aforefaid Church, at such Time of the Year as it shall happen me to dy, observe and keep an Obyte, or an Anniverfary for my Sowl, the Sowl of my feyd Wife, the Sowles of my Fader and Moder, and al Christen Sowles, with Placebo and Dirige on the Even, and Mass of Requiem on the Morrow following, solemnly by Note for evermore."

To these we make these Additions, by the Help of another MS. in the Heralds Office:

Margaret, Wife of John Bracebridge, Merchant of the Staple, 1446, and he the same Year died at Calais.

Radulphus Tilney, Grocer of London, and Alderman, obiit 1503. His Bearing, Baron and Femme 1. A Chevron between 3 — Heads erased 2, Semy de Crosses botonee, a Lion Passant Gerdant.

His Wife bore Arg. three Cinquefoils, Az. A Chief.

Robert Soame, D. D. Brother to Stephen, died sine prole.

And at the Entrance into the Chapel are two Marble Tables, hanging one on each Side the middle Door, with the following Inscriptions: On that on the North Side;

M. S.

Near this Place lieth interred the Body of Margaret, the Wife of John Essington, of Grossington-hall in the County of Gloucester, Gent. She was a Person of great Virtue and excellent Accomplishment, acquired by extraordinary Education. After a languishing Sickness, she was called to a better Life, March the 18th, 1701.

To whose pious Memory her mournful Husband erected this Monument.

Near this Place also lie interred the Bodies of John Godfrey, Gent. the Father, and Thomas Godfrey, Citizen and Mercer of London, Brother to Mrs. Margaret Essington; of whom the former having served the Right Worshipful Company of Mercers, with known Integrity, as Clerk, near sixty Years, deceased June 21, 1697, aged 80; the other dying May 1, 1698, aged 46, left a plentiful Estate to his beloved Sister.

On the other Table on the South Side of the Door:

In Memory of John Warner, Citizen, who departed this Life the 10th Day of January 1702, in the 73d Year of his Age, erected by Anne his Wife, Daughter of George Price, Esq; late of Westbury in the County of Bucks.

Near this Place lieth the Body of Anna Maria, the Wife of John Warner, his Nephew, being the Daughter and only Child of George Price, of the County of Gloucester, who departed from this World the 21st Day of July 1704, and in the 21st Year of her Age.

Before this Hospital, towards the Street, was built a handsome and beautiful Chapel arched over with Stone, and thereupon the Mercers-Hall, a most curious Piece of Work. Sir John Allen, Mercer, being a Founder, was there buried; but afterwards his Tomb was removed into the Body of the Hospital Church, and the Chapel was made into Shops, and let out for Rents by his Successors the Mercers.

On Tuesday, the 27th of April, Anno 10 Henry VIII. it was granted unto the Master and his Brethren of the Hospital of St. Thomas of Acons, in West-cheap, where St. Thomas the Martyr was born, (because they wanted Room in the Hospital) that for their more Ease they might make a Gallery in convenient Height and Breadth, from their said House overthwart the Street in the Old Jewry, into a certain Garden and Buildings, which the Master and Brethren had then lately purchased; so as the said Gallery should be of such Height, as should not annoy Man, Horse, nor Cart: And to make a Window on either Side of the said Gallery; and therein, yearly, in the Winter, to have a sufficient Light, for the Comfort of them that passed by.

In the Year 1536, on St. Peter's Night, King Henry VIII. and Queen Jane his Wife, stood in the Mercers Hall, then new built, and beheld the marching Watch of the City, most bravely set out; Sir John Allen, Mercer, one of the King's Council, being Mayor.

The famous learned Italian Antonio de Dominis, Archbishop of Spalatto, who had forsaken his Country and Archbishoprick for the Sake of the true Religion, and came and dwelt in England, preached divers Sermons in the Italian Language, in the Mercers Chapel. The first Sermon from 1 Cor. xiii. 11. he preached there, was in November 1617, where were present, as his Auditors, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Earls of Arundel and Pembroke, the Lords Zouch and Compton, and many other of great Note. He preached there again upon Sunday, April 19, 1618: And so he did upon Sundays divers Years after. And from thence, that Chapel was used every Sunday for Italian Sermons; at which English Merchants, that had lived abroad, were present, and contributed to the Maintaining thereof for many Years after.

The Mercers Hall and Chapel were demolished by the great Fire, but new and magnificently built by the said Company. The Hall and great Parlour are finely wainscotted with right Oak, and adorned with Pilasters of the Ionick Order, the Ceiling with Fretwork, and the stately Piazzas are constituted by large Columns and Entablature of the Dorick Order. In the Hall are the King's Arms, those of the City, and others. The Front to Cheapside is very ornamental; the Door-case is enriched with the Figures of two Cupids, mantling their Arms, Festoons, &c. and above the Balcony it is adorned with two Pilasters, their Entablature, and Pediment of the Ionick Order; the Inter columns are the Figures of Faith and Hope, and that of Charity in a Niche under the Cornice of the Pediment, with other Enrichments.

Burnt and Rebuilt.

The Chapel is neatly wainscotted, and paved with black and white Marble. In the Ambulatory leading to it, against the North Wall, is a Marble Tomb, with the Effigies, lying at full Length, of Richard Fishborne, Mercer, a worthy Benefactor, who died on the eighth of April, 1625.

Grocers-Hall.

On the North Side of the Poultry, and at the farthest End of the Alley, formerly called Coney-hope-lane, now Grocers-alley, is situate Grocers-Hall, on a Spot of Ground purchased by the Grocers Company of Robert Lord Fitzwalters for the Sum of three hundred and twenty Marks, A. D. 1411. The Building is well designed and executed for the Purposes of a Common Hall, stately, ornamental, and so capacious, that for many Years it served for the Uses of the Bank of England, which was kept in this Hall till there was an Office built on purpose in Threadneedle-street. The antient Stone and Brick Building at the North-West Corner of the Garden, inhabited by the Beadle of the Company, is very probably Part of the antient City Mansion of the noble Family of Fitzwalters, and consequently the oldest Building within the City Walls.

Poultry-Compter.

Between the Site of Grocers-Hall and the Poultry is one of the City Prisons, called the Poultry-Compter, from its Situation and Use; for this Prison belonging to one of the Sheriffs, and of great Antiquity, might possibly be named the Compter, because the Prisoners are obliged to account for the Cause of their Commitment before they are discharged; and the Addition of Poultry is to distinguish it from another Compter in Wood-street.

The Charge of these Prisons is committed to the Sheriffs, who always enter into their Office on the twenty-eighth of September, which is the Eve of St. Michael the Archangel, and are accordingly sworn to the Charge of the said Office.

Officers.

Under the Sheriffs there are divers other Officers belonging alike to both Compters, who give Security to the Sheriffs for their true and faithful Execution of their several Offices.

The Secondary.

I. The first and principal Officer, next to the Sheriff, is the Secondary, whose Office is to return Writs, mark Warrants, impanel Juries for the Courts both above and below, and also for the Sessions.

Clerk of the Papers.

II. The Clerk of the Papers, whose Office is to impanel Juries for the Sheriffs Court; he enters Judgment, and makes out all Processes for the Sheriffs Courts.

Clerk Sitters.

III. Four Clerk Sitters, who enter Actions, take Bails, receive Verdicts after Trials, &c.

Serjeants and Yeomen

IV. Eighteen Serjeants at Mace, and every Serjeant hath his Yeoman. Their Office is to arrest, execute all Processes, serve Writs and Executions upon Actions, and Summons from above, as well as from the Courts below; and each of the Serjeants gives four hundred Pounds Security to the Sheriff, for the due Execution of their Office.

No. 75.

They wear blue coloured Cloth Gowns, which are allowed them by the Sheriffs yearly, which they always wear upon their waiting Days. Four of these Serjeants; and as many Yeomen out of each Compter, wait upon their respective Sheriffs daily; and during the Time of Sessions double the Number: At which Time, in the Mornings, they bring the Prisoners down from Newgate to the Sessions-House, put them in the Dock, and wait there all Day, and return the Prisoners back to the Gaol at Night; and, upon the Execution-days, see the condemned Prisoners executed.

Unto each Compter also belongs a Master-Keeper, and, under him, two Turnkeys, and other Servitors.

Master-Keeper.

The poorer Sort of Prisoners, as well in this Compter as in that in Wood-street, receive daily Relief from the Sheriffs Table of all the broken Meat and Bread; and there are divers Gifts given by several well-disposed Persons towards their Subsistence, of which the following Names are mentioned by Mr. Styve: And, besides these, there are other Benevolences frequently sent to all the Prisoners in London by charitable Persons, many of which do conceal their Names, doing it only for Charity sake. And there are other Gifts, some for the Release of such as lie in only for Prison-Fees, and others for the Release of such whose Debts are small.

These Persons gave the like Charity to Wood-street Compter.

Bucklers, or more properly Bucklebury, is so called from a Manor and Tenements appertaining to one Buckle, who there dwelt and kept his Courts. This Manor was supposed to be the great Stone Building, Part of which was remaining when Monday published his Edition of Stow in 1633, and was then called the Old Barge, from such a Sign hanging out near the Gate of it. To this Place it was commonly reported, that, when Wallbrook lay open, Barges were rowed or towed up out of the Thames.

Bucklerbury.

Also, on the North Side of this Street, directly over-against the said Bucklerbury, was one antient strong Tower of Stone; which Tower King Edward III. in the eighteenth of his Reign, by the Name of the King's House, called Cornet's Tower, in London, did appoint to be his Exchange of Money, there to be kept. In the twenty-ninth, he granted it to Frydus Guynifane and Landus Bar-doile, Merchants of Luke, for twenty Pounds the Year. And in the thirty-second of his Reign he gave it to his College or free Chapel of St. Stephen at Westminster, by the Name of his Tower, called Cornet's Tower, at Bucklerbury in London.

Cornet's Tower.

This Tower was taken down by one Buckle, a Grocer, meaning, in Place thereof, to have set up and built a Frame of Timber; but the said Buckle greedily labouring to pull down the old Tower, a Piece thereof fell upon him, which so bruised him, that his Life was thereby shortened; and another, that married his Widow, set up the new prepared Frame of Timber, and finished the Work.

Sopers-lane.

By the Assent of Stephen Abunden, Mayor, the Pepperers in Sopers-lane were admitted to sell all such Spices and other Wares as Grocers use now to sell, retaining the old Name of Pepperers in Sopers-lane; till at length, in the Reign of Henry VI. the said Sopers-lane was inhabited by Cordwainers and Curriers: After that, the Pepperers or Grocers had seated themselves in a more open Street, to wit, in Bucklersbury, where they remained for many Years.

By a Passage in an old Book, printed in Henry VIII's Reign, it appears, that Sopers-lane was a noted Place where Pies were made, and set forth to be sold, when Spices were so near at Hand. "Thou must, at Eastre, receive the God of "Antichrist; and thou must buy it, and pay for "it, as Men some Time bought Pies in Sopers-lane." [Lamentation against the City of London, printed 1505.]

Tallow-Chandlers had their Shops also hereabouts; the Smell of whose Trade, it seems, was so nauseous in the chief Street of the City, that they were appointed to remove thence, and remain elsewhere in the City.

At the upper End of this Sopers-lane, in Cheapside, was the common Place of Standing to see great Shews; as, when Kings and Queens, Princes, or foreign Ambassadors passed along towards Westminster, or from Westminster thro' London towards the Tower. Here was a Parcel of Land called The great Field in the Street, some Time in the Tenure of the Lady Catharine Dormer, Widow: This, under that Name, together with other Things, was sold to Sir Robert Cholmley, Knt. in the second of Edward VI.

Poultry.

At the East End of the High Street, which is the main Body of this Ward, over-against the Parish-Church of St. Mildred, on the South Side of the Poultry, up to the great Conduit, were divers Houses, some Times inhabited by Poulterers, afterwards by Grocers, Haberdashers, and Upholsterers. At the West End of this Poultry, on the South Side, was the great Conduit, which was the Beginning of West-Cheap. This Conduit was the first sweet Water that was conveyed by Pipes of Lead under Ground to this Place in the City from Paddington. It was castellated with Stone, and cisterned with Lead; which was begun in the Year 1285, Henry Walleis being then Mayor. This Conduit was again new built by Thomas Ilame, one of the Sheriffs, in the Year 1479.

Cheap Conduit.

Beyond the Conduit, on the South Side of Cheap, in Stow's Time, were Houses, for the most Part possessed by Mercers, up to the North Corner of Cordwainers-street, which, he says, was corruptly called Bow-lane. These Houses, in former Times, were but Sheds, or Shops, with Solars over them.

Standard in West-cheap.

About the Midst of this Street, without Honey-lane, was the Standard in Cheap, which John Wells, Grocer, Mayor, 1430, caused to be made, with a small Cistern with fresh Water, having one Cock continually running, when the same was not turned nor locked. This was finished by his Executors, Thomas Knowles and John Chicheley, who purchased Licence of King Henry IV. to convey Water to make the Conduit. See Page 190.

The said King, by his Patent dated at Windsor, the twenty-first of his Reign, (which Patent was confirmed by Parliament, 1442) granted Licence to John Knolles, John Chicheley, and others, Executors to the said John Wells, with his Goods to make new the Highway which leadeth from the City of London towards the Palace of Westminster, before and nigh the Manor of Savoy, Parcel of the Dutchy of Lancaster; a Way then very ruinous, and the Pavement broken, to the Hurt and Mischief of the Subjects. And further, that the Standard in Cheap, where divers Executions of the Law before Time had been performed, (which Standard at that present was very ruinous with Age, in which there was a Conduit) should be taken down, and another competent Standard of Stone, together with a Conduit in the same, of new, strongly to be builded, for the Commodity and Honour of the City, with the Goods of the said Testator, without Interruption, &c.

The old Standard in Cheap, with a Conduit therein, taken down and new built.

Now, whether the Standard in West-Cheap, so often spoken of in former Times, be the same, and stood just in the same Place, or elsewhere, or that the same were removeable, is a Matter of Doubt; for it is manifest, that in the Reign of Edward III. and at other Times, when the great Justings and their Runnings on Horseback were practised between the great Cross and the great Conduit at Sopers-lane End, there was no such Standard or other Obstacle between them; neither was that Street paved with hard Stone, as now it is. We read, that, in the Year 1293, three Men had their right Hands stricken off at the Standard in Cheap, for rescuing of a Prisoner arrested by an Officer of the City. It is very likely therefore, that the old Cross in Cheap, which was then newly built, was also the Standard.

A Doubt of the Place of the old Standard.

But, of the Executions at the Standard in Cheap, we read further, that, in the Year 1326, the Burgeffes of London caused Walter Stapleton, Bishop of Exeter, Treasurer to Edward II. to be beheaded, with others, at the Standard in Cheap, (but this was by Paul's Gate.) In the Year 1351, the twenty-sixth of Edward III. two Fishmongers were beheaded at the Standard in Cheap. In the Year 1381, Wat Tyler beheaded Richard Lions and others there. In the Year 1399, Henry IV. caused the Blank Charters made by Richard II. to be burnt there. In the Year 1450 Jack Cade, Captain of the Kentish Rebels, beheaded the Lord Say there. In the Year 1461, John Darcy had his Hand stricken off there, because he had stricken a Man before the Judges at Westminster, &c.

Executions at the Standard.

Then next is the great Cross in West-Cheap, (but in Farringdon Ward within) which Cross was there erected in the Year 1290, by Edward I. upon this Occasion: Queen Eleanor, his Wife, died at Herdeby, a Town near unto the City of Lincoln;

Great Cross in West-Cheap first built.

Lincoln; her Body was brought from thence to Westminster; and this King, in Memory of her, caused, in every Place where her Body rested in the Way, a stately Cross of Stone to be made and erected, with the Queen's Image and Arms upon it, as, at Grantbam, Woborne, Northampton, Stony-Stratford, Dunstable, St. Alban's, Waltham, West-Cheap, and at Charing; from whence she was conveyed to Westminster, and there buried.

Cross in Cheap new built.

John Hatherly, being Mayor of London, procured, in the Year 1441, Licence of King Henry VI. in the twenty-first of his Reign, to re-edify the same in a more beautiful Manner, for the Honour of the City; and had Licence also to take up two hundred Fodder of Lead for the building thereof, and of certain Conduits, and a common Granary.

For there was now, not only a fair Cross to be set up in West-Cheap, but Conduits, with Standards, to be built, and leaden Pipes, that conveyed the Water for above three Miles; and the Works about them to be looked after, and a common Granary to be erected a-new: For the authorizing and licensing the City in which Works, the said King Henry VI. issued out Letters, as exemplified on Page 191.

The King's Letters for the Cross in Cheap, and other Works

The Granary.

This common Garner or Granary, spoken of in these Letters Patents, to be built a-new, was that which was built by Simon Eyre, or Leyre, Alderman, at Leadenball, for the publick Use of the City. This Cross to be erected here at West-Cheap, expressed in these Letters Patents, to serve pro quadam Augea tanquam mater, seems to be for an Increase and Supply of Water; as the Mother Aqueduct, to the rest of the Conduits, as though there were Pipes laid from hence to the rest.

The Cross curiously wrought.

This Cross was then curiously wrought, at the Charge of divers Citizens. John Fisher, Mercer, gave six hundred Marks towards it. The same was begun to be set up in 1484, and it was not finished before the Year 1486, the second of Henry VII. It was new gilt all over in the Year 1522, against the coming in of Charles V. Emperor, and was new burnished against the Coronation of Edward VI. and, in the Year 1553, against the Coronation of Queen Mary; and gilt again in the Year 1554, against the coming in of King Philip: Since the which Time the said Cross having been presented by divers Juries, or Quests of Wardmote, to stand in the Highway, to the Let of Carriages, &c. as they alledged, but could not have it removed; it followed, that, in the Year 1581, the twenty-first of June, in the Night, the lowest Images round about the said Cross (being of Christ's Resurrection, of the Virgin Mary, King Edward the Confessor, and such like) were broken and defaced: Whereupon Proclamation was made, that whoso would bewray the Doers thereof, should have forty Crowns; but nothing came to Light. The Image of the Blessed Virgin, at that Time, robbed of her Son, and her Arms broken, by which she staid him on her Knees; her whole Body was also haled with Ropes, and left ready to fall, but was, in the Year 1595, again fastened and repaired; and, in the Year 1596, about Bartholomew-tide, a new Son, mishapen, (as born out of Time, says Stow) all naked, was left in her Arms, the other Images remaining broken as before. On the East Side of the same Cross, the Steps being taken thence, under the Image of Christ's Resurrection defaced, was then set up a curious wrought Frame of grey Marble, and in the same an Alabaster Image of Diana, a Woman, for the most Part naked, and Water conveyed from the Thames prilling from her naked Breasts for a Time.

Top of the Cross being likely to fall, was taken down

In the Year 1599, the Timber of the Cross at the Top being rotted within the Lead, the Arms thereof bending, and like to have fallen, the whole Body of the Cross was scaffolded about, and the Top taken down, meaning in Place thereof to set up a Pyramid: But some of her Majesty's honourable Counsellors directed their Letters to Sir Nicholas Mosley, then Mayor, by her Majesty's express Commandment, concerning the Cross, forthwith to be repaired, and placed again as it formerly stood, &c. Notwithstanding, the said Cross stood disregarded more than a Year after: Whereupon the said Counsellors in great Number, meaning not any longer to permit the Continuance of such a Contempt, wrote to William Rider, then Mayor, requiring him, by Virtue of her Majesty's said former Direction and Commandment, without any further Delay, to accomplish the same her Majesty's most princely Care therein, respecting especially the Antiquity and Continuance of that Monument and antient Ensign of Christianity, &c. dated the twenty-fourth of December, 1600. After this, a Cross of Timber was framed, set up, covered with Lead, and gilded, the Body of the Cross downward cleansed of Dust, the Scaffold carried thence. About twelve Nights following the Image of our Lady was again defaced, by plucking off her Crown, and almost her Head, taking from her her naked Child, and stabbing her in the Breast, &c.

Cross in Cheap commanded to be repaired.

Command again sent for repairing the Cross in Cheap, it being an antient Ensign of Christianity

This is the old Cross which stood at the East End of the Parish-Church called St. Michael in the Corn, by Paul's Gate, near to the North End of the Old-Exchange.

In the Reign of Edward III. divers Justings were made in this Street, betwixt Sopers-lane and the great Cross, namely, one in the Year 1331, about the twenty-first of September, as I find noted by divers Writers of that Time. "In the Middle of the City of London (say they) in a Street called Cheap, the Stone Pavement being covered with Sand, that the Horses might not slide when they strongly set their Feet to the Ground, the King held a Tournament three Days together with the Nobility, valiant Men of the Realm, and other, some strange Knights. And, to the End the Beholders might with the better Ease see the same, there was a wooden Scaffold erected cross the Street, like unto a Tower, wherein Queen Philippa, and many other Ladies, richly attired and assembled from all Parts of the Realm, did stand to behold the Justs; but the higher Frame, in which the Ladies were placed, brake in sunder, whereby they were, with some Shame, forced to fall down; by Reason whereof the Knights, and such as were underneath, were grievously hurt: Wherefore the Queen took great Care to save the Carpenters from Punishment, and through Justings and Tournaments in West-Cheap.

“her Prayers, which she made upon her Knees,
“pacified the King and Council, and thereby “purchased great Love of the People.” After which Time the King caused a Shed to be strongly made of Stone for himself, the Queen, and other States to stand on, and there to behold
the Justings and other Shews at their Pleasure, by the Church of St. Mary Bow, in Cordwainersstreet Ward. See Page 123.

Here in Cheapside, in Bow Parish, formerly, in the Time of King Henry VIII. and some Time after, lived a considerable Mercer, at the Sign of the Crown, (and this perhaps was that Crown of which we have that odd Story on Page 200.) His Name was John Hare, of an antient Family in Suffolk, who left a fair Estate behind him to his Children, that were divers, besides his charitable Legacies. He died Anno 1564. To Richard Hare, his fourth Son, who, as it seems, continued his Father's Trade, he gave by his Will his said Dwelling-House at the Crown, with all the Shops, Cellars, Yards, and Warehouses there-unto belonging. He was also Owner of the Manor of Stow Bardolph in the County of Norfolk, which he purchased of Queen Mary; and also the Parsonage thereof, and other Lands and Tenements there, which he purchased of Richard Catlyn, Serjeant at Law; all which he gave by Will to his eldest Son and Heir Nicholas Hare. He was likewise Owner of a great Mansion-Place, as it is called in his Will, with Gardens, Orchards, Houses, Lands, and Tenements, in Whitecross-street, in the Parish of St. Giles Cripplegate; another Tenement in More-lane, in the same Parish, with Garden, Tenter-yards, and other Commodities and Profits thence arising, or occupied with the same.

His charitable Legacies.

His charitable Legacies were as follow: To the poor People of the Parish of our Lady of Bow, where he then dwelt, forty Shillings, to be divided among them: To the Poor of the Parish of our Lady in Homersfield in the County of Suffolk, where he was born, twenty Shillings:
To the two Hospitals Christ and St. Thomas, to the Use of the Poor thereof, forty Pounds, to be equally divided: To St. Bartholomew's Hospital ten Pounds: To the five Lazar-Houses about London, ten Shillings to every House: To every Prisoner within Newgate, Ludgate, the Marshalsea, and the King's-Bench, four Pence in Money to every one that were Prisoners there at his Decease; and to every one that shall be then Prisoners in the Compters of Wood-street and the Poultry, four Pence a-piece: To the thirteen poor Men in Whittington College two Shillings a-piece.

His Liberalities.

Other Liberalities by his Will were: To the Worshipful Company of Mercers, to make Banquet withal after his Decease, twelve Pounds, to be paid within three Months after his Decease to the Wardens of the Company then being: To every Man or Maid Servant not afore-named,
(the rest having particular Legacies assigned them) being his present Servants at the Time of his Death, forty Shillings a-piece. Item, To divers Persons of Quality, and Citizens of Rank, he bequeathed Rings to each of fine Gold, already made, weighing near the Weight of three Quarters of an Ounce every Ring: These were, Sir

Thomas Leigh, Alderman, and my Lady his Wife,
Sir Roger Martin, Alderman, Edmund Jackman, Alderman, Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. and my Lady his Wife, &c. to the Number of thirty-five in all.

In this Ward, in Cheapside, the Mercers chiefly had their Shops and Warehouses in former Times; who were also great Merchants, and sometimes went abroad beyond Sea for Traffick, and especially to Italy: A Story relating to which is recorded on Page 196.

CHAP. XVII.

COLEMAN-STREET WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State.
Aldermen and Common Council, &c. Remarkable Things. Parishes and Churches.
Armourers and Brasiers Hall. Founders-
Hall and Scotch Kirk. Excise-Office.
Commissioners and Officers. Antiquities. First Jews Synagogue. Friars de Pœnitentia.
Prince's Wardrobe.

THIS Ward takes its Name from the principal Street therein, built by one Coleman; or probably it derived its Distinction from the many Dealers in Coal which antiently inhabited the same; for that was the common Method our Forefathers observed in giving Names to the several Streets of this City, either on account of the Trades carried on therein, or from some remarkable Building, &c. on that Site.

Its Name.

It is bounded on the East by Bishopsgate Ward, Broad-street Ward, and Cheap Ward; on the North by Cripplegate Ward, Upper Moorfields, and Bishopsgate Ward; on the South by Cheap Ward;
and on the West by Basinghall-street Ward.

Bounds.

The Extent of this Ward, from East to West, is from the Grate near Lothbury Church to the End of Ironmonger-lane on the South Side, but no farther than the South-West Corner of Basinghallstreet on the North Side; and North and South it extends from Great Moorgate to the Garden belonging to Grocers-Hall in the Poultry: Which will more distinctly appear as follows:

Extent.

The principal Streets and Places in this Ward are, the Old Jewry, which is all in this Ward, except one hundred and thirty-six Feet at the South End thereof. Lothbury, from Coleman-street, Eastward, as far as St. Margaret's Lothbury Church on the North Side, and unto about twenty-seven Feet beyond Princes-street on the South Side. Cateaton-street, from Bassishaw-street to Coleman-street on the North Side, and from Ironmonger-lane on the South Side; all Coleman-street wholly; in which Street there are divers Courts and Alleys, which shall be mentioned in Order.

The modern
State.

The Old Jewry is a very good open Street, well inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute.
On the West Side of this Street, about the Middle, is the Parish-Church of St. Olave Jewry, with a Church-yard adjoining; where there is a Passage,

Passage, with a Free-stone Pavement, leading to Ironmonger-lane.

Lotburi, a Street well built and inhabited; in which stands St. Margaret's Church.

On the South Side of this Street is Prince's-street, which, with two turning Angles, rises into Threadneedle street: It is well built, and inhabited by Merchants, &c. On the West Side is Drapers-court, a handsome, large Place, with good Houses, well inhabited, having a Free-stone Pavement. Out of this Court is a narrow Passage into Lotburi.

Cateaton-street has no more in this Ward than from Basinghall-street, the rest is in Cheap Ward, a Street well inhabited by Tradesmen. In this Part of the Street is Golden-Cross-court, small, but well built, and inhabited by wholesale Dealers.

Coleman-street. This Street is large and long, and runs Northward to London-wall, very well inhabited by divers noted Merchants and Shopkeepers. In this Street are divers Courts and Alleys. The first is Windmill-court, which is but ordinary. Packers-court is a pretty open Place, with indifferent good Buildings.

Other Places in this Street. King's-arms-yard, or rather Street, for the Largeness and Goodness, being graced with good large Houses, inhabited by Merchants.

George-alley, long, and indifferently well built. White-rose court, but indifferent, falls into Mason's-alley, which is also but mean, and so into Basinghall-street.

Great Bell-alley, very long, goes out of Coleman-street, and runs Eastward to Little Bell-alley, which turns Northward, as far as Thompson's Rents. The Part of this Alley from Coleman-street to Mulberry-court is broad; but the Part running Northward is more narrow. The whole is well built, and inhabited. The Houses on the East Side of Little Bell-alley look into Drapers Garden. In this Alley are several small Courts, viz. Mulberry-court, which is a handsome Court. On the West Side it has a Passage into White's-alley. Whalebone-court, handsome, with a Free-stone Pavement. Pitcher's-court, a large square Place, with good Buildings, has a Passage into White's-alley. Swan's-nest-court, a new Passage, up Steps, into Great Swan-alley; all well built, and inhabited. Blue-bart-court, an ordinary built Place, with a Free stone Pavement, has a Passage down Steps into Little Swan-alley.

White's-alley, very long, but narrow, comes out of Coleman-street, and falls into Pitcher's-court, and thence into Little Bell-alley. On the North Side, and about the Middle of the Alley, is a Place called Alms-house-yard, containing six Houses, for so many poor Men and their Wives; or the Survivors of them, belonging to the Company of Leathersellers. Pump-court, but small and ordinary. Carpenter's-yard, being only a large Timber-Yard. White-bind-court, a handsome Place, but narrow.

Great Swan-alley also goes out of Coleman-street, and with a turning Passage runs into Little Bell-alley, and, with another turning Passage, falls into Little Swan-alley, whose Houses are but few, but very pleasant, with Gardens to each. More Northward this Alley runs through a very narrow Entry, called Little Hell, into Cross-Keys-court, which is also ready to fall. Out of this Court is a Passage to London-wall. That Part of Swan-alley next to Coleman-street is wide enough for Carts, and has been greatly enlarged with new and handsome Buildings at the East End.

London-wall, being a Street so called, which in the whole is very long, beginning at Cripplegate, and running to Winchester-street, but is in several Wards. The Part in this Ward begins a little Eastward of Basinghall-street, and runs to the Gully-hole at Bethlehem Back-gate, almost facing Thompson's Rents. The Houses are on the South Side, which commonly are but old Timber Houses. Its greatest Ornament is Sion-College, and New Bethlehem, seated on London-wall in Moorfields.

In this Part of the Street are these Courts and Places: Star-court, a small Place. White-lion-court, indifferent good. Red-lion-court, likewise good, with a Free-stone Pavement. Black-swan alley, very ordinary.

The Part of this Ward without the City Walls, takes in all the lower Walks, or four Quarters of Moorfields; but none of the Houses on the East and North Side, except those which stand between Little Moorgate and the Meeting-House at the West End of New Broad-street. On the South Side is Bethlehem, or Bedlam, for the Lunatics, which is in this Ward; as likewise the Row of good Houses on the Pavement near the Road Westward, with Part of the Street called Fore-street, which runs to Cripplegate.

There are to watch near Moorgate, and at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and 32 Watchmen.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote-Inquest for this Ward are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of August.

This Ward has an Alderman, his Deputy, six Common-Council-Men, four Constables, four Scavengers, 13 Wardmote-Inquest-Men, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at 15 l. 16 s. 9 d.

The Alderman of this Ward is Robert Alsop; Esq; The Common-Council are Mr. Henry Pointer, Deputy, Mr. Richard Stratton, Mr. Roger Staples, Mr. Henry Whitridge, Mr. John Saffery, and Mr. Thomas Chaddocke.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are,

First, Three Parish-Churches: (1.) St. Stephen's Coleman-street. (2.) St. Margaret's Lotburi. (3.) St. Olave's Jewry.

Secondly, The Halls of different Companies.

(1.) Armors and Brasiers Hall, situated near the North-East Corner of Coleman-street, a handsome Brick Building, and neatly adorned within.

(2.) Founders-Hall, situate at the upper End of Founders-court, near to the West End of St. Margaret's Church; and remarkable for having a Scoich Kirk Meeting in it; there being but one more of the Kind in England.

Thirdly, Near to the paved Court on the South of St. Olave-Jewry's Church, and in the Old Jewry, is a very large capacious Brick Building, formerly inhabited by Sir John Frederick; but now serving for the General Excise-Office; erected in the Year 1643, and at present managed and executed by the following Commissioners and Officers under his Majesty.

Antiquities.

The Street called Lothbury, Lathbery or Loadbery, as it has been differently wrote, according to Stow, "took its Name from its being chiefly possessed by Founders, who cast Candlesticks, Chafing-dishes, Spice-mortars, and such like Copper or Laten Works, and do afterwards turn them with the Foot, and not with the Wheel, to make them smooth and bright; which Turning and Scratting making a loath-

"some Noise to the By-Passers, that have not been used to the like, the Place was therefore by them disdainfully called Lothbury." But it is more probable that its original Name was Latenbery, alluding to the Dealers or Workers in Tin or Laten dwelling there.

On the South Side of this Street, Westward, at the End of the Old Jewry, stood the first Synagogue of the Jews in England, which was defaced by the Citizens of London, after they had slain 700 Jews, and spoiled the Residue of their Goods, in the Year 1262, the 47th of Henry III.

The said Synagogue being so suppressed, the new Order of Friars, called, De Pœnitentia Jesu, or Fratres de Sacca, because they were apparelled in Sackcloth, and who had their House in London, near unto Aldersgate, without the Gate, had Licence of Henry III. in the 54th of his Reign, to remove from thence to any other Place; and in the 56th, he gave unto them this Jews Synagogue. After which Time, Eleanor the Queen, Wife to Edward I. took into her Protection, and warranted unto the Prior and Brethren De Pœnitentia Jesu Christi, of London, the said Land and Building in Colechurch-street, in the Parish of St. Olave in the Jewry, and St. Margaret in Lothbury; by her granted, with Consent of Stephen de Fulborn, Under-Warden of the Bridge-House, and other Brethren of that House, for threescore Marks of Silver, which they received of the said Prior and Brethren of Repentance, towards the Building of the said Bridge.

Q. Eleanor's Charter is as follows, as it now remains in the Records of the Chamber of London.

"Alianora, Dei Gra. &c. Alianor, by the Grace of God, Queen of England, Lady of Ireland, Dutches of Aquitain, and by our Lord King Henry; To al that shal se or hear this Writing, Greeting in the Lord. Know yee that we are bound and held, for us and our Heirs, to defend and warrant against al Men for ever to the Priors and Friars of the Repentance of Jesus Christ, abiding in London, al their Tenements, with al their Appurtenances, which the Prior and Friars have in the Street called Colcherchstrate, in the Parish of St. Olaves in the Jewry, and the Parish of St. Margaret de Lothbury, in the City of London; by the Grant and Confirmation which we have made to the said Prior and Brethren by this present Writing; with the Assent and Wil of Friar Steven de Fulburn, Under Custas of the Bridge-House, and the rest of the Friars of the said House, for sixty Marks of Silver, which we have received of the said Prior and Brethren of Repentance of Jesus Christ, towards the building of the said Bridge, and for the finding of one Chaplain, which the same Prior and Brethren perpetually find at their own Costs, celebrating Service for the Soul of Richard le Ken. Which Richard bequeathed and assigned al the foresaid Tenement, with al the Appurtenances, to the Brethren of the said House of the Bridge, for the Sustentation of one Chaplain to celebrate Service for his Soul for ever, at their Charges. In Witness whereof, &c."

This Order of Friars gathered many good Scholars, and multiplied in Number exceedingly, until the Council of Lyons; by the which it was decreed, decreed, that (from that Time forth) there should be no more Orders of Begging Friars permitted, but only the four Orders; to wit, the Dominicks, or Preachers; the Minorites, or Grey Friars; the Carmelites, or White Friars; and the Augustines: And so, from that Time, the Begging Friars decreased, and fell to nothing.

In the Year 1305, Robert Fitzwalter requested and obtained of the said King Edward I. that the same Friars of the Sacre might assign to the said Robert their Chapel, or Church, of old Time called The Synagogue of the Jews, near adjoining to the Mansion-Place of the same Robert, where now stands Grocers-hall. Robert Large, Mercer, Mayor, in the Year 1439, kept his Mayoralty in this House, and dwelled there until his dying Day.

Hugh Clopton, Mercer, Mayor, An. Dom. 1492, dwelt in this House, and kept his Mayoralty there: It was afterwards a Tavern, which had the Sign of the Wind-mill; but now is inhabited by a wealthy Merchant.

From the Parish-Church of St. Olave to the North End of the Old Jewry, and from thence West to the North End of Ironmonger-lane; and from the said Corner into Ironmonger-lane, almost to the Parish-Church of St. Martin, was (of old Time) one large Building of Stone, very antient, made in the Place of Jews Houses; but of what Antiquity, or by whom the same was built, or for what Use, is uncertain; more than that, King Henry VI. in the 16th of his Reign, gave the Office of being Porter or Keeper thereof to John Stent, for Term of his Life, by the Name of his Principal Palace in the Old Jewry. "This was" (in my Youth, saith Stow) called the Old Ward-robe: But, of latter Time, the outward Stone Wall hath been by little and little taken down, and divers fair Houses built thereupon, even "round about."

The Prince's Wardrobe.
King Richard III. committed the keeping of the Prince's Wardrobe, for so it was afterwards called, to his trusty Servant John Kendall, his Secretary, by his Patent, dated Decemb. 12, 1483, and left him to dwell in the same.

In Edward VI.'s Reign it was alienated from the Crown, being called a great Messuage, under the Name of the Prince's Wardrobe; to which belonged divers Houses, Edifices, Gardens, &c. being sold to Sir Anthony Cope, a Privy-Counsellor in 3 Edward VI. for 60*l.* And, in Consideration of Services, the yearly Value being reckoned at 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

Water-Conduit.
By the West End of St. Margaret's Church in Lothbury was a handsome Water-Conduit, built at the Charge of the City, in the Year 1546, Sir Martin Bowes being Mayor: Two Fifteenths were levied of the Citizens towards the Charges thereof. This Water was conveyed in great Abundance from divers Springs lying between Hoxton and Islington.

At the South-West Corner of Basinghall-street, in Coleman-street Ward, was antiently an old Building of Stone, belonging some Time to a certain Jew, named Manfere, the Son of Aaron, the Son of Coke the Jew, in the 7th of Edward I. afterwards to Rabere de Sopars-lane; then to Simon Francis. Thomas Bradbury, Mercer, kept his Mayoralty there, who died An. Dom. 1509.

C H A P. XVIII.

Of CORDWAINERS-STREET

WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. • Modern State.
Aldermen and Common-Council. Parishes and Churches. Roman Causeway.

Cordwainer's-street Ward takes its Name from Its Name.
the Occupation of its principal Inhabitants, who were Cordwainers, or Shoemakers, Curriers and other Workers of Leather.

It is bounded on the East by Wallbrook Ward; on the North by Cheapside Ward; on the South by Vintry Ward; on the West by Bread-street Ward. Bounds.

This Ward begins in the East, on the West Side of Wallbrook, and runs West towards Budge-row (a Street so called from the Budge Furr, and Skinners dwelling there;) then up by St. Antholin's Church, through Aetheling, or Noble-street, as Leyland terms it, commonly called Watling-street, to Red-lyon-court, where once stood a great Lion of Timber, at a Gate entering to a large Court, wherein were divers handsome and large Shops, well furnished with Broad Cloths, and other Draperies of all Sorts to be sold: This is the farthest West Part of this Ward. Extent.

On the South Side of this Street, from Budge-row, lieth a Lane turning down by which the West Gate of the Tower Royal stood, and to the South End of the Stone Wall beyond the said Gate; which is of this Ward, and is accounted a Part of the Royal-street.

Against this West Gate of the Tower Royal was another Lane, that runs West to Cordwainers-street; and this is called Turnbase-lane, on the South Side whereof was a Piece of Wringwren-lane, to the North-West Corner of St. Thomas the Apostle's. Then again out of the High-street, called Watling, is another Street which runs cross the same; and this is Cordwainers-street; whereof the whole Ward takes its Name.

This Street begins by Westcheap; and St. Mary-le-Bow Church is the Head thereof on the West Side; and it runs down South through that Part, which of latter Time was called Hosier-lane, now Bow-lane; and then by the West End of Aldermary Church, to the new-built Houses in place of Ormond-house, and so to Garlick-hill or bithe to St. James's Church.

The upper Part of this Street towards Cheap was called Hosier-lane, from Hosiers dwelling there, in the Place of Shoemakers: But now those Hosiers being worn out by Men of other Trades, (as the Hosiers had worn out the Shoemakers) the same is called Bow-lane, from Bow Church.

On the West Side of Cordwainers-street, is Basing-lane, right over-against Turnbase-lane. This Basing-lane, West, to the back Gate of the Red-lion lion in Watling-street, is of this Cordwainers-street Ward.

Again, on the North Side of the high Street, in Budge-row, by the East End of St. Anthony's Church, is St. Sithe's-lane, so called from St. Sithe's Church, (which stood against the North End of that Lane) and this Place is wholly of Cordwainers-street Ward: And also the South Side of Needler's-lane, which reacheth from the North End of St. Sithe's-lane, West to Soper's-lane. Somewhat West from St. Anthony's Church is the South End of Soper's-lane, which took that Name, not from making Soap there, as some have supposed, but from one Alleyne le Soper, in the 9th of Edward II. For there was no Soap made in this City, till one John Lambe, dwelling in the Grass-street, set up a Boiling-House about 280 Years ago. For this City, in former Times, was served with White Soap in hard Cakes, called Castile Soap, and other, from beyond Sea; and with Grey Soap, speckled with White, from Bristol; sold here for a Penny a Pound, and never above a Penny Farthing, and Black Soap for an Halfpenny the Pound.

In this Soper's-lane the Pepperers antiently dwelt, wealthy Tradersmen, who dealt in Spices and Drugs.

Modern
State.

The Modern State of this Ward is thus described.

The principal Streets and Lanes in it, are Bow-lane, new Queen-street, Budge-row, Little St. Thomas Apostle's, Pancras-lane, with a small Part of Watling-street, and Basing-lane.

Watling-
street.

Watling-street hath its greatest Part in Bread-street Ward; what lies in this Ward begins on the East Side of Red-lion-court, and so goeth to Budge-row. This Court is square and large, well built and inhabited; having a Passage into Basing-lane. Cross-keys-court, a handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. St. Mary Aldermary Church-yard, a large Place, with an open Passage for Coach or Cart into Bow-lane; being a Place very well inhabited by Merchants, and Persons of good Repute. In this Church-yard, at the End towards Bow-lane, is seated St. Mary Aldermary Church.

Basing-lane hath but a small Part in this Ward.

Bow-lane.

Bow-lane begins at Trinity-lane, and falls into Cheapside, by St. Mary-le-Bow Church. The Part of this Lane, in this Ward, begins about 50 Feet from Cheapside, on both Sides the Way; and 60 Feet beyond Basing-lane; and then, on the West Side, only to Trinity-lane. This was antiently called Cordwainers-street, being well inhabited and built. In this Lane are these Courts and Places of Name, viz. Half-moon-court, by some called Lugg-yard, a Place something open, but ordinary; it is likewise, by some, called Whalebone-court, from one that there used to boil Whalebone. Taylor's-court, a handsome open Place. Robin-hood-court, indifferent long, and well built. New-court, a handsome genteel Place, with a Door next the Street, to shut up at Night. Goose-alley, but ordinary; at the upper End of which is Twelve-bell-court, which is but small and narrow. It hath a Passage thro' Compter's-alley into Bow Church-yard, both Places of small Account. George-alley, or Yard, but narrow, hath a Passage into New Queen-street, through Weld-court. Rose-court but mean and ordinary.

New Queen-street, built in the Place where Soper's-lane was, and now made an open Street, (before the great Fire very narrow) with very good Houses, well inhabited; it fronts King-street, which is opposite to Guildhall, and in a strait Line runneth down to the Thames, at the Three Cranes; but the Part of this Street, in this Ward, goeth no farther than St. Thomas Apostle's. In this Street is Weld-court, a handsome square Place, with well built and inhabited Houses: This Court hath a Passage into George-yard, which falls into Bow-lane.

Queen-
street.

Pancras-lane comes out of New Queen-street, and falls into Bucklersbury; the South Side is in this Ward, and the North in Cheap Ward. This Lane is but ordinarily built and inhabited, except one large House, the Dwelling of a Merchant, on the South Side; and on the North, before the Fire of London, stood two Churches, viz. St. Pancras's Soper-lane, and St. Bennet's Sherehog. Adjoining to St. Pancras's Church is a small Court, but no fixed Name is given to it.

Pancras-
lane.

St. Sithe's-lane comes out of Pancras-lane, and falls into Budge-row, by St. Anthony's Church, a Lane well built, and inhabited by Merchants.

Sithe lane.

Budge-row takes its Rise from Watling-street, and runs Eastward to Canon-street; from which it is severed by Wallbrook on the North, and Dowgate on the South. The Houses are good, and taken up by good Tradersmen, being so great a Thoroughfare. In this Street is Dodson's-court, a large Place, well built and inhabited, and hath a Passage into Cloak-lane: On the South Side, is a Passage into Tower-royal-street.

Budge-
row.

Tower-royal-street, but short, comes out of Budge-row, and falls into St. Thomas Apostle's. In this Street is a handsome small Court, which bears the Name of that Street: Straw-berry-court but small. For what more relates to this Street, see in Vintry Ward.

Tower-
royal.

St. Thomas Apostle's, the Fore Street, or Great St. Thomas Apostle's; so called, to distinguish it from little St. Thomas Apostle's, or the Backside of St. Thomas Apostle's; and both Streets run Westwards, crossing New Queen-street, and falling into Bow-lane. But the Street of Great St. Thomas Apostle's is in Vintry Ward.

St. Thomas Apostle's.

In little St. Thomas are these Courts: Cross-keys-court, which is but small: Key-court, also small and ordinary: Eagle-court, pretty open, and indifferent well built and inhabited, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Little St.

Apostle's.

There are placed at the several Stands in this Ward, that watch every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and twenty-four Watchmen.

The Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote-Inquest, for this Ward, are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of December.

The Jury.

This Ward hath an Alderman, and nine Common - Council - Men; Constables eight, Scavengers eight, Wardmote - Inquest - Men fourteen, and a Beadle. It stands taxed to the Fifteenth in London at 52 l. 16 s. in the Exchequer at 52 l. 6 s.

The Government.

The Alderman of this Ward is William Alexander, Esq; The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. William Reynolds, Deputy, Mr. George Hayter, Mr. John Lewis Paulhan, Mr. William Blunt, Mr. George Hooker, Mr. Josiah Colebrock, Mr. Richard Lodge, and Mr. Richard Blunt.

Remarkable Things, Parishes and Churches.

The remarkable Things in this Ward are three Parish-Churches: (1) St. Anthony's, commonly called St. Anibolin's, or Anilin's; (2) St. Mary Aldermay's; and (3) St. Mary-le-Bow: Of which more particularly in our Parochial History.

Roman Causeway, &c. discovered.

Here we may properly add Sir Christopher Wren's Observations on the Roman Causeway discovered by him at the rebuilding of the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow:

Parentalia p. 265.

"The parochial Church of St. Mary-le-Bow, in Cheapside, required to be rebuilt after the great Fire: The Building had been mean and low, with one Corner taken out for a Tower; but, upon restoring, that the new Church could be rendered square. Upon opening the Ground, a Foundation was discerned firm enough for the new intended Fabrick, which (on further Inspection, after digging down sufficiently, and removing what Earth or Rubbish lay in the Way) appeared to be the Walls, with the Windows also, and the Pavement of a Temple or Church, of Roman Workmanship, intirely buried under the Level of the present Street. Hereupon, he determined to erect his new Church over the old; and in order to the necessary Regularity and Square of the new Design, restored the Corner; but then another Place was to be found for the Steeple: The Church stood about 40 Feet backwards from the high Street, and by purchasing the Ground of one private House not yet rebuilt, he was enabled to bring the Steeple forward so as to range with the Street-houses in Cheapside. Here, to his Surprise, he sunk about 18 Feet deep through made Ground, and then imagined he was come to the natural Soil, and hard Gravel; but upon full Examination, it appeared to be a Roman Causeway of rough Stone, close and well rammed, with Roman Brick and Rubbish at the Bottom, for a Foundation, and all firmly cemented. This Causeway was four Feet thick [the Thickness of the via Appia; according as Monf. Montfaucon measured, it was about three Parisian Feet, or three Feet two Inches and a half English.] Underneath this Causeway lay the natural Clay, over which that Part of the City stands, and which descends at least forty Feet lower. He concluded then to lay the Foundation of the Tower upon the very Roman Causeway, as most proper to bear what he had designed, a weighty and lofty Structure.

"He was of Opinion, for divers Reasons, that this High-way ran along the North Boundary of the Colony. The Breadth then North and South, was from the Causeway, now Cheapside, to the River Thames; the Extent East and West, from Tower-hill to Ludgate; and the principal middle Street, or Pretorian Way, was Watling-street.

"The Colony was walled next the Thames, No. 76.

"and had a Gate there, called Dow-gate, but antiently Dour-gate, which signified the Watergate.

"On the North Side, beyond the Causeway, was a great Fen, or Morass, in those Times; which the Surveyor discovered more particularly when he had Occasion to build a new East Front to the parochial Church of St. Laurence near Guildhall; for the Foundation of which, after sinking seven Feet, he was obliged to pile twelve Feet deeper; and if there was no Causeway over the Bog, there could be no Reason for a Gate that Way.

CHAP. XIX.

Of CORNHILL WARD.

With a PLAN neatly engraved from a New Survey.

The Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State. Aldermen and Common-Councilmen. Churches and Parishes. Royal-Exchange. Royal-Exchange Assurance-Office. Great Fire in Cornhill, 1747. King John's Court. Tun and Conduit, and the Standard.

THIS Ward also takes its Name from the principal Street therein, which was called Cornhill, from the Corn-market kept there in antient Times; and is bounded on the East by Bishopsgate Ward; on the North by Broad-street Ward; on the West by Cheap Ward; and on the South by Langborn Ward. But it is of a very small Extent; for beginning, on the North-East, at the South-East Corner of St. Martin Outwich's Church, it runs, in several Windings South-West, to the West Extent of Cornhill. Then beginning again on the North at about 50 Feet from the South-West Corner of Bishopsgate-street, it runs South to St. Peter's-alley in Gracechurch-street, and from thence by divers Windings to the South-West Corner of Cornhill-street.

This Ward contains only one principal Street, Cornhill, which is entirely in it on both Sides. It was formerly chiefly occupied by Linen-drappers: But at present is divided amongst substantial Dealers in almost every Branch of Trade, viz. Linen-drappers, Woollen-drappers, Haberdashers, Milliners, Hardwaremen, Clock-makers, Book-sellers, Toymen, and many genteel Taverns and Coffee-houses, for the Entertainment of such whose Business calls them to the Royal-Exchange, which Building, with two handsome Churches, is a great Ornament to this Street. On the North Side of this Street are several large Courts, as Star-court, Weigh-house-yard, Newman's-yard, Freeman's-court, well built, and chiefly inhabited by Merchants or substantial Tradesmen. Part of Finke or Finch-lane, as far as Spread-eagle-court, or about 113 Feet on both Sides from Cornhill: The other Part is in Broad-street Ward. Part of Sweeting's-alley, as far as the East Entrance into the Royal-Exchange; and one Third of the South End of Castle-alley; which two last-mentioned are chiefly occupied by Watch-makers, Notaries Publick, Stationers and Coffee-houses. About 60 Feet more to the West, where once the Globe, after-afterwards the Cross-Keys Tavern stood, is the principal Warehouse for Bow China; of which Manufacture more particularly in its proper Place. On the South Side is St. Peter's-alley, well built and inhabited, and hath a Passage with a Free-stone Pavement round St. Peter's Church-yard into Gracechurch-street. St. Michael's-alley, inhabited by Tradesmen and Publicans. This Alley has a Passage to the South through the George and Vulture Tavern into George-yard, Lombard-street; to the East through a narrow Passage into Bell-yard, Gracechurch-street; and to the West thro' Castle-alley into Birchin-lane.

Birchin-lane.

More to the West is Burchover-lane, so called from the first Builder and Owner, but now called Birchin-lane, of which an hundred and seventy Feet on both Sides of the Way from Cornhill is in this Ward. It was formerly noted for Salesmen, or Dealers in Mens Apparel, for Coffee-houses, and Eating-houses; but it has changed its Inhabitants in Part for Merchants, Woollen-Drapers, Publick Notaries, and Brokers for transacting Business in the mercantile Way.

'Change-alley.

As for Exchange-alley and Pope's-head-alley, further to the South-West in Cornhill, only their Entrances and front Houses are in this Ward: The former is very well built, with a Free-stone Pavement, and three Passages, two into Lombard-street, and one into Birchin-lane; and is known all over the mercantile World on account of the Business transacted there in Money Affairs, this being the grand Market for buying and selling Stocks, Lottery-Tickets, &c. so that the Houses, Jonathan's, Garraway's, &c. on this Site are contrived for the Reception and Entertainment of Merchants, Brokers, and others, who assemble here daily in great Numbers from all Parts, not only of these Kingdoms, but from distant Nations, in Pursuit of Riches. The latter, which takes its Name from a Tavern situate therein, whose Sign is the Pope's Head, is very narrow, but well inhabited by Brokers, Book-sellers, and such whose Business requires their Attendance near the Exchange.

Watch.

This Ward maintains a Watch every Night of sixteen common Men, under a Beadle and Constable.

Jury.

The Jury returned by the Wardmote-Inquest for this Ward are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of January.

Government.

It is governed by an Alderman and six Common-Councilmen, including the Deputy; to which are added four Constables, four Scavengers, sixteen Wardmote-Inquest-men, and one Beadle.

Alderman and Common-Councilmen.

The present Alderman is Francis Cokayne, Esq; who is past the Chair; and the Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Francis Ellis, Deputy, Mr. William Meadows, Mr. John Young, Mr. James Walton, Mr. Thomas Cogan, and Mr. George Sherwin.

Remarkable Things.

The most remarkable Things in the Ward of Cornhill are two Parish-Churches; 1. St. Michael's, and, 2. St. Peter's; of which more particularly in our Parochial History.

Royal-Exchange.

The greatest Ornament of this Ward, and one of the principal Buildings in the City, is the Royal-Exchange, erected in the Year 1566, after this Order, viz. Certain Houses upon Cornhill, and the like upon the Back thereof, in the Ward of Broad-street, with three Alleys; the first called Swan-alley, opening into Cornhill; the second New-alley, passing through out of Cornhill into Broad-street Ward, over-against St. Bartholomew-lane; the third St. Christopher's-alley, opening into Broad-street Ward, and into St. Christopher's Parish; containing in all fourscore Houses; were first purchased by the Citizens of London, as the Mayor and Aldermen, in an Answer set forth to the Lady Gresham's Supplication, say, at four thousand Pounds and upwards. All these Houses were sold for four hundred and seventy-eight Pounds, to such as would take them down and carry them thence. Also the Ground or Plat was made plain at the Charge of the City, and then Possession thereof was by certain Aldermen, in the Name of the whole Citizens, given to Sir Thomas Gresham, Knt. Agent to Queen Elizabeth, thereupon to build a Burse, or Place for Merchants to assemble in, at his own Charges: And he, on the seventh of June, laying the first Stone of the Foundation, being Brick, accompanied with some Aldermen, every of them laid a Piece of Gold, which the Workmen took up, and forthwith followed upon the same with such Diligence, that by the Month of November, in the Year 1567, the same was covered with Slate, and shortly after finished.

In the Year 1570, on the twenty-third of January, the Queen's Majesty, attended with her Nobility, came from her House at the Strand, called Somerset-house, and entered the City by Temple-bar, through Fleet-street, Cheapside, and so by the North Side of the Burse, through Tbreadneedle-street, to Sir Thomas Gresham's in Bishopsgate-street, where she dined. After Dinner her Majesty returning through Cornhill, entered the Burse on the South Side; and, after she had viewed every Part thereof above Ground, especially the Pawne, which was richly furnished with all Sorts of the finest Wares in the City, she caused the same Burse, by an Herald and a Trumpet, to be proclaimed The Royal Exchange, and to be so called from thenceforth, and by no other Name.

The Rents of the Shops here brought in considerable Gains to Sir Thomas Gresham the Builder. And, about five or six Years after, the Shops being all furnished with Wares, Gresham constrained all the Shopkeepers that had Shops above to take Shops below, where was an equal Number; but these were in the lowest Vaults of the Exchange. At this Time each Person paid four Marks a Year for every Shop above, and he would have as much for every Shop below, or else they should not have one above: But, after they had kept Shop below a little while, what with the Damp of the Vault, the Darknes of the Place, and the Unwillingness of Customers to buy their Wares there, they were so wearied, that they agreed among themselves to give four Pounds a Year for a Shop above, that they might be freed from keeping Shop below, and so Sir Thomas should turn the Vaults to what other Use he would, either for Merchants Goods, or otherwise: Which Offer he accepted; and so the Tenants only furnished the Shops above, as they remain to this Day.

Day. And the Vaults have been used now a long Time for stowing of Merchandize, and chiefly Pepper.

Sir Thomas was originally put upon this grand Design by his Correspondent at Antwerp, in 1561, but did not think proper to carry it into Execution till he could obtain a Contribution from some wealthy Citizens to assist in so expensive a Work, which he did at last; the Citizens having purchased the Fee Simple of the Ground and Houses, by certain Trustees, conveyed it over to him to build the said Burse upon; and in the Conveyance he was to make a Re-assurance again to them, upon certain Conditions: But he dying before this was done, in the Year 1592, Lady Gresham, his Widow, contended with the Mayor and Trustees for the Exchange; endeavouring to get an Act of Parliament to empower her and her Heirs to make Leases from Time to Time of twenty-one Years, or three Lives, of the Shops in the Exchange, keeping the Fines to herself; which was supposed to be against the last Will of Sir Thomas, and contrary to an Act of Parliament made in the twenty-third Year of the Queen. She also complained that the City did not, or would not, employ the Profits of the Exchange according to Sir Thomas's Will. This she exhibited by Way of Supplication to the Council, against the Lord-Mayor and his Brethren the Aldermen.

To which they subjoined this Answer: "That whereas the Lady Gresham had desired to have an Act of Parliament to authorize her and her Heirs, from Time to Time, to make Leases of twenty-one Years, or three Lives, of the Shops in the Royal-Exchange, keeping the Fines thereof to herself, and reserving as many Rents as are now reserved to remain to the City of London: It is thereunto answered, That the same her Demand is utterly against both the last Will and Testament of Sir Thomas Gresham, her late Husband, as also expressly against an Act of Parliament made in the twenty-third Year of her Majesty's Reign; unto which Act the said Lady Gresham was privy, and her Counsel was heard what they could say, before the said Act passed: And they say also, the same Request of the Lady Gresham is against all Reason and Equity; for that the Citizens of the City of London purchased in Fee Simple, in the Name of Livers Feoffees, the Soil whereupon the Royal-Exchange is built, and paid for the same above four thousand Pounds; and, in the eighth Year of her Majesty's Reign, conveyed the same to Sir Thomas Gresham, upon Condition to have Re-assurance made according to certain Covenants, which was not done: And albeit the Citizens might lawfully have entered for Breach of the said Condition, and presently taken the Rents and Profits of the whole; yet they have contented themselves to accept of the same according to the last Will and Act of Parliament, and have suffered the said Lady Gresham to take the whole Profits: And yet they have been at great Charges in the defending of Titles made to some Part of the same, and in paying of Quit-Rents, Tithes, and Widows Dowers; which they continue to this Day.

"Touching the Employment of the Profits of the Exchange, according to the Purport of the Testament of Sir Thomas Gresham, it is thereunto answered; That it meant, and so it shall be performed, that the same, after the Death of the Lady Gresham, shall be employed justly and truly, according to the Trust and Confidence in them reposed; which, if they should break, there are Courts of Equity that can take Order for Remedy thereof. But forasmuch as the said Lady Gresham is to have the same during her Life, and the Employments are not to be made till after her Death, therefore this Complaint is now made before any Injury be offered: And as it is now causeless; so the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen do assuredly persuade themselves, there shall not at any Time be any Cause given, of their Parts, to complain against them: Wherefore their most humble Suit is, that the said Exchange may be by them enjoyed, according to the said Will and Act of Parliament."

This Lady Gresham died Anno 1596. The Rents of the Royal-Exchange, which she enjoyed during her Life, with all Houses, Buildings, Vaults, and Profits thereof, amounted to the yearly Value of seven hundred and fifty-one Pounds five Shillings per Ann. over all Charges and Reprizes.

This Royal-Exchange was burnt down in the great Fire, but rose again with more Splendor than before.

Its Ground Plat is a Parallelogram, whose Length is two hundred and three Feet, Breadth one hundred and seventy-one Feet, Area one hundred and twenty-seven Perch, Altitude of the Building fifty-six Feet, and of the lofty Tower and Turret, or Lanthorn, (whereon is the Figure of a Grasshopper, curiously done in polished Brass) one hundred and seventy-eight Feet, Length within one hundred and forty-four Feet, Breadth one hundred and seventeen Feet, Area sixty-one square Perches.

This stately Fabrick was erected at the Charge of the City and Company of Mercers, and cost eighty thousand Pounds between them. The Model was first shewn to King Charles II. who liked it well: But it was debated, whether they should build after this Model or not, for Fear of launching into too great an Expence; several therefore were against it, but the Majority prevailed, having their Eye to the Honour of the City, and supposing the Shops above and below Stairs would in Time reimburse them, which it appears now (too late) it will not.

There are Committees for this Exchange, and that other publick Building called Gresham-College, who manage the Rents and Payments thereof. These Committees consist of the Lord-Mayor for the Time being, and two Aldermen, and a certain Number of the Company of Mercers, and the like of Citizens, commonly one of each of the other eleven Companies.

This curious Structure is thus built and adorned: The Walls are Portland Stone, Rustick Work, very strong and neat. Round the four Sides above Stairs are Shops, about two hundred in Number, which have been lett from twenty Pounds Pounds to sixty Pounds each, but are now the greatest Part converted to other Uses, or left unoccupied. There are Rails and Ballasters on the Roof, which is covered with Lead. The afore-said Shops are elevated on twenty-eight Columns, or Pillars, with Arches, whereby are constituted Ambulatories within the Exchange, for the Merchants to keep themselves from Rain and other offensive Weather; above which Arches is an Entablature and curious Enrichments, and on the Cornice another Range of Pilasters, with Entablature extending round the Inside, and a curious Compass Pediment in the Middle of the Cornice of each of the four Sides. Under the Pediment on the North Side are the King's Arms; on the South, those of the City; and, on the East, the Arms of Sir Thomas Gresham; and under the Pediment on the West Side, the Arms of the Company of Mercers, with their respective Enrichments. The Intercolumns of the upper Range are twenty-four Niches, nineteen of which are filled with the Statues of the Kings and Queens Regents of England, standing erect, with their Robes and Regalia, except that of King Charles II. and King George II. which are habited like the Cæsars.

On the South Side are seven Niches, of which four are filled, viz.

I. The most easterly Figure, which has this Inscription in Gold Letters, Edwardus Primus, Rex, Anno Dom. 1272. II. Westward, Edwardus III. Rex, Anno Dom. 1326. III. Henricus V. Rex, Anno Dom. 1412. IV. Henricus VI. Rex, Anno Dom. 1422.

On the West Side five Niches, four of which are filled, viz.

I. Under the most Southerly Figure is subscribed in Gold Letters, Edwardus IV. Rex, Anno Domini 1460. II. Northward (the Crown pendant over his Head) Edwardus V. Rex, Anno Domini 1483. III. Henricus VII. Rex, Anno Domini 1487. IV. Henricus VIII. Rex, Anno Domini 1508.

On the North Side seven Niches are filled, viz.

I. The most Westerly, subscribed in Gold Characters, Edwardus VI. Rex, Anno Domini 1547. II. Maria, Regina, Anno Domini 1553. III. Elizabetha, Regina, Anno Domini 1558. IV. Is subscribed Serenissim. & Potentissim. Princip. Jacobo Primo, Mag. Brit. Fran. & Hibern. Reg. Fid. Defensori, Societas Pannitorum posuit, A. D. 1684. V. EIKON BASILIKH, Serenissimi & Religiosissimi Principis Caroli Primi, Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ Regis, Fidei Defensoris, bis Martyris (in Corpore & Effigie) Impiis Rebellium Manibus, ex hoc loco deturbata & confracta, Anno Dom. 1647. Restituta & hic demum collocata, Anno Dom. 1683.

Gloria Martyrii qui te fregere Rebelles

VI. Carolus secundus, Rex, Anno Domini 1648.

VII. Jacobus II. Rex, Anno Dom. 1685.

On the East Side five Niches, one of which is vacant, the other filled, viz.

I. The most Northerly contains two Statues, viz. of King William and Queen Mary, subscribed Gulielmus III. Rex, & Maria II. Regina, A. D. 1688.

S. P. Q. Londin. Optim. Principibus, P. C. 1695.

II. Anna, Regina, Dei Gratia, Mag. Britan. Franciæ, & Hiberniæ, 1701. III. George I. inscribed Georgius, D. G. Magnæ Britan. Franciæ, & Hiberniæ Rex, Anno Dom. 1714, S. P. Q. L. IV. Southerly, the Statue of King George II. in the Habiliments of a Cæsar, wreathed upon the Head, and a Battoon or Truncheon in his Hand, little differing from that of Charles II. in the Center of the Area, only in looking Northward, inscribed Georgius II. D. G. Mag. Brit. Fra. & Hib. Rex, Anno Dom. 1727, S. P. Q. L.

All these Figures were new painted and gilded this last Summer (1754) by voluntary Subscription.

Besides the Niches wherein the Effigies of the aforementioned Kings are placed, the four that are vacant are the Places where Edward II. Richard II. Henry IV. and Richard III. should have been; but it seems the City had no Mind to shew any Respect to the said Kings, two of whom took away their Charter, and the other two were Usurpers. One Thing more is to be added concerning the Statue of King Charles I. which, after the King had lost his Head, the Zealots of those Times, to shew their Rage and Malice, threw down and broke to Pieces, causing to be writ under the Place where it stood, Exit Tyrannorum Ultimus, &c. The present Statue of that unfortunate Prince was set up by the Grocers, to vindicate his Memory.

This Figure of King Charles I. is represented holding his Sceptre not upright, but stretching towards the People.

The Statue of Sir John Barnard, Knt. and Alderman, the present Father of the City, and one of its Representatives in Parliament, in Acknowledgment of his eminent Services done his Country, and this Metropolis in particular, in the House of Commons.

In the Walls of the four Sides under the Piazzas within the Exchange are twenty-eight several Niches round the Building, all vacant, except one near the North-West Angle, where is the Effigy of Sir Thomas Gresham, and another in the South-West of Sir John Barnard, as above; and the like is also (with Fret-work Cieling) above, where the Shops are, to which you ascend by two spacious Stair-Cases, having black Marble Steps; one on the North, the other on the South Side.

The Area under the said Piazza is a Pavement of white and black Marble, but that of the rest with fine Pebble, in the Center whereof is erected on a Marble Pedestal, about eight Feet high, the Statue of King Charles II. in Roman Habit; he is lively represented, by the ingenious Hand of Mr. Gibbon, with a Battoon in his Hand, looking Southward. On this Side of the Pedestal, under an Imperial Crown, Wings, Trumpets of Fame, Sceptre, and Sword, Palm Branches, &c. these Words are inscribed:

Carolo II. Cæsari Britannico,
Patriæ Patri,
Regum Optimo, Clementissimo, Augustissimo,
Generis Humani deliciis,
Utriusq; Fortunæ Victori,
Pacis Europæ Arbitro,
Mariæ Domino ac Vindici,
Societas Mercatorum Adventur. Angliæ,

Quæ per CCCC jam prope Annos
Regia benignitate floret,
Fidei Intemeratæ & Gratitude æternæ
Hoc Testimonium
Venerabunda posuit,
Anno Salutis Humanæ M.DC.LXXXIV.

On the West Side of the Pedestal is neatly cut, in Relievo, the Figure of a Cupid reposing his right Hand on a Shield, containing the Arms of France and England quartered, and in his left Hand a Rose.

On the North Side are the Arms of Ireland on a Shield, supported by a Cupid.

On the Base of the Pedestal, in the South Side, is this Inscription :

This Statue was repaired and beautified by the Company of Merchant-Adventurers of England, Anno 1730; John Hanbury, Esq; Governor.

On the East Side the Arms of Scotland, with a Cupid holding a Thistle, curiously done (as the rest) all in Relievo.

And, for the more easy expediting their Affairs, the Merchants dealing in the same Commodities have, by Custom, fixed on these different Parts of the Exchange to meet one another, called their Walks, which may be seen at one View by the following Sketch or Plan:

The Outside of the Exchange described.

There are ten strong Pillars on the South Front, which support the South Side of the Shops on that Side of the Exchange, and as many on the North Side for the like Use there, by which there are two large Piazzas, one on the North, the other on the South Side; which South Front is adorned with Demi-Columns and Pilasters of the Composite Order, and the Portico there with four spacious Columns, Entablature, and two Compass Pediments of the Corinthian Order, whose Intercolumns are two Niches, replenished with the Figures of King Charles I. and his Son Charles II. boldly carved, and over the Aperture on the Cornice between the Pediments are the King's Arms.

The North Side of this Exchange is adorned with Pilasters, Entablature of a triangular Pediment of the said Composite Order, and with Columns of that Order, and an Acroteria. The lower Part of the Tower is adorned, the middle Part with more Columns, Entablament, and Acroteria; and the upper Part, or Lanthorn, with Columns of the Ionick Order, with Architrave, Frize, Cornice, and four triangular Pediments, fronting East, West, North, and South; and the said two Acroterias, as also that of the Roof of the Exchange, are adorned with Dragons and Demi-Virgins, the Supporters of the City Arms, and the Arms of the Mercers Company: And there are four Clock-Dials, fronting likewise the four Cardinal Points; and in this Tower are twelve tuneable Bells, which chime at Nine, Twelve, Three, and Six, daily.

No. 76.

The following Inscription was set upon the Exchange after it was rebuilt:

Hoc Greshamii Peristylum, Gentium Commerciis Sacrum, Flammiis extinctum 1666, augustius e Cinere resurrexit 1669, Will. Turnero, Milite, Prætor.

Notwithstanding the great Encomiums which have been bestowed on this Structure by our own Nation and Foreigners, a late Author, in the New Critical Review of the publick Buildings in and about London, takes the Freedom to inform us, that "here, as in most costly Fabricks, there is something to blame, and something to admire: A Building of that Extent, Grandeur, and Elevation, ought, without Question, to have had an ample Area before it, that we might comprehend the Whole, and every Part at once. This is a Requisite which ought to be allowed to all

10 T

Buildings,

New Critical Review, P. 7, 8.

Buildings, but particularly all of this Sort; that is to say, such as are formed of very large Parts; for in such a Case the Eye is forced to travel with Pain and Difficulty from one Object to another, nay, sometimes obliged to divide one into many Parts; whereby the Judgment is confused, and 'tis with great Uncertainty we come to any Conclusion at all. Upon the whole, the Entrance into this Building is very grand and august; the two Statues which adorn it are, in a particular Manner, beautiful and admirable: But then the Tower which rises over it is a Weight to the whole Building, and is at the same Time broken into so many Parts, that it rather hurts than pleases, and, if reduced to one Half of its present Height, would harmonize abundantly better with the Whole. The Inside is light and airy, laid out in a very good Stile, and finished with great Propriety of Decoration: I could wish though that either the Statues were executed in a better Manner, or that the City would condescend to excuse the setting up any more; for nothing can be more ridiculous than to hurt the Eye with a Fault in the Affectation of a Beauty."

The Outside of this grand Fabrick is surrounded with Shops of various Sorts, Booksellers, Stationers, Watchmakers, Cutlers, Hofiers, Hatters, Toyemen, and Officers of several Sorts in the Ship and Mercantile Way. See Page 256, &c.

This Corporation, and that of the London-Assurance, was established by Act of Parliament made in the sixth of King George I. whereby it was enacted, That such as should be admitted as Members into the said Corporations, should be each a distinct and separate Body Politick for thirty-one Years, for the Assurance of Ships, Goods, and Merchandizes at Sea, or for lending Money upon Bottomry.

And that each of the said Corporations, in Consideration of the many Benefits which might accrue to them by their Charters, should pay into his Majesty's Exchequer the Sum of three hundred thousand Pounds, for discharging the Debts of the Civil Lists.

And that no other Society should insure Ships, or lend Money on Bottomry, for the future; but any private Person might insure Ships, &c. as before. These Corporations however met with so little Encouragement, that the Crown was obliged to remit most Part of the Money they were to advance.

In the Year 1747, on the twenty-fifth of March, about One o'Clock in the Morning, a Fire broke out in the Shop of Mr. Eldridge, a Barber, or in an Herb-Stall or Shed close adjoining to it, behind the Swan, now the King's-Arms Tavern, which spread with such Rapidity, that Mr. Eldridge, his Wife, Sister, and Children, were burnt in their Beds; and all the Houses, with most of their Furniture, &c. from the North Entrance into Change-alley to St. Michael's Church on the North, and from the North-West Corner of the said Alley to the Church-yard of St. Edmund the King in Lombard-street on the South-East, from the said Church-yard to the South-East Corner of Change-alley, leaving the front Houses in Lombard-street, and about four on each Side of the South End of Birchin-lane, and from the South-East End of Change-alley into Cornhill; within which Tract were consumed, before Ten o'Clock in the Morning, one hundred Houses, besides several more damaged.

The Distress which was hereby brought upon the Sufferers on this Occasion was so great, few of them being able to save their Goods, and many not insured, little dreading such a Misfortune in a Neighbourhood so well watched and provided with every Necessary in such Accidents to defend them against Fires, that the Benevolent consulted immediately for their Relief, and raised a Subscription of five thousand seven hundred and seventy-four Pounds nineteen Shillings and four Pence; which was, after several Meetings, accounted for by a Committee appointed by the Contributors for enquiring into the Circumstances of the Sufferers, and to distribute the same in an equitable Manner, as follows:

Received	5774	19	4
Paid to Sufferers	5718	12	8
For Advertisements	37	9	6
To George Strahan	13	12	2
To the Porter of the Committee	5	5	0
Total	5774	19	4

This, no doubt, was a very great Misfortune to the Individuals who were in it, but the spacious and commodious Buildings raised upon the Ruins prove a great Advantage to the Publick, and an Ornament to the City.

The Pope's-head Tavern, with other Houses adjoining, strongly built of Stone, were formerly in one, belonging to some Person of great State, or rather to the King, as may be supposed by the Arms, viz. Three Lions Passant-Gardant, which was the whole Arms of England before the Reign of Edward III. who quartered them with the Arms of France. These Arms, supported by two Angels, were handsomely and largely carved in the fore Front of this House towards the high Street.

It has been said that King John had his Court in the aforesaid House, which is not unlikely; for

Matthew

K John's Court.

Matthew Paris saith in his History, that, in the Year 1232, Henry III. sent Hubert de Burgho, Earl of Kent, to Cornhill in London, there to answer all Matters objected against him, where he wisely acquitted himself.

Down lower, on the high Street of Cornhill, was another great Tavern, called the Cardinal's Hat, which had also a Thoroughfare into Lombard-street.

The Tun upon Cornhill a Prison-house for Night-walkers.

In the Year of Christ 1282, a Conduit was first built of Stone, by Henry Wallis, Mayor of London, to be a Prison for Night-walkers and other suspicious Persons, and was called the Tun upon Cornhill, because the same was built somewhat in Fashion of a Tun standing on one End.

Also without the West Side of this Tun was a Well of springing Water, curbed round with hard Stone.

Temporal Men punished Spiritual Persons for Incontinency. The Bishop complains, and the King forbids the Laity punishing the Clergymen.

To this Prison of the Tun the Night-Watches of this City committed not only Night-walkers, but also other Persons, as well Spiritual as Temporal, whom they suspected of Incontinency, and punished them according to the Customs of this City: But Complaint thereof being made about the Year of Christ 1297, King Edward I. forbid the Imprisonment of the Clergy therein. See Page 107.

Citizens of London break up the Tun upon Cornhill.

About the Year of Christ 1299, the twenty-seventh of Edward I. certain principal Citizens of London, to wit; T. Romane, Richard Gloucester, Nicholas Faringdon, Adam Helingbury, T. Saly, John Dunstable, Richard Asbwy, John Wade, and William Stratford, brake up this Prison called the Tun, and took out certain Prisoners; for which they were sharply punished, by long Imprisonment and great Fines. It cost the Citizens (as some have written) more than twenty thousand Marks, which they were amerced in before William de March, Treasurer of the King's Exchequer, to purchase the King's Favour, and the Confirmation of their Liberties.

Citizens of London punish Fornication and Adultery in Priests as well as others, without Partiality.

In the Year 1383, the seventh of Richard II. the Citizens of London taking upon them the Rights that belonged to their Bishops, first imprisoned such Women as were taken in Fornication or Adultery, in the said Tun; and after, bringing them forth to the Sight of the World, they caused their Heads to be shaved, after the Manner of Thieves, whom they named Appellators, and so to be led about the City, in Sight of all the Inhabitants, with Trumpets and Pipes sounding before them, that their Persons might be the more largely known: Neither did they spare such Kind of Men a whit the more, but used them as hardly, saying, they abhorred not only the Negligence of their Prelates, but also detested their Avarice, that studied for Money, omitted the Punishment limited by Law, and permitted those that were found guilty to live favourably by their Fines; wherefore they would themselves, they said, purge their City from such Filthiness, lest, through God's Vengeance, either the Pestilence or Sword should happen to them, or that the Earth should swallow them. In a Charge of the Wardmote-Inquest in every Ward in this City were these Words: "If there be any Priest in Service within the Ward,

"which before-time hath beene set in the Tunne in Cornehill for his Dishonesty, and hath forsworne the Citie, all such shall be presented."

John Atwood, Draper, dwelling in the Parish of St. Michael upon Cornhill, directly against the Church, having a proper Woman to his Wife, such an one as seemed the holiest amongst a thousand, had also a lusty Country Priest of the said Parish-Church repairing to his House, with the which Priest the said Atwood would sometimes after Supper play a Game at Tables for a Pint of Ale. It chanced on a Time, having Haste of Work, and his Game proving long, he left his Wife to play it out, and went down to his Shop: But returning to fetch a Pressing-iron, he found such Play (to his Misliking) that he forced the Priest to leap out at a Window over the Penthouse into the Street, and so to run to his Lodging in the Church-yard. Atwood and his Wife were soon reconciled, so that he would not suffer her to be called in Question; but the Priest being apprehended and committed, I saw his Punishment to be thus: He was on three Market-days conveyed through the high Street and Markets of the City, with a Paper on his Head, whereon was written his Trespas. The first Day he rode in a Carry; the second, on a Horse, his Face to the Horse's Tail; the third, led betwixt two, and every Day rung with Bafons, and Proclamations made of his Fact at every Turning of the Streets, and also before John Atwood's Stall, and the Church Door of his Service, where he lost his Chauntry of twenty Nobles the Year, and was banished the City for ever.

Priests punished in the Tun upon Cornhill, and forced to forswear this City. Stow.

A Priest punished for Lechery.

In the Year 1401, the said Prison-house called the Tun was made a Cistern for sweet Water, conveyed by Pipes of Lead from Tyburn, and was from thenceforth called the Conduit upon Cornhill. Then was the Wall planked over, and a strong Prison made of Timber, called a Cage, with a Pair of Stocks set upon it, and this was for Night-walkers; on the Top of which Cage was placed a Pillory, for the Punishment of Bakers offending in the Assize of Bread, for Millers stealing of Corn at the Mill, and for Bawds and Scolds, and other Offenders.

The Conduit upon Cornhill.

Cage, Stocks, and Pillory in Cornhill.

Bakers, Millers, Bands, Scolds, and common Jurors for Rewards punished on the Pillory.

As in the Year 1468, the seventh of Edward IV. divers Persons, being common Jurors, such as at Assizes were forsworn for Rewards or Favour of Parties, were judged to ride from Newgate to the Pillory in Cornhill, with Mitres of Paper on their Heads, there to stand, and from thence again to Newgate. And this Judgment was given by the Mayor of London.

False Swearers pillorized here.

In the Year 1509, the first of Henry VIII. Darby, Smith, and Simson, Ringleaders of false Inquests in London, rode about the City with their Faces to the Horses Tails, and Papers on their Heads, and were set on the Pillory in Cornhill, and after brought again to Newgate, where they died for very Shame, saith Robert Fabian. A Ringleader of Inquests, as I take it, is he, that, making a gainful Occupation thereof, will appear upon Nisi Priuses ere he be warned, or procure himself to be warned to come on by a Tallis: He will also procure himself to be Foreman, when he can, and take upon him to overrule the rest to his Opinion: Such an one shall be Ringleaders of false Inquests so served.

Ringleaders of Inquests will prosper their Service, and bend every Way for Gain.

A Man detected, and that had sworn foolishly against his Brother, is not to be admitted a common Juror. Neither Butcher nor Surgeon is to be admitted.

be laboured by Plaintiffs and Defendants, not without Promise of Rewards; and therefore to be suspected of a bad Conscience. I would wish a more careful Choice of Jurors to be had; for I have known a Man carted, rung with Bafons, and banished out of Bishopsgate Ward, and afterward, in Aldgate Ward, admitted to be Constable, a Grand-Juryman, and Foreman of their Wardmote Inquest. What I know of the like, or worse Men, preferred to the like Offices, I forbear to write, but wish to be reformed, says Stow.

The foresaid Conduit upon Cornhill was in the Year 1475 enlarged by Robert Drope, Draper, Mayor, who then dwelt in that Ward: He enlarged the Cistern of this Conduit with an East End of Stone and Lead, and castellated it in comely Manner.

In the Year 1582, Peter Morris, a Dutchman, having contracted with the City of London for the erecting of an Engine under London Bridge to force Water into the Eastern Parts thereof, (see Page 51.) erected at the East End of Cornhill, in the Middle of the High-Street, where four Ways part, a Water-Standard, at the Charge of the City; which Standard had four Spouts, that ran plentifully at every Tide, four Ways, to Bishopsgate, Aldgate, the Bridge, and to Wallbrook or Stocks-market: This being at that Time supposed to be the highest Ground of the City.

CHAP. XX.

Of CRIPPLEGATE WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a New Survey.

Its Name, Bounds, Extent, modern State, Government. Alderman and Common-Council. Parishes and Churches. Lamb's Chapel. Si-on College and Alms-houses. Barbers-Hall, Haberdashers - Hall, Waxchandlers - Hall, Plaisterers-Hall, Brewers-Hall, Curriers-Hall, Loriners-Hall. Alms-houses. Antiquities.

Name.

*C*ripplegate Ward takes its Name from the North-West Gate of the City, of which has been treated largely on Page 24.

Bounds.

It is bounded on the East by Little Moorfields, Part of Coleman-street Ward, Bassishaw Ward, and Cheap Ward; on the North by the Parish of St. Luke's Old-street, formerly called Cripplegate Parish without the Freedom; on the West by Aldersgate Ward; and on the South by the Ward of Cheap.

Extent.

This Ward consists of two Parts; one lying within Cripplegate and London-wall; and the other, to the Extent of the Freedom, without.

Within the Wall, on the East Part thereof, toward the North, it runs to the West Side of Basing-ball Ward; and towards the South it joins to the Ward of Cheap. It begins at the West End of St. Laurence's Church in the Jewry, on the North Side, and runs West to a Pump, where, some Time, was a Well with two Buckets, at the South Corner of Aldermanbury-street; which Street runs down North to Gayspur-lane, and so to London-wall; which Street and Lane are wholly (on both Sides) of this Ward; and so are some few Houses (on both Sides) from Gayspur-lane, by and against the Wall of the City, East to the Grates made for the Water-Course of the Channels, and West to Cripplegate.

Now on the South Side, from over-against the West End of St. Laurence's Church to the Pump, and then up Milk-street, South to Cheap; which Milk-street is wholly (on both Sides) of Cripplegate Ward; as also, without the South End of Milk-street, a Part of West Cheap, viz. from the Place where the Standard stood, to where the Cross was set. Then down Great Wood-street, which is wholly of this Ward, on both Sides thereof; so is Little Wood-street, which runs down to Cripplegate.

Out of this Wood-street are divers Lanes, namely, on the East Side is Lad-lane, which runs East to Milk-street Corner. Down lower in Wood-street is Love-lane, which lies by the South Side of St. Alban's Church in Wood-street, and runs down to the Conduit in Aldermanbury-street. Lower down in Wood-street is Addle-street; out of which runs Philip-lane down to London-wall. These are the Lanes on the East Side.

On the West Side of Wood-street is Hugen-lane, by the South Side of St. Michael's Church, and goes through to Gutheron's-lane. Then lower is Maiden-lane, which runs West to the North End of Gutheron's-lane; and up to the said Lane, on the East Side thereof, till against Kery-lane, and back again. Then the said Maiden-lane, on the North Side, goes up to Staining-lane, and up a Part thereof, on the East Side, to the farthest North Part of Haberdashers-hall, and back again to Wood-street. And there, lower down, is Silver-street, which is of this Ward, till you come to the East End of St. Olave's Church on the South Side, and to Monkwell-street on the North Side. Then down the said Monkwell-street, on the East Side thereof, and so to Cripplegate, do make the Bound of this Ward within the Walls.

Without Cripplegate, Fore-street runs a-cross before the Gate, from against the North Side of St. Giles's Church, along to Moor-lane End, and almost to Moorgate. The Houses on that Side of Moorfields, and Alleys to Finsbury-court, are all of Cripplegate Ward.

Joining to Moorfields is the New Artillery-Ground, so called, in Distinction from another Artillery-garden, near St. Mary Spital. See Bishopsgate Ward.

Then to turn back again through the afore-said Moor-lane, the next is Grub-street; more than Half of it is in this Ward. The next is Whitecross-street, up to the End of Beech-lane; and then Redcross-street wholly, with a Part of Golden-lane, to the Posts there placed as a Boundary.

Then is Beech-lane, before spoken of, on the East Side of the Redcross and the Barbican-street, more than Half thereof, towards Aldersgate-street, which are the Bounds of Cripplegate Ward without the Walls.

The present State of this Ward will be better collected from the following Plan and Description.

The Part of this Ward within the Wall, by which it is severed from that without, contains several Streets and Lanes, some in Whole, others in Part, viz. Milk-street on both Sides, and the greater Part of Honey-lane Market; Cateaton-street, so far as to St. Laurence's Church, Lad-lane, Alderman-

This Plan is most humbly Inscrib'd to John Blachford Esq. Alderman of Cripple Gate Ward, in 1755.

dermanbury, Love-lane, Addle-street, London-wall-street, from Little Wood-street to beyond the Postern; Philip-lane, Great Wood-street, all about 70 Feet on the West Side towards Cheapside; Little Wood-street, Hart-street, the South Side thereof; Monkswell-street the East Side, Fell-street, Silver-street; Maiden-lane, the East Part thereof; Hugen-lane, Goldsmiths-street, the whole, except 25 Feet on the West Side; Gutter-lane, the West Side from Maiden-lane, to over-against the End of Carey-street, on the East Side of the Way only; and Cheapside, on the North Side, 170 Feet from the Corner of Woodstreet, Eastward. In all which said Places are several Courts and Places of Note.

The Places in this Ward without the Wall are Fore-street, and the Postern leading to Moorfields, Back-street in the Little Moorfields, Moor-lane, Grub-street, the South Part to the Posts and Chain; Whitcross-street, the South Side, so far as the Posts and Chain; Redcross-street, about 450 Feet on both Sides; Beech-lane, Golden-lane, the South Part to the Post and Chain; Barbican, the East Part thereof, on both Sides, for about 450 Feet from the Corner of Golden-lane; Jewen-street, the East Part thereof, and on both Sides to Redcross-street, for about 450 Feet; Brackley-street, Bridge-water-street, and Letton-street; all of them built in the Place where Bridgewater House stood before.

Of these Places in Order; and, first, for those within the Wall.

Milk-street is broad, comes out of Cheapside, and falls into Lad-lane: This Street is well built, and inhabited by wholesale Traders, chiefly in Haberdashery; and that Part that lies open to Honey-lane Market is the best.

Here in this Street, towards Cheapside, stood the Parish-Church of St. Magdalen's Milk-street. It was destroyed in the dreadful Fire of London, and not rebuilt; but the Parish is united to St. Laurence Jewry, and the Ground converted into Honey-lane Market.

The Courts and Alleys in this Street are, Castle-tavern-court, so called from the Castle-Tavern therein formerly seated. It hath a narrow Passage into Wood-street. Feathers-court, long and open, with a Free-stone Pavement. Robin-hood-alley has a Passage into Honey-lane Market. Crown-court, but small. Mumford's-court, a large Place, well built, with a Free-stone Pavement. About the Middle is a Passage into Castle-court, or alley; which is likewise long, falling into St. Laurence-lane, and well inhabited. Clement-court, a handsome open Place, with good Houses, and has a Passage up Steps into Fryars-court, which leads into Wood-street.

Cateaton-street has but a small Part in this Ward, viz. from the Corner of Aldermanbury to St. Laurence Jewry; the rest is in Cheap Ward.

Lad-lane lies betwixt Wood-street in the West, and Milk-street and Aldermanbury in the East. It is likewise a Street of good Trade, and well inhabited. Here on the North Side is the Swan-Inn with two Necks; which is large, and of a considerable Trade for Northern Carriers. More towards Woodstreet are two small Courts, or Alleys, but without Name.

Aldermanbury, a handsome Street, graced with good Buildings; which are well inhabited by Merchants, wholesale Dealers, &c.

In this Street are these Courts, viz. Fountain-court, on the East Side, a large square Place, well inhabited and built; has a Passage into St. Laurence Church-alley, which leads into Guildhall-yard. This Court was built out of a large House, formerly the Seat of Erasmus de la Fontaine, Knt. deceased.

Dyer's-court, large, and well inhabited by Persons of Repute, having an open Entrance for Coach or Cart. Carpenters-court, a handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, well inhabited.

On the North Side is Hadley's-court, but small, with a Free-stone Pavement. Church-alley has a Passage into Basinghall-street by the Church Wall. Miller's-court, indifferent large, but with a narrow Passage.

Love-lane comes out of Aldermanbury, and falls into Wood street by St. Alban's Wood-street Church, where it divides, and one Part encompasses the Church, except the Front in Wood-street. In this Lane is Berry-court, which is handsome, and well built.

Addle-street, which also lies betwixt Aldermanbury and Wood-street, is yet much inhabited by Joiners, for the making of Bedsteads, Chests of Drawers, Scrutores, Tables, and such like Joinery Wares.

London-wall is a long Street, coming out of Little Wood-street by Cripplegate, and runs Eastward as far as Winchester-street; but goes no farther in this Ward than within 60 Feet of the North-West End of Coleman-street.

Philip-lane goes from London-wall, and falls into Addle-street, a Place indifferently built and inhabited. In this Place is Sion-court, indifferent large, with a Free-stone Pavement. Burge-court hath a Passage into Wood street; the middle Part is open, with a Free-stone Pavement. Cook's-court, but small, also with a Free-stone Pavement. Hand-alley, small and narrow. Curriers-court, seated in London-wall-street, Westward of Sion-College, a Place but ordinary; at the upper End of which is Curriers-ball.

Hart-street, adjoining to Cripplegate, falls into Monks-well-street. The North Side of this Street, as also the West Side of Monks-well-street, belongs to Farringdon Ward within. On the North Side of Hart-street are the City Alms-houses for six poor Women. On the South Side is Bowyers-court, which is but small; and here was formerly Bowyers-ball.

Monks-well, or Mugwell-street, is a Place of no Trade, but indifferently well built, and inhabited by private House-keepers. The Courts and Places of Name are Lamb's chapel-court, somewhat large, and Lamb's-alley, narrow, but lately well built; Gilbert's-court, small and mean; Dobin's-court, ordinary; Windsor-court, the same; Winchester-court, a large open Place, well built.

The next is Fell-street, seated betwixt Monks-well-street and Little Wood-street, a Place of no great Account, and but narrow. Here is Fell-court, square and well built, but hath a narrow Passage into it.

Silver-street goes from Little Wood-street unto Noble-street; a handsome broad Street, with well built built Houses, supposed to be so called from the Silversmiths then there dwelling; which are now removed into Foster-lane, and other Places.

In this Street are these Places; Winton-court, handsome, with a Free-stone Pavement; Red-lion-court, indifferent good and large; over-against which is a large well built Presbyterian Meeting-House in a Yard.

Westmoreland-court, an open large Place, but ordinarily built, and fronts Noble-street.

Wood-
street.

Wood-street, of which there is the Great and the Little; Great Wood-street, beginning on the South at Cheapside, and falling into Little Wood-street, runs up to Cripplegate. Both Streets are in this Ward, except a small Part next to Cheapside, as already taken Notice of. Great Wood-street is a Street well built and inhabited, and was formerly noted for good Cakes there made, which were wont to be bought here for Weddings, Christenings, and Twelfth-Nights.

On the East Side of Great Wood street is one of the Prisons belonging to the Sheriffs, and called Wood street-Compter.

In Wood-street are a great many Courts and Alleys. We shall begin with that Part next Cheapside.

Goldsmiths-street, handsome, and falls into Foster-lane; hath some Part in the Ward of Farringdon within, where it is mentioned. Paul's-alley, good, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Fryars-alley, or court, but ordinary; hath a Passage into Clement's-court, which leads into Milk-street. Shovel-alley, good, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Huggen-lane; this Lane comes out of Wood-street, by the South Side of St. Michael's Church, where it is broad, well built and inhabited. But further, where it runneth into Gutter-lane, thro' the Incroachments of Buildings, it becomes very narrow, and but ordinary.

Maidenhead-court, a handsome square open Place, with good Buildings, having a wide Entrance for Cart or Coach, with a Gate to shut up at Nights. Paved-alley, long and ordinary, runs up into Staining-street by the Church-yard Wall of Staining Church, and thence into Lilly-pot-lane, which leads into Noble-street.

Fryingpan-alley, but indifferent, and hath a turning Passage into Paved-alley. Bird's or Burge's-court, indifferent good, the Middle being more open, with a Free-stone Pavement, and hath a Passage into Philip-lane.

In Little Wood-street, in an Alley, are seven Rooms, for so many poor People to live Rent-free; the Gift of Henry Barton, Skinner, and Mayor, 1516.

Maiden-
lane.

Maiden-lane, a Street well inhabited and built; it comes out of Wood-street, and falls into Foster-lane; but the Part in this Ward goeth but to Staining-lane.

Flying-horse court, which is but ordinary, is in this Street; and Mutton-court, likewise narrow and mean.

Gutter-lane hath some Part in this Ward.

Cripplegate Ward without the Wall.

This is a large Tract of Ground, containing several Streets, and all crowded with Courts and Alleys; the chief are Fere-street, the Postern-street,

Back-street in Little Moorfields, Moor-lane, Grub-street, Whitcross street, Redcross street, Beech lane, Golden-lane, Barbican, and Jewen street: Of these in Order.

Fore-street, broad, and inhabited by Butchers, Smiths, Turners, &c. runs from the North End of St. Giles's Cripplegate Church to Moor-lane, Eastward, and then falls into Postern street, which leads to Little Moorfields, against New Bethlehem.

In this Street are a great many Courts and Alleys, which shall be taken Notice of, beginning next to St. Giles's Church, which is seated opposite to Redcross-street, and in Fore street.

Some small Distance from this Church, Eastward, and opposite to Cripplegate, was a Water-Conduit, now a Pump.

Little Cock alley, ordinary. Great Cock-alley, or Yard, a large Place, indifferently built, and has a Passage into Whitcross-street. Grasshopper-alley, long, narrow, and ordinary. White-hart-inn, good, chiefly for Livery-Stables. Three Dagger-court, both ordinary and meanly inhabited. Black-horse-alley, long, but mean. Unicorn-alley, long and ordinary. Betwixt this and Black-horse-alley is an ordinary Court, only for the Parish Alms-People. Red-hart-court, handsome, with new built Houses, and a Free stone Pavement, well inhabited. Day's-court, indifferent good: Opposite to this Court are two long Carpenters or Timber Yards. Founders-court, but ordinary. Red-bull-court, good. Aldermanbury-postern, a handsome short Street, well built and inhabited, and opens without a Gate through London-wall, over-against Aldermanbury, and therefore so called.

The Postern street begins at the Corner of Moor-lane, and runs into Little Moorfields; a Place well built, and inhabited by Cooks, Victuallers, Butchers, Distillers, &c. Maul's-court, a handsome neat Place, with Garden-Plats before the Houses. Basing-hall-postern has an open Passage without a Gate into London-wall-street.

The Green yard, which is large, and made use of by the City as a Pound, for such Cars and Coaches, whose Drivers commit any Offence in the Streets, contrary to Rules or Orders to be observed by them. Cradle-court, indifferent good, nigh to which is a Carpenter's Yard. Moor-court, small and ordinary.

Little Moorfields, or the Back street, now so called, to distinguish it from the new double Row of Houses, now finished, which is called the Fere-street on the paved Stones; which said new Row of Buildings is in Coleman street Ward, are good, and well inhabited. Out of this Back-street are several Courts and Alleys, viz. Crown-court, long, and indifferent. Hind-alley, likewise long and good. Half-moon-alley, long and narrow, and but indifferently built and inhabited, as are most of these Alleys. At the upper End it divides itself into two Parts, one of which falls into Vine-court, and the other into Angel-alley, and thence into Moor-lane. Angel alley is long and good, and at the upper End falls into Moor-lane, and has a Passage into Half-moon-alley. Hartshorn-alley, likewise long and mean, runs into Moor-lane. Butler's-alley, long and narrow, but indifferent; also falls into Moor-lane, where it is broadest. And about the upper End, on the South Side, is Oysterbell-court, which is good. Gun-alley, narrow, but well built,

built, at the upper End falls into Sugar-loaf court, and so into Moor lane. White's alley, a handsome open Place, well built; some of the Houses having Gardens to them. Rope-makers-alley has several Garden-Houses, which are well built and inhabited. This Alley falls into Butler's-alley, which, with several Turnings, falls into Grub-street.

Moor-lane.

Moor-lane, for the Generality, but meanly built and inhabited, especially the upper End, which is narrow, and leads into a Place called Back-alley, mean; having a Passage upon Sufferance into Ropemakers-alley; likewise another Passage into Butler's-alley, and so into Grub-street. Rams head-court, but ordinary, taken up by Carmen for Stabling for their Horses. Sugar-loaf-court, long and ordinary, has a Passage into Gun-alley, and so into Little Moorfields. Seven-star-court, mean. Sugar-loaf-alley, small and ordinary. Butler's-alley leads into Moorfields. Car-yard, a large Place for Stabling. Cock-alley, small and mean. Vine-court and Maiden-head-court, both which have been new built, with good Houses, having each a Passage into Little Moorfields thro' Half-moon-alley.

Grub-street.

Grub-street, long, coming out of Fore-street, and running Northward into Chiswel street; but some small Part, viz. from Sun-alley to Chiswel-street, is not in the Ward, but in the Liberty of Finsbury. This Street, taking in the whole, is but indifferent, as to its Houses and Inhabitants, and sufficiently pestered with Courts and Alleys, as follow:

Lund's-alley, long and ordinary, falls into Moor-lane. Honeysuckle-court, good, with new built Houses. Fleur-de-lis-court, small and ordinary. Little Bell alley, but mean. Flying-horse-court, long, but ordinarily built.

Over-against the Pump is a Court without a Name. Oakley-court, large and open, the greatest Part at present unbuilt, and lying West. Butler's-alley, narrow and ordinary, giving a Passage into Moor-lane, where it is broad. Cross-keys-court, indifferent large, and old built, leads into Half-moon-alley, and so into Whitcross-street. Maiden-head-court, handsome, and indifferently well built and inhabited. Great Bell-alley, small, but indifferent good.

Haberdashers-square, genteel, with new well built Houses; the Court is square, and inclosed in with Palisade Pales, except a handsome Passage to the Houses round about, and in the Middle a Dial. This Court was made out of two old ones, viz. Paviors-court and Robin Hood-court. Sun-alley, but small.

White-croft-street.

Whitcross-street, a Place well built and inhabited; it begins in Fore-street, and runs Northward into Old-street, which is of a great Length. But the Part within the Ward goes but a little beyond Beech-lane, where the City Posts are set up, as they are in Grub-street, and in Golden-lane, being the Circuits of the Freedom.

In this Street are these Courts and Alleys, viz. Cross-keys-Inn, large, and of an indifferent Trade, with some private Houses in it. Cock-alley leads into Redcross-street, as also into Fore-street; where it is mentioned under the Name of Great Cock-alley. Three-leg-court, or Yard, being long and open, with good Houses. King's- arms-yard, large, with ordinary old Buildings, chiefly for Carmen. Peacock-brewhouse, a handsome convenient Building, and of a considerable Trade. King's-head-court, well built, with a Free-stone Pavement. Cross-keys-court, large, and falls into Grub-street, where it is spoken of. Half-moon-alley, but ordinary, falls into Cross-keys-court, and thence into Grub-street, by a Passage newly made by the Consent of the Landlords. This Alley also falls into Horshoe-alley, which is very mean. Bowling-alley, an open Place, containing some Courts within it; as George-yard, &c. which is but mean; and this Alley, by a Passage, falls into Cradle-court, seated in Red-cross-street. Anabaptist-court, long, but ordinary. Castle-court, a pretty Yard, but small. Red-rose-court, small and ordinary. Fern's-yard, a Place only for refining of Lead.

Beech-lane comes out of Whitcross-street, and falls into Redcross-street, over-against Barbican; a Place of slender Account as to Trade or Resort, and but indifferent as to its Inhabitants.

Beech-lane.

Skip-yard, but ordinary, having a long Passage into a small Court. Glover's-hall-court, a large Place. King's-head-court, large, and well built, hath a Passage into Red-lion-court, lying in the Manor of Finsbury.

Golden-lane, of no great Account either for Buildings or Inhabitants. It comes out of Redcross-street, and runs up into Old-street; but the Part in this Ward goeth no further than Angel-alley, which is by the City Posts.

Golden-lane.

The Courts and Alleys in this Lane are, Jacob's-well-alley, very mean. Cocks-head-court, pretty large, and well built; hath a Door and Passage, by Sufferance, into the Redcross Tavern in Barbican. Black-raven-court, pretty handsome, but small. Crown-court, a good open Place. Sun-court, long, and in some Places pretty broad: It runs into Red-lion-market, which is in the Lordship. Near to this Place is the Sun Brewhouse; as also Three Arrows Brewhouse, both of a good Trade. Dixon's-rents, very small and ordinary. Vine-court, indifferent good.

Litton-street, a pretty good Place, not long built; being made out of Bridgwater House and Garden. Which said Street runs into Brackley-street, and thence into Bridgwater-street; all built out of Bridgwater House and Ground. Bell-alley, very ordinary.

Litton-street.

Barbican, a good broad Street, formerly well inhabited by Tradesmen, especially Salesmen for Apparel, both new and old. It comes out of Aldersgate-street, against Long-lane, and falls into Redcross-street; but the Part in this Ward goeth but to the City Posts. And fronting Redcross-street is the Watch-house, where formerly stood a Watch Tower, called Burgh-kenning, i. e. Barbican, for the Security of the City in those Parts.

Barbican.

In this Street are these Places of Name, Garter-court, pretty large, containing two Courts, and both so called; which are indifferent good. Bridgwater-square, a very handsome open Place, with very good Buildings, well inhabited. The middle is neatly inclosed with Palisado Pales, and set round with Trees, which renders the Place

Place very delightful. At the North-West Corner is a Passage into Bridgwater-street; and in the South-East Corner of the Square is another Passage into Charles-street, and from thence into Brackley-street: Out of which Place is a Passage through Litton-street, into Golden-lane. And on the East Side of Charles-street is a short Street, which has the Name of Silver-street; but is a Place of no great Account. And where this Square is, stood the House of the Earl of Bridgwater.

Three Pigeon-
Court.

Three-pigeon-court, both small and ordinary. Plough-alley, long and mean. Blue-boars-head-court, also long and ordinary. Fox and Crown-court, long and mean. Fig-tree-court, pretty good, and well inhabited. Play-house-yard, long, with old Buildings; so called, for that here was a Play-house in former Days.

Redcross-
street.

Redcross-street, wide, well built and inhabited; it comes out of Barbican, and runs up to Cripplegate Church. About the Middle of this Street, on the North Side, is a publick Library, appropriated to the Dissenting Clergy. The Courts and Alleys here are, Three-herring-court, pretty large, but ordinary. Red-lion and Axe-Inn, but indifferent. Three-falcon-court, very good, and well built, with a Free-stone Pavement. Cradle-court, pretty large and good, falls into Bowling-alley in Whitecross-street. Paul's-alley, very long, with some pretty handsome Houses, fit for good Inhabitants; and runs into Aldersgate-street, by the Half-moon Tavern. Bear and Ragged-staff-alley, very ordinary. Frying-pan-alley, very mean. Ship-yard, but ordinary.

Jewen-
street.

Jewen-street comes out of Redcross-street, and falls into Aldersgate-street; a Place well built and inhabited, except at the West End, and of some Trade for Button-mould-makers.

Stow.

In this Street are these Places; Crowder's-well-alley, very long, running into Aldersgate-street, through an Inn-yard. It hath good Buildings, well inhabited. This Place is of some Note for its Well, which gives Name to the Alley. The Water of this Well is esteemed very good for sore Eyes, to wash them with; and is said to be also very good to drink for several Distempers: And some say, it is very good for Men in Drink to take of this Water, for it will allay the Fumes, and bring them to be sober.

Bull-head-court, a broad Place, with old Buildings, but well inhabited. Redcross-alley, very long, but somewhat narrow, with pretty good Houses; to many of which are Gardens, which occasions the Place to be the better inhabited. Three-pigeon-court, square, and pretty good. Cockpit-court, but ordinary, and leads into Horn-alley; but this is in Aldersgate-street Ward. Lauderdale-court, a good large Place, well built and inhabited; being built out of the Garden belonging to Lauderdale House, seated in Aldersgate-street; but some of the Ground lieth yet unbuilt. And on the East Side of the Entrance into this Court, going up Steps, is Goldsmith's-court, which is but ordinary.

The Watch.

There are to watch at Cripplegate, and at several other Stands, in divers Places of this Ward, every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and forty Watchmen, within the Walls; and one

Constable, a Beadle, and ninety Watchmen, in several Places without the Walls; being for the whole Ward 130.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest are to serve in the several Courts in the Guildhall in the Month of March. The Jurg.

This Ward hath an Alderman; and within the Gate, 8 Common-Council, 9 Constables, 12 Scavengers. For Wardmote Inquest 15, and a Beadle. Without the Gate, it hath 4 Common-Council, 2 Constables, 4 Scavengers, 17 Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. The Government of this Ward.

It is taxed in London to the Fifteenth at 40 l. and in the Exchequer at 39 l. 10 s.

The Alderman of this Ward is John Blackford, Esq; who has past the Chair. The Common-Councilmen within the Wall are, Mr. Richard Molineux, Deputy, Mr. Thomas Atkins, Mr. John Knight, Mr. John Cartwright, Mr. Robert Elliot, Mr. Edward Sadler, Mr. Holles Bull, and Mr. Robert Markland. Without the Wall are, Mr. John Wallington, Deputy, Mr. Edward Farmer, Mr. Francis Roberts, and Mr. Thomas Whincup.

The remarkable Things in this Ward are,

First, Five Parishes with Churches; (1) St. Giles Cripplegate, (2) St. Alphage, (3) St. Alban Wood-street, (4) St. Michael's Wood-street, (5) St. Mary Aldermanbury; and one Parish without a Church, viz. St. Mary Magdalen Milk-street: Of which in the Parochial History. Remarkable Things. Parishes and Churches.

Secondly, A Chapel situate in a Court, to which it gives Name, at the North West Corner of London-wall. This Chapel was founded as early as the Time of King Edward I. and dedicated to St. James, and distinguished from other Cognominal Dedications by the Name of St. James's Chapel, or Hermitage on the Wall, because situate in or near London-wall, at the North-West Corner of Monks-well-street, which Street took its Name from the Monks lodging therein, and a Well belonging to them. This Hermitage, says Bishop Tanner, in his Notitia, p. 317. belonged to the Abbot and Convent of Gerondon in Leicestershire, who kept two Cistercian Monks of their own Order here. At the Dissolution it was granted, 34 Hen. VIII. to William Lamb, a rich Cloth-worker of this City, who bequeathed it with other Appurtenances to his Company for the Uses mentioned on Page 264. Lamb's Chapel.

In this Chapel the Worshipful Company of Cloth-workers have four Sermons preached to them upon four principal Festivals in the Year, viz. upon the Feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, March 25; on the Feast of St. John Baptist, June 24; on the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, September 29; and on the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, Decemb. 21. Upon which Days, the Master, Wardens, and Livery of the Company meet at some convenient Place, near unto the Chapel, whence they go in their Gowns and Hoods to the Chapel, and hear the Sermon: After which, they relieve twelve poor Men, and as many Women, with 12 d. a piece in Money; and once a Year, viz. at Michaelmas, give to each of them a Frieze Gown a Lockram Shift, and a good Pair of Winter Shoes, fit for their wearing. From whence this Chapel is now commonly called Lamb's-chapel, and the Inhabitants of the Tenements belonging belonging to the said Chapel, till the Year 1660, stood in Competition with the Parishioners of the Parish of St. Olave's Silver-street, who would have had those Inhabitants to have been of their Parish, which indeed they are, as may appear by the following Deed :

A very antient Deed to prove Lamb's-chapel to have antiently been in the Parish of St. Olave Silver-street.

"Know all Men, present and to come, That I Laurence de Frowick have granted and demised, and by this present Charter of mine have confirmed, unto Richard of Clarkenwell, Chaplain, all that Land of mine, with the Houses, Buildings, and Appurtenances, which I have in London, in Monks-well-street, in the Parish of St. Olave's, lying between that Land which William Throtesos held of me, towards the South, and the Land of the Fryars of the New Hostell, towards the North, and which extendeth itself in Length from the King's Highway, even unto the Wall of the City, towards the West, &c. he paying me twenty Shillings a Year, &c. and giving unto the Church of St. Olave's aforesaid one Wax Candle, of a Pound Weight, at the Feast of St. Thomas the Apostle, yearly; and unto the Chapel (de inclusorio) in the Close or Cloister within Cripplegate, at the upper End of Monks-well-street, towards the North, one other Wax Taper, of three Quarters Weight, upon the Feast of St. James, yearly, &c.

Witness, Nicholas Bat, then Mayor of London.

John of Northampton, and Richard Pycard, then Sheriffs,
&c. Anno 1253."

NOTES upon this Deed.

Out of this so antient a Deed, may we observe,

I. That by the bounding of the Land, between the Street and the City Wall, towards the West, that this is the Ground which is now Lamb's-chapel-yard.

II. By the assigning the latter Candle to be paid to the Chapel on St. James's Day, that it was meant to this Lamb's-chapel, which was antiently called, The Chapel of St. James in the Wall; upon whose Festival this Chapel seems to have been dedicated. And, to honour the Solemnity of which, Frowick, the Gentleman, directed this Candle to be yearly paid.

The Original of this Deed, in Latin, was in the Hands of that most learned Antiquary Sir Henry Spelman, Knt.

"Upon the 8th of July, 1625, I Arthur Jackson, Rector of St. Michael Hogen-lane, Wood-street, was chosen by the Worshipful Company of Clothworkers to be Minister of this Church or Chapel of St. James in the Wall, commonly called Lamb's-chapel." This J. Bagford transcribed out of the Register-Book of the Parish-Church or Chapel of St. James in the Wall, with this that follows :

MARRIAGES.

"August 18, 1586, (being the first Register) Nicholas Bestney, of Gray's-Inn, in Holborn, in the County of Middlesex, Esq; and Bridget Mitchel, sole Daughter and Heir of John Mitchel, of Warham, in the County of Suffex.

No. 77.

"The 28th of July, 1608, Henry Hudson, of the Inner Temple, London, Gent. and Sibyll Bestney, &c."

"Thus far these Marriages were taken out of several Paper Registers, by me Arthur Jackson." And then from this Mr. Jackson's Register-Book, were entered the Marriages in that Chapel celebrated, unto the Year 1632, and no farther.

BURIALS entered in the same Register.

1592. Eleanor Bestney, Daughter of Nicholas Bestney, and Bridget his Wife.

1604. May 29, Catharine Bestney, Daughter of Nicholas Bestney, Esq; and Bridget his Wife. Aug. 29, Ursula Bestney, Daughter of the said Nicholas and Bridget, &c.

1632. March 22, Mrs. Bridget Bestney, Widow, late Wife of Nicholas Bestney, Esq.

Thirdly, Sion-college, founded and set apart for the Meetings and Improvement of the London Clergy, is situated upon the Ruins of the Priory of Elfsing-spital; which consisted of a College for a Warden, four Priests and two Clerks; and an Hospital for one hundred old, blind and poor Persons of both Sexes; blind, paralytic and disabled Priests to be preferred. This Foundation was erected on the Site of several Tenements of one William Elfsing, Citizen and Mercer of London, the Founder, A. D. 1329, who dedicated the same to St. Mary. But in the Year 1340 he changed the College of Seculars into a Priory for a Prior and five Regular Canons of the Order of St. Augustin; which at the Dissolution were increased to nine in Number, endowed with 193 l. 15 s. 5 d. per Ann. according to Dugdale, or 239 l. 13 s. 11 d. according to Speed. In 31 Hen. VIII. this religious House, situate Part in the Parish of Aldermanbury, and Part in the Parish of St. Alphage, was granted to Sir John Williams, Master of the King's Jewels, afterwards Lord Thame; and the next Year, on Christmas Eve, it was burnt down, he then living in it; having made a Garden of the Church-yard; and Stables of the Lodgings for the Poor. In this Grant was reserved a Quit-Rent of 1 l. 17 s. 2 d. per Ann. to the Crown. This Estate devolved to Henry Norris, Esq; who married Sir William's only Daughter Margery, and conveyed it to Sir Rowland Hayward, Alderman of London, for 700 l. whose Son Sir John Hayward sold it (with an Incumbrance of the said Quit-Rent, and 4 l. per Ann. for ever, left by his Father Sir Rowland to the Poor of St. Alphage, to be distributed in Bread) to one Robert Parkhurst, who, in 3 Charles I. conveyed it to the Reverend Mr. John Simpson, Rector of St. Olave's Hart-street, and John Keeling of the Inner-Temple, Esq; for the Uses of the Will of the Reverend Dr. Thomas White, Vicar of St. Dunstan's in the West; who, amongst other Charities, &c. had intrusted them to lay out 3000 l. in the Purchase and Building of a College for the Use of the London Clergy, and Alms-houses for twenty poor People, ten Men and ten Women. And in Prosecution of the said Dr. White's Will, a Charter was procured the 3d of July, 6 Charles I. under the Great Seal of England, for incorporating the Clergy of London: By which all the Rectors, Vicars, Lecturers, and Curates, are constituted Fellows of

Tanner's Notitia, p. 318.

Incorporated.

the College. And, out of the Incumbents, are annually to be elected, on Tuesday three Weeks after Easter, as Governors, a President, two Deans, and four Assistants, who are to meet quarterly, to hear a Sermon ad Clerum; and afterwards to be entertained with a Dinner in the College Hall, at the Charge of the Foundation.

Bishop of London Visitor.

The Bishop of London is Visitor. But no Bishop of London ever visited till July 16, 1695, when Dr. Henry Compton, then Lord Bishop of London, visited.

The common Seal.

Anno 1632, the Governors and Clergy, being summoned, agreed upon a common Seal, which had round it Sigillum Collegii de Sion Londini; and upon it the good Samaritan, with this Inscription, Vade & fac similiter, St. Luc. x. 37. This for the Foundation.

THE ALMS-HOUSE

The Alms-House.

Consists of twenty distinct Rooms, for ten Men within the College, and ten Women without it. They are to be nominated; four by the City of Bristol, where Dr. White was born; eight by the Merchant-Taylors Company; six by the Parish of St. Dunstan, where he was Minister forty-nine Years; and two by St. Gregory's Parish, where he had lived about twenty Years; except any of the Kindred of either of his Wives appeared, who were first to be considered, not exceeding four at a Time. All which are to give Security, at their Admission, that they be no Charge to the College nor Parish of St. Alphage. The College appoints one to take Care of them, see to the Distribution of the Charity, and eject, in Case of Delinquency.

The Poor's Allowances.

Besides the Benevolence of the Founder, one Mr. Brewer, by his last Will, made in the Year 1684, gave them a Farm in Hertfordshire. They are paid quarterly by the College. Formerly it amounted to 6*l. per Annum* each; but now, by Reason of the falling of the Rents considerably, as one Manor in the Hundreds of Essex from 120*l. per Annum* is fallen to 70*l. per Annum*, their Allowances are somewhat abated.

THE LIBRARY.

The Library founded by Simson.

This was not appointed by the Founder, but what Mr. Simson, one of the Executors, did erect, at the Motion of Mr. Wood, Minister of St. Michael Crooked-lane; who, being by at the Building of the Alms-House, told Mr. Simson, that he might raise over that a convenient Library, which Mr. Simson hearkened to; and it cost him above 200*l.* as Mr. Spenser, the first Library-keeper, reported. And therefore, in the Charter of King Charles I. it is said that John Simson was at great Charge in erecting the Library, and in Truth might justly be esteemed a Founder, in Regard of the Pains and Charge he was at, in recovering, settling, and perfecting the Whole.

It is a spacious Room 121 Feet in Length, and 30 Feet broad, furnished with Wainscot Stalls, Desks, Seats, and other necessary and useful Ornaments. It contains Books on the following Subjects, each Class marked: And the Title of the Subjects, which the Books therein consist of, are;

The Books in the Library were given by several Benefactors. Some gave Money, and some gave Books. It was also much augmented by the Library of the Cathedral of St. Paul's; which was carried first to Camden-house, and thence brought to the College, Anno 1647.

The Books and Benefactors.

But, in the Year 1666, the dismal Fire which consumed this famous City, burnt also this College, with the Library, and a third Part of the Books; as also the Hospital for twenty poor People; many convenient Chambers for Students, besides those that were reserved for the Meeting of the Governors and Fellows, and for the Clerk and Library-keeper to dwell in; the whole Fabric at a moderate Estimate being worth 4000*l.* There were also lost the Rents of several Chambers within, and certain Tenements without the College, to the Value of 106*l. 6 s. per Annum*.

The Library and College consumed, Anno 1666.

In the Year 1670, Daniel Mills, D. D. Rector of St. Olave's Hart-freet, President that Year, gave 40*l.* He also caused to be set up nineteen complete Stalls or Desks, and three Half-ones, wherein Books are placed for public Uses. He wainscoted the upper End of the Library, and set up a fair Repository for Books, wherein now standeth the great Bible of France in many learned Languages, and whereon is placed the large Registry of Benefactors. He also by himself, and Procurement of others, was very beneficial in the rebuilding of the College and Library.

This Library was also enlarged by the Jesuits Books, that were seized Anno 1679. And, at the Motion

The Library enlarged.

Motion of the Governor, what were not before embezzled were granted by King Charles II. to the College; as also by the Benefaction of the Lord Barkley, who gave Half his Uncle Cooke's Books to this Library, and promised the other Half at his Death. Many others gave Books, whose Names are inserted into the Catalogue of the Benefactors, and set down according to Order in every Book they gave. Mr. Wynn, Citizen and Dyer, gave 100*l.* the Interest to be laid out yearly in Books. Mr. Calfe 20*l.* per Annum for the same Use, payable by the Leatherfellers Company.

Officers of the Library.

The Library is to be surveyed twice a Year: And had at first a Library-keeper, and an Under Library-keeper, and an Ostrich. Now one serves for all, who has a very handsome Apartment at the South-East Corner of the Library.

Means to augment this Library.

Proposals have been made for augmenting this Library. First, That every Author be desired to give a Book of whatsoever he shall publish. Secondly, That every London Minister, at his Admission into a Living, be desired to give a Book. Thirdly, That every Governor do the same, at his Admission, not under 10*s.* Value. Fourthly, That the Bookfellers be desired to give one Copy of every of the Books they print. By 10 Anna. this is one of the Libraries to which one of all registered Books must be given.

The Charge of Rebuilding.

This whole College being consumed by the Fire, the Rebuilding of the Alms-House, and the Library, cost above 1300*l.* the Hall, and all the other Buildings, cost above 2000*l.* more, as was computed in the Year 1688. The Wain-scoting of the Hall cost 140*l.* And as for the Chambers of the Students, which before the Fire were wholly for such, no Women then permitted to inhabit there, and amounted to a considerable Revenue to the College of about 54*l.* per Annum; the Ground, which lies to the South of the Great Hall, was let out to build upon at Ground Rents.

The President, Deans, and Assistants are, March 26, A. D. 1755,

The Reverend Mr. Cutts Barton, President; Mr. Adam Langley, Mr. Thomas Archer, Deans; Dr. Thomas Birch, Dr. John Thomas, Dr. Thomas Newton, Dr. Richard Bullock, Assistants.

Halls.

Barbers-
hall.

Fourthly, In this Ward are the following Halls, belonging to Companies: (1) Barbers-hall is a magnificent Building on the West Side, and near to the Middle of Monkswell-street. It consists of a spacious Hall, a Court-Room, Theatre, Library, and other commodious Offices. The grand Entrance from Monkswell-street is enriched with the Companies Arms, Cartouches, large Fruit, &c. The Court-Room is adorned with a Fretwork Ceiling, and the Pictures of K. Henry VIII. and the Court of Assistants, in one fine Piece; the Pictures of K. Charles II. &c.

The Theatre contains four Degrees of Cedar Seats, one above another, in elliptical Form, adorned with the Figures of the seven liberal Sciences, the twelve Signs of the Zodiac, and the Skeleton of an Ostrich, put up by Dr. Hobbes 1682, with a Bust of King Charles I. two human Skins on wooden Frames, of a Man and a Woman, in Imitation of Adam and Eve, put up in 1645; a Mummy's Skull, given by Mr. Loveday 1655; the Skeleton of Etherton, with Copper Joints, (he was executed) given by Mr. Knowles in 1693; the Figure of a Man flay'd, where all the Muscles appear in due Place and Proportion, done after the Life; the Skeletons of Cambery Bess and Country Tom (as they there call them) 1638; and three other Skeletons of human Bodies. The Roof of this Theatre is an elliptical Cupola.

But, as this Furniture was introduced by the Surgeons, who had been incorporated with the Barbers by King Henry VIII. and are lately dissolved and made a separate Body by Act of Parliament; the Theatre is now become desolate and useless; the Surgeons having forsaken that fine Piece of Architecture constructed by Inigo Jones, and built a new Theatre in the Old Bailey, as will be noted in Farringdon without.

(2.) Haberdashers-hall, situate at the End of Staining-lane, on the North Side of Maiden-lane, is a good Brick Building; particularly that Room called the Hall is very neat and lofty, paved with Marble and Purbeck, wainscoted about 12 Feet high; and the Screen at the West End, where are two arched Apertures, is adorned with Pilasters of the Corinthian Order, with Enrichments; and round the Hall are several Coats of Arms, as the King's, those of London, this Company's, and others.

(3.) Waxchandlers-hall, which is also in Maiden-lane, on the South Side, at the very Extremity of the Ward in that Direction. It is a handsome, tho' not a spacious old Building, and has been lately well repaired and beautified.

Waxchandlers-
hall.

(4.) Plasterers-hall, a very neat pretty Building, on the North-West Side of Addle-street. This was in antient Days Pinner's-hall; which Company, says Stow, being not worth a Pin, was in his Time gone to Decay.

Plasterers
hall.

(5.) Brewers-hall is also a good Building, near adjoining to Plasterers-hall, with a genteel Entrance into a large Court, paved with Free-stone, cloistered; the Building above being supported with handsome Pillars.

Brewers-
hall.

(6.) Curriers-hall, situate at the upper End of Curriers-court, is an indifferent good Building, with an handsome Free-stone Entrance.

Curriers-

Fifthly, Here are also several charitable Foundations, called Alms-Houses.

(1.) The Alms-Houses on the East Side of Monkswell-street, founded A. D. 1575 by Sir Ambrose Nicholas, Knt. Salter, and Mayor, for 12 poor aged People, and endowed with 7*d.* per Week each, and 5 Sacks of Charcoal, and a Quarter of an hundred of Faggots to each, yearly.

Alms-
Houses.

(2.) Rogers's Alms-Houses, the Foundation of Mr. Robert Rogers, Leatherfeller and Merchant-Adventurer, in Hart-street near London-wall, having a Room below, and another above, for six antient Couple, each being free, and having no Charge of Children. They were erected in the Year 1612, as appears by the Inscription on these Houses, and are in the Disposal of the City, who pay 4*l.* per Ann. to each.

(3.) In

(3.) In Little Wood-street, in an Alley on the West Side, Henry Barton, Esq; and Mayor of London, built seven Chambers for so many poor People to live Rent-free.

(4.) Drapers Alms-Houses, so called, being founded by Lady Askew, Widow of Sir Christopher Askew, Draper, and Mayor of London 1533, for eight poor Widows of the Drapers Company. They stand at the North-East Corner of Beech-lane, and are built of Brick and Timber. The Endowment is 4 l. per Ann. to each, paid by the Drapers Company monthly.

(5.) Thirteen Alms-Houses in Golden-lane, founded by Ricard Gallard of Islington, Esq; Citizen and Painter-Stainer of London, for so many poor People, and endowed by him with 2 d. a piece weekly, and a Load of Charcoal amongst them yearly, charged upon his Estate about Islington.

(6.) Sion Alms-Houses. See before the Account of Sion College.

Wood-street-compter.

A Compter in Wood-street, built in the Year 1555, for the Reception of Prisoners from the Compter in Bread-street, ordered to be abolished for the Misdemeanors of its Keeper. See Poultry-Compter, and p. 252.

Antiquities

At the Meeting of the Corners of Aldermanbury, Milk-street, Lad-lane, and Cateaton-street, which the Editor of Stow by Mistake calls Old Jewry, there was formerly a Well with two Buckets. And somewhere in the Street called Aldermanbury, there was the first Guildhall of London, as far as we have upon Record: And that Street in all Probability took its Name from the Court of Aldermen kept in the said Hall; forasmuch as Bury signifies a Court. The Time of its Removal to the present Hall is particularly noted before in our first Book, page 185. In the Middle of this Street, facing the South Side of the Church, is a Conduit, built at the Charge of William Eastfield, Esq; and Lord-Mayor of London, who lived near thereunto, and brought Water thither from Tyburn in Pipes to supply it.

Monuments in Elsing-Hospital.

The Monuments in Elsing-Spital before its Dissolution (See Sion-College) were, for Thomas Cheyne, Son to William Cheyne; Thomas, John and William, Sons of Sir William Cheyne: John Northampton, Draper, Mayor, 1381. Edmond Hungerford, Henry Frowicke, Joan, Daughter to Sir William Cheyne, Wife to William Stokes. Robert Elderbroke, Esq; 1460. Dame Joan Ratcliffe, Wife of William Fowler. William Kingston, Thomas Swineley, and Helen his Wife, &c.

Elsing Church.

The principal Isle of this Church, towards the North, was pulled down, and a Frame of four Houses set up in the Place. The other Part of this Church (from the Steeple upward) was converted into the Parish-Church of St. Alphage: And the Parish-Church which stood near unto the Wall of the City, by Cripplegate, was pulled down, and the Plat thereof made a Carpenter's Yard with Saw-Pits.

In Milk-street, so called from being the Milk-Market, was the House of Gregory Rokeby, chief Assay-Master of the King's Mints, and Mayor of London in the Year 1275, the third of Edward I. This House belonged to the Priory of Lewes in Sussex, to whom he was Tenant, and paid the Rent of 20 s. a Year, without being bound to Reparations.

Mention is made in divers Records of a House in Wood-street, then called Black-ball; but no Man, at this Day, can tell in what Part.

In the Time of King Richard II. Sir Henry Percy, the Son and Heir of Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, had a House in Wood-street in London, (whether this Black-ball or no, it is hard to trace) wherein he treated King Richard, the Duke of Lancaster, the Duke of York, the Earl-Marshal, and his Father, the Earl of Northumberland, with others, at Supper.

There was in Cripplegate Church, of old Time, a Fraternity or Brotherhood of our Blessed Lady, or Corpus Christi, and St. Giles; founded by John Bellancer, in the 35th Year of the Reign of King Edward III.

Some small Distance from the East End of this Church was a Water-Conduit; brought in Pipes of Lead from Highbury; by John Middleton, one of the Executors to Sir William Eastfield. The Inhabitants adjoining castellated it, at their own Costs and Charges, about the Year 1483.

Cripplegate Conduit.

At a Common Council afterwards, held it was agreed, That the Chamberlain should, at the Costs of the Chamber, cause the common Well and Spring at St. Giles's to be covered with a House of Brick.

There was also a Bos of clear Water in the Wall of the Church-Yard, made at the Charges of Richard Whittington, sometime Mayor, and was like to that of Billingsgate. The same was afterwards turned into a Pump, and so quite decayed.

A Well in the Church-yard Wall.

There was also a Pool of clear Water, near the Parsonage, on the West Side thereof; which was filled up in the Reign of Henry VI. The Spring was cooped in, and arched over with hard Stone; and Stairs of Stone to go down to the Spring, on the Bank of the Town-Ditch. And this was also done of the Goods, and by the Executors, of Richard Whittington.

A Pool.

In Whitecross-street, King Henry V. built one fair House, and founded there a Brotherhood of St. Giles, to be kept. Which House had some Time been an Hospital of the French Order, by the Name of St. Giles without Cripplegate, in the Reign of Edward I. The King having the Jurisdiction, and appointing a Custos thereof, for the Precinct of St. Giles, &c. Which Hospital being suppressed, the Lands were given to the Brotherhood, for Relief of the Poor.

Old French Hospital.

In this Street was a White Cross, and near it was built an Arch of Stone, under which ran a Course of Water down to the Moor, called now Moorfields. Which being too narrow for the free Course of the Water, and so an Annoyance to the Inhabitants, the twelve Men presented it at an Inquisition of the King's Justices, 3 Edw. I. And they presented the Abbot of Ramsay, and the Prior of St. Trinity; whose Predecessors, six Years past, had built (as the Inquisition ran) a certain Stone Arch at White Cross, in the Ward of Cripplegate, beyond the Course of a certain Water, coming down from Smethfeld del Barbican, in that Ward, towards the Moor. Which Bridge in Whitecross-street presented.

Arch

Arch the aforefaid Abbot and Prior, and their Succeffors, ought to maintain and repair: And which was fo ftrait, that the Water there could not have its full Courfe, to the Annoyance of the Inhabitants. Hereupon it was commanded the Sheriffs to diftrain the faid Abbot and Convent to mend the faid Arch.

One Alley, of divers Tenements, over-againft the North Wall of St. Giles's Church-Yard, was appointed to be Alms-Houfes for the Poor, wherein they dwelt Rent-free, and otherwife were relieved: But the faid Brotherhood was fuppreffed by Henry VIII. Sir John Grefbam, Mayor, purchafed the Lands thereof, and gave it to the Maintenance of a Free-School, which he had founded at Holt, a Market-Town in Norfolk.

Red-crofs.

Jews Gar-den.

In Redcrofs-ftreet, on the Weft Side from St. Giles's Church-Yard, up to the Crofs, were many good Houfes, built outward, with divers Alleys, turning into a large Plat of Ground, of old Time called the Jews Garden; as being the only Place appointed them in England, wherein to bury their Dead; 'till the Year 1177, the 24th of Henry II. that it was permitted them (after long Suit to the King and Parliament at Oxford) to have fpecial Place affigned them in every Quarter where they dwelt.

Tenementum & Terras, ficut. in Parochia Sti. Botbi. extra Aldrichgate, int. Tenement. nuper Ricci. Odibam ex parte Australi, ac Gardinum vocat. Jewyn Garden ex parte Orien.

This Plat of Ground remained to the faid Jews, 'till the Time of their final Banifhment out of England, and was afterwards turned into fair Garden-Plats, and Summer-Houfes for Pleafure.

Jewen-ftreet.

It is now called Jewen-ftreet, being a continued Street of Houfes on each Side of the Way, and leads into Alderfgate-ftreet. This Place, with the Appurtenances, was antiently called Leyreftowe; which King Edward I. granted to William de Monte Forte, Dean of St. Paul's, London: Being a Place (as it is expreffed in a Record) without Cripplegate, and the Suburbs of London, called Leyreftowe; and which was the burying Place of the Jews of London; which was valued at 40 s. per Annum.

Beech-lane.

Ramfey-houfe.

On the Eaft Side of this Redcrofs-ftreet is Beech-lane, perhaps fo called of Nicholas de la Beech, Lieutenant of the Tower of London, put out of that Office in the 13th of Edward III. This Lane ftretches from Redcrofs-ftreet to Whitecrofs-ftreet, and is replenifhed, not with Beech Trees, but with ordinary Houfes of Brick and Timber; amongft which was (of old Time) a great Houfe, belonging to the Abbot of Ramfey, for his Lodging, when he repaired to the City.

It was fince called Drewrie-Houfe, from Sir Drew Drewrie, Knt. Owner thereof.

Barbican.

On the Weft Side of Redcrofs-ftreet is a Street called Barbican; becaufe, fome Time, there ftood on the North Side thereof a Burghkenning, or Watch-Tower of the City; called in fome Language a Barbican, as a Bikenning is called a Beacon. This Burghkenning, by the Name of the Manor of Bafe-court, was given by Edward III. to Robert Ufford, Earl of Suffolk; and was after that pertaining to Peregrine Bertie, Lord Willoughby Erefby.

No. 77.

This Barbican, and fome Land about it, belonged to the Crown, in Edward I's Time. For in an Inquifition made 3 Edward I. concerning Purpreftures in the City, one Thomas Juvenal, about 12 Years before, appropriated to himfelf of the King's Soil, without Le Barbeken, a certain Place, containing 40 Feet in Length, and four Feet in Breadth, and inclofed the fame Place with an Earth Wall: And Nicholas Brabanzoun then held it. Upon this Prefentment made by the Jurats, the King's Juftices commanded the Sheriffs of London to fummon him the faid Nicholas; who faid, That he had nothing to do with, nor laid any Claim to the faid Purprefture; but that he was Tenant to Thomas Fitz-Simon de Burgh. He, the faid Thomas, came and prayed, that he might rent the fame of the King for 3 d. per Ann. which was granted, becaufe the twelve fworn Men witneffed, that the faid Inclofure was no Annoyance. And it was adjudged, that the King might recover the Arrearages of the faid Purprefture, viz. 3 s. but no Forfeiture, becaufe it was of the faid Thomas's doing.

Gar-ter-houfe.

Next adjoining to this, was another great Houfe, called Garter-Houfe, or Place; fome Time built by Sir Thomas Writhe, or Writhefley, Knt. alias Garter, Principal King of Arms, fecond Son of Sir John Writhe, Knt. alias Garter, and was Uncle to the firft Thomas, Earl of Southampton, Knight of the Garter, and Chancellor of England. He built this Houfe, and in the Top thereof a Chapel, which he dedicated by the Name of St. Trinitatis in Alto.

There was 'till very lately a handsome Stone Poftern-Gate at the South End of each Poftern-ftreet, which now lie open, facing Aldermanbury and Bafinghall-ftreet, thofe Gates being removed as ufelefs, and for the better Accommodation of the neighbouring Inhabitants, by Order of Common Council.

Names.

VARIOUS are the Opinions concerning the Etymology of this Ward. Some derive it from Dour-gate, which, they fay, fignifies Water-gate, and ftood in the Wall next the Thames, at the Bottom of the Hill: Others will have it derived from its Situation, which is a great Defcent, and the Gate which ftood at the Bottom of the Hill: Which laft Opinion has prevailed fo far, that modern Writers have given it the Name of Downgate; while, in common Ufe, the Citizens differ from both, and call it Dowgate Ward.

See what has been written concerning this Gate on Pages 29, 30.

Bounds. This Ward is bounded on the East by Candlewick and Bridge Wards, on the North by Wallbrook Ward, on the West by Vintry Ward, and on the South by the River of Thames.

Extent. It extends from St. Martin's-lane in the East, to Cloak-lane in the West, and from thence both East and West to the River Thames, in almost a strait Line; within which Tract are contained, on the South Side of Thames-street, between it and the Thames, Old Swan-lane, Cold-harbour, Alballows-lane, Campion-lane, Friars-lane, Cofins's-lane, Dowgate-dock, and the Stillyard; St. Laurence Poultny's Church-yard; Duxford-lane, as far as St. Laurence's Church-yard; Suffolk-lane, as far as the Passage into Busb-lane; Busb-lane, almost the whole; Dowgate-hill, as far as Tallow-chandlers-Hall Northwards; Chequer-yard, Elbow-lane, so far as the Church-yard, only the South-East Side of the Way; Cloak-lane, the South Side, to one hundred and sixty Feet West of Dowgate-hill.

Thames-street. Thames-street is a great Thoroughfare for Carts to the several Wharfs, which renders it a Place of a considerable Trade, and to be well inhabited. The Part of Thames-street in this Ward begins Westward at Little Elbow-lane, and reaches Eastward to the Old Swan-lane, taking in the West Side thereof. The Places on the South Side next the Thames, beginning Westward, are as followeth:

Friars-lane. Friars-lane or alley, very mean, narrow, and long, having a Passage into Dowgate-dock, where there is a Lay-stall for the City Soil.

Brewers-lane. Brewers-lane, also very ordinary, and runs down to Dowgate-dock, which is likewise as ordinary, chiefly serving for a Passage for Carts to the Lay-stall.

Cofins's-lane, near the Still-yard, hath an open Passage for Carts to the Thames Side. In this Place the Still-yard Merchants had a large Hall.

Wild-goose or Wind-goose-alley or aourt, said to be built by the Still-yard Merchants.

Still-yard. The Still-yard, or Steel-yard, a large, open Place, with a wide Passage for Carts to the River Side, where there is a Crane, and Stairs for landing Iron, of which here are always large Quantities kept. In this Yard are some good Houses for Merchants who trade in Iron, for which it is of Note, but was formerly of greater, from the Merchants of Almain. Here are likewise, at present, large Warehouses for depositing Goods belonging to the East-India Company. See Page 915.

Alballows-lane, pretty well built and inhabited, hath a Passage to the Thames, where there is a Pair of Stairs to land or take Water at.

Angel-alley also but ordinary, the lower Part next the Thames taken up by a Dyer.

White-cock-alley, but narrow, the lower End falling into Dyers-ball-ground; and here stood Dyers-ball, which being burnt down in the Fire of London, was not rebuilt; but the Company disposed of the Ground, which is converted to other Uses.

Near this also stands a House which was the Fisbermens-ball, but is now let in Tene-ments.

George-alley, but narrow and ordinary, having at the lower End a Dye-house.

Ebgate-lane, or Old Swan-alley, indifferently large and good, leading down to the Old Swan Stairs; a Place much used by Watermen, as being a noted Landing-place, and very commodious, having so good a Pair of Stairs. It is a Place well built and inhabited. The East Side of this Lane is in Bridge Ward within.

On the North Side of Thames-street are these Places, viz. St. Laurence Poultny-lane, comes out of Canon-street, and falls down into Thames-street; a Place well built, and inhabited by Merchants and other Traders. Of this Lane see more in Candlewick Ward.

Duxford-lane comes out of St. Laurence Poultny-hill, and falls into Thames-street, a Place of no great Account.

Suffolk-lane also goes out of Thames-street, and, with a turning Passage by Crofs-lane, which is but ordinary, comes into Green Lettice-lane, which is in Candlewick Ward, and so into Canon-street.

Great Busb-lane comes out of Canon-street and falls into Thames-street; but the Part in this Ward goeth no farther than Scotch-yard, which is a good, large, open Place, well inhabited. This Lane is narrow, but well inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute. Out of this Lane is Chequer-yard, which hath a Passage into Dowgate-hill, and is a good open Place. On the South Side is a Passage into Hand-yard, which is but ordinary, and falls into Thames-street.

Little Busb-lane, of small Account, comes out of Great Busb-lane, and with a turning Passage falls into Thames-street.

Double-hand-court, very ordinary.

Dowgate-hill is such a great Descent towards Thames-street, that, in great and sudden Rains, the Water here comes down from other Streets with that Swiftnefs, that it oftentimes causeth a Flood in the lower Part. This Street is large and open, the Houses well built and inhabited. On the West Side, near Budge-row, is the Church-yard of St. John Evangelist, where formerly the Church stood, not being rebuilt since the Fire. Adjoining to the Church-yard Wall is Cloak-lane, which runs Westward to College-hill. Of this Lane only the South Side is in this Ward, the other Part being in Vintry Ward.

Elbow-lane, so called from its bending from Dowgate with an Elbow to Thames-street. Out of this Great Elbow-lane, over-against St. Michael's Royal Church, is Little Elbow-lane, which is that Part that makes the Bending, and falls into Thames-street, but a Place of no great Account.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward every Night, a Constable, a Beadle, and thirty-six Watchmen.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward are to serve in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of October.

It hath an Alderman, eight Common-Councilmen, eight Constables, five Scavengers, fourteen teen Wardmote-Inquestmen, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at twenty-eight Pounds.

Alderman and Common-Councilmen. The Alderman of this Ward is Sir Richard Glynn, Knt. and the Common Council are Mr. John Abbington, Deputy, Mr. Daniel Mackin, Mr. William Watts, Mr. Richard Swithin, Mr. John Milward, Mr. William Shemelt, Mr. Timothy Yates, and Mr. Christopher Robinson.

Memorable Things. In this Ward are, First, (1.) the Parish and Parish-Church of Allhallows the Great, and (2.) the united Parish of Allhallows the Less, whose Church was not rebuilt after its Destruction in the Fire of London.

Halls. Secondly, Several Halls belonging to the Companies of this City: (1.) On the West Side of Dowgate-street is the Tallow-chandlers-hall, a large, handsome Building; with Piazzas, adorned with Columns and Arches of the Tuscan Order.

Tallow-chandlers-hall. (2.) Somewhat lower stands the Skinners-hall, a noble Structure, built with fine Brick; and richly finished, the Hall with right Wainscot, and the Parlour with odoriferous Cedar. It is said to have cost eighteen thousand Pounds building. This Hall was called Copped-hall by Downgate, in the Parish of St. John upon Wallbrook. In the nineteenth Year of Edward II. Ralph Cobham possessed it, with five Shops, &c.

Innholders-hall. (3.) Innholders-hall in Elbow-lane, a pretty neat Building, well adapted to the Uses of that antient Company.

Joiners-hall. (4.) In Friars-lane, formerly called Greenwich-lane, is Joiners-hall, which is remarkable for a curious and magnificent Screen at the Entrance into it, having Demi-savages and other Enrichments, well carved, in right Wainscot, and the great Parlour is wainscotted with Cedar.

Watermens-hall. (5.) Watermens-hall, situate with its Front to the Thames, is a very handsome Brick Building.

Plumbers-hall. (6.) Plumbers-hall, which is in Chequer-yard, Dowgate-hill, and is a good, handsome Building.

Steel-yard Thirdly, Near to the East of Cosin-lane (so called from one Cosin, the Builder thereof) is the Steel-yard, or Steel-house, as some call it. This originally was the Hall of the Almain, Anseatick, or German Merchants, or Place where they used to store (See Pages 93 and 105) as well Wheat, Rye, and other Grain, as Cables, Ropes, Mafts, Pitch, Tar, Flax, Hemp, Linen Cloth, Wainscots, Wax, Steel, and other profitable Merchandizes. Unto these Merchants, in the Year 1259, Henry III. in the forty-fourth of his Reign, at the Request of his Brother Richard Earl of Cornwall, King of Almain, granted, that all and singular the Merchants, having a House in the City of London, commonly called Guilda Aula Teutonicorum, should be maintained and upholden through the whole Realm, by all such Freedom, and free Usages or Liberties, as by the King, and in his noble Progenitors Time, they had and enjoyed, &c. This Charter granted to the Teutonics the King confirmed by this Letter, directed to the Citizens of London, in these Words:

Henricus Dei Gratia, &c.

“Henry, by the Grace of God, King of England, Lord of Ireland, Duke of Aquitain, &c.

“To the Citizens of London to whom these Presents shall come, greeting: Know ye that, at the Instance of the most Serene Prince of the Roman Empire; our Brother, we have granted to these Merchants of Almain, who have a House in our City of London, which is commonly called Gyball Teutonicorum, that we will maintain them all and every one, and preserve them through our whole Kingdom, in all their Liberties and free Customs, which they have used in our Times, and in the Times of our Progenitors, and will not withdraw such Liberties and free Customs from them; nor suffer them to be at all withdrawn from, &c. Witness Myself at Westminster, the fifteenth of June, in the forty-fourth Year of our Reign.”

Edward I. renewed and confirmed that Charter of Liberties granted by his Father. And, in the tenth Year of the same Edward, Henry Wales being Mayor, a great Controversy did arise between the said Mayor and the Merchants of the Haunce of Almain, about the Reparations of Bishopsgate, then likely to fall; for that the said Merchants enjoyed divers Privileges, in respect of maintaining the said Gate, which they now denied to repair. For the appeasing of which Controversy, the King sent his Writ to the Treasurer and Barons of his Exchequer, commanding that they should make Inquisition thereof: Before whom the Merchants being called, when they were not able to discharge themselves, since they enjoyed the Liberties to them granted for the same, a Precept was sent to the Mayor and Sheriffs to distrain the said Merchants to make the Reparations, namely, Gerard Marbod, Alderman of the Haunce, Ralph de Cuffarde, a Citizen of Colen, Ludero de Denevar, a Burgess of Trivon, John of Aras, a Burgess of Trivon, John de Dele, a Burgess of Munster, then remaining in the said City of London, for themselves and all other Merchants of the Haunce: And so they granted two hundred and ten Marks Sterling to the Mayor and Citizens, and undertook that they and their Successors should from Time to Time repair the said Gate; and bear the third Part of the Charges in Money, and Men to defend it in Case of Need.

And, for this Agreement, the said Mayor and Citizens granted to the said Merchants their Liberties, which they long enjoyed; as, namely, amongst the other Things, that they might lay up their Grain, which they brought into this Realm, in Inns, and sell it in their Garners, within the Space of forty Days after they had laid it up, except by the Mayor and Citizens they were expressly forbidden, because of Dearth, or other reasonable Occasions. Also they might have their Alderman, as they had been accustomed, provided always he were of the City, and presented to the Mayor and Aldermen of the City, as often as any should be chosen, and should take the Oath before them to maintain Justice in their Courts, and to behave themselves in their Office according to Law, and as it stood with the Customs of the City.

This whole Matter between the City and the Merchants of the Haunce is thus related, in an authentick authentick Book in the Chamber of London, which is thus translated from the Latin:

An Agreement between the Citizens of London and the Teutronics, Anno 10 Edward, Son of King Henry. Henry le Galeis, Mayor of London, Anno 1282.

“ Then by Reason of the Decay of a certain Gate of the said City, which was called Bishopsgate, a Contention arose between the said Mayor and the Citizens of London on the one Part, and the Merchants of the Haunce of the Almains, then abiding in the said City, on the other, upon the Reparation of the said Gate, which threatened Ruin: To the Building and Repair of which the said Merchants, and others of the before said Haunce of the Parts of Almain resorting to the same City, were obliged, for certain Liberties which the said Merchants have in the said City, and which they have long used, upon Account of such Building and Repairing, as the same Mayor and Citizens asserted, &c. The said Merchants denied it.

“ In the mean Time, the Contention depending, the King, at the Suggestion of the said Mayor and Citizens, wrote to the Treasurer and Barons of his Exchequer, that, if they should find the said Merchants were bound to the Repair of the said Gate, they should distrain upon them. At length the Parties, coming before the said Treasurer and Barons, when nothing was propounded, on their Parts, which might excuse them from the Reparation, especially when it appeared concerning the Liberty which they had in the said City; and for this Cause it was commanded by the same Treasurer and Barons, that the Mayor and Sheriffs should distrain them to this Repair: The aforesaid Merchants, viz. Gerard Marbod, Alderman of the said Haunce, Ludolphus de Cussa, of the City of Coln, Luderus de Linnenare, a Burgeis of Trevir, Bertram of Hamburgh, Godeschalc de Hudendale, Burgher of Trevir, John de Dole, Burgeis of Munster, then being in the same City, for themselves and all other Merchants, and their Fellows of the Haunce aforesaid, whosoever and whensoever resorting thither for the future, for the Good of Peace, yielded and promised to the said Mayor and Citizens of London, to the Repair of the said Gate for the present, two hundred and forty Marks Sterling to be paid; and that then their Successors, Merchants of the Haunce, for all Time hereafter, will repair it, as often as there shall be Need; and in Defence of the said Gate, as often as there shall be need to keep it, shall bear the third Part of the Custody thereof, at their Cost, and Men above, and the Mayor and Citizens two Parts of the said Custody below; and, in Consideration of this Peace, Fine, and Concord, the Mayor and Citizens have granted them their Liberties, which they have hitherto reasonably used, to have to them and their Successors the Merchants of the Haunce for ever.

“ And moreover, for the aforesaid Reparation and Custody, that they be quit for ever of Murage, i. e. the Charge of repairing the City “ Walls, as much as in them is; and that they may house and sell their Corn, which shall be brought in by them to be sold, in their Houses and Granaries for forty Days, for the Time of their aforesaid Housing, unless the said Housing be expressly forbidden by the Lord the King, or the Mayor and Citizens, by Reason of the Dearth of Corn, or some other necessary Matter.

“ They granted also to them, that they might have their Alderman, as they had in former Times; yet so, that that Alderman be of the Freedom of the said City; and, as often as he shall be chosen of the said Merchants, he be presented to the Mayor and Aldermen of the City, and take an Oath before them to do Right and Justice in all his Courts, and to behave himself in his Office as he ought and hath been accustomed, saving to the City its Right and Custom.

“ And the said Merchants promised, that they and their Successors, as often as there should be Need, would be distrained for Reparation and Custody of the said Gate, to be performed in the Form aforesaid by the same Merchants and Citizens. All these Things the Parties aforesaid yielded and promised faithfully to keep; and, for the greater Security to be made upon these Things by the Parties, together with the Seals appendant to this Writing between themselves, have procured the Seal of the illustrious Lord King of England to be hung to it, for perpetual Memory of the Matter aforesaid. Dated at London, in the Month of June, the Year aforesaid.”

Thus much for their Privileges; whereby it appears, that they were great Merchants of Corn, brought out of the East Parts hither, insomuch that the Occupiers of Husbandry in this Land were forced to complain of them for bringing in such Abundance, when the Corn of this Realm was at an easy Price. Whereupon it was ordained by Parliament, That no Person should bring into any Part of this Realm, by Way of Merchandize, Wheat, Rye, or Barley, growing out of the said Realm, at any Time when the Quarter of Wheat exceeded not the Price of six Shillings and eight Pence, Rye four Shillings the Quarter, and Barley three Shillings the Quarter, upon Forfeiture, the one Half to the King, the other Half to the Seizers thereof. These Merchants of the Haunce had their Guildhall in Thames-street, in Place aforesaid, by the said Cosin-lane. Their Hall was large, built of Stone, with three arched Gates towards the Street.

Afterwards, to wit, in the sixth of Richard II. they hired one House next adjoining to their old Hall, which some Time belonged to Richard Lions, a famous Lapidary, one of the Sheriffs of London in the forty-ninth of Edward III. and who, in the fourth of Richard II. was, by the Rebels of Kent, drawn out of that House, and beheaded in West-Cheap. This also was a great House, with a large Wharf on the Thames; and the Way thereunto was called Windgoose or Wildgoose-lane, which is now called Windgoose-alley, for that the same Alley is, for the most Part, built on by the Steelyard Merchants.

About

About the Time of King Henry IV. the English began to trade themselves into the East Parts; at which the Easterlings, or Merchants of the Dutch Haunce, were so offended, that they took several of their Ships and Goods, and offered them several other Injuries; which occasioned great Complaints and Differences between the said King Henry IV. and Conradus de Junigen, then Master-General of the Dutch Order in Prussia with the Haunce Town, and divers Embassies passed betwixt them on that Account; the Result of which, in short, was this: That the said King Henry IV. finding, by the said Privileges granted to Foreigners, his own Subjects (to the great Prejudice of the Realm) very much crippled in their Trade, did revoke such Parts of the Privileges of the aforesaid Dutch Company, as were inconsistent with the carrying on of a Trade by the Natives of this Realm: And, for the better Encouragement of his own Subjects, did, in the fifth Year of his Reign, grant his first Charter to the Merchants trading into the East-Land, containing many great Privileges and Immunities, as by the said Charter may appear: Which had a good Effect for the bringing of the Trade much more into the Hands of the Natives of this Realm than was before. King Edward IV. for their more ample Encouragement, did, in the second Year of his Reign, grant another large Charter to the Merchants of England, especially to those residing in the Netherlands; with several additional Immunities and Privileges, as by the Charter at large may appear.

In the first and second of Philip and Mary was granted a Charter to the Russia Company, afterwards confirmed by Act of Parliament in the eighth Year of Queen Elizabeth.

Until whose Time, tho' the Trade of this Nation was carried on much more by the Natives thereof than had been formerly, yet had the Society of the Dutch Haunce at the Steel-yard much the Advantage of them, by Means of their well-regulated Societies, and the Privileges they enjoyed; insomuch that almost the whole Trade was driven by them to that Degree, that Queen Elizabeth herself, when she came to have a War, was forced to buy the Hemp, Pitch, Tar, Powder, and other Naval Provisions which she wanted, of Foreigners, and that too at their Rates. Nor were there any Stores of either in the Land to supply her Occasions on a sudden, but what, at great Rates, she prevailed with them to fetch for her, even in Time of War, her own Subjects being then but very little Traders.

To remedy which, she fell upon the Consideration how she might at home have a well-grounded Dependence, to have those necessary Commodities by her, that so she might not want them when she most needed them; and, after great Deliberation, no better Expedient could be found by the said Queen and her Council than by encouraging her own Subjects to be Merchants; which she did by erecting out of them several Societies of Merchants, as that of the East-Land Company, and other Companies; by which Means, and by cancelling many of the Privileges of the fore-mentioned Dutch Haunce Society, the Trade in general, by Degrees, came to be managed by the Natives of this Realm; and, consequently, the Profits of all those Trades accrued to the English Nation; Trade in general, and English Shipping, were increased; her own Customs vastly augmented; and, what was at first the great End of all, obtained, viz. that she had constantly lying at home, in the Hands of her own Subjects, all Sorts of naval Provisions and Stores, which she could make use of as her Occasions required them, without any Dependence on her Neighbours for the same.

And thus, by Means of the erecting the fore-mentioned Societies, and preserving and encouraging that of the Merchants-Adventurers, was the Trade at first gained from Foreigners to the Natives of this Realm, to its inestimable Advantage.

The Abbot of St. Albans had a Messuage here, with a Key, given to him in the thirty-fourth of Henry VI.

There was another great House which some Time pertained to John Raynwell, Stock-fishmonger, Mayor; and it was by him given to the Mayor and Commonalty, to the End that the Profits thereof should be disposed in Deeds of Piety: Which House, in the fifteenth of Edward IV. was confirmed to the said Merchants in Manner following, viz.

"It is ordained by our Sovereign Lord and his Parliament, that the said Merchants of Almain, being of the Company called the Guild-ball Teutonicorum, or the Flemish Geld, that now be, or hereafter shall be, shall have, hold, and enjoy, to them and their Successors forever, the said Place called the Steel-house, yielding to the Mayor and Commonalty an annual Rent of seventy Pounds three Shillings and four Pence, &c. and other Rents to others."

There were also Merchants of Coln trafficking here, who seem to be the Beginners of this Haunce Trade. These formerly paid divers Duties and Customs to the Kings of this Land, and particularly two Shillings from their Guild-ball; which King Henry III. in the Year 1235, took off by his Charter, which was to this Tenor:

"Know ye, that we have quit-claimed, for us and our Heirs, our beloved Citizens of Coln, and their Merchandizes, of those two Shillings which they were wont to give from their Guildball, London, and of all Customs and Demands which belong to us in London, and throughout our whole Land in England: And we have granted them to go safe and come safe through all our Land, and to buy and sell both in the Town of London, and elsewhere, saving the Liberty of our City of London. Wherefore we will and firmly command, &c. Witness the venerable Father William, Bishop of Carlisle, William de Ferraris, Gilbert Basset, Walter Beauchamp, &c. by the Hand of the venerable Father the Bishop of Chichester, our Chancellor, at Daintry, the eighth of November, An. Reg. 20."

Which Charter King Edward, his Son, confirmed Anno 1290, by his Charter dated at Langley, the eighteenth of his Reign, July 28, which ran to this Tenor:

through Complaint of the English Merchants, the Liberty of the Steel-yard Merchants was seized into the King's Hands. See Page 248.

Merchant-Taylors
School.

Fourthly, In Suffolk-lane, near Candlewick-street, in the Parish of St. Laurence Poultney, is Merchant-Taylors School; a Foundation of great Fame and Reputation, founded in the Year 1561, 3 Eliz.
by the worshipful Company of the Merchant-Taylors of London, in the Masterhip of Emanuel Lu-car: Richard Hills, some Time Master of the said Company, having before given 500*l.* toward the Purchase of an House, called, The Manor of the Rose, belonging to the Duke of Buckingham, for that Purpose. And therein was this School antiently kept. But that House being destroyed by the great Fire in 1666, the present Buildings were erected upon the Site of it, at the Charge of the said Company of Merchant-Taylors.

The School is a long and spacious Building, supported on the East by many Stone Pillars, which form an handsome Cloister, within which are Apartments for the three Ushers. Adjoining to the School is a Library supported, in like Manner, by Pillars of Stone, and well furnished with Books. And South of the Library is the Part called The Chapel. Contiguous to these is a large House appropriated to the Head-Master.

The State and Condition of
it.

This School consisteth of six, or more truly of eight Forms, where near three hundred Boys have their Education; whereof by the Statutes of the School an hundred are taught gratis; fifty at 2*s.* 6*d.* a Quarter; and an hundred at 5*s.* a Quarter. And, for the due instructing of these,
the School maintains a Master, whose Salary is 10*l.* a Year, but his Benefits are otherwise very considerable, and three Ushers. And, for the better Inquiry into the Proficiency of all the Scholars, there is an Order appointed for the Probation of the School to be made only by the Master and the three Ushers. The first Probation to be on the 11th Day of March, the second on the 11th of September, the third on the 11th of December, not being Sundays, and then upon the next Day following. And there are excellent Orders set down in the Registry, kept in the School Library, to the Number of thirteen, directory of the Master in this Business, as to his Probation and Trial of the Abilities of all the Boys that learn there.

The School's three Pro-bations.

A fourth Probation appointed.

In the Year 1645, the Company of Merchant-Taylors appointed a fourth Probation, upon the Motion of Mr. Dugard, then chief Master of this Grammar School, viz. that there shall be another private Probation of the Scholars, besides these three which are already settled by the Orders of the School: And this is on the 15th Day of June yearly. The precise Manner of this Examination is set down in the School Registry; and all the Orders thereof allowed and approved under the Hands of some of the greatest Scholars and Divines in those Times, viz. John Overal,

D. D. Dean of St. Paul's; John Dove, D. D.
John Spencer, D. D. Nic. Fenton, D. D. John Childerley, D. D.

It was further thought fit afterwards, for the Satisfaction of the Master and Wardens, and Court of Assistants of the Merchant-Taylors, as well for the true and faithful Performance of the Probation of the Master and the three Ushers, as likewise to know what Boys profit most, and be the best and likeliest Scholars; that the Probations themselves should have their Examination and Trial, to be done at two several Times every Year. And this Examination to be made by two judicious Men, well learned in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, being by the Master and Wardens thereunto required two or three Days before.
The Place of Examination to be in the South Part of the School, commonly called The Chapel.
The Time to be between the 11th and 21st Days of the Months of March and September. And the whole Business to be so ordered, that the Examination be fully done between the Hours of six and eleven. The Master and Wardens, or two of them, to be at the School with the two learned Men at six of the Clock in the Morning.

Examinations twice a Year.

Upon these Days, which are called the Doctor's Days, after the Business of Examination in the Chapel is finished, the Audience, which is generally pretty numerous, return into the School, where certain publick Exercises are then performed by the eight senior Scholars or Monitors of the School.

There is yet another publick Examination of the Scholars of the Upper-form, by the President and Fellows of St. John Baptist College in Oxford, upon the 11th Day of June yearly. This is previous to the Election of Scholars to be made upon that Day, to fill up the vacant Fellowships in St. John's College; of the Fellows of which College thirty-seven are supplied from this School.
After the publick Exercises of this Day are finished, the Dean of the College addresses himself to the Scholars, out of whose Number the Vacancies are to be filled up, in a Latin Speech suited to this Occasion.

At this Time an Account is usually printed, containing the Names and Order of the Head-Scholars, their Births, Admission, and Continuance in the Head-form; and also of the Subjects and Order of the Orations. One of these Papers for the Year 1752 lying now before us, we shall, by Way of Specimen, exhibit so much of it as relates to the Exercises:

“ Imprimis, “ Orationes gratulatoriæ duæ;
“ Quarum altera Latine habenda, } E. W.
“ Græce altera, } C. W.

A Catalogue of the Masters of this School.	The Masters of this famous School, from the first Foundation of it to the present Time, with the Year of their respective Entrance, and the Time of their Continuance, the following Table will shew.
	Names of the Masters.
Masters.	Richard Mulcaster, first Master. He was bred at Eaton School, elected Scholar of King's College in Cambridge in 1548, and Student of Christ's-Church in Oxford, 1555; where he proceeded in Arts, and stood in the Act celebrated the following Year; being then eminent for his great Skill in the Greek Tongue. Afterwards spending near five Years at the University in continual Study, he made so great Proficiency in several Sorts of Learning, that he was unanimously chosen Master of this School, September 24, 1561. Where exercising his Gifts in a most admirable Way of Instruction till 1586, in all which Time this School happily prospered under his Vigilancy, St. John's College in Oxford was supplied with such hopeful Plants, that it soon after flourished and became a fruitful Nursery. Many Years after, this Gentleman was removed to the Government of the Free-school near St. Paul's, and being, by the Gift of the Queen, made Parson of the rich Parsonage of Stanford-Rivers in Essex, he there died, April 15, 1611. He writ, as hath been mentioned, a Tract about the Education of Children; and a Book, called The Elementary, for the true writing of the English Tongue, printed in 1582, wherein his Learning may be seen, being but the first Part of the said Elementary; wherein he designed to shew the whole Matter which Children were to learn, and the whole Manner how Masters were to teach them.
Nov. 8, 1586.	Henry Wilkinson;	he continued Master five Years and eleven Months.
Octob. 6, 1592.	Edmund Smith;	he continued Master six Years and almost eight Months.
Maii 19, 1599.	William Hayne.	This Man gave several Books to Sion College Library, when it was first erected, about 1631, viz. Stevens's Thesaurus, an Hebrew Bible of Plantin's Edition, &c. See the Registry in that Library. He continued Master of this School twenty-four Years and nine Months.
Jan. 29, 1624.	Nicholas Grey, A. M.	succeeded. He had been first Master of the Charter-house School, and, January 29, 1624, was admitted chief Master of this School, where continuing till February 13, 1631, he was made chief Master of the School at Eaton-College, at length D. D. and Fellow of that House. But, being outed in the grand Rebellion, he was put to great Difficulties, till he obtained the Mastership of Tunbridge School in Kent, some Time before the Restoration, where he continued till the King's Return: And, being then restored to his Preferments, he died soon after, viz. about the Beginning of October, 1660.
	He is Author, amongst other Things, of a Dictionary in English and Latin, Latin and English, several times printed at London.
Feb. 13, 1631.	John Edwards	was Successor to Dr. Grey. He continued here two Years and about nine Months, and was succeeded by
Oct. 31, 1634.	William Staple,	who enjoyed the Mastership of this School for about ten Years; after whom,
Maii 10, 1644.	William Dugard	became Head-master. This worthy Person was discharged from the Government of the School, and committed to Newgate, by the Council of State, February 20, 1649; because that he, having a Propriety in a Printing-Press, had printed there Salmasius's Defence of King Charles I. dedicated to his right and lawful Heir King Charles II. soon after that barbarous Act committed upon the Person of his Royal Father. An Account of which Affair take from the Register of his Scholars now remaining in Sion College :

Ad 20 Februarii, 1649.

“ Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum.”

E carcere Novæ Portæ, 7 Mart. 1649. Gulielmus Dugard.

But Mr. Dugard shortly after procured his Enlargement, and kept a private School upon St. Peter's Hill, till he was reinstated at Merchant-Taylors; for in the Register above quoted immediately follows :

“ Nomina discipulorum quos ego Gulielmus Dugard admisi in privatam Scholam quam aperui in vico vulgo dicto Peter's Hill, in ædibus conductitiis, ab Aprilis 15, ad Septem. 25, 1650, quo tempore à dignissima societate Mercatorum Scissorum, hortatu tamen Concilii Status, ad antiquam provinciam scholæ Mercatorum Scissorum restitutus sum.”

John Stevens became Head-Master on the Deprivation of Mr. Dugard. He continued only seven Months; and left in the School Registry this single Memorial of himself, in Regard of his short Continuance here :

Res Deus nostras celeri citatas Turbine versat.

John Stevens, September 25, 1650.

William Dugard, restored by the Company of Merchant-Taylors: And that at the Motion of the Council of State, who had before punished him so severely.

The Succeedings of these two last were thus expressed in a Distich :

Dugardum sequitur Stephanus, Stephanumque vicissim Dugardus : Sortes versat utrinque Deus.

Registry of the School.

This Dugard was a very diligent, exact, and excellently learned Man in all grammatical Learning; and under his Care and Influence the School greatly flourished. He printed several Books for the Use of his School; had a good Strain himself in Oratory and Poetry. A Stroke or two of his Poetry in Greek we have of his own Hand extant in in the School Registry; where, by the way, we may see how he stood affected to the Mutations in the Age wherein he lived. First, upon the beheading of King Charles I.

Gulielmus Dugard.

Another Greek Distich remaining in the said Registry under his Hand is upon the Usurper Oliver Cromwell's Mother, buried in Westminster; which perhaps is the only Epitaph extant on her:

Ἐπὶ τῆς μητέρος τῆς Ὀλιβίης Κρομγουέλλης ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ τῇ ὡς μοιασσεῖς κειμένης.

Μήτηρ τῆς τέκνης καταράται ἐνθάδε κεῖται.

i. e. In Matrem Oliveri Cromwelli in Ecclesia Westmonasteriensi sepultam.

Mater nati execrabilis hic jacet:

Qui duos Reges, triaque regna perdidit.

This Dugard, after he had been Master seventeen Years, from the Time of his first Admission, was dismissed the School in the Year 1661, for breaking some Orders of the Company, having been publicly warned and admonished of it before, though of the Cause of this his second Deprivation no Notice is taken in the Register; and departing, he left this Verse to his Successor concerning the School Registry, which hitherto he diligently had kept himself:

School Registry.

Hanc successor scribendi Lampada trado.

Gul. Dugard, haud ita pridem Mercatorum Scissorum, jam vero privatae Scholae in Vico de Coleman-street Moderator, Nov. 21, 1661.

And such was his Reputation, that, when he opened his private School in Coleman-street, within eight Months, he had gathered 193 Scholars; for thus saith his Register: Numerus admissorum in privatam scholam à 4 Julii, 1661, ad 25 Martii, 1662, 193.

John Goad, B. D. Master of the Free-school at Tunbridge in Kent, succeeded Mr. Dugard; and continued here with good Success and great Applause till April 1681, at which Time the City was possessed by the restless Presbyterians with a Notion of the sudden Introduction of Popery amongst them, when Mr. Goad was summoned to appear before the chief Heads of the Society of Merchant-Taylors. In Obedience to which Summons he appearing, and being charged with certain Passages favouring of Popery in his Comment on the Church of England Catechism, which he had made for the Use of his Scholars, was by them discharged from the Government of the School, though with a considerable Gratuity in Plate from them, after he had presided here near twenty Years. The Particulars of this Affair may be seen at large in a Postscript to a Book, intitled, Contrivances of the fanatical Conspirators in carrying on the Treasons under Umbrage of the Popish Plot laid open: With Depositions, &c. London, 1683. The Author of which stiles Mr. Goad a pious and learned Person, so extraordinarily qualified for his Profession, that a better could not be found in the three Kingdoms.

He certainly was a Person of very good Esteem, great Piety, and valuable Learning, though something addicted to Astrology, and brought up many good Scholars. — Mr. Strype says, that, for some Time, he presented King Charles with monthly Accounts of every Day's Wind and Weather.

Being thus dismissed, he took an House in Piccadilly, to which Place many of the genteeler Sort of his Scholars repairing to be by him further instructed, he set up a private School, and continued the same to the Time of his Death, which happened October 28, 1689. In his Place at Merchant-Taylors succeeded

John Hartcliffe, A. M. Sister's Son to Dr. John Owen; which said Doctor had been extremely active in the Ruin of Mr. Goad, that this his Nephew might come into his Preferment. He remained here about five Years, was afterwards D. D. and installed Canon of Windsor, Junii 8, 1691. Entrance, Apr. 21, 1681. See the Postscript before-mentioned, p. 34.

Ambrose Bonwicke, B. D. succeeded him, and held the Mastership from 1686 to 1691, when, refusing the Oaths, he was ejected; and afterwards kept a private School at Epsom in Surry. 1686.

Matthew Shorting, D. D. was chosen Headmaster in his room. This Gentleman was of Jesus College, Mr. Strype's old Fellow Collegian, and after Conduct of King's College Cambridge. To him succeeded Oa. — 1691.

Thomas Parsell, B. D. who set forth Liturgia: Seu Liber precum communium et administrationis sacramentorum aliorumque rituum et ceremoniarum in Ecclesia Anglicana receptus; which Book has been several Times reprinted. His Successor in the School was Apr. 30. 1707.

Matthew Smith, D. D. on whose Death succeeded 1720.

John Cricke, A. M. the present worthy Master of this School. Mart. — 1730.

The present Ushers,

John Burn, B. C. L. Vice-simus Knock, B. C. L. Thomas Green, A. B.

The Gentlemen brought up at this School, Citizens and others, began an annual Feast in the Year 1698. The Collections made at these Feasts, amounting to a considerable Sum, they do lay out upon Exhibitions, to be allowed to such of the School as are superannuated, and miss of Elections.

An Account might be here subjoined of the many learned and eminent Persons both in Church and State, who have received their first Rudiments of Education in this celebrated School: But as this is not so directly relative to our present Undertaking, and will furnish sufficient Matter for a distinct History to any Writer who shall undertake that Task, we shall content ourselves with mentioning the Names only of those who more immediately occur to our Remembrance. Such are Dr. Richard Latcwar, an ingenious Latin Poet, and a noted Preacher in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth: Dr. Matthew Gwinne, Professor of Medicine in Gresham College: Dr. John Rawlinson, Chaplain in ordinary to King James I. Dr. John Buckridge, consecrated Bishop of Rochester, Anno 1611. Dr. Lancelot Andrews, successively Bishop of Chichester, Ely and Winchester: Sir James Whitlock, Knt. one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, and of the first Fellows of the College of Antiquaries: Dr. John Speed, Son of the Chronologer, an eminent Physician and Anatomist: Dr. Rowland Searchfield, Lord Bishop of Bristol: Dr. Mich. Boyle, Lord Bishop of Waterford and Lismore; and Dr. George Wilde, Lord Bishop of London-derry in Ireland: Lord Keeper Whitlock: Dr. Joseph Henshaw, Bishop of Peterborough: Dr. Edward Bernard, Savilian Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxford: Dr. William Juxon, successively Bishop of Hereford and London, and at length Lord Archbishop of Canterbury: Dr. Peter Mews, Bishop of Bath and Wells: Sir William Dawes, Bart. late Lord Archbishop of York: Sir John Cook, Knt. and LL. D. Dean of the Arches: And the present (A.D. 1720.) Lords Bishops of Lincoln, Rochester, and Salisbury.

Antiquities.
The Conduit.

(1.) At the upper End of Dowgate-hill was erected, at the City Charge, a castellated Conduit for Thames Water, A. D. 1568, and was called, The Conduit upon Dowgate; between which and the Thames there was such a Fall of Water, that in the Year 1574, on the 4th of September, the Channel rose so high by a sudden Fall of Rain, that a Lad of 18 Years old falling into it, as he endeavour'd to leap over it, was drowned, being carried away by the Violence of the Stream.

Jesus Commons

(2.) Lower down on Dowgate-hill there was a House, or College of Priests, called Jesus Commons, a House well furnished with Brass, Pewter, Napery, Plate, &c. besides a fair Library well stored with Books. All which of old Time were given to a Number of Priests that should keep Commons there; and, as one left this Place by Death, or otherwise, another should be admitted into his room.

Elbow-lane.

Old Hall.

William de Pont le Arch's House.

(3.) Down lower you have Elbow-lane; and at the Corner thereof was a great Stone House, called Old Hall, some Time pertaining to William de Pont le Arch, and by him given to the Priory of St. Mary Overy in Southwark in the Reign of Henry I. This Lane runneth West, and suddenly turneth South into Thames-street; and therefore, of that Bending, is called Elbow-lane.

The Erber.
St. Mary Bothaw.

(4.) On the East Side of Dowgate-street is the great old House, called the Erber, near to the Church of St. Mary Bothaw. Geffrey Scroope held it by the Gift of Edward III. in the fourteenth Year of his Reign. It belonged since to John Nevil, Lord of Raby; then to Richard Nevil, Earl of Warwick. Nevil, Earl of Salisbury, was lodged there in 1457. Then it came to George, Duke of Clarence, and his Heirs Male, by the Gift of Edward IV. in the fourteenth Year of his Reign.

The several Possessors of the Erber.

But to give a fuller, and that an authentick Account of this antient royal Messuage. The highest that Stow could go, was, that Edward III. gave it to one of the honourable Family of the Scroopes. The last Possessor of that Name was William le Scroope, Knt. who lived in the Reign of Henry IV. He gave it for Term of Life to his Brother Ralph, Earl of Westmorland, who married Joan, Daughter of the Duke of Lancaster, who was his second Wife: From whom descended Richard, Earl of Warwick, who possessed that House.

No. 78.

And, being slain at Barnet Field, after his Death this was given to George, Duke of Clarence, who married Isabel, Daughter of the said Richard, Earl of Warwick: Given to the said Duke by Parliament, and to his Heirs, so long as there was Issue Male of the Marquis Montacute's Body living. And if it chanced the said Issue Male to die, during the Life of the said Duke, then the said Duke to remain seized for Term of Life, saving the Right to all others than the Marquis and his Issue. Ralph Nevil, Earl of Westmorland, died, seized thereof, the 4th of Henry VI. Joan, his Wife, the 19th Year of Richard, Earl of Sarum [Son to the said Earl, of Dame Joan] the 38th of the same King, and Richard, Earl of Warwick [Son of the said Richard, Earl of Sarum] the 10th of Edward IV. and George, Duke of Clarence [who married Isabel, a Daughter of Richard, Earl of Warwick and Sarum] the 18th of the same King. After his Death, Edward, his Son, was seized of it. After George, Duke of Bedford [Son of John Nevil, Marquis Montacute, Son of Richard, Earl of Sarum, aforesaid] died without Issue Male, the first of Edward V. the Lands remaining in the Hands of Edward, Son to the Duke of Clarence, till the 15th of Henry VII. at which Time he was attainted. And so the Lands came to the Crown, and there remained till the third of Henry VIII. At which Time he gave it to John, Earl of Oxford, and the Heirs Male of his Body. And, Anno 4. the King gave the Reversion to Sir Thomas Bulleyn, Knt. and the Heirs Male of his Body. Anno 5. he restored, by his Letters Patents, Margaret, Daughter and Heir to George, Duke of Clarence, and to all the Lands of Richard, Earl of Sarum, who by Colour of Restitution entered, and was attainted the 31st of Henry VIII. So the Lands came back to the Crown, and were given, the 32d of the same King, to Sir Philip Hoby, who the 36th sold it to one Doulphin, a Draper, who, Anno 1 Marie, sold it to the Company of Drapers.

But, notwithstanding this Account by some Lawyers and Historians in those Days, it appears by the Rolls, Anno 6. Henry IV. that there was a Surrender of this Messuage of the Erber from Ralph, Earl of Westmorland, to the King, for the Use of John Darrel and Walter de Arkbam. And Richard III. possessed this Erber, called then, The King's Palace. And one Ralph Dowel, one of the Yeomen of the Crown, was Keeper of this Place to the said King Richard, who made divers Reparations, as well upon the said Place, as other Houses thereunto belonging; particularly a Brew-house, called the Checquer, belonging to the same, as appeareth by a Ledger-Book of that King's, wherein the Accounts of the said Ralph are said to be examined by John Hewyk, one of the King's Auditors: And that Orders were given to Lethington, Bailiff of the Lordship of Claverling in Essex, to content him, 14*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.* ob. remaining behind in Arrears due to him for the said Reparations.

It was held by K. Richard III.

The Checquer Ledger of King Richard III.

It was rebuilt by Sir Thomas Pullison, Mayor; and was afterwards inhabited by Sir Francis Drake, that famous Warrior and Navigator.

Sir Francis Drake dwelt there.

Grantham's-lane is so called of John Grantham, some Time Mayor and Owner thereof, whose House was very large strong, built of Stone, as Grantham's-lane.

appeareth by the arched Gates yet remaining. Ralph Dodmer, first a Brewer, then a Mercer, Mayor in 1529, dwelled there, and kept his Mayoralty in that House. It is now a Brew-house, as it was before.

Cofin-lane.

A Ginn to convey Thames Water to Dowgate Conduit.

Cold harbour.

(6.) East from this Dowgate is Cofin-lane, named of one William Cofin, that dwelled there in the 4th of Richard II. as divers his Predecessors, Father, Grandfather, &c. had done before him. William Cofin, dwelling there, was one of the Sheriffs in the Year 1306, the 34th of Edward I. That House standeth at the South End of the Lane, having an old and artificial Conveyance of Thames Water into it, and is a Dye-house, called Lombard's Messuage. Adjoining to that House, there was erected an Engine to convey Thames Water to Dowgate Conduit aforefaid.

(7.) In the 13th of Edward II. Sir John Abel, Knt. demised or let unto Henry Stow, Draper, all that his capital Messuage, called the Cold Harbrough, in the Parish of All Saints ad Fenum, and all the Appurtenances within the Gate, with the Key which Robert Hartford, Citizen, Son to William Hartford, had, and ought, and the foresaid Robert paid for it the Rent of 33 s. the Year. This Robert Hartford being Owner thereof, as also of other Lands in Surrey, deceasing without Issue Male, left two Daughters his Coheirs, to wit, Idonea, married to Sir Ralph Bigot, and Maud, married to Sir Stephen Cosenton, Knts. between whom the said House and Lands were parted. After which John Bigot, Son to the said Sir Ralph and Sir John Cosenton, did sell their Moieties of Cold Harbrough unto John Poultney, Son of Adam Poultney, the eighth of Edward III. Thus Sir John Poultney, dwelling in this House, and being four Times Mayor, the said House took the Name of Poultney's Inn. Notwithstanding, this Sir John Poultney, the twenty-first of Edward III. by his Charter, gave and confirmed to Humfrey de Bobune, Earl of Hereford and Essex, his whole Tenement, called Cold Harbrough, with all the Tenements and Key adjoining, and Appurtenances some Time pertaining to Robert de Hertford, on the Way called Hay-Wharf-Lane, &c. for one Rose at Midsummer, to him and his Heirs, for all Services, if the same were demanded. This Sir John Poultney deceased 1349, and left Issue, by Margaret, his Wife, William Poultney, who died without Issue: And Margaret, his Mother, was married to Sir Nicholas Lovel, Knight, &c. Philip St. Clear gave two Messuages, pertaining to this Cold Harbrough, in the Ropery, towards the Inlarging of the Church and Church-yard of All Saints, called the Less, in the twentieth of Richard II.

In the Year 1397, the 21st of Richard II. John Holland, Earl of Huntington, was lodged there, and Richard II. his Brother dined with him. It was then accounted a very fair and stately House. But in the next Year following, Edmond, Earl of Cambridge, had this House; and was there lodged in the Year 1398; notwithstanding the said House still retained the Name of Poultney's Inn, in the Reign of Henry VI. the twenty-sixth of his Reign. It belonged since to H. Holland, Duke of Exeter, and he was lodged there in the Year 1472. In the Year

1485, Richard III. by his Letters Patents, granted and gave to John Writb, alias Garter, principal King of Arms of Englishmen, and to the rest of the King's Herald's and Pursuivants of Arms, all that Messuage with the Appurtenances, called Cold Erber, in the Parish of All Saints the Less, in London, and their Successors, for ever. Dated at Westminster, the second of March, Anno regni sui primo, without Fine or Fee. In the Reign of Henry VIII. the Bishop of Durham's House, near Charing-Cross, being taken into the King's Hand, Cuthbert Tonsal, Bishop of Durham, was lodged there.

The Bishop of Durham lived here.

This great House Bishop Tonsal enjoyed even to the last Year of King Edward VI. that is, to the Year 1553; when, the Bishop being under some Cloud, and deposed from his Bishoprick, they took from him this House also; which the King granted to the Earl of Shrewsbury, with the Appurtenances to the said Messuage belonging, together with six Houses or Tenements in the Parish of St. Dunstan's in the East, and divers other Lands in the County of York, to him and his Heirs, to the yearly Value of 66 l. 16 s. 1 ob. The Test of the Patent was the 30th of June, the King dying but six or seven Days after.

Cold-harbour comes to the Earl of Shrewsbury.

What Title the Earls of Shrewsbury had in former Times to Cold-harbour, does not appear; but it appears by Letters Patent, dated from thence, that that House was inhabited by them, and their Servants, not far from the Beginning of King Henry VIIIth's Reign.

Of FARINGTON WARD Within.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a New Survey.

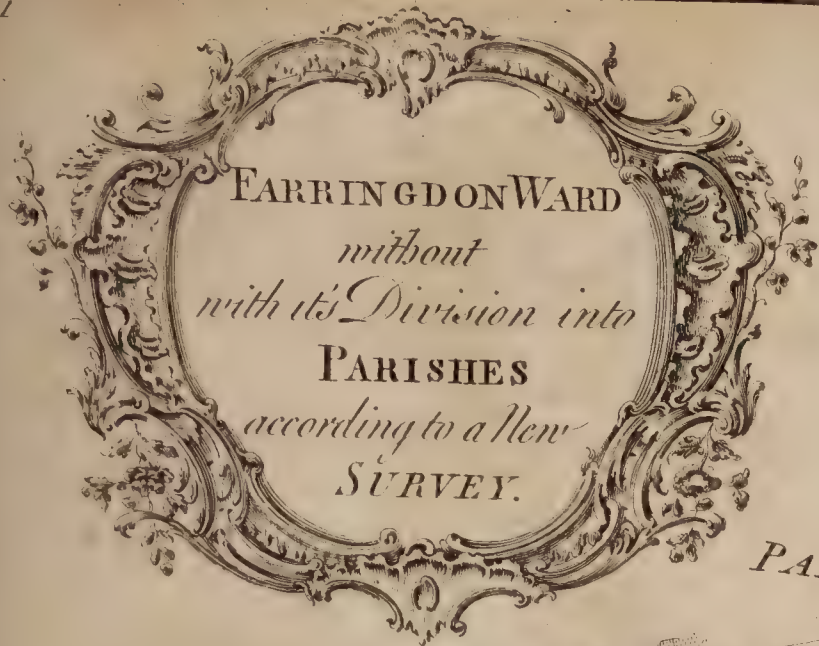

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State. Government. Aldermen and Common-Council. Parishes and Churches. Companies Halls. St. Paul's School. College of Physicians. Christ's Hospital. Black-Friars. Newgate. Ludgate. Antiquities.

THE Name of this Ward, and of Faringdon without, which two Wards in antient Times had but one Alderman, and that not by Election, but by Inheritance or Purchase, as more fully appears by the following Abstract of a Deed, is derived from one of its Possessors.

Its Name.

"Thomas de Ardene, Sonne and Heire to Sir "Ralph Ardene, Knt. granted to Ralph le Feure, "Citizen of London, one of the Sheriffs in the "Year 1277, all the Aldermanrie, with the "Appurtenances, within the City of London, "and Suburbs of the same, between Ludgate "and Newgate, and also without the same Gates; "which Aldermanrie Ankerinus de Avene held "during his Life, by the Grant of the said Thomas de Ardene. To have and to hold unto the "said Ralph, and to his Heires, freely without "all Challenge; yeelding therefore yeerely to "the said Thomas, and his Heires, one Clove (or "Slip) of Gilliflowers, at the Feast of Easter, for "all secular Service and Custome, with Warrantie

After this, John le Feure, Son and Heir to the said Ralph le Feure, granted to William Farendon, Citizen and Goldsmith of London, and to his Heirs, the said Aldermanry, with the Appurtenances, for the Service thereunto belonging, in the 7th of Edward I. in the Year of Christ 1279. This Aldermanry descended to Nicholas Farendon, Son to the said William, and to his Heirs. Which Nicholas Farendon, also a Goldsmith, was four Times Mayor, and lived many Years after. He made his Will 1361, which was fifty-three Years after his first being Mayor, and was buried in St. Peter's Church in Cheap. So this Ward continued under the Government of William Farendon, and Nicholas his Son, the Space of fourscore and two Years, and retains their Name unto this present Day.

The Addition of within is on Account of this Part of Faringdon Ward's lying within the Walls of London, containing the antient Wards of Newgate and Ludgate (See Page 105.) in Distinction to the other Part, which was without the Walls, or the antient Ward Fori, the first in the Catalogue of Wards mentioned on p. 105. both of them being purchased by William Farendon, as above. And this Addition was given to each Part by Act of Parliament, when that large Possession of the Farendons was divided into two Aldermanries to be governed by two Aldermen. See Page 182.

Bounds.

This Ward is bounded on the East by Cheap Ward and Castle-Baynard Ward; on the North, by Aldersgate Ward, Cripplegate Ward, and the Liberty of St. Martin's-le-Grand; on the West by Faringdon without; and on the South by Castle-Baynard Ward, and the River of Thames.

Extent.

In taking its Extent, let us proceed from the East: It begins where the great Cross stood in West-cheap; from thence it runs West, on the North Side where the Parish-Church of St. Peter stood, which was at the South-West Corner of Wood-street, to Gutter-lane; and down that Lane to Huggen-lane on the East Side, and to Kery-lane on the West.

Then again into Cheapside, and to Foster-lane; and down that Lane, on the East Side, to the North Side of St. Foster's Church; and on the West, till over-against the South-West Corner of the said Church; from thence down Foster-lane and Noble-street, which is all of Aldersgate-street Ward, till you come to the Stone Wall on the West Side of Noble-street; then by the said Wall, down to Windsor-house, or Nevil's-Inn; and down Monks-well-street, on the West Side; and then by London-wall to Cripplegate; and the West Side of that same Gate is all of Faringdon Ward.

Then back again into Cheapside; and from Foster-lane End, to St. Martin's End; and from thence through St. Nicholas Shambles by Pentecost-lane, and Butchers-alley, and by Stinking-lane, thro' Newgate-market, to Newgate. All which is the North Side of Faringdon Ward.

Then on the South, from against the Place of the great Cross in Cheap, West from Friday-street; and down that Street, on the East Side, till over-against the North-East Corner of St. Matthew's Church; and on the West Side, till the South Corner of the said Church.

Then again along Cheap to the Old Exchange, and down that Lane, on the East Side, to the Parish-Church of St. Augustine; which Church, and one House next adjoining in Watling-street, are of this Ward. And then on the West Side of this Lane it ran to the East Arch or Gate by St. Augustine's Church, which entered the South Church-yard of St. Paul's, and which Arch was built by Nicholas Farendon about the Year 1361; and within the Gate, all that was formerly called the North Church-yard was of this Ward.

Then again into Cheap, and from the North End of the Old Exchange West, where the North Gate of St. Paul's Church-yard stood, up Pater-noster-row, to within about twelve Doors of Ave-mary-lane; the West Side of which Lane is of this Ward.

Then at the South End of Ave-mary-lane is Creed-lane, the West Side whereof is also of this Ward.

Betwixt the South End of Ave-mary-lane, and the North End of Creed-lane, was the coming out of St. Paul's Church-yard, on the East; and the High Street, called Bowyer-row, now Ludgate-street, on the West, which goes to Ludgate, is of this Ward; on the North Side whereof is St. Martin's Church, and on the South the Turning into Black-friars.

Now to turn up again to the North End of Ave-mary-lane, there is a short Lane on the West End of it, called Amen-lane, or Amen-corner.

Then on the North Side of Pater-noster-row, beginning where the Conduit stood, over-against the Old Exchange-lane End, and going West by which stood St. Michael's Church, at the West End of which was a small Passage thro' toward the North, and at some small Distance another Passage, which is called Panier-alley, and comes out against St. Martin's-le-Grand.

Then farther West, in Pater-noster-row, is Ivy-lane, which runs North to where stood the West End of St. Nicholas Shambles.

The West Side of Warwick-lane is of this Ward; but the East Side of that, of Ave-mary-lane, and of Creed-lane, with the West End of Pater-noster-row, are all of Baynard's-castle Ward.

To begin again from the Place of the Conduit by the Old Exchange; on the North Side thereof was a large Street that ran up to Newgate, the first Part to the Shambles, called Bladder-street. On the Back-side of the Shambles were many Slaughter-houses, and such-like, belonging to the Shambles, and called Mountgodard-street. Then were the Shambles, and then

New-

Newgate-market; and so the whole Street on both Sides up to Newgate, all of this Ward, which is the farthest Extent of it.

Modern
State.

Ludgate-
street.

Ludgate-street is a Street of a very great Resort, both for all sorts of Carriages, &c. through Ludgate towards Fleet-street, and other Western Parts of the City, and Westminster; and from thence into the City: For which Reason it enjoys a very great Trade, being taken up by considerable Dealers in Mercery, &c. Towards the East it fronts the West End of St. Paul's.

Black-
friars.

Black-friars hath a narrow Passage out of Ludgate-street; but, turning by the Back-side of Ludgate Prison, it falleth into an open Place with very good Buildings, well inhabited by Tradesmen. Which said Street runneth down Southwards to the Thames: That Part by Apothecaries-hall, and so downwards, is called Water-lane; and hath a handsome Pair of Stairs to take Water at, where Plenty of Watermen ply; And, in its Passage to the Water-Side, takes in several Courts and Yards:

Banister-
court.

As, Banister's-court, which is but ordinary. Opposite to which is the House of the Lady Fitch, Relict of Sir Thomas Fitch, Knt. and Baronet; now, or late, the Dwelling of Sir John de Laune; a good large and handsome Building, with a graceful Front towards the Thames. Hugh's-court hath a Passage into Duke Humfrey's, which falls into Puddle-dock: And out of Duke Humfrey's is a Passage into Cloyster-court, and so into Ireland-yard, which comes into Puddle-dock-hill: And in this Passage receives Jackson's-court, Canterbury-court, and Ireland-yard, all Places of small Account. And out of Ireland-yard are Friars-court and New-street, both which are but ordinary, and fall into Shoemakers-row, which comes out of Black-friars in the broad Place, and falls into Creed-lane, against Carter-lane End. This Shoemakers-row is a Place of some Trade, and pretty well inhabited: And here are some small Courts, as Cobs-court, &c. And out of this Row is Church-entry, but narrow and ordinary; and falls into Glas-house-yard, by St. Ann's Church. This is a pretty open Place, with good Buildings, and better inhabited than most of the other Places; and hath a Passage into Water-lane.

King's Printing-
House.

The King's Printing-house-yard, so called from the King's Printing-house, there seated; a good convenient and large Building for that Use: The King's Printers there printing Bibles in Volumes, also Proclamations, and what concerns the publick Use. This House was burnt down about the Year 1742, but has been rebuilt, and made the completest Printing-house in the World.

The Scotch-
hall.

The Scotch-hall, a large House, seated as well in Water-lane, as on the Ditch-side; made use of by Scotchmen on particular Occasions. In the Corner of Black-friars, by London-wall, is Worley-court, which is but small. And this hath a Passage into the Ditch-side; the East Side of which, all along to the Water Side, is in this Parish; and for the generality built with good Houses, and well inhabited.

Creed-
lane.

Creed-lane, formerly called Spurrier-row, is much pestered with Carts and Carrs to Puddle-dock, and other Wharfs on the Water-Side, which makes it to be not over well inhabited. The West Side is in this Ward, the East in Castle-Baynard. Out of this Lane are two Passages into Holiday-Yard or Court, which is a pretty large Place, but of no great Account: And here are two Courts in it, and both bearing the same Name. This Lane comes out of Ludgate-street, against Ave-mary-lane, and falleth into Puddle-dock-hill. On the East Side of this Lane is Scollop-court, indifferent good, with a Free-stone Passage into Carter-lane, against Puddle-dock-hill.

Ave-mary-lane hath good Houses, many of which are inhabited by noted Booksellers, Printers and Tradesmen. On the West Side is an open square Court, with good Houses, called Stationers-rents. Out of which Court is a Passage into Amen-corner, and another into Stationers-hall: Close to this Hall is a Passage through Cock-alley into Ludgate-street; which Alley is but narrow at the Entrance, but against the Hall it is good and airy, fronting the Hall.

Amen-corner, short, but well built and inhabited, fronting Pater-noster-row. At the upper End was seated the College of Physicians, burned by the general Fire of London. Since which, in that Place, are erected three fair Houses, now the Seats of the Residentiaries of St. Paul's.

Warwick-lane runneth Northwards into Newgate-street; the West Side being in this Ward, and the East in Castle-Baynard. On the West Side are these Places: Oxford-arms-Inn, very considerable, and well resorted unto; the Inn stands backwards, and the Passage to it hath small Houses on both Sides. Warwick-court, a very handsome, spacious and airy Square, with an open Passage for Coaches into it; is graced with very good large Buildings, and well inhabited by Persons of Repute. On the East Side of this Lane, is White-hart-street, which gives a Passage into Newgate-market, inhabited by Poulterers, and such Trades whose Dependence is on the Market.

Newgate-street, well inhabited by good Tradesmen, comes out of Cheapside, and Blowbladder-street, and runs to Newgate, the City Goal for Malefactors. Adjoining to this Prison, on the North Side, is Swan-yard, a pretty long Court, but ordinary. Phoenix-court, adjoining to Newgate, on the South Side, a good handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, and good Houses.

The Part of Newgate-street, from Cheapside Conduit, a little above St. Martins-le-Grand, unto the Shambles, was called Blowbladder-street, from the Bladders there sold in former Times.

The Butchers inhabiting in this Street had formerly their Slaughter-houses in Butchers-hall-lane, which was then called Stinking-lane, from the Nastiness of the Place; but now it is kept pretty clean: And here the Company of Butchers had their Hall. This Lane cometh out of Newgate-street, and passing by Christ-church, into which it hath an Entrance, falls into Bull-and-Mouth-street, which leadeth to St. Martin's-le-Grand: But this is in Aldersgate Ward.

Out of this Lane is another Passage into Angel-street, an indifferent Place, and is but Part in this Ward. Over-against Christ-church, is Crown-

Crow-court, which is but small. Near unto this Lane is the Bagnio, a neat contrived Building, after the Turkish Mode, for that Purpose; seated in a large handsome Yard, and at the upper End of Pincock-lane, which is indifferent well built and inhabited. This Bagnio is much resorted unto for Sweating, being found very good for Aches, &c. and approved of by our Physicians.

Pentecost-lane.

On the North Side of the Shambles was Pentecost-lane. Here was antiently a Church and Churchyard, afterwards a large Square; and is now called Bull-head-court; which is pretty well inhabited and built.

Christ-church.

Christ-Church was consumed in the Conflagration of the City. And that Part called The New Church, which was made use of before, is rebuilt very handsome; at the Charges of the Parishioners of this Parish, and St. Leonard Foster-lane, which is united to it.

Grey-friers-court.

Adjoining to Christ Church and Hospital, is a Court, which retaineth the Name of the Grey-friers-court; a pretty large Place, having a Passage into the said Hospital, and another into Newgate-street. And this Hospital gives a Passage out of Newgate-street, through the Cloisters and Long-walk, into St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and so into Smithfield; being a great Thoroughfare all the Day long: But at Night the Hospital Gates are shut up, at eight in the Winter, and ten in the Summer, as well to this Passage, as the Town-Ditch, which leadeth to Little Britain.

Newgate-market.

Newgate-market, before the late dreadful Fire of London, was kept in Newgate-street; where there was a Market-house only for Meal, and a middle Row of Sheds, which afterwards were converted into Houses, and inhabited by Butchers, Tripe-sellers, &c. And the Country People, which brought Provisions to the City, were forced to stand with their Stalls in the open Street; to the Damage of their Goods, and Danger of their Persons, by the Coaches, Carts, Horses, and Cattle, that passed through the Street. But since the nominating of convenient Places in the City for publick Markets, by Act of Parliament, which appoints the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commoners, to appoint proper Places, they have found out a most convenient Place for this Market, and near adjoining; being situate between Newgate-street on the North, and Pater-noster-row on the South; and between Warwick-lane on the West, and Ivy-lane on the East. The greatest Part of which Market is in this Ward, and the other Part in Castle-Baynard Ward.

The Market Place.

The Market-place is a square Piece of Ground, which is incompassed with fair Houses, built according to the second Rate of Building. In the middle of the Market-place, which is 148 Foot broad from North to South, and 194 Foot long from East to West, there is erected a spacious Market-house, in Form of a Cross, standing upon twenty-four Pillars or Columns, and ascended up into the Market-house, by two or three broad Stone Steps at all the Entrances. Under this Market-house are Vaults or Cellars; and over it several Rooms, for the Stowage of the Fruiterers, and other Goods, in the Night;
No. 78.

and over all a fair Cupola, or Bell-tower. This Market-house is made use of for Fruit, Herbs, &c. And round about it, at a convenient Distance, are Stalls for Butchers; as are Stalls also, by the Sides of the Houses, for Butchers and Poulterers. This Market is very well served with all Sorts of Butchers Meat, and Poulterers Ware; also with Fruit, Herbs, Butter, Eggs, &c. The Passages into this Market are, out of Newgate-street, through Rose-street, which is broad, but short; well built, and inhabited by Butchers and Fishmongers: Another out of Warwick-lane, through White-hart-street, but short also; inhabited by the like Tradesmen: Another out of Pater-noster-row, through a short Alley: And two others out of Ivy-lane.

More Eastward from this Market, and in Newgate-street, is Swan-alley, which is but ordinary. Three-cup-court, pretty small; at the upper End of which is a Passage into Pater-noster-row, through the King's-arms Tavern. King's-head-court, very small.

Swan-alley.

Pater-noster-row. This Street, before the Fire of London, was taken up by eminent Mercers, Silk-men, and Lace-men; and their Shops were so resorted unto by the Nobility and Gentry, in their Coaches, that oft times the Street was so stopped up, that there was no Passage for Foot-Passengers. But, since the said Fire, those eminent Tradesmen have settled themselves in several other Parts; especially in Ludgate-street, and in Bedford-street, Henrietta-street, and King-street, Covent-garden. And the Inhabitants in this Street are now a Mixture of Trades-People, such as Tire-Women, or Milliners, for the Sale of Topknots, and the like Dressings for the Females. There are now many Shops of Mercers, Silk-men, eminent Printers, Booksellers and Publishers.

Pater-noster-row.

This Street begins East at Cheapside, and runneth up to Amen-corner; from which it is severed by Warwick-lane and Ave-mary-lane. This Street hath a Passage into these Places: On the South Side, a small Alley which leads to the West End of St. Paul's, through London-house-yard; where formerly the Bishops of London had their House or Palace. Paul's-alley, a Place of small Trade, and very narrow, and falleth on the North Side of St. Paul's; and about the middle divideth itself into two Parts, the one running strait South, and the other Westwards. On the East Side is a Passage into *Petty-canon*s, indifferent large, and now converted into Buildings; having at the upper Part or End a Passage into Paul's Churchyard, near *Petty-canon*s-alley, which is a good open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, leading into Pater-noster-row.

Then on the North Side of this Pater-noster-row, next to Warwick-lane, is Mermaid-court, a pretty handsome Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. Next is the Passage into Newgate-market.

Mermaid-court.

Ivy-lane is well built and inhabited, and falleth into Newgate-street, having two Passages into Newgate-market, as aforesaid; and on the East Side is Sun-court, which is but small.

Ivy-lane.

Lovel's-court is a handsome large Place, with good Buildings, well inhabited. Queen's-head-alley, so called from the Queen's-head Tavern, there feated in an open, square Court, from which it hath a long Passage into Newgate-street. Pannier-alley, near unto Cheapside; it leads into Blow-bladder-street, and is said to be the highest Ground within the City Walls; wherein is a Stone Pedestal supporting a Pannier, with the Figure of a Boy thereon, and this Inscription:

“When you have fought the City round,

“Yet still this is the highest Ground.”

On the West Side of this Alley is Eagle-and-child-court, which is but small.

St. Michael's Quern Church.

A little Eastward from Pannier-alley, Blow-bladder-street and Pater-noster-row, like two Rivulets, joining into one, fall into Cheapside; and just here, fronting Cheapside, stood the Parish-Church of St. Michael's Quern, which, since the great Fire of London, whereby it was consumed, is not rebuilt, but the Parish is united to St. Vedast, alias Fosters.

Cheapside.

This Street of Cheapside is spacious and large, graced with very lofty Buildings, which are well inhabited by Goldsmiths, Linen-Drapers, Haberdashers, Druggists, and other noted Tradesmen, being the chief high Street in the City, and of a very great Resort, as leading to and from the Royal-Exchange to all Parts Westward. This Street is seated in several Wards; as, the Part in this Ward goeth to Wood-street, taking in St. Peters Cheap Church-yard; then Cripplegate Ward begins, which goeth to Milk-street; then Cheap Ward begins, which taketh in the rest of the Street to the Poultry: And, on the South Side, this Ward runneth a little beyond Friday-street; then Bread-street Ward begins, and runs almost to St. Mary le Bow Church; and a little beyond the said Church Cheap Ward begins, and runs into the Poultry, and down Bucklersbury. See Bread-street and Cheap Wards.

Foster-lane.

Foster-lane is well built for Business, and, for the Generality, inhabited by Working Goldsmiths. There is but a very small Part of this Lane in this Ward, not above two Houses beyond the Church. And to this Ward belongs the West Side of Noble-street, in Part, and Monkswell or Mugwell-street, and the North Side of Hart-street unto Cripplegate; which is a narrow Slip of Ground, and apart from the rest of the Ward; the other Sides being on Cripplegate Ward, and joining to the said Ward.

Half-moon-alley.

Near unto this Lane, in Cheapside, is Half-moon-alley, but small; at the upper End of which is a Tavern, which gives a Passage into Foster-lane, and another into Gutter-lane.

Gutter-lane.

Gutter-lane, narrow, and inhabited chiefly by Engravers, and others who work for Silversmiths. Here the Company of Embroiderers have their Hall. In this Lane are these Places: Day's-court, on the East Side, indifferent good. Goldsmiths-street leadeth to Wood-street, against the Compter, indifferent good; but of this Street the greatest Part is in Cripplegate Ward. Dove-court, but small and ordinary, seated on the West Side against Goldsmiths-street. Innholders-hall, a pretty, handsome Building. King's-head-court, a pretty, square Place, seated against Innholders-hall. Near unto this is Stone-court, but small. More Northwards, and on the West Side, is Kery-lane, a pretty handsome Place, and of some Trade, having a Passage into Foster-lane; but little or no Part is in this Ward, but in Aldersgate Ward.

Wood-street hath but a small Part in this Ward, only the West Side, taking in the Church-yard of St. Peters Cheap; the Church not being rebuilt since the great Fire, and the Parish united to that of St. Matthew Friday-street. Wood-street. St. Peters Cheap.

Friday-street, as far as the Church of St. Matthew Friday-street, is in this Ward, the rest in Bread-street Ward. Friday-street.

By this Church is a Free-stone Passage, which leads to the back Door of the Fountain Tavern in Cheapside.

Betwixt Friday-street and the Old 'Change is Star-court, a pretty large Place. Then Shepherds-court, very handsome, well built, and inhabited.

The Old 'Change. This Street begins in Cheapside, and falls into Old Fish-street; but the Part in this Ward goeth but to St. Austin's Church; and then the West Side, unto Old Fish-street, is in Castle-Baynard Ward; and, on the East Side, in Bread-street Ward. The Old 'Change.

This Street, taken from Cheapside to Old Fish-street, is of a pretty good Trade, well built and inhabited. The Courts and Alleys, beginning next Cheapside, and so to the Old 'Change, are; Swan-court, but small, having a Passage through a Publick-house, called the Swan, into St. Paul's Church-yard. Green-dragon-court, indifferent good. Three-dagger-court, but small. Purse-court, a very handsome, square Place, with good Buildings; and Inhabitants answerable, with a Free-stone Pavement. Lamb-alley, long and ordinary. Crane-court, a good handsome Place. Crown-court, very good, the front Part taken up by a Painter, seated opposite to Distaff-lane. Black-horse-court, narrow and ordinary. Phoenix-court and Gingerbread-court, both small and ordinary.

Passing out of this Street through St. Austin's-gate, (which Name it retaineth, although the Gate, since the Fire of London, is not built, but lieth open) you enter into St. Paul's Church-yard, a spacious Place, and on all Sides begirt with very good Buildings, inhabited by great Traders; the East and South Sides generally by Cabinet and Chair-makers, Woollen-drapers, &c. Part of the East Side is taken up by St. Paul's School. The North Side, which is the most spacious, is taken up by Bookfellers, Opticians, Goldsmiths, Toyshops, &c. And the West Side fronteth Ludgate-street, where it is very spacious, and hath a very beautiful Prospect from St. Paul's. St. Paul's Church-yard. St. Paul's School.

There are to watch in the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, one Constable, a Beadle, and forty Watchmen. Watch.

The Jury returned by the Inquest for this Ward are to serve in the several Courts holden in the Guildhall in the Month of September. Jury.

It hath an Alderman, his Deputy, twelve Common-Councilmen, seventeen Constables, eighteen Scavengers, eighteen Wardmote-Inquestmen, and a Beadle; and is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at fifty Pounds, and in the Exchequer at fifty-three Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence. Govern-ment.

The

Alderman and Common-Councilmen.

The Alderman (in 1755) is William Bridgen, Esq; The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Michael Martindale, Deputy, Mr. Thomas Parr, Mr. Robert Mobun, Mr. John Fashion, Mr. Edward Newman, Mr. John Walker, Mr. Richard Stephens, Mr. David Rice, Mr. John Rivington, Mr. Edward Say, Mr. Maurice Griffith, Mr. Randal Wicksteed, Mr. Samuel Seawell, Mr. John Sclater, Mr. John Paterfon, Mr. Thomas Smith, and Mr. Richard Harwood.

Memorable
Things.

As the Bounds of this Ward are very extensive, we meet with a great Variety of Things therein worthy of our Attention.

Churches
and Parishes.

First, There is the Metropolitan Church or Cathedral of St. Paul's: The Parishes and Churches of (1.) St. Vedast in Foster-lane, (2.) Christ-Church in Newgate-street, (3.) St. Augustine's, (4.) St. Martin's near Ludgate, (5.) St. Matthew's Friday-street, (6.) St. Anne's Black-friars; and the Parishes of (1.) St. Peter's Cheap, (2.) St. Faith's, (3.) St. Michael's Querne: Of which particularly in our Parochial History.

Halls.

Secondly, The Halls for the Meetings of several Companies, as,

Embroiderers-hall

(1.) Embroiderers-hall in Gutter-lane, alias Guthurn-lane, so called from one Guthurn, Owner thereof, is a handsome Building.

Apothecaries-hall.

(2.) Apothecaries-hall, seated almost opposite to the Paved-alley that leadeth to the Ditch-side, down Steps against Bridewell-bridge. This Hall is a good Building, with a Pair of Gates leading into an open Court, handsomely paved with broad Stones, at the upper End of which is the Hall, adorned with Columns of the Tuscan Order. It is built of Brick and Stone, finished Anno 1670. The Cieling of the Court-room and Hall is adorned with Fret-work, and the latter wainscotted fourteen Feet high. In the Hall is the Portraiture of King James I. the Busto of Dr. Gideon Delaun (the said King's Apothecary, and a good Benefactor to this Fraternity.) Here are two large Elaboratories, one for Chymical, the other for Galenical Preparations. Over the former is this Inscription:

"Hanc Ædem Medicinæ Hermeticæ sacram
"voluit Societas Pharm. Lond. Quæ, ut Artem
"a subdolis Pseudo-Chimicorum Technis vindi"caret, Medicamenta Chimica quæcunque in
"Ufum veniunt hic summa Fide & Industria
"Sumptibus propriis præparanda curavit."

At this Hall are prepared vast Quantities of Medicines for the Apothecaries and others; and particularly the Surgeons of the Royal Fleet do here make up their Chests.

Stationers-hall.

(3.) Stationers-hall, situate at the upper End of Cock-alley, Ludgate-street, is a very good and capacious Building, with a large, handsome Hall, where the Lotteries have been frequently drawn; with a Court-Room, and other necessary Apartments, made use of for the Stock-Books, &c. belonging to the Company. Before it is a large Court, paved with Free-stone, and inclosed with a long Range of Iron Rails, and a Pair of Iron Gates of curious Workmanship. It stands upon the Site of an antient Palace, which was successively the Residence of the Duke of Britain, and the Earls of Pembroke and Abergavenny.

Butchers-hall.

(4.) Butchers-hall is situate in Butchers-hall-lane, which on that Account has changed its Name from Stinking-lane. It is divided into an upper and lower Hall, and has a Parlour and some other Rooms, finely adorned with Fret-work and Wainscot.

(5.) Sadlers-hall is situate near the End of Foster-lane in Cheapside, at the upper End of an handsome Alley, at the Entrance of which is an ornamental Door-case, and an Iron Gate, and is a very compleat Building for the Use of such a Company. It is adorned with Fret-work and Wainscot, and the Companies Arms carved in Stone over the Gate next the Street.

Sadlers-hall.

Thirdly, (1.) The College of Physicians, a Building of wonderful Delicacy, is situate near the North-West End of Warwick-lane, so called from the Palace of the Earls of Warwick, which stood there in former Days. It is built of Brick and Stone, with a spacious Stone Frontispiece. In the Court, over the Door-Case, is the Statue of King Charles II. in a curious Niche, and, on the other Side, the Statue of Sir John Cutler. In the Inside is a Hall, where they sit to give Advice to the Poor gratis; a Committee Room; a Library, furnished with Books by Sir Theodore Mayerne, and the Marquis of Dorchester, who was one of the Fellows; a great Hall for the quarterly Meetings of the Doctors, adorned with Pictures and Carvings, a Map or Plan of Lands left to the Society by Dr. Amy; a Theatre, with Seats and Tables, for anatomical Dissections; a preparing Room, where are thirteen Tables, containing all the Muscles in the human Body; and, over all, Garrets to dry Herbs for the Use of the Dispensary.

Other public Buildings.

College of Physicians

This Society had, in antient Time, their College in Knight-riders-street, being the Gift of Dr. Linacre, Physician to King Henry VIII. From which, in succeeding Times, they removed to Amen-corner, where they had purchased an House and Ground. Here Dr. Harvey, who found out the Circulation of the Blood, Anno 1652, built a Library and Publick Hall, which he granted for ever to the College, with his Library, and endowed it with his Estate, which he resigned to them in his Life; Part of which he assigned for an anniversary Oration to commemorate all their Benefactors, and to exhort others to follow their good Examples, and for the providing a good Dinner for the Society.

Their antient College in Knight-riders-street. Thence to Amen-corner.

The Conflagration of London, Anno 1666, consuming this House, and the Ground being but a Lease, the Fellows of this College purchased, with their own Money, a large Piece of Ground in Warwick-lane, whereon they erected this curious Building.

At their first Institution there were but thirty Fellows of their Society; but King Charles II. upon their Request, augmented the Number to forty; and King James II. considering the large Increase of this City in Buildings and Inhabitants, was pleased in their new Charter to increase the Number to eighty, and not to exceed. Before this Charter, none could be admitted a Fellow of the College, if he had not taken his Degree of Doctor in one of the Universities; but now, all those that have taken their Degree in any foreign University are qualified to become Fellows.

The Number of Fellows increased from 30 to 80.

Who qualified to be Fellows.

But,

But, although their Power is great to obstruct the Practice in any one that is not of the College, yet, whether by Connivance or Favour, others practise Physick; and yet, by the Law of the Land, if any one that is not so qualified shall undertake a Cure, and his Patient die under his Hand, it is deemed Felony in him.

To this College belong a President, four Censors, and twelve Electors.

President. The President is the principal Member, and is annually chosen out of the Society.

Censors. The four Censors have, by their Charter, Authority to survey, correct, and govern all Physicians, or others, that shall practise within their Jurisdiction, viz. this City, and seven Miles round, and to fine or imprison for Offences, as they shall see Cause.

Practice of Physick when first restrained by a Law. There was no Restraint by Law for the Practice of Physick till the third Year of King Henry VIII. when a Law was enacted, that none should exercise the Faculty of Physick or Surgery within the City of London, or within seven Miles of the same, unless first he were examined, approved, and admitted by the Bishop of London, or the Dean of St. Paul's, calling to him or them four Doctors of Physick, and for Surgery other expert Persons in that Faculty, upon Pain of Forfeiture of five Pounds for every Month they should occupy Physick or Surgery, not thus admitted and allowed.

The Reason of the said Law. And for this Cause, as is mentioned in the Preamble of the said Law, because the Science and Cunning of Physick and Surgery, to the perfect Knowledge whereof are requisite both great Learning and ripe Experience, was daily within this Realm exercised by a great Multitude of ignorant Persons, of whom the greater Part had no Manner of Insight in the same, nor in any other Kind of Learning. Some also can read no Letters on the Book. So far forth that common Artificers, as Smiths, Weavers, and Women, boldly and accustomably took upon them great Cures, and Things of great Difficulty, in the which they partly used Sorceries and Witchcraft, and partly applied such Medicines unto the Diseased, as were very noisome, and nothing meet therefore; to the high Displeasure of God, &c. and Destruction of many of the King's liege People.

The first Charter granted to the Physicians by K. Hen. VIII. Yet was there no Society or College of such Men, directed by, and circumscribed within Laws and Orders, and formed into a Corporation, till the tenth of Henry VIII. when that King granted a Charter, dated the twenty-third of September at Westminster, to incorporate certain Physicians in one Body, and perpetual Commonalty or Fellowship of the Faculty of Physick; and to have a perpetual Succession, and a common Seal; and to chuse yearly a President, to oversee, rule, and govern the said Fellowship in all Men of the same Faculty. By Virtue whereof they were enabled to purchase and possess, in Fee and Perpetuity, Lands, Tenements, and Rents, and any other Possession; that they might implead and be impleaded; that they might make Statutes and Ordinances for the wholesome Government and Correction of the College, and of all Persons practising Physick within seven Miles of the City; and, within that Compass, none to practise, as well as in the City, unless first allowed by the President and Fellowship, upon Pain of Forfeiture of five Pounds for every Month; that four be chosen yearly by the President and College, who shall have the Supervising, Search, Examination, and Government of all the Physicians of the City, and Suburbs within seven Miles; and to punish them for their Offences, in not performing, making, and neglecting their Medicines and Receipts, and that by Fines, Amerciaments, and Imprisonments: That neither the President, nor any of the Members of this College, be summoned, or put in any Assizes, Juries, Inquests, &c.

And that the first Movers and Procurers of so good a Fellowship, for the Safety of the Lives of Men, may be preserved, and the Causes that moved the King to grant it may be known, they are both signified to us in the said King's Letters Patents; wherein it appeareth, that the Suit was made by John Chambre, Thomas Linacre, and Fernandes de Victoria, all the King's Physicians; and three other Physicians, namely, Nicholas Halliwell, John Francis, and Robert Yarly; and chiefly by the Intercession of Cardinal Wolsey, Lord Chancellor. And the Causes that inclined the King appeared in the Preamble to the said Letters Patents, beginning thus:

Cum Regii Officii nostri munus arbitremur, Ditionis nostrae Hominum felicitati omni ratione consulere, id autem vel imprimis fore, si improborum Conatibus tempestive occurramus, &c. That is, "Since we esteem it a Part of our Royal Office, by all Means, to consult the Happiness of such as are under our Jurisdiction, and that the Way to do it will especially be, if we seasonably put a Stop to the Endeavours of evil Men; we have thought it highly necessary to restrain the Boldness of some wicked People, who shall profess Physick more for their own Covetousness than out of any good Conscience; whence many Inconveniences may arise to the ignorant and credulous common Sort: Therefore, partly imitating the Example of well-instituted Cities in Italy, and in many other Nations, partly moved by the Request of certain grave Men, &c."

This Charter they who were the chief Procurers got confirmed and ratified by Act of Parliament, Anno 14 Henry VIII, upon this Consideration, as the Act ran: "For the making the said Corporation meritorious, and very good for the Commonwealth of this Realm, it was necessary to provide, that no Person of the said Politick Body and Commonalty be suffered to exercise Physick, but only those Persons that be profound, sad, and discreet, groundly learned, and deeply studied in Physick; and for the enlarging of further Articles for the said Commonwealth to be had and made."

In the thirty-second of Henry VIII. by another Act of Parliament, they were exempted from keeping Watch and Ward, and from being chosen Constables, or in other Offices, within the City and Suburbs, as they had many Times before been compelled, to their great Fatigation and Unquieting, and to the Peril of their Patients.

tients. By the same Act, four Physicians were to be chosen yearly to search the Apothecaries Wares, Drugs, and Stuff.

1 Mary. Queen Mary, Anno 1, confirmed the College's Charter.

7 Eliz. Queen Elizabeth gave them a Charter, dated at Westminster the fourth of February, Anno Regni 7, to take yearly, for ever, one, two, three, or four human Bodies, to dissect or anatomize, having been condemned and dead.

Names of the College Members, An. 1575. This College of Physicians, in the Year 1575, that is an hundred and eighty Years ago, consisted of these Members, as I have it from an authentick Paper sent to Court: A very few, in Comparison of the Number that now maketh it up.

The Names of the Physicians of the College of London, Anno 1575.

Dr. Sinnings, President; Dr. Cawdwell, Dr. Good, Dr. Atflow, Dr. Smith, Oxon. Dr. Gyfford, Dr. Fryer, Dr. Wooton, Dr. Travers of West-Chester, Dr. Huicke, Dr. Masters, Dr. Foster, Candidatus; Dr. Walker, Dr. Smith, Cantab. Dr. Baronsdale, Dr. Spiringe, a Stranger, Candid.

Strangers of the College.

Dr. Julio, Dr. Martyn Corymbanck, Mr. Hector, Dr. Lopes.

The Electors, which are perpetual Officers of the College, were these:

Dr. Huicke, Dr. Masters, Dr. Sinnings, Dr. Good, Dr. Cawdwell, Dr. Atflow, Dr. Walker, Dr. Smith, Oxonien.

Disorders in the College about this Time. The College consisted for the most Part, about this Time and before, of such as were Favourers of Popery, and were guilty of divers Disorders: This Account whereof was sent up, viz.

Presidents. Caius often, Sinnings, Cawdwell, Atflow, who was chosen also the second Time after his Troubles. * Atflow, Gyfford, from Mer-ton College. † Fryer of Godmanchester, Cawdwell, Peny, Turner, & alii. ‡ Smith, Oxon, Hal. Fryer, Oxon.

" That the Presidents, Censors, Electors, and other their Officers, were not sworn to the Queen's Majesty at their Admission, as in other Corporations they were; whereby it came to pass, that Papists continually had occupied the chief Rooms.

" That Men, expelled * their Universities for Religion, by this Means had, from Time to Time, been received into the College, and thereby advanced in their Credit.

" That either they did wholly repel †, or not without much Importunity admit, any whom they thought to be well affected towards the true Religion now received.

" That such as had gone beyond the Seas § to take the Degree of a Doctor, because they would avoid the Oath of Supremacy, ministered according to the Statute in our Universities, had shortly, upon their Return, been admitted, without any Oath ministered unto them.

" That such as had been imprisoned for Religion, and other great Matters, had kept themselves in Office at their own Pleasures, contrary to the College Statutes and their Oaths; and detained in their Hands the College Goods, disdaining to make any Account of the same.

Clement. " That some of the Electors, who had fled for Religion out of the Realm, had been kept in " their Offices, and stoutly defended as chief Members of the College, being at Lovain until they died, that other honest, true Subjects might be kept out of the same Rooms.

" That they made private Conventicles of a few, to bring to pass their Purposes and Elections; which ought, by the College Statutes, to be done on Quarter-days only, and the whole Company being thereunto called.

" That the College Statutes were generally unperfect, and partly Popish."

These Things being declared and complained of to the Council, by some well-affected in the Year 1575, Reformation of them was earnestly desired.

The City would, now and then, not taking Notice of their Customs and Privileges, lay common Burdens and Duties upon them, as upon other Inhabitants of the City. This made the College once to petition the Queen's Council, that, according to their antient Customs and Privileges, they might be relieved of what was laid upon them: And, upon their humble Petition, it was then signified to the Lord-Mayor and his Company, that the College should be no more molested in the Premises. Yet, in the Year 1596, the like Molestation towards them was attempted again: And now they applied to the Privy Council again, that, by their honourable Favours, they might be protected, and that it might stand with their good Pleasures, that it might be signified to the Lord-Mayor and Bench of Aldermen, that, as ever heretofore they had been discharged, so now, at this present likewise, they, and the Society of the College of Physicians, might be forborne. This was dated on the fourth of February, 1596. Signed, The President and Society of the College of Physicians of London.

King James I. granted the College his Charter, dated October 8, Anno Regni 15.

And King Charles II. granted them a Royal Charter, March 26, Anno Regni 15.

This College, according to the Power granted them by these and other their Charters, have called before them, that is, the President, or, in his Absence, the Vice-President and the Censors, the Surgeons, Apothecaries, and other Persons that have practised Physick without their Allowance; and have sometimes warned them to forbear, and sometimes imposed pecuniary Penalties or Imprisonment upon them. For they may convene any Physician or Practiser before them, and examine them concerning their Skill in the Faculty of Physick; and if they shall not appear to their Summons, or appearing refuse to answer, or to be examined, the College may assess a Penalty or Fine upon them, for every Default of Appearance, or Refusal to answer; the Fine, for one Default, not exceeding forty Shillings: Or, if any administer unwholesome and noisome Medicines, he may be fined according to their Discretions, not exceeding ten Pounds; or Imprisonment, not exceeding fourteen Days, unless for Non-payment of Fine, when it shall be lawful to detain them in Prison till it be paid.

And there have been divers notable Suits commenced between the College and other unlicensed

The Powers and Privileges of the College.

Upon a Complaint made, about the latter End of Queen Elizabeth's Reign, by Jenkins and Read, against the College, which had used some Punishment towards them for evil Practice of Physick, and exercising that Art without their Licence, after a long and careful Hearing on both Parts, Popham, Lord Chief Justice, in the Year 1602, gave his Judgment, the Sum of which was in these Particulars: I. That there was no sufficient Licence without the College Seal. H. That no Surgeon, as a Surgeon, might practise Physick, no, not for any Disease, though it was the great Pox. III. That the Authority of the College was strong and sufficient to commit to Prison. IV. That the Censure of the College, rising from lesser Mulcts to greater, was equal and reasonable. V. That it were fit to set to Physicians Bills the Day of the Month, and the Patient's Name, VI. That the Lord Chief Justice could not bail or deliver the College's Prisoner, but was obliged by Law to deliver him up to the College's Censure. VII. That a Freeman of London might lawfully be imprisoned by the College. VIII. That no Man, though never so learned a Physician or Doctor, might practise in London, or within seven Miles, without the College's Licence.

Dr. Isaac Schomberg.

Aprilis tertio, 1747. Dr. Isaac Schomberg appeared, and being entered, as he said, at Cambridge, hoped to be indulged till he had his Degree from thence.

He was answered, That, unless he came and submitted to be examined, he should be prohibited to practise.

Junii quinto, 1747. Ordered, That Mr. Isaac Schomberg's Behaviour to the Censors be represented to the College, for their Directions thereupon.

Junii 25, 1747. Then Mr. Isaac Schomberg's Behaviour to the Censors was, by their Order, represented to the College for their Direction upon it.

Ordered, That Mr. Isaac Schomberg be forbid Practice, till he shall have given proper Satisfaction to the President and Censors.

On July 25, 1747, the President and Censors came to a Resolution to forbid Mr. Isaac Schomberg the Practice of Physick, because he would not submit to be examined; and ordered, that a Statute or Statutes, forbidding, under a Penalty, any Member of the College to meet or consult with any Person prohibited from Practice, be drawn up by the present Censors, Treasurer, and Register, and reported to the College; and the following Notice was ordered to be sent to Mr. Schomberg.

Junii 25, 1747. College of Physicians.

"Sir,

"The Statutes of our College justly deeming
"all Persons ignorant and unqualified for the "Practice of Physick, who, after sufficient Sum-

"mons, do not appear to take their Examination before the Censors of the College, according to the Laws of the Land:

"And you having been duly summoned to appear before the Censors, and having refused to submit to be examined by them: The President and College think it their Duty towards their Country and its Laws, to interdict and prohibit you the Practice of Physick; and they do accordingly prohibit and interdict you from exhibiting any Medicines, or giving your Advice to any sick People, for any Fee or Reward, within the City of London, or seven Miles about; as you will answer the contrary in his Majesty's Courts of Justice, according to the Laws of the Land in such Case provided.

By Order of the College.

To Mr. Isaac Schomberg.

GEORGE EDWARDS, Beadle.

On the twelfth of October, 1747, Mr. Mead read the Draught of a new Statute, forbidding any Member of the College to meet or consult, in any Case of Physick, with Persons prohibited from Practice: Which Statute was ordered to be engrossed, in order to be read at the next College Meeting.

April 4, 1748, the following Statute, prohibiting any Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate, to consult, in any Case of Physick, with Persons prohibited by the College from the Practice thereof, was read the second Time, and approved by the Majority of the College.

A Statute against consulting with any Person prohibited to practise Physick.

"That we may, as much as in us lies, answer the good Ends and laudable Purposes of our Institution, and the Privileges and Powers granted to us by the Royal Charter, and confirmed by several Acts of Parliament, for preventing the great Mischiefs which often happen to the Health of his Majesty's Subjects, and the Dishonour arising to the Profession of Physick by Empiricks and unskillful Persons, who take upon them to practise Physick in the City of London, or the Suburbs thereof, or seven Miles Circuit of the same, and refuse or are not qualified to undergo an Examination by the President and Censors of this College, touching their Skill and Knowledge in Medicines, and the Practice of Physick:

"We do ordain and order, that if the President shall at any Time inform the College, at any of their solemn or greater Meetings, ordinary or extraordinary, that any Person practising Physick, within the Limits aforesaid, hath been duly summoned to attend the President and Censors, to be examined by them touching his Skill and Knowledge in the Practice of Physick, and hath refused or neglected to attend according to such Summons, or attending hath refused to submit to be examined, according to the Form and Manner of Examination prescribed by the Statutes of their College, or, having been examined, hath been adjudged, by the President and Censors, not sufficiently learned and qualified to practise Physick; and that the President and Censors have for any of “ the said Reasons prohibited such Person to practise Physick within the Limits aforesaid; then, “ and in such Case, no Fellow, Candidate or “ Licentiate of this College, at any Time after “ such Information so given to the College by the “ President, shall in any wise meet in Consultations, for the Cure of any Disease, with any “ Person so prohibited to practise; and that if any “ Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate of this College shall, after such Information so given, in “ any wise meet in Consultation; for the Cure of “ any Disease, with any Person so prohibited, “ every such Fellow, Candidate and Licentiate, “ being convicted thereof before the President “ and Censors of this College; for the Time being, shall, for such his Meeting, forfeit and “ pay to the Treasurer of this College; for the “ Time being, for the Use of the College; the “ Sum of five Pounds of lawful Money of Great “ Britain for the first Offence; and if such Fellow, Candidate or Licentiate shall, after such “ Conviction, offend again in the like Manner, “ and be thereof convicted in the Manner aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay to the said Treasurer, for the Use of the College, the Sum of “ ten Pounds, of such lawful Money as aforesaid; and if such Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate shall refuse or neglect to pay either of “ the said Sums or Forfeitures within the Space “ of three Calendar Months next after Notice in “ Writing of such his respective Conviction, given “ to, or left for him; at his then Dwelling-house, “ or most usual Place of Abode, by the Beadle “ of this College for the Time being; or if such “ Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate shall, after “ such second Conviction, offend a third Time “ in like Manner, and be thereof convicted in the “ Manner aforesaid, then, and in either of the “ said last-mentioned Cases, he shall be expelled “ this College; and shall not be restored to be a “ Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate of this College, “ until he shall have paid to the Treasurer of this “ College for the Time being, for the Use of the “ College, all such Sum or Sums of Money, as “ such Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate shall have “ forfeited by Virtue of this Statute.

“ We do further ordain and order, That every “ Fellow, Candidate, or Licentiate of this College, who shall in any wise meet in Consultation, for the Cure of any Disease, with any “ Person, who by Virtue of this Statute shall be “ expelled the College, shall incur and be subject “ to the same or the like respective Forfeitures “ and Penalties as are above-mentioned.

“ And, for the better putting this Statute in “ Execution, we do ordain and order, That, when “ and as often as any Person or Persons shall, by “ Virtue of this Statute, be expelled this College, “ Notice thereof in Writing, specifying the Name “ or Names of such Person or Persons, signed by “ the Beadle of this College for the Time being, “ shall be given to, or left for every Fellow, Candidate or Licentiate, at his Dwelling-house, or “ usual Place of Abode.”

Ordered, That the College Seal be put to the said Statute next Comitia majora.

After this Dr. Isaac Schomberg, having taken his Degree of Doctor in Physick at Cambridge, applied for Leave to be examined: But, after several Meetings and his third Examination, the Doctor was rejected; nor could he afterwards, though sought with the greatest Submission, prevail with the Censors to admit him a Fellow; because he at first had talked in a high Strain, demanded it as a Matter of Right, and threatened to compel them to it by applying to the Courts of Law or Equity, and actually moved the Court of Chancery to that End.

The Officers of the Royal College of Physicians are, a President, eight Electors, four Censors, a Register and a Treasurer, annually chosen the first Week in October.

St. Paul's
School.

(2.) St. Paul's School, situate on the East Side of St. Paul's Church-yard, was built and well endowed by an excellent, pious and learned Clergyman, Dr. John Colet, King Henry the VIIIth's esteemed Chaplain, Dean of St. Paul's, the only surviving Son of Sir Henry Colet, Knt. Citizen and Mercer of London, and twice Lord-Mayor of the said City. This School was founded, and a Master for it provided, in the Year 1509, for one hundred fifty-three Children to be taught freely. And such was his generous and liberal Mind, that he settled his whole Patrimony upon it in his Life-time.

The primary Institution, Ordinances, Appointments and Documents of this School may be gathered from an old Statute Book, wrote by the Founder's own Hand, and by him delivered to Lilly; which is thus inscribed: Hunc libellum ego

Johannes Colet tradidi manibus magistri Lillii, XVIII die Junii, Anno Dom. MCCCCXVIII.
It begins, Johannis Coleti Fundatoris scholæ manu sua propria prologus. "John Colet, Son of Henry
"Colet, Dean of St. Paul's, desiring nothing "more than Education, and bringing up Chil"dren in good Manners and Literature, in the "Year of our Lord 1512 built a School [not "fully finished till that Year] at the East End "of St. Paul's Church, for 155 Boys, to be "taught free in the same.

"And ordained there a Master, a Sur-Master,
"and a Chaplain, with sufficient and perpetual
"Stipends ever to endure; and set Patrons, De"fenders, Governors and Rulers of the same "School, the most honest and faithful Fellow"ship of the Mercers of London.

"And, for because nothing can continue long
"and endure in good Order without Laws and "Statutes, I, the said John Colet, have expressed
"my Mind, what I would should be truly and "diligently observed and kept of the said Master,
"Sur-Master and Chaplain, and of the Mercers,
"Governors of the School: That in this Book
"may appear to what Intent I founded this
"School."

Then follow his Ordinances: "That he found-

"pueritia, and of his blessed Mother Mary.
"That the high Master should be chosen by the "Wardens and Assistants of the Mercers. That "he be a Man whole in Body, honest, virtuous,
"and learned in good and clean Latin Litera"ture, as also in Greek, if such might be gotten;
"a wedded Man, a single Man, or a Priest that "hath no Benefice with Cure or Service. His "Wages to be a Mark a Week, and a Livery-"Gown of four Nobles delivered in Cloth. His "Lodgings to be free; and to have the Tene"ment of Stebbonbith to resort unto. That the "Sur-Master be versed in Learning, and well
"lettered, to teach under the Master; either
"single Man, wedded, or Priest that hath no
"Benefice with Cure or Service: To be whole in "Body. The high Master to chuse him, as the "Room shall be void; and to be confirmed by "the Surveyors of the School. Lodgings to be "assigned him in the Old Change. His Wages
"to be six Shillings and eight Pence per Week,
"and a Livery-Gown of four Nobles delivered in "Cloth. That there shall be in the School a "Priest daily, as he could, to sing Mass in the "Chapel of the School, and to pray for the Chil"dren to prosper in good Life and in good Let"ters. That he was to be some honest, good "and virtuous Man. To be chosen by the War"dens and Assistants of the Mercery. To learn "himself, or, if learned, to help to teach the "School, if it seemed convenient to the high "Master. To have no Benefice with Cure of "Souls, nor no other Office or Occupation. To "teach the Children the Catechism, and In"struction of the Articles of Faith and the ten "Commandments in English. His Wages to be

For the Children.

“Children of all Nations and Countries indifferently to be taught, to the Number of 153. The Master to admit these Children as they be offered; but first to see that they can say the Catechism, and also read and write competently; and to pay 4*d.* for writing their Name: Which Money the poor Scholar that swept the School was to have. Thrice a Day, viz. Morning, Noon, and Evening, prostrate to say the Prayers contained in a Table in the School. No Tallow Candles, but only Wax to be used. No Meat, Drink, or Bottles, to be brought; nor no Breakfasts nor Drinkings in the Time of Learning. That the Scholars use no Cock-fighting, nor Riding about of Victory, nor Disputing at St. Bartholomew's; which are but foolish Babbling and Loss of Time. That they have no Remedies [i. e. Play-Days begged] except the King, an Archbishop, or a Bishop, present in his own Person, desired it. The Children every Childermas Day to go to Paul's Church, and hear the Child-Bishop Sermon, and after to be at the high Mass, and each offer a Penny to the Child-Bishop; and with them the Masters and Surveyors of the School. In general Processions, when warned, they shall go two and two together soberly; and not sing out, but say devoutly seven Psalms with the Litany. That if any Child admitted here go to any other School to learn there, such Child for no Man's Suit be again received into the School.

What Authors to be read.

“To be taught always in good Literature both Latin and Greek, and good Authors, such as have the very Roman Eloquence joined with Wisdom; especially Christian Authors, that wrote their Wisdom with clean and chaste Latin, either in Verse or Prose. But, above all, the Catechism in English; after that the Accidence. Then Institutum Christiani hominis, which Erasmus made at my [i. e. Colet's] Request; the Copia Verborum of the same Author. Then other Christian Authors; as Lactantius, Prudentius, and Proba; Sedulius, Juvencus, and Baptista Mantuanus; and such other as shall be thought convenient for the true Latin Speech.

The Mercers Company Governors of the School.

“The honourable Company of Mercers of London to have all the Charge, and Care, and Rule of the School. They to chuse every Year of their Company two honest, substantial Men to be the Surveyors of the School, who, in the Name of the whole Fellowship, should take all the Care and Business of the School for that Year. They to come into the School six Days before Christmas, and so many Days before Easter, St. John Baptist, and Michaelmas; and pay the Masters and Chaplains their quarterly Wages; and at the latter End of the Year their Liveries in Cloth. And once in the Year to give up their Accounts to the Master, Wardens, and Assistants; and that to be about Candlemas, three Days before, or three Days after. Then a little Dinner to be made; and to call to Account the receiving of all the Estate of the School: And the Master Warden to receive a Noble, the two other Wardens five Shillings; the Surveyors two Shillings; and for their riding to visit the Lands 11*s.* the Clerk of the Mercery 3*s.* 4*d.* with some other

No. 79.

“Gifts. That which was spared that Day in Rewards and Charges to be put into the Treasury of the School. What remained to be given to the Fellowship of the Mercery, to the maintaining and repairing all belonging to the School from Time to Time. The Surplusage, above Repairs and Casualties, to be put into a Coffer of Iron, given by Colet, standing in their Hall. And there, from Year to Year, to remain apart by itself, that it might appear how the School of itself maintained itself. And at length, over and above the whole Livelihood, if the said School grow to any further Charge to the Mercery, that then also it might appear, to the Laud, and Praise, and Mercy of the said Fellowship.

“Lastly, That he left it to the said Company to add and diminish to and from this his Book, and to supply it in every Default, and also to declare in it, as Time, Place, and just Occasion should require.”

The Book concludes with the ordinary Charges paid out yearly, viz.

To all this John Colet subscribed his Hand thus: Joannes Coletus fundator novæ scholæ manua mea propria.

But now the Rents and Incomes of this School, by the good Husbandry and Faithfulness of the Company of Mercers, are greatly advanced. So that the Salaries of the Masters are more than doubled; and many Exhibitions, some of ten Pounds, and some of six Pounds odd Money, are granted forth towards the Maintenance of the Scholars that go away from the School to the Universities, payable for seven Years, if they tarry so long there.

The Rents increased.

As soon as Colet had built his School, he provided a Book for his young Scholars, which he called, An Introduction of the Parts of Speaking for Children and young Beginners into Latin Speech, which is the Ground and first Draught of that Book we now commonly call The Accidence. By this Introduction he put the first Rudiments into an easier and apter Method for learning than any was before: And this he recommended in a prefatory Epistle to William Lilly, the Master, to teach it the Children, dated the Calends of August, 1509, viz. in these Words:

Johannes Coletus suo Lilio salutem.

Accipe, optime ac literatissime Lili, libellum puerilis Institutionis: in quo quidem eadem quæ fuerunt ab aliis tradita, ratione & ordine paulo, ni fallor, commodiore digessimus. Idque fecimus, ut Elementa Grammatices, et felicius influerent in puerorum animos, & tenacius inhaerent. Tuum erit, qui primus es hujus novæ Pauli Scholæ Præceptor, his rudimentis diligenter exercere pueros nostros, deinceps ad majora profecturos. Nihil enim æque mihi cordi est in præsentia, quam parvuli Christi quamplurimum apud te proficiant, cum literatura, tum bonis moribus. Ad quod si eniteris, & Jesum puerorum præsidem tibi tuo studio demereberis, & me plane felicem reddideris. Vale. Ex Aedibus meis Calend. August. Anno millesimo quingentesimo nono.

Procures Erasmus's Book, De Copia, for his School.

And near about this Time, or not long after, he procured, from his Friend Erasmus Roterodamus, another Book for his School, namely, that intituled, De Copia Verborum. For which he promised the said Erasmus, while he was once walking with him in his Garden, fifteen Angels as a Gratuity. And no question Erasmus was well pleased to contribute something to such a Foundation, which he himself took Occasion sometimes to commend and extol; as he did in a Letter to Colet, Anno 1512, in these Words: Ludum literarium longe pulcherrimum ac magnificentissimum instituiisti; ubi sub electissimis ac probatissimis præceptoribus Britannica Pubes rudibus statim annis simul & Christum & optimas imbiberet literas; i. e. "You have erected a most beautiful and noble School, where, under the choicest and most approved Masters, the English Youth might, soon after their Childhood, imbibe both Christ and the best Learning."

Construction of the eight Parts of Speech.

In the Year 1513 Colet sent Lilly another Book for the School, of the Construction of the eight Parts of Speech: Which was done by Erasmus also, upon the earnest Suggestion of Colet, being nothing but the Emendations of, and Additions to such a Work first done by Lilly. This was nothing but the Grounds of our Latin Syntaxis. This Book he also introduced with a Latin Epistle, viz.

Johannes Coletus, Decanus Sancti Pauli, Gulielmo Lilio ad Divum Paulum Ludi Moderatori primario, S. D.

Which Colet recommends to Lilly to teach in his School.

Haud aliter mihi videor affectus in novam hanc scholam nostram, Lili charissime, quam in unicum filium pater; in quem non solum gaudet universam suam substantiam transfundere, verum etiam sua viscera, si liceat, cupit impertiri. Nam ut huic est parum genuisse, nisi eundem diligenti Educatione ad bonam frugem provexerit, ita meo animo non satis est, quod Ludum hunc institui, hoc est, genui, quodque in sumpto patrimonio universo vivus etiam ac superstes solidam hæreditatem cessi, nisi modis omnibus dem operam, ut piis moribus & bonis literis diligenter educatus ad maturam frugem adolescat. Proinde libellum hunc de constructione octo partium orationis ad te mitto, pusillum quidem, sed non pusillum utilitatis allaturum nostræ publi, si diligenter abs te fuerit traditus.

Scis in præceptis breviter placere Flacco: Cujus sententiam ipse vehementer approbo. Porro, si qua præterea erunt digna cognitu, tuarum partium erit, ut incident in prælegendis autoribus, adnotare. Bene vale: Domini nostri MD XIII.

This Book De Constructione went some Time under Erasmus's Name; yet Erasmus declined to have it reckoned his, as being Lilly's Ground-work. And Lilly, on the other hand, modestly refused to have himself made the Author, after such considerable Changes and Improvements made by Erasmus, who, in the Year 1515, wrote a Preface before this Book, now commonly called, The Syntaxis, wherein he publicly disowned it to be his, out of Respect to Lilly; concluding with these Words: Verum hæc mihi præfari visum est, ne posthac quisquam ut meum amplectatur; i. e. "But this I thought good to preface, that none hereafter might take the Book as mine."

Colet also framed a short Catechism in English for the Youth of his School, which he obliged all to learn; and was used in those Times to be bound up at the Beginning of the Accidence. It consisted of the Articles of the Christian Faith, the Doctrine of the seven Sacraments, an Explanation of the Love of God, of our own selves, and of our Neighbours; and, lastly, divers short Precepts for a good Life. To which he joined in Latin the Apostles Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ave Maria, and two short Prayers; one to the Virgin Mary, and the other to Jesus the Guardian of the School. And if the superstitious Parts of this Catechism had been laid aside, and the rest, which is very pious, had been retained for the Use of the School, it would, in my Opinion, have been very well done, and the Founder's Will more complied with.

Colet's Catechism for his School.

The pious Founder dedicated this his School to the Child Jesus, who sat among the Doctors at twelve Years old, as the great and compassionate Patron of the Children here to be educated. This Part of the Founder's Epitaph shews:

Quique Scholam struxit celebrem cognomine JESU.

So that the true Name of this School is Jesus's School, rather than Paul's School; but the Saint hath robbed his Master of his Title.

The Founder delighted in Inscriptions and Motto's, which he appointed to be set up in several Parts and Places of the School, as short and pithy Intimations of his Mind and Intentions, which were all there remaining before the great Fire. Over the Windows on the Outside toward the Street were these Words engraven in great Capital Letters: SCHOLA CATECHIZATIONIS PUERORUM IN CHRISTI OPT. MAX. FIDE ET BONIS LITERIS. Over the School Door, INGREDERE UT PROFICIAS. Upon each Window, on the Inside, were to be read these Words painted on the Glafs: AUT DOCE, AUT DISCE, AUT DECEDE, suggesting both to Scholar and Teacher their Duty or Doom; which I remember the upper Master, in my Time, used often to inculcate upon such Scholars as were idle or negligent, "Either learn, or be gone."

Inscriptions upon the School.

In the Vestibulum was this Inscription in Capitals upon the Wall, shewing for what End and Purpose

The Vestibulum.

Purpose this Apartment was intended: HOC VESTIBULO CATECHIZENTUR PUERI IN FIDE, MORIBUSQUE CHRISTIANIS, NEQUE NON PRIMIS GRAMMATICES RUDIMENTIS INSTITUANTUR, PRIUS-QUAM AD PROXIMAM HUIUS SCHOLÆ CLASSEM ADMITTANTUR. In another Place of this Vestibulum was engraven, PUE-RITIÆ CHRISTIANÆ JOH. COLLET, DEC. Scti. PAULI, HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT: Denoting how qualified, viz. with Christian Knowledge and Manners, it was the Founder's Will those should be, that were to be Scholars here. Over the Door, entering out of the Vestibulum into the School-Room, this Verse:

Mente { Velis,
 Possis,
 Adsis, } hac Lege recludor.

The School-Room.

In the School-Room, over the Door, was this Inscription: PUERI IN HAC SCHOLA GRATIS ERUDIENDI C.L.III. TANTUM, AD NUMERUM SEDIUM. Underneath which, since the rebuilding of the School by the Mercers, for ever grateful Remembrance, were these Lines added, composed, I conjecture, by Mr. Crumleholm, then the worthy Master:

Quod Faustum sit et Felix.

“ Ad seræ Posteritatis Imitationem, Æternita“ tem Famæ suæ: Post luctuosam Urbis Lond- “ nensis deflagrationem cō Idc LXVI, amplissima

Dignos laude Viros Musa vetat mori.

At the upper End of the School, facing to the Door, was a decent Cathedra or Chair placed, somewhat advanced, for the high Master to sit in when he pleased, and to teach and dictate there. And over it was a lively Effigy, and of exquisite Art, of the Head of Dr. Colet, cut, as it seemed, either in Stone or Wood; and, over the Head, in Capitals, DEO OPT. MAX. TRINO ET UNI JOHANNES COLETUS DEC. Scti. PAULI LONDIN. HANC SCHOLAM POSUIT. On which Figure an excellent Poet, and once a Scholar of this School, made these Verses:

Mr. Bag-ford.

“ Eloquio juvenes ubi Lilius ille polivit,
“ In Statuâ spiras, magne Coletæ, tuâ.
“ Quam si Praxiteles fecisset magnus, & ille “ Forsitan æquâset, non superâset opus.
“ Hac salvâ Statuâ, divina Forma Coleti
“ Temporibus longis non peritura manet.”

But this Figure was destroyed with the School in the great Fire, yet was afterwards found in the Rubbish by a curious Man, and Searcher into the City Antiquities, who observed that it was cast and hollow by a curious Art now lost.

Burnt and rebuilt.

This School, burnt down in the common Calamity by Fire, Anno 1666, was built up again much after the same Manner and Proportion as it was before, together with the Library, and an House added on the South End thereof for the second Master; whose Dwelling before, and from the first Founding of the School, was in the Old Change, adjoining to the said School. This House hath a very handsome Front, answerable to the high Master's House at the North End of the School; on which is engraven, ÆDES PRÆ-CEPTORIS GRAMMATICES.

The School-House is large and spacious. It consisteth of eight Classes, or Forms; in the first whereof Children learn their Rudiments; and so, according to their Proficiency, are advanced unto the other Forms, till they rise to the Eighth. Whence, being commonly made perfect Grammarians, good Orators and Poets, well instructed in Latin, Greek and Hebrew, and sometimes in other oriental Languages, they remove to the Universities; and many of them enjoy Exhibitions, some of ten Pounds a Year for seven Years, if they tarry so long, towards their Maintenance there. The School is governed and taught by two Masters, viz. an High-master and a Sur-master, and a Chaplain; whose customary Office was to read the Latin Prayers in the School, framed for the peculiar Use thereof, and to instruct the Children of the two first Forms in the Elements of the Latin Tongue, and also in the Catechism and Christian Manners; for which there is a Room, called the Vestibulum, being the Anti-room to the School, where the Youth are to be initiated into the Grounds and Principles of Christian Knowledge, as a good and proper Introduction into other human Learning.

The present Masters and Chaplain are, Mr. Thickness, High-Master; the Rev. Mr. Tillotson, Sur-Master; and the Rev. Mr. Ely, Chaplain, or Usher.

(3.) The Grey-friars within Newgate, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, belonging antiently to the Priory of St. Bartholomew's hard by, together with St. Nicholas and St. Ewen, two neighbouring Parishes, were obtained by the City of King Henry VIII. in the 38th Year of his Reign; all which that King granted to the City for the Relieving and Succouring of their Poor, one of the last good Acts that King did before his Death: And in the beginning of January, in the latter End of which Month King Henry died, Ridley, Bishop of Rockester, declared, at St. Paul's Cross, this Gift of the King before the People, and his charitable End therein.

The King did, in the same Year, grant the City the Hospital of Bethlehem, or Bedlam. He also then founded two Churches out of those two religious Houses, the one to be called Christchurch out of the Grey-friars, and the other, Little St. Bartholomew's, out of the Hospital of that Name, with competent Salaries for the respective Vicars and Ministers.

And, as the King had founded Churches on these Places, so, according to that his Grant, it lay upon the City to establish here a standing Provision for the Poor. And, accordingly, some Part of the Scite of the Grey-friars they pur-posed for a large Hospital for poor fatherless Children, here to be decently maintained, and piously brought up, and fitted for Trades and Callings: But it was not before five or six Years after the King's Grant, viz. Anno 1552, the Lord-
Mayor

Habit,*

Mayor and Citizens fell upon the Reparation and Fitting-up of the Friars for the Reception of the Children: And they effected it the same Year, and called it Christ-church Hospital; so that in the Month of September they took in near 400 Orphans, and cloathed them in Ruffet; but ever after they wore blue Cloth Coats; whence it is commonly called, The Blue-coat Hospital: Their Habit being, now, a long Coat of blue warm Cloth, close to the Arms and the Body, hanging loose to their Heels, girt about their Waist with a red Leather Girdle, buckled, a loose Petticoat, underneath, of yellow Cloth, (of late Years the Boys are allowed Breeches) a round thrum Cap, tied with a red Band, yellow Stockings, and black low-heeled Shoes, their Hair cut close, their Locks short.

Christ's Hospital.

In the Year 1552, began the preparing of the Grey-friars House, for the poor fatherless Children; and, in the Month of November, the Children were taken into the same, to the Number of almost four hundred. On Christmas-day, in the Afternoon, while the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen rode to St. Paul's, the Children of Christ's Hospital stood from St. Laurence's-lane End in Cheap, towards St. Paul's, all in one Livery of ruffet Cotton, three hundred and forty in Number; and the Easter following they were in Blue, and so have continued ever since.

What further I have read and understood, concerning the first Beginning and Erection of this famous Hospital, followeth, according to the Original Copy, set down by Mr. Richard Grafton.

*Dr. Ridley preached, before
King Ed-

Mercy and Charity.*

Doctor Ridley, then Bishop of London, came and preached before the King's Majesty at Westminster: In which Sermon, he made a fruitful and godly Exhortation to the Rich, to be merciful unto the Poor, and also to move such as were in Authority, to travel, by some charitable Ways and Means, to comfort and relieve them: Whereupon, the King's Majesty, being a Prince of such Towardness and Virtue, for his Years, as England before never brought forth; and being also so well retained and brought up in all godly Knowledge, as well by his dear Uncle the late * Protector, as also by his virtuous Schoolmasters; was so careful of the good Government of the Realm, and chiefly to do and prefer such Things as most especially touched the Honour of Almighty God; and understanding, that a great Number of poor People did swarm in this Realm, and chiefly in the City of London, and that no good Order was taken for them, did suddenly, and of himself, send to the said Bishop, as soon as his Sermon was ended, willing him not to depart, until that he had spoken with him. And this that I now write, was the very Report of the said Bishop Ridley, who, according to the King's Command, gave his Attendance: And, as soon as the King's Majesty was at Leisure, he called for him, and caused him to come unto him in a great Gallery at Westminster, where, to his Knowledge, and the King likewise told him so, there were present no more Persons than they two; and, therefore, made him sit down in one Chair, and he himself in another, which, as it seemed, were, before the Coming of the Bishop, there purposely set, and caused the Bishop, in Spite of his Teeth, to be covered, and then entered Communication with him in this Manner:

First, giving him hearty Thanks for his Sermon and good Exhortation, he therein rehearsed such special Things as he had noted, and that so many, that the Bishop said,

*King Edward's

shop Ridley.*

"Truly, truly," for that commonly was his Oath, "I could never have thought that Excellency to have been in his Grace, but that I be-
"held and heard it in him."

At the last, the King's Majesty much commended him for his Exhortation for the Relief of the Poor.

"But, my Lord, quoth he, you willed such as
"are in Authority to be careful thereof, and to "devise some good Order for their Relief.
"Wherein, I think, you mean me, for I am in "highest Place, and therefore am the first that "must make Answer unto God for my Negli"gence, if I should not be careful therein;
"knowing it to be the express Commandment of "Almighty God to have Compassion of his poor
"and needy Members, for whom we must make "an Account unto him. And truly, my Lord,
"I am, before all Things else, most willing to "travel that Way; and I doubting nothing of "your long and approved Wisdom and Learn"ing, who having such good Zeal, as wisheth
"Help unto them; but also that you have had "some Conference with others, what Ways are "best to be taken therein, the which I am desi"rous to understand; and therefore I pray you to "say your Mind."

*A most vir-tuous and noble Saying of K.
Edward to Bishop Ridley.*

The Bishop, thinking least of that Matter, and being amazed to hear the Wisdom and earnest Zeal of the King, was, as he said himself, so astonished, that he could not tell what to say. But, after some Pause, said, that he thought, at this present, for some Entrance to be had, it were good to practise with the City of London; because the Number of the Poor there are very great, and the Citizens also are many and wise; and he doubted not but that they were also both pitiful and merciful; as the Mayor and his Brethren, and other the Worshipful of the said City. And that, if it would please the King's Majesty to direct his gracious Letters unto the Mayor of London, willing him to call in such Assistants as he should think meet, to consult of this Matter, for some Order to be taken therein; he doubted not but Good would follow thereon. And he himself promised the King to be one himself, that should earnestly assist therein.

*The Citi-

charitable Action.*

The King, forthwith, not only granted his Letter, but made the Bishop tarry until the same was written, and his Hand and Signet set thereto; and commanded the Bishop, not only to deliver the said Letter himself, but also to signify unto the Mayor, that it was the King's especial Request and express Commandment, that the Mayor should assist therein, and, as soon as he might conveniently, give him Knowledge how far he proceeded therein. The Bishop was so joyous of receiving of this Letter, and that now he had Occasion to assist in so good a Matter, wherein he was marvellous zealous, that nothing could have more pleased and delighted him. Wherefore the same Night he came to the Mayor of London, who was then Sir R. Dobbs, Knt. and delivered the King's Letter; and shewed his Message with Effect.

*The King's Letter sent shop to the Lord-

Mayor of London.*

The

The Readiness of the Lord-Mayor to prefer this good Deed.

The Lord-Mayor not only joyously received this Letter, but with all Speed agreed to set forward the Matter; for he also favoured it very much. And the next Day, being Monday, he desired the Bishop of London to dine with him; and, against that Time, the Mayor promised to send for such Men, as he thought meetest to talk of this Matter; and so he did. He sent first for two Aldermen, and six Commoners; and afterwards more were appointed, to the Number of twenty-four. In the End, after sundry Meetings, (for, by the Means and good Diligence of the Bishop, it was well followed) they agreed upon a Book they had devised; wherein first they considered on nine especial Kinds and Sorts of poor People; and those they brought into these three Degrees:

Nine Sorts of poor People, distinguished into three Degrees.

Three Degrees of Poor.

1. The Poor by Impotency.
2. The Poor by Casualty.
3. Thriftless Poor.

1. The Poor by Impotency are also divided into three Kinds; that is to say,

1. The Fatherless poor Man's Child.
2. The Aged, Blind, and Lame.
3. The diseased Person by Leprosy, Dropsy, &c.

2. The Poor by Casualty are likewise of three Kinds; that is to say,

1. The wounded Soldier.
2. The decayed Householder.
3. The visited with any grievous Disease.

3. The Thriftless Poor are three Kinds in like Manner; that is to say,

1. The Rioter, that consumeth all.
2. The Vagabond, that will abide in no Place.
3. The idle Person, as Strumpets, and others.

The first Beginning of Christ's Hospital.

For these Sorts of Poor, three several Houses were provided: First, for the Innocent and Fatherless, which is the Beggar's Child, and is indeed the Seed and Breeder of Beggary, they provided the House that was the late Grey-friars in London; and called it by the Name of Christ's Hospital; where poor Children are trained up in the Knowledge of God, and some virtuous Exercises, to the Overthrow of Beggary.

The first Beginning of St. Thomas and St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

For the second Degree, were provided the Hospitals of St. Thomas in Southwark, and St. Bartholomew in West Smithfield, where are continually, at least, two hundred diseased Persons; which are not only there lodged and cured, but also fed and nourished.

The first Beginning of Bride-well.

For the third Degree, they provided Bride-well, where the Vagabond and idle Strumpet are chastised, and compelled to labour, to the Overthrow of the vicious Life of Idleness.

Relief for decayed Householders and Lepers.

They provided also for the honest decayed Householder, that he should be relieved at Home, at his House, and in the Parish where he dwelled, by a weekly Relief and Pension. And in like Manner they provided for the Leper, to keep him out of the City, from Clapping of Dishes and Ringing of Bells, to the great Trouble of the Citizens, and also to the dangerous Infection of many; that they should be relieved at Home, at their Houses, by several Pensions.

No. 79.

Now, after this good Order taken, and the Citizens, by such Means as were devised, willing to further the same, the Report thereof was made to the King's Majesty; and his Grace, for the Advancement thereof, was not only willing to grant such as should be Overseers and Governors of the said Houses a Corporation, and Authority for the Government of them; but also required that he might be accounted as the chief Founder and Patron thereof.

The King acquainted with the City's Furtherance.

And, for the Furtherance of the said Work, and continual Maintenance of the same, he, of his mere Mercy and Goodness, granted, that whereas, before, certain Lands were given to the Maintaining of the House of the Savoy, founded by King Henry VII. for the Lodging of Pilgrims and Strangers; and that the same was now made but a Lodging for Loiterers, Vagabonds, and Strumpets, that lay all Day in the Fields, and at Night were harboured there; which was rather the Maintenance of Beggary, than any Relief to the Poor; he gave the same Lands, being first surrendered by the Master and Fellows there, which Lands were of the yearly Value of 600 l. unto the City of London, for the Maintenance of the Foundation aforesaid.

King Edward VI. Founder of the Hospital in London.

The Savoy Lands surrendered to the King, and given to the City of London.

And, for a further Relief, a Petition being made to the King's Majesty, for a Licence to take in Mortmain, or otherwise, without Licence, Lands to a certain yearly Value; and a Space left in the Patent, for his Grace to put in what Sum it would please him: He, looking on the void Place, called for Pen and Ink, and with his own Hand wrote this Sum, 4000 Marks by the Year; and then said, in the Hearing of his Council, "Lord, I yield thee most hearty Thanks, that thou hast given me Life, thus long, to finish this Work to the Glory of thy Name." After which Foundation established, he lived not above two Days; whose Life would have been wished equal to the Patriarchs, if it had pleased God so to have prolonged it.

The Words of a blessed King.

There was one Act of Benevolence of King Edward expressed to this Hospital, of his founding, that was somewhat remarkable; which was his granting hereunto all the Church Linen, formerly used in the publick religious Worship in the Churches of London: For, the King having appointed Commissioners to take a View of all the Goods belonging to the Churches in and about London, great Quantities of linen Vestures and Cloth were found in the same, and more, a great deal, than there was Need of, now, in the Celebration of the reformed Divine Worship. Wherefore, the King wrote to Ridley, Bishop of London, one of his said Commissioners, and a great Instrument of this Foundation: "That towards the Relief of those poor Orphans and others, charitably brought and gathered together by his loving Subjects, the Citizens, to his new Hospital of Christ-Church, the same Linen should be delivered to the Governors for their Use, thinking, as he added, that any Thing therein bestowed, to be to the Relief and Sustentation of the Temple of God, who inhabited in those poor People: Yet leaving to every Church necessary Linen Vesture, as should serve to the publick Use and Ministry Church Linen given to the Hospital. Regist. Ridley.

"within the said Churches, according to the present Usage."

What Monies were raised by the noble Christian Benevolence of the Citizens, upon King Edward's Encouragement :

Sir William Chester and John Calthrop, Draper, Benefactors.

By Example of the charitable Act of this virtuous young King, Sir William Chester, Knt. and Alderman of London, and John Calthrop, Citizen and Draper of the same City, at their own proper Costs and Charges, made the Brick Walls and Way on the back Side, which leadeth from the said new Hospital, unto the Hospital of St. Bartholomew; and also covered and vaulted the Townditch, from Aldersgate to Newgate; which before was very loathsome, and infectious to the said Hospital.

Richard Castel, Shoemaker, The Cock of Westminster, a Benefactor.

This Hospital being thus erected, and put into good Order, there was one Richard Castel, alias Casteller, Shoemaker, dwelling in Westminster, a Man who was very assiduous in his Faculty, with his own Hands; and such an one as was named, The Cock of Westminster, because both Winter and Summer he was at Work before four of the Clock in the Morning; this Man thus truly and painfully labouring for his Living, God blessed and increased his Labours so abundantly, that he purchased Lands and Tenements at Westminster, to the yearly Value of 44 l. and, having no Child, with the Consent of his Wife, who survived him, and was a virtuous good Woman, gave the same Lands wholly to Christ's Hospital aforesaid, to the Relief of the innocent and fatherless Children; and for the Succour of the Miserable, Sore and Sick, harboured in the other Hospitals about London.

A Mathematical School founded here by King Charles II.

Besides this first Royal Founder King Edward, Christ-Church Hospital hath of late enjoyed another Royal Founder, viz. King Charles II. who founded a Mathematical School and Ward, lying on the West Part of the Hospital, for the Instruction of forty Boys in the Mathematicks, especially in that Part of it that respects Navigation; and liberally endowed it with one thousand Pounds a Year, paid out of the Exchequer for seven Years for the Founding thereof.

The Qualification of the Mathematical Master.

The Mathematical Master at Christ's Hospital, by the Constitution of the House, must be thus qualified; he must be a sober, discreet, and diligent Person, of good Life, a good Scholar, very well understanding the Latin and Greek Languages, a very good Mathematician, well knowing and ready in the Theory and Practice of all its Parts; to the End Boys may be furthered in the Latin Tongue, and the Master able to answer Strangers, if Need be; and that they and others may find his Abilities to Satisfaction.

The Scholars to be put forth to Masters of Ships.

And, by the Constitution, ten are to be put forth yearly Apprentices to Masters of Ships; to the End that they may be fit in Time to do Service in the Navy Royal, and ten more to be received into their Rooms. These Youths, who are chosen out of the rest of the Bluecoat Boys, are to be the most acute, and of the readiest Wits, that they may be fit for Mathematical Studies. These, as a Badge of Distinction, wear on their Breasts fastened to their Coats, a Plate of Silver, with some Figures engraven, the Dye whereof is kept in the Tower, where they are all stamped. The chief Figures are three liberal Sciences, Badge of these Boys.

viz. Arithmetick, with a Scroll of Accounts in one Hand, and laying her other Hand upon a Bluecoat Boy's Head, having his Cap under his Arm. The next Figure representeth Geometry, with a Triangle in her Hand. The third Astronomy, with a Quadrant in one Hand, and a Sphere in the other. There is also the Figure of a Ship or two under Sail, with a Wind from Heaven, blowing as it were upon it a prosperous Gale. There are also in the Clouds two Angels, one of them a Mercury; and these Words wrote round, declaring the Royal Founder, and the Year when this School commenced, viz. Auspicio Caroli Secundi Regis, 1673. This Badge they wear constantly, not only in the Hospital, and about the Town, but when they are put forth; which when seen secureth them from being pressed. But they will sometimes put it into their Pockets, as not caring to own the Place of their Education; for which, when it is discovered, they are reprimanded.

And here it must not be omitted, for perpetual Memory, to remark the first Occasion of instituting this most useful Mathematical School, founded in this Hospital. It was accidental, and owing in great Measure to Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Alderman, and some time Lord-Mayor of the City, who, as the setting up of such a Discipline in this Hospital first came into his Mind, so he was very instrumental and active in bringing it to that Success it afterwards came to, by his moving it so seasonably to the Lord Clifford, then Lord High Treasurer; who as effectually propounded it to the King. Sir Robert was then made a Governor of the said House, and Sir Jonas Moor, Samuel Pepys, Esq; and several other Persons, known to be Friends and Favourers of the Mathematics, were called into the Government, for the better managing and settling this new Royal School.

The Beginning and Occasion of this Mathematical School.

King Charles II. the Royal Founder, was pleased farther to make a Grant for the Sum of for to place out ten of the Mathematick Boys Apprentices to Masters of Ships, wherein he reserved the last Year of their Time to his Service. This Sir Robert Clayton believed Mr. Pepys was the chief Instrument to procure.

The King's other Bounty to this School.

The Governors did afterwards repair an old Ward over the North Cloisters, to be appropriated for other forty Boys to be taught Mathematicks, as the King's Boys are; but to wear a distinct Badge from them, as belonging to another Foundation; namely, the old Foundation.

Another Ward of Mathematical Boys preparing.

There have been sometimes a thousand poor Children, and more, maintained here at one Time.

The Number of Children here provided for.

But now to relate some further Particulars of the State of this Hospital; as the Rooms and Apartments, the Schools, the Masters and Mistresses, the Governors, and Officers, the Provisions for their Maintenance, the good Order and Government, the Expences and the Benefactors.

The State of this House.

There is a great and spacious Hall well built, where the Boys dine and sup. It was built after the great Fire by Sir John Frederick, Alderman of London, and cost him 5000 l. In this Hall at the upper End is a large Picture, that covereth all the Wall of the North End, and stretcheth on the

The Hall.

the East and West Walls, representing King James II. but intended for King Charles II. had he lived but a little longer, sitting there, and his Nobles, and the Governors, and Treasurer, and others in great Numbers standing about him, with the Pictures of King Edward VI. and King Charles II. as Founders, drawn half Way, painted as hanging up in the same Table. And there is a particular Representation of the Mathematical School; it is done by Vario, and reckoned worth 1000 l. There is likewise at the other End of this Hall a large Picture more antient of King Edward VI. the first Founder, delivering his Royal Charter for this Hospital to the Mayor, who kneeleth with the Aldermen behind him; a Bishop, which we suppose is Ridley, with many others standing about; an antient and a fine Piece: Nor must we forget the fine Piece of the Pool of Bethesda, very large, and painted in a masterly Stile by Mr. Hogarth.

In this Hall is a good Organ, that oftentimes plays, when the Boys also sing their Psalms or Anthems on Sundays and other special Days.

Eight
Wards.

There are eight Wards where the Children's Beds are, and where they lodge and harbour: In each of these Wards are harboured above fifty odd, one with another.

The Girls
Ward
built.

The Girls have a Ward also by themselves, which is situated passing out of the great Hall on the East. It is fair and handsome, and, indeed, the best Ward of all. It was built at the Cost of Mr. John Morice and Sir Robert Clayton, the former giving 1000 l. the other much more. Mr. Thomas Firmin, Girdler, that charitable Citizen in his Time, took upon him the Care of the Building, and was supplied with Money from them, yet, concealing their Names according to their Desire, mentioning no more concerning them in this good Work, but only that two charitable Citizens were at the Charge of it. There is a Statue set up in the Common Hall for Sir Robert Clayton, as his Memory deserveth to be perpetuated for his singular Charity towards other Hospitals, as well as this.

Mr. Thomas Firmin.

The Occasion.
Mr. Cockeril.

But take a more particular Account of this Building, from one who had it from the Relation of Sir Robert himself, and how the Builders came to be known. Sir Robert had had a very great Fit of Sickness in the Year 1675, and, being restored to a good State of Health, did think fit to make an Acknowledgment to God for this Mercy by some publick good Work: And, consulting with the said Mr. Firmin upon that Subject, he proposed something should be done for Christ's Hospital, which since the great Fire had been but little restored hitherto from its Ruins; and excited him particularly to build the Girls Ward there; the doing of which was computed at 2000 l. Cost. Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was contented to give one Half thereof. And Mr. Firmin was employed in the Care and Managery, with a strict Injunction given him, that their Names should not be discovered. This was not all that was intended: For Sir Robert then designed, that the Children of the House should be better fitted for common and ordinary Trades, than by the Methods then taken they were; and did project several Rooms under the Wards for several Trades; where the Children, not engaged in Mathematicks, should spend some of their Time in honest Callings, that might be useful to the House and the Publick too, according to some Models he had procured of Hospitals from abroad. While this Work was carrying on, it was found convenient to make this a double Ward, however, at first, designed only for a single one; and the Stair-case to be set within the Cloisters to serve both. This augmented the Charge, at first proposed, to near double the Sum; and Mr. Morice, Sir Robert's Partner, was now dead, so that the whole Burthen now lay on him. While this Work was in Hand, having privately viewed it, he intended something further, which would have cost 500 l. more.

But it most unseasonably happened at this Time, that Feuds and Factions grew high among the Citizens, which ended, at last, in the depriving them of their Charter. And then was this most liberal and publick-spirited Citizen and Magistrate put out both of the Government of the City, and of this Hospital, with many other worthy Citizens, and so the good Work unhappily stopped. But Mr. Firmin soon took the Opportunity to let the remaining Governors understand, what a Piece of Ingratitude this was, shewing them, in some Zeal, that he that was thus discharged, was the very Man that had highly deserved of the House in this expensive Building, by whose whole Charges it had, for divers Years, been carried on; whereby the Founder of this Ward came to be, at length, known, which, otherwise, might have been concealed to this Day.

A further good Work stopped by Faction.

Another Ward there is, being a convenient Ward apart by itself for the Sick, where they that fall into any Distempers are removed, and due Care taken of them.

Ward for the Sick.

Of the antient Buildings remaining, there is an old Cloister of the Grey-friers, and was Part of the old Priory. It serves for a Thoroughfare, and a Place of Recreation for the Boys, especially in rainy Weather: But, being gone to Decay, it was repaired, by the Direction of that excellent Architect, Sir Christopher Wren, Knight.

The Cloister.

For Schools, there are these: A Grammar School, a Mathematical School, a Writing School, and a School for the Girls, where they learn to read, to sew, and to mark.

Schools.

The Grammar School is antient; the other more modern, and set up since the great Fire.

The Writing School is a very fair Structure, at the End of the great Hall, lofty and airy; founded by Sir John Moore, Knight, some time one of the Aldermen of the City, and President of of this House. It containeth long Writing-boards, sufficient for 300 Boys to sit and write at. It cost the nobly-minded Builder, they say, 5000 l. whose Statue, in white Marble, at full Proportion is placed at the upper End, with this Inscription:

Writing
School.

Anno Dom. 1694.

This Writing School, and stately Building, was begun, and completely finished, at the sole Charge of Sir John Moore, Knt. and Lord-Mayor of the City, in the Year M^oCLXXXI; now President of this House; he having been otherwise a liberal Benefactor to the same.

It

It resteth upon Columns, and is built, below, into Tenements and Shops, which they let out; there being seven in all.

The Masters.

The Masters of these Schools are four, viz. A Grammar Master, who hath also an Usher to assist him; a Mathematical Master, and a Writing Master, who have 100 l. per Annum, each, for their Salaries, besides Houses.

There are also two School-Mistresses that teach the Girls, who also have sufficient Salaries, and Houses to dwell in.

The Grammar Master hath also an Addition of 20 l. yearly, for Catechising the Boys; and his Usher 50 l. a Year besides.

A Drawing-Master.

Christ's Hospital is lately further improved, by entertaining a Master to teach the Boys Drawing. Some Skill in which Art is so very useful to many, or most mechanical Trades; as, besides Painters, those of Seamen, Carpenters, Joiners, Plumbers, Carvers, Masons, Bricklayers, &c.

Now for the Governors and Officers of this great Hospital.

Governors.

The Governors are many, and commonly Persons that have been Masters or Wardens of their Companies, or Men of Estates, or from whom there are Expectations of Charity. Out of these, one is President, and he commonly is some antient Alderman that hath passed the Chair; and another is Treasurer, who takes Care of the Affairs of the whole House, and of the Revenues, and therefore is commonly resident, and hath a good House to dwell in, but without any Salary: And such an one is chosen by the Governors for this great Trust, who is of Note for his Abilities, Integrity, and Charity: And according to the Repute he hath, so the Hospital usually flourisheth, and the Benefactions come in plentifully.

Treasurer.

The present Treasurer is Philip Scarth, Esq.

Every Governor, when he is admitted into this Society, hath this Charge solemnly given him, in the Presence of the President, or Treasurer, and other Governors assembled in Court:

“Worshipful,

The Governor's Charge.

“The Cause of your Repair hither at this present is, to give you Knowledge, that you are elected and appointed, by the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, to the Office, Charge, and Governance of Christ's Hospital.

“And, therefore, this is to require you, and every of you, that you endeavour yourselves, with all your Wisdom and Power, faithfully and diligently to serve in this Vocation and Calling, which is an Office of high Trust and Worship: For ye are called to be the faithful Distributors and Disposers of the Goods of Almighty God to his poor and needy Members. In the which Office and Calling if you shall be found negligent and unfaithful, ye shall not only declare yourselves to be the most unthankful and unworthy Servants of Almighty God; being put in Trust to see the Relief and Succour of his poor and needy Flock; but also ye shall shew yourselves to be very notable and great Enemies to that Work, which most highly doth advance and beautify the Commonwealth of this Realm, and chiefly of this City of London.

“These are therefore to require you, and every of you, that ye here promise before God, and this Assembly of your Fellow-Governors, faithfully to travail in this your Office and Calling, that this Work may have its Perfection; and that the needy Number committed to your Charge be diligently and wholsomely provided for, as you will answer before God, at the Hour and Time when you and we shall stand before him, to render an Account of our Doings. And, promising this to do, you shall be now admitted into this Company and Fellowshipship.”

Besides the chief Governors, they have divers Officers that receive Salaries, viz. four Clerks, a Steward, a Matron; for every Ward, a Nurse and her Maid; a Porter and four Beadles.

They have also three Servants, which they call Street-men, that see to the well Government of the Carts of London.

They have also certain Clerks for Blackwell-Hall, whence are certain Duties coming to the House.

As for the Provision for this great Family, the Drink is supplied by two Beer-Brewers, and the Bread by three Bakers.

There are two of the Governors that are called Almoners, who, for a Month, or more, take Care to buy and lay in Butchers Meat, that is, Beef and Mutton; the Steward attending them.

The Butcher receiveth, upon an Average, 50 l. every Month.

And after this Manner the Children fare daily: They have, every Morning, for their Breakfast, Bread and Beer, at half an Hour past six in the Morning, in the Summer Time; and at half an Hour past seven in the Winter. On Sundays they have boiled Beef and Pottage for their Dinners; and for their Suppers, Bread and Butter. On other Days, their Fare, as it is thrifty, so it is sufficient.

On Mondays Milk-pottage, Tuesdays roast Mutton, Wednesdays Rice-milk, Thursdays boiled Beef and Broth, Fridays boiled Mutton and Broth, and on Saturdays Pease-pottage.

Their Supper is Bread and Cheese, or Butter for those that cannot eat Cheese.

They have roast Beef about twelve Days in the Year, by the Kindness of several Benefactors; who have left, some 3 l. some 50 s. per Annum, for that End and Purpose.

Their Bread, formerly, was very coarse and brown; but, by the Care and Order of Mr. Breerwood, a late Treasurer, it was changed, and is very good wheaten Bread: And, when it was first brought into the Hall in the Bread-baskets, the poor Children's Hearts rejoiced, and they gave a great Shout, praying God to bless their good Treasurer.

The good Orders of this numerous House are also much to be commended. Omitting the rest, I shall relate the Custom on the Lord's-Days; which bringeth Multitudes of People, both of the City and Court, thither, to behold.

As soon as the Boys come from Church on Sundays in the Afternoon, they repair into their several Wards, where they read Chapters in the Bible until the Supper-bell rings, which is at six o'Clock; then they go into the great Hall to Supper.

per. All being come in, one Boy appointed goeth up into a Pulpit there placed, and readeth a Chapter, being the second Lesson for the Day. After that, he reads likewise several good Collects, or short Prayers, composed, or ordered to be composed, by the Right Reverend the Bishop of London, being all suitable to the Occasion: As, for all States of Men; and Thanks for their Benefactors; and Prayers for their Foundation. At the End of every Prayer all the Boys cry Amen, that makes a very melodious Sound. The Boy that readeth is one of the uppermost, and designed for the University. The Prayers being done, a Psalm is named by the Boy; and all sing, with a good Organ, that is placed in the said great Hall. That done, the said Boy, in the Pulpit, craves a Blessing upon their Supper; and then all the Boys and Girls, that were standing round in their Order before, go quietly each to their Tables, and take their Places, which they know, without any Noise. Then certain of the Boys, in their Turns, some bring Bread in their Baskets, ready cut in good Pieces; and others, Trenchers; and others, small Beer; of which they have as much as they please. Then are brought, in several wooden Platters, Butter cut out into reasonable Pieces, and the Nurses distribute them to each Boy. Supper being done, which is not long, the former Boy goes up into the Pulpit again, and gives Thanks; and then sets a Psalm, and all the Boys sing well with the Organ. This done, they all, in very quiet and good Order, retire from the Hall to their several Wards, the Nurses of each Ward going before their respective Ward; and one of the Boys, in each Ward, carrying the Bread-Basket upon his Shoulder, another the Table-Cloth; and so the Hall is presently cleared: And the Nurses and Boys, as they pass along by the Treasurer, make their Obeisance. When they are thus retired to their several Wards, the Nurses hear them all read Chapters out of the Bible; and then they sing some Psalm again, and, soon after, they all go to Bed.

The Children are catechised on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays in the Grammar-School.

And, that these poor Children may be cared for in Sickness as well as in Health, there is a convenient Apartment, by itself, for such to be kept in; which contains a Room for the Lodging of the Sick, a Kitchen for dressing their Diet, and preparing such Food or Physick as is needful for them; and a Consultation Chamber, where the Physician, Apothecary, or Surgeon meet, to confer upon the Patients Distempers and Cures; together with other Places convenient. There is a Nurse proper to this Ward; and they had a Physician, who was, formerly, the very learned and well-deserving Dr. Sloane, late Sir Hans Sloane, Baronet, now Dr. Robinson, an Apothecary, and a Surgeon; who commonly come two or three Times a Week, or oftener, as there is Occasion for them. And in such a good State of Health was this Hospital, that, in the Month of July, Anno 1704, when I was there, there were but five Lads in this Ward, and they then pretty well.

Besides the Children that are maintained within the Walls of this Hospital, there are considerable Numbers belonging to it, which are sent out and provided for in the Country, viz. at Ware and Hertford, in Hertfordshire: And they are of the least and youngest Sort, and afterwards brought home to London. At each Place is a Schoolmaster, to teach the Children to read, with a Salary of 50 l. each

At Ware is a fine Building, like a College, making a large Quadrangle, for Boys, containing a School-house and a Master's House, and thirteen Houses for Nurses to keep the Children. Sir Jonathan Raymond, Knight, some time Alderman of London, bought and gave them a Field near adjoining, to recreate themselves and to play in. In the Summer of the Year 1704, fifty-seven Boys, and more, were going thither; eighty Children being then kept there.

At Hertford are also a School-house, and a Master's House, and twenty Houses more, each with two Rooms on a Floor, and Gardens belonging. Hither were sent, in the Year 1704, ninety-six Boys, and some Girls; which Girls were sent thither for Air, because not well; so that, divers Years ago, an hundred Children were kept at Hertford.

This Hospital expends 12 or 1300 l. a Year in Salaries to Officers, Clerks and Servants; and the Foundation hath such a Reputation, and the Estate belonging to it is so well employed, and so justly managed, and used to the real Intents of it, and the Government of it so good and regular, that many have been encouraged to be frank Benefactors to it: And seldom Men of Estate in the City die, but they leave it very good Legacies, whether in Sums of Money, or in Houses and Lands. But some have been extraordinary in their Bounty: As Mr. Stone, of Skillingthorp in Lincolnshire, left an Estate there, of about 500 l. a Year, for the proper Use of this Place; yet leaving many Charities for the Hospital first to pay out.

Mr. Garraway left an Estate to it, near Arun-del in Sussex, of above 700 l. a Year; whose Picture, in grateful Memory of him, is set up in the great Hall by Mr. Treasurer.

One Mr. Bacon gave a considerable Estate in Reversion, in Case of the Death of two Relations.

So that their yearly Revenue, in Houses and Lands, as it ought to be, to satisfy such vast Charges; so, Thanks be to God for Persons well disposed to this charitable Foundation, is considerably great: And, by the Bounty of the City, to increase the wealthy Estate thereof, it hath allowed this House the Benefit of looking after and licensing the Carts of London; the whole Care and Ordering whereof belongs to it. There are 420 Carts allowed in the City, each of which pays a certain small Sum for sealing.

They have also a Duty of about three Farthings upon every Cloth brought to Blackwell-Hall; allowed them by Acts of Common-Council; and they keep Clerks there to receive it.

Christ-Church Hospital was seasonably relieved, in the Year 1718, with these Legacies:

Dame Mary Ramsey, Widow of Sir Thomas Ramsey, Knt. and President; a most munificent Benefactor to this Hospital, and other Places, Anno 1599.

Thomas Barnes, Esq; Citizen and Haberdasher, Anno 1667; a bountiful Benefactor to this Hospital.

Erasmus Smith, Esq; in the Year 1666, and afterwards, was a very bountiful and liberal Benefactor to this Foundation.

Sir John Leman, Knt. and President of this Hospital; a very bountiful Benefactor, Anno 1632.

Sir Thomas Viner, Knt. and President of this Hospital, Anno 1658; a worthy Benefactor, when living, and at his Decease.

Mr. Richard Young, Citizen of London, and some Time of Roxwell in Essex, Anno 1661, was a worthy Benefactor to this Hospital.

Daniel Colwall, Esq; one of the Governors, Anno 1667, a living Benefactor; and at his Decease, 1690, was extraordinarily liberal and charitable to this Hospital.

Sir Christopher Clitherow, Knt. and President of this Hospital, 1641; a Benefactor.

Sir John Moore, Knt. and President, Anno 1684; a liberal Benefactor to this Hospital on several Accounts; and in building the new Writing-School at the West End of the Town-Ditch, finished Anno 1695, when living.

Sir John Frederick, Knt. and President, Anno 1662, to the Year 1684, was a very liberal and bountiful Benefactor, besides his extraordinary Charges in rebuilding the great Hall in this Hospital.

Sir Wolstone Dixey, Knt. and President; a worthy Benefactor to this Hospital in the Year 1593.

John Morrise, Esq; in the Year 1670, a Benefactor in repairing the Cloisters; and since very liberal towards building the Girls Ward over the South Cloister in this Hospital.

Mr. Thomas Stretchley, Gent. Anno 1682, gave certain Lands to this Hospital, besides the Reversion of a considerable Estate.

Henry Stone, of Skellingthorp in the County of Lincoln, Esq; a most munificent Benefactor to this Hospital; who died in June, 1693.

William Garway, of Ford, in the Rape of Arundel, in the County of Sussex, Esq; a very munificent Benefactor to this Hospital; he died Anno 1701.

Sir Robert Clayton, Knt. and Alderman, and some Time Lord-Mayor of this City, who built the Ward for the Girls, Anno 1682, and was otherwise a good Benefactor to this Hospital; he died in the Year 1707.

The State of Christ's Hospital, Anno 1754.

Children put forth Apprentices, and discharged out of Christ's Hospital, the Year last past, one hundred and seventy-seven; ten whereof, being instructed in the Mathematicks and Navigation, were placed forth Apprentices to Commanders of Ships out of the Mathematical School, founded by his late Majesty King Charles II.

Children buried the Year last past, none.

Children now remaining under the Care and Charge of the said Hospital, which are kept in the House, and at Nurse elsewhere, seven hundred and ninety.

That the Revenue of the Hospital having greatly suffered by several dreadful Fires in and about London, and otherwise; and the Governors having been at vast Expence for accommodating poor Orphans, in purchasing and building of convenient Houses or Nurseries at Hertford and Ware for their Reception, and in maintaining of Masters, Ushers, and other proper Officers there: And the sick Ward in the said Hospital having, by Length of Time, become ruinous, and in great Danger of falling, hath unavoidably occasioned the rebuilding the same, which hath been finished at a very great Expence of the Money of the said Hospital: And the annual Increase of Children having made it absolutely necessary for the Governors to engage in the new Building of two additional Wards for the said Children's Reception; which said Buildings have been likewise finished at the like Charge and Expence of the said Hospital: And the Hospital's Revenue, without casual Benefactions, being not sufficient to defray the Charge of maintaining so large a Number of Children as they do, together with the great Expence of the said new Buildings; it is therefore to be hoped and wished for, that, in Regard to a Work so charitable, useful, and commendable, being for the Relief of necessitous Orphans and Infants, the Advancement of the Christian Religion, and the Good of the Kingdom, all charitable and worthy good Christians will readily and liberally contribute to the Support and Encouragement of so good and pious a Work.

Gates into St. Paul's Church-yard.

(17.) On the North Side of St. Paul's Church-yard is a fair House, called, The Chapter-House, belonging to St. Paul's. And here the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury used to sit to consult about ecclesiastical Matters, and to frame Canons for the better and more orderly Government and Peace of the Church. The Clergy whereof, consisting of an Upper and Lower House, are called by the King's Writ, whensoever the Parliament sits; and are prorogued and dismissed by his Authority. Thus, Anno 1718, after a Prorogation of this Synod by Authority of the King's Writ and Licence, "Full, free and lawful Power was given to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest of the Bishops of the Province, or the greater Number of them; and the rest of the Clergy of this present Convocation, that is, the Lower House, or the greater Number of them; from Time to Time, during this present Parliament, to propose, confer, treat, debate, consult, and agree of, and upon such Canons, &c. as they shall think necessary, fit and convenient, for the Honour and Service of God, the Good and Quiet of the Church; and the Government thereof, as by Law established. And, further; they are authorised to set down in Writing, and exhibit to the King, all such Canons and Things, so by them, from Time to Time, agreed upon. Provided always that they be not contrary, nor tend to make any Alteration in the Doctrine, Discipline, or Government of the Church of England, as established by any Act of Parliament now in Force."

The Antiquities of this Ward, which have come to our Knowledge, were,

(1.) An Arch or Gate in the narrow Gut or Passage into the South-East End of St. Paul's Church-yard, called St. Augustine's Gate, because adjoining to St. Augustine's Church; and built by Nicholas Farendon, Alderman of the Ward, in 1361. As also another Arch or Gate into the said Church-yard from Cheap-side, on the North End of the Old Change.

(2.) The great Cross in West Cheap-street, erected by King Edward I. as noted before in Cheap Ward.

(3.) In Silver-street, at the South End of Monkswell-street, there stood Lord Windsor's House in 1603; it was built of Stone and Timber, and was in antient Days called Nevel's-Inn, belonging to the Nevels. In the 17th of Richard II. it was found, by Inquisition of a Jury, that Elizabeth Nevel died seized of a great Messuage in the Parish of St. Olave in Monkswell-street in London, holden of the King in free Burgage, which she held of the Gift of John Nevel, of Raby, her Husband; and that John Latimer was next Son and Heir to the said Elizabeth.

This House was called Nevel's-Inn, and possessed by that noble Family until the Time of Henry VI. in the 4th of whose Reign Rafe Nevel, Earl of Westmoreland, died, seized of that Messuage in the Parish of St. Olave, in Farringdon Ward, London, and the Heirs Male of his Body, begotten on Jane, his Wife; and of another Messuage, called Le Erbor, in Dowgate Ward; both held in Burgage, as the City of London was held.

(4.) St. James's Hermitage in the Wall. See before Lamb's Chapel.

(5.) There was, of old Time, a proper Parish-Church of St. Nicholas, whereof the Fleish-market in Newgate-street took the Name, and was called St. Nicholas Shambles, situate at the South-East Corner of Butcherhall-lane.

There was anciently a Lane or Passage from Vedast-lane, now Foster-lane, to Great St. Martin's Church on one Part, and to this Church of St. Nicholas Shambles on the other; but one William de Luda, some Time Dean of St. Martin's, stopped it up: Whereupon, at an Inquisition made in Edward III's Reign, for Purprestures and Annoyances in the City, the King's Justices sitting at the Tower, the Jury presented this, and that it was to the Damage of the King and the Commonalty of the City: But Richard de Ellesfield, then Dean of St. Martin's, came in and shewed; that he held the said Lane stopped up by Virtue of a Licence from King Edward I. and that by Letters Patents which he produced.

This Church, with the Tenements and Ornaments, was, by Henry VIII. given to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City towards the Maintenance of the new Parish-Church, then to be erected in the late dissolved Church of the Greyfriars; so was this Church dissolved and pulled down: In Place whereof, and of the Church-yard, many fair Houses are now built, in a Court, with a Well, &c. in the Midst whereof the Church stood.

(6.) Near to the North-West Corner of Newgate-street stood a Convent and Church of Greyfriars, or Friars minors.

The first of this Order of Friars in England, nine in Number, arrived at Dover, out of Italy, in the Year 1224, the 8th Year of the Reign of King Henry III. being of the Order of the Franciscans, or Friars minors: Five of them, being Priests, remained at Canterbury; the other four, being Laymen, came to London, and were lodged at the Preaching-friars in Holborn for the Space of fifteen Days: And then they hired a House in Cornhill of John Trevers, one of the Sheriffs of London. They built there little Cells, wherein they they inhabited: But, shortly after, the Devotion of the Citizens towards them, and the Number of the Friars so increased, that they were by the Citizens removed to a Place in St. Nicholas Shambles, which John Ewin, Mercer, purchasing a void Piece of Ground, appropriated unto the Commonalty, to the Use of these said Friars; and himself became a Lay-brother amongst them about the Year 1225.

Divers Citizens seemed herein to join with the said John Ewin, and erected there very beautiful Buildings.

The Building of the Choir.

William Joyner, Lord-Mayor of London, in the Year 1239, built the Choir, which cost him 200 l. Sterling; which Choir made Part of the Chancel, as it now standeth.

The Body of the Church.

Henry Walleis, who was likewise Lord-Mayor of London, built the Body of the Church, which afterwards was pulled down, and made as now it is.

* Potter,

The Chapter-house.

Walter Potter *, Alderman, the Chapter-house; and gave divers Vessels of Brass for the Kitchen-Service: Building Places also for sick Persons, besides other Offices.

The Vestry-house.

Thomas Felcham built the Vestry-house.

The Dorners and Chambers.

Gregory Rokesley, Lord-Mayor of London, built their Dorners and Chambers, and gave Beds to them.

The Refectory. The Infirmary. The Study.

Bartholomew of the Castel made the Refectory.

Peter de Helyland built the Infirmary, and divers Places for diseased Persons.

Bevis Bond, King at Arms, the Study.

New Church of the Grey-friars.

Margaret, Queen, second Wife to Edward I. began the Choir of their new Church in the Year 1306; to the Building whereof, in her Life-time, she gave 2000 Marks, and 100 Marks by her Testament.

John Britaine, Earl of Richmond, built the Body of the Church, to the Charges of 300 l. and gave many rich Jewels and Ornaments to be used in the same.

Mary, Countess of Pembroke, 70 l.

Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, bestowed twenty great Beams out of his Forest of Tunbridge, and 20 l. Sterling.

Lady Eleanor le Spencer, Lady Elizabeth de Brugh, Sister to Gilbert de Clare, gave Sums of Money; and so did divers Citizens, as Arnold de Tolinea, 100 l.

Robert, Baron Lisle, who became a Friar there, 300 l.

Bartholomew de Almaine, 50 l.

Also Philippe, Queen, Wife to Edward III. gave 62 l.

Isabel, Queen-Mother to Edward III. gave 70 l. and so the Work was done within the Space of 21 Years, 1327.

The Stalls.

This Church, thus furnished with Windows, made at the Charges of divers Persons, the Lady Margaret Seagrave, Countess of Norfolk, bore the Charges of making the Stalls in the Choir, to the Value of 350 Marks, about the Year 1380. Richard Whittington, in the Year 1429, founded the Library, which was in Length one hundred and twenty-nine Feet, and in Breadth thirty-one, all cieled with Wainscot, having twenty-eight Desks, and eight double Settles of Wainscot: Which, in the next Year following, was altogether finished in building; and within three Years after furnished with Books, to the Charges of 556 l. 10 s. whereof Richard Whittington bare 400 l. the rest was borne by Dr. Thomas Winchelsey, a Friar there: And for the writing out of D. Nicholas de Lira's Works, in two Volumes, to be chained there, 100 Marks, &c.

The Cieling of the Choir, at divers Men's Charges, 200 Marks, and the Painting at 50 Marks: Their Conduit-head and Water-course were given them by William Taylor, Taylor to Henry III. &c.

This whole Church contained, in Length, three hundred Feet, of the Feet of St. Paul; in Breadth, eighty-nine Feet; and in Height, from the Ground to the Roof, sixty-four Feet two Inches, &c. It was consecrated 1325; and, at the general Suppression, was valued at 32 l. 19 s. surrendered the 12th of November, 1538, the 30th of Henry VIII. the Ornaments and Goods being taken to the King's Use. The Church was shut up for a Time, and used as a Store-house for Goods, taken as Prizes from the French: But, in the Year 1546, on the 3d of January, it was again set open; on which Day preached at Paul's Cross the Bishop of Rockester, where he declared the King's Gift thereof to the City for the relieving the Poor; which Gift was, by Patent of St. Bartholomew's Spital in Smithfield, valued at 305 l. 6 s. 7 d. and surrendered to the King, of the said Church of the Grey-friars, and of two Parish-Churches, the one of St. Nicholas in the Shambles, and the other of St. Ewin's in Newgate-market, which were to be made one Parish-Church in the said Friars Church: And in Lands he gave, for the Maintenance of the said Church, with Divine Service, Reparations, &c. 500 Marks a Year for ever.

Grey-friars Church made a Parish-Church. The Mayor and Commonalty of London Parsons of Christ's Church. The Vicar to be at their Appointment.

The 13th of January, the 38th of Henry VIII. an Agreement was made betwixt the King, the Mayor, and Commonalty of London, dated the 27th of December; by which the said Grey-friars Church, with all the Edifices and Ground, the Fraternity, the Library, the Dorney, and Chapter-house, the great Cloister and the lesser; Tenements, Gardens, and vacant Grounds; Lead, Stone, Iron, &c. the Hospital of St. Bartholomew in West-Smithfield, with the Church of the same; the Lead, Bells, and Ornaments of the same Hospital, with all the Messuages, Tenements, and Appurtenances; the Parishes of St. Nicholas and of St. Ewin, and so much of St. Sepulchre's Parish as is within the Gate, called Newgate, were made one Parish-Church in the Grey-friars Church, and called Christ's Church, founded by King Henry VIII.

The Vicar of Christ's Church was to have 26 l. 13 s. 4 d. a Year: The Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. The Visitor of Newgate, being a Priest, 10 l. and the other five Priests in Christ's Church, ministering the Sacraments and Sacramentals, to have 8 l. a-piece: Two Clerks, 6 l. each: A Sexton, 4 l. Moreover, he gave to them the Hospital of Bethlehem, with the Laver of Brass in the Cloister, by Estimation eighteen Feet in Length; and the Water-course of Lead, to the Friar-house belonging, containing by Estimation, in Length, eighteen Acres.

In this Grey-friars there was a stinking Dungeon, of what Antiquity I cannot tell: But, in

The Dungeon in the Grey friars.

Queen Mary's Time, they put in here such as were Vagabonds and idle Persons. The Porter of this Dungeon was one Ninian. Here Thomas Green, Servant to John Wayland, Printer, was brought, and, after some Time, whipped grievously, having the Correction of Thieves and Vagabonds, for a Book called Antichrist, that he had assisted at the printing of.

In this Church of the Grey-friars there were nine Tombs of Alabaster and Marble, invironed with Pallisadoes of Iron, in the Choir; and one Tomb in the Body of the Church, also coped with Iron; all pulled down, besides seven Score Grave-stones of Marble, all sold for fifty Pounds, or thereabouts, by Sir Martin Bowes, Goldsmith, and Alderman of London.

(7.) The King's Exchange for the Receipt of Bullion to be coined was situate in this Ward, near St. Paul's, in a Street now called the Old Exchange; for Henry III. in the sixth Year of his Reign, wrote to the Sabines and Men of Ipri, that he and his Council had given Prohibition, that none, Englishmen or others, should make Change of Plate, or other Mass of Silver, but only in his Exchange at London, or at Canterbury. Andrew Bokerell then had to farm the Exchange of England, and was Mayor of London in the Reign of Henry III. John Somercote had the keeping of the King's Exchange over all England. In the eighth of Edward I. Gregory Rokesley was Keeper of the said Exchange for the King. In the fifth of Edward II. William Hausted was Keeper thereof, and, in the eighteenth, Roger de Frowicke, &c.

These received the old Stamps or Coining-Irons, from Time to Time, as the same were worn, and delivered new to all the Mints in England.

This Street beginneth by West-cheap in the North, and runneth down South to Knightriders-street, that Part thereof which is called Old Fish-street. But the very Housing and Office of the Exchange and Coinage were about the Midst thereof, South from the East Gate that entereth St. Paul's Church-yard; and, on the West Side, in Baynard's-Castle Ward.

(8.) Roger Holmes, Chancellor and Prebendary of St. Paul's, in the Year 1400, founded a Chapel for seven Chaplains, on the North Side of St. Paul's Church-yard, dedicated to the Holy Ghost; and a Hall for their Entertainment on the South Side, near to a Carpenter's Yard, in the Parish of St. Gregory; which was suppressed in the Reign of King Edward VI. and granted to John Hulson and William Pendred.

(9.) In the Parish of St. Gregory, near St. Paul's also, was a Hall named Lancaster College, founded by King Henry IV. and the Executors of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster; containing Lodgings, and a common Hall for Charity Priests to officiate in a Chapel on the North Side of the Choir of St. Paul's. It was suppressed, and granted, on the ninth of September, in the second of Edward VI. to William Gunter.

(10.) There was, on the North Side of the Church-yard, a large Charnel-house for the Bones of the Dead; and over it a Chapel of an old Foundation, such as followeth:

In the Year 1282, the tenth of Edward I. it was agreed, that Henry Walleis, Mayor, and the Citizens, for Shops by them built, without the Wall of the Church-yard, should assign to God, and to the Church of St. Paul, ten Marks of Rent per Year, for ever, towards the new-building of a Chapel of the blessed Virgin Mary; and also to assign five Marks of yearly Rent to a Chaplain, to celebrate there. There were also in this Chapel two Brotherhoods.

One of them was called the Fraternity of All Souls, in the Chapel upon the Charnel, founded 1379. This Chapel, in the Reign of Richard II. was gone into great Decay; and, from the Time of the Foundation of it, so little had been done in keeping it up, that it became very ruinous, the Windows broken to Pieces, and the Altar full of Filth and Cobwebs; so that none of the Chaplains of divers Chantries, ordained in the same Chapel by Nobles, and Persons of Quality of the City, could sing there for the Souls for whom they were appointed and had Charge, to the great Shame of all the City. Whereupon the most excellent and most benign Lord, the Archbishop of Canterbury, in

in a Sermon made by him at St. Paul's-cross, declared the Ruin and Decay of the said Chapel; and, at the Honour of God, and his Mother, and of all Saints in Heaven, and of all Christian Souls, together with a great Pardon to all the Aiders thereof, he occasioned a Fraternity of All Souls, in Relief of the said Chapel; for certain good People of the said City, having Consideration of the said Chapel to the Honour of God, &c. ordained a Chaplain to sing for the Souls of all Christians, and repaired the Chapel well and honestly, furnishing it with divers Ornaments, Vestments, Chalices, and other Necessaries, to the Honour of God and the holy Church; and that the Chaplains which had Chantries in the said Chapel should return to the said Chapel, and there perform their Service, each one for the Souls for which they were bound; so that three or four Masses might be sung from Day to Day in the said Chapel: And at their Cost the same Chapel was amended and repaired. On these Considerations this Brotherhood of All Souls petitioned the Lord Chancellor, in Richard II's Days, "That it would please his most noble and sage Reverence, upon the Points before said, and because that, for the Sermon made by their most excellent Father in God the Archbishop of Canterbury, the said Fraternity had been founded, and so to this Day had been continued, and not otherwise, to have Consideration to the Foundation of the said Fraternity, that it might not be abolished, for God, and for the Souls of their most noble Progenitors, and in the Work of Charity." The Reason of this Supplication was, because, in the twelfth of Richard II. an Account of all the Guilds in London, and England too, if I mistake not, were required to be brought in before the King at the Chancery.

The Procession of this Fraternity.

This Fraternity, on the Eve of All Souls, met together in the Chapel over the Charnel-house, and their Placebo and Dirige were said, with the other Orisons, for the Souls of all Faithful departed. On the Day of All Souls, at Morning Prayer, when the Bell rung at Seven o'Clock, they came together to the Church of the Holy Trinity, near Aldgate; and so from that Place, with a slow Pace, they walked to the aforesaid Chapel, numbering their Prayers as they went along, and their secret Orisons, pouring them out vultu cordiali, with a serious Countenance, for the Living and the Dead: And, when they had finished that Journey, they attended one Mass for the Dead, most devoutly; at which Mass the Brothers and Sisters honourably performed Oblations, and so returned home.

Moreover, in the Year 1430, the eighth of Henry VI. Licence was granted to Jenkin Carpenter, Executor to Richard Whittington, to establish, upon the said Charnel, a Chaplain, to have eight Marks per Year.

The Charnel

In this Chapel were buried Robert Barton, and Henry Barton, Mayor, and Thomas Mirsin, Mayor, all Skinners; and were entombed with their Images of Alabaster over them, grated or palliaded about with Iron, before the said Chapel; all which was pulled down in the Year 1549. The Bones of the Dead, couched up in a Charnel under the Chapel, were conveyed from thence into Finsbury-Field, by Report of him who paid for the Carriage, amounting to more than one thousand Cart-loads, and there laid on a moorish Ground, which, in a short Time after, being raised by the Soilage of the City, was able to bear three Windmills. The Chapel and Charnel were converted into Dwelling houses, Warehouses, and Sheds for Stationers, which were built before it, in Place of the Tombs.

(11.) Near to the North Side of St. Paul's School was, of old Time, a Clochier, or Bell-house, four-square, built of Stone, and in the same a most strong Frame of Timber, with four very large Bells; these were called Jesus Bells, and belonged to Jesus-Chapel, situate under the Choir of St. Paul's. The same had a great Spire of Timber, covered with Lead, with the Image of St. Paul on the Top, but was pulled down by Sir Miles Partridge, Knt. in the Reign of Henry VIII. The common Speech then was, that he set an hundred Pounds upon a Cast at Dice against it, and so won the said Clochier and Bells of the King; and then, causing the Bells to be broken as they hung, the rest was pulled down and broken also. This Man was afterwards executed on Tower-hill, for Matters concerning the Duke of Somerset, in the Year 1551, the fifth of Edward VI.

(12.) About the Midst of this Church-yard was a Pulpit-cross of Timber, mounted upon Steps of Stone, and covered with Lead; in which were Sermons preached by learned Divines every Sunday in the Forenoon.

In the Year 1259, King Henry III. commanded a general Assembly to be made at the Cross; where he, in Person, commanded the Mayor, that, on the next Day following, he should cause to be sworn before the Aldermen every Strippling of twelve Years of Age, or upwards, to be true to the King and his Heirs, Kings of England.

Also, in the Year 1262 the same King caused to be read, at St. Paul's-cross, a Bull obtained from Pope Urban IV. as an Absolution for him, and for all that were sworn to maintain the Articles made in Parliament at Oxford.

Also, in the Year 1299, the Dean of St. Paul's cursed, at St. Paul's-cross, all those which had searched in the Church of St. Martin in the Fields for an Hoard of Gold, &c.

This Pulpit-cross was, by Tempest of Lightning and Thunder, much defaced. Thomas Kempe, then Bishop of London, new built this Pulpit and Cross.

In foul and rainy Weather these solemn Sermons were preached in a Place called The Shrowds; which was, as it seems, by the Side of the Cathedral Church, where was Covering and Shelter. Now, long since, both the Cross and Shrowds are disused, and neither of them extant; but the Sermons are preached in the Cathedral itself, though they are still called St. Paul's-cross Sermons. J. S. 1720.

For the better Maintenance of these St. Paul's-cross Sermons, whither the Court, as well as the Mayor, Aldermen, and chief Citizens, used to resort, many were liberal Benefactors; as Aylmer, Bishop of London, Countess Dowager of Shrewsbury, Thomas Russel, George Bishop, who gave ten Pounds a Year, &c. And, for further Encouragement of those Preachers, in the Year 1607, the Provision for St. Paul's-cross Preachers. E. Howes. Chron.

the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen then ordered, That every one that should preach there, considering the Journies some of them might take from the Universities, or elsewhere, should, at his Pleasure, be freely entertained for five Days Space, with sweet and convenient Lodging, Fire, Candle, and all other Necessaries, viz. from Thursday before their Day of preaching to Thursday Morning following. This Provision took good Effect, and this good Custom continued for some Time. And the Bishop of London, or his Chaplain, when he sent to any one to preach, did actually signify the Place whither he might repair at his coming up, and be entertained freely. Towards this Charge of the City George Palin, a Merchant of London, gave two hundred Pounds; that is, towards the bearing of the Charges of such as should from Time to Time come to preach at the Cross.

Pater-noster-row was so called by the Antients on account of the Number of Stationers or Text-writers that dwelled there, who wrote and sold all Sorts of Books then in Use, namely, A, B, C, or Abbies, with the Pater-noster, Ave-maria, Creed, Graces, &c.

Pater-noster-makers. There dwelled also Turners of Beads, and they were called Pater-noster-makers; as in a Record, of one Robert Nikke, Pater-noster-maker and Citizen, in the Reign of Henry IV. and so of others.

Ave-mary-lane. At the End of this Pater-noster-row is Ave-mary-lane, so called upon the like Occasion of Text-writers and Bead-makers then dwelling there.

(14.) At the North End of Ave-mary-lane was one great House, built of Stone and Timber, of old Time pertaining to John Duke of Britain, Earl of Richmond, as appeareth by the Records of Edward II. Since that, it was Pembroke's-inn, near unto Ludgate, as belonging to the Earls of Pembroke in the Time of Richard II. the eighteenth Year, and of Henry VI. in the fourteenth Year. It was afterwards called Burgavenny-house, and belonged to Henry late Lord of Burgavenny.

Esch. 14 H. VI. n. 35. Pet. le Neve. "Johan. quæ fuit ux. Willmi de Bellocampo, militis, Dni Bergaveny, tenuit die quo obiit tementum vocat. Edwardo Nevil de Bergaveny jure uxoris sue Elifabeth. & heredis Comitiss Wigorn. filii & heredis predicti. Willmi & Johe."

But the Worshipful Company of Stationers have since then purchased it, and made it the Hall for the Meeting of their Society.

Where the Folkmote Court was held, and the Bell-house. (15.) The Soil of the East Part of St. Paul's Church-yard was the Place of the Folkmote, and the Bell-house, where a Bell was rung, when they were to be called together to the said antient Court of Folkmote. On the West Part of the Church, the Citizens had occasionally other Assemblies, to shew their Arms. Hence we find Complaints made to the King's Justices, in the Reign of Edward I. of these Purprestures, viz.

Purprestures. In Bago Quo War-ranto in the Exchequer. "The Ward of Castle-Baynard present, That the Dean and Chapter of the Church of Paul's, now for ten Years past, have appropriated to themselves and the Church a certain Place of Land of the King's Soil; in which Place the No. 80.

"Mayor and Commonalty of the City ought and are wont to hold their Court, which is called Folkmote, and also another Place, where, for keeping the Peace of our Lord the King, they ought to make Shew of their Arms; which said Place the said Dean and Chapter have inclosed to themselves by a Mud Wall; and also have been the Causes of building Houses in the same Place, and contain in Length thirty Feet, and in Breadth twenty Feet, in some Place, and in some other Place fifteen Feet; and, where it is least, eight Feet; and Master William de Bray now holdeth that House."

And again, Hamon de Chigwel, Mayor of the City of London, and Commonalty of the same, came and said, "That the foresaid Places, in which it is presented that the foresaid Purprestures are made, are the King's Soil, belonging to the City, and not Sanctuary, nor of the Precinct of the Sanctuary, nor of the Church-yard of the foresaid Church of St. Paul; for they say, that the whole Place of the Land on the East Part of the said Church, where now of new they are buried, and where the great Campanile, Bell-house, or Steeple of the said Church is situated, is the Soil and Lay-Fee of the King; and that the Citizens of the City have accustomed to hold there, from antient Time, their Court called Folkmote, and to enter the said Bell-house to ring the great Bell; by the Ringing and Sound of which the said City ought or are wont to be summoned, and to meet together at the Court aforesaid of Folkmote.

"And they say, that all the other Place of Ground on the West Part of the Church, in like Manner, is the Soil and Lay-Fee of our Lord the King, belonging to the City aforesaid; and that in the same the Citizens ought and are accustomed to make their Assembly, together with the Lord of Baynard-Castle, to make a View of their Armours, for the Defence of the said City, as often as the Citizens shall see expedient."

(16.) To what has been said on P. 26, 27, Ludgate; 28, concerning the Prison of Ludgate, may be added this Piece of antient History:

Formerly, Debtors that were not able to satisfy their Debts, put themselves into this Prison of Ludgate for Shelter from their Creditors; and these were Merchants and Tradesmen that had been driven to Want by Losses at Sea. When King Philip, in the Month of August, 1554, came first through London, these Prisoners were thirty in Number, and owed ten thousand Pounds, but compounded for two thousand Pounds. They presented a well-penned Latin Speech to that Prince to redress their Miseries, and by his Royal Generosity to free them: "And the rather, for that that Place was non Sceleratorum Carcer, sed miserorum Custodia; i. e. not a Gaol for Villains, but a Place of Restraint for poor, unfortunate Men; and that they were put in there, not by others, but themselves fled thither, and that not out of Fear of Punishment, but in Hopes of better Fortune." The whole Letter was drawn by the curious Pen of Roger Ascham, and is extant among his Epistles, Lib. 3.

A Table of Fees to be taken by the Keeper of Ludgate, and the Turnkeys under him; allowed of and confirmed at a Court of Aldermen, holden on Tuesday the nineteenth Day of January, 1685-6, in the Time of the Mayoralty of Sir Robert Gefrey, Knt. Lord-Mayor of the City of London, as followeth:

Fees payable by the Prisoners of Ludgate. Rand. Stracey, Esq;

Imprimis, At the Coming in of every Prisoner, to the Turnkey one Shilling.

To the Officer that goes with him thither two Pence.

To the Keeper, for every Prisoner's Discharge, two Shillings, and no more.

For all Actions or Writs against any Prisoner, twelve Pence only, and not twelve Pence for every Action, or two Shillings and six Pence for every Writ, as formerly he took.

Item, That the Keeper finding and providing clean Sheets every Month, for every Bed, such Prisoners that lie therein are to pay to the Chamberlain for washing them every Month, between them, eight Pence per Month, and no more; and not each Prisoner that lies therein to pay eight Pence.

The Keeper finding and providing Beds, Bedding, Mats, and Cords, Sheets, Blankets, and Coverlets, the Prisoners are to pay him for the best Lodging, per Night, three Pence.

For the second Lodging, per Night, two Pence.

For the third or meanest Lodging, per Night, one Penny.

But, when the Prisoners find their own Beds and Bedding, which the Keeper is in no Sort to hinder, the Prisoner is only to pay, per Week, for Bed-room, three Pence, and no more.

Or, for Chamber-room, four Pence at the most, per Week; and not above two to lie in a Bed.

If the Prisoner by his Inability can go no further than a Couch, he is to pay only one Penny per Week for Chamber-room, and no more.

And the like for Lamps and Candles, which the Keeper is to provide, one Penny per Week, and no more.

The Keeper shall not presume to take any other Fees, upon any Pretence, Demand, or Allowance whatsoever, for Execution-Money, Action-Money, or Writ-Money.

At which said Court it was further ordered, that the present Keeper, and the Keeper of the said Gaol for the Time being, should keep the said Prison of Ludgate in good Repair at his own Charge.

The Charges of Prisoners at their Entrance and Dismission.

A Freeman of London, being arrested by Action entered in either of the Compters, may refuse to go thither, and require to be carried immediately to Ludgate; but the Officers will extort from him four or five Shillings, as their Fee for carrying him thither, though their Due is but two Pence.

When he is brought to Ludgate, the Turnkey enters his Name and Addition in a Book kept for that Purpose; for which Entry the Prisoner pays one Shilling and two Pence: After which the Chamberlain furnishes him with a Lodging, at the Rate of one Penny, two Pence, or three Pence per Night, and he pays the Chamberlain also one Shilling and six Pence for Sheets: But, before he goes to Rest, his Fellow-Prisoners demand four Shillings for Garnish; for Non-payment whereof, his Cloaths are privately taken from him in the Night, and not returned until he has raised the Money the next Day. The Steward demands one Shilling and six Pence of him for Coals, Candles, and for the Use of the House; and, if he desire Liberty to go abroad, it must be either with a Keeper, or upon giving good Security to return at Night. If he goes out with a Keeper he must pay two Shillings and six Pence to the Head Turnkey, and one Shilling and six Pence to the Keeper who attends him; and one Shilling to the Keeper, and as much to the Turnkey, every Day he goes abroad afterwards. A Bond also is given for the Payment of his Lodging to the Master-keeper, for which the Turnkey takes at least five Shillings as his Fee.

If the Prisoner pays the Debt, and discharges all other Actions against him in either Compter, he pays these Fees upon his Dismission: Two Shillings to the Master-keeper, one Shilling and two Pence to the Turnkey, one Shilling for every Action entered against him, and, if he is charged in Execution, two Shillings and six Pence for every Action against him. These Fees and his Lodging sometimes amount to as much as the Debt.

(17.) At the North-West Extremity of this Ward stands Newgate, of which on Page 25. To this Account we may add, it is a large Prison, and made very strong, the better to secure such Sort of Criminals which too much fill it; inasmuch that the Debtors are crowded amongst them, except they have large Purse to be in the Press-yard, which is a Place for the better Sort, or such as can well gratify the Keeper's extravagant Demands. And it is great Pity that many an honest Man, that, through Misfortunes in the World, hath contracted Debts more than he can pay, should be confined to such a Place, among such ill People, and to hear their Cursings and Blasphemies, and that no other Prison is provided for them. It appears that Newgate was a Prison for the Nobility and great Officers of State, and not the Tower, so lately as the Year 1457. The Gate, being very much damaged by the Fire in 1666, was afterwards strongly rebuilt of Stone, and continues to be the County Gaol for Middlesex as well as London. The West Side of the Gate is adorned with three Ranges of Pilasters and their Entablaments, of the Tuscan Order. Over the lowest is a circular Pediment, and above it the King's Arms. The Intercolumns are four Niches, with as many Figures as large as Life: One of these, representing Liberty, has carved on her Hat the Word Libertas, and the Figure of a Cat lying at her Feet, alluding to the Figure of Sir Richard Whittington, a former Founder, who is reported to have made the first Step to his good Fortune by a Cat. The Inside of the Gate also is adorned with a Range of Pilasters, with Entablaments as the other; and, in three Niches, are the Figures of Justice, Mercy, and Truth: But, however however ornamental this Prison may be without, it is a dismal Place within. The Prisoners are sometimes packed so close together, and the Air so corrupted by their Stench and Nastiness, that it occasions a Disease called the Gaol-Distemper, of which they die by Dozens, and Cart-loads of them are carried out and thrown into a Pit in the Church-yard of Christ-Church, without Ceremony; and so infectious is this Distemper, that several Judges, Jurymen, and Lawyers, &c. have taken it of the Prisoners, when they have been brought to the Old-Baily to be tried, and died soon after; of which we have had an Instance within these seven Years: And to this wretched Place innocent People are sometimes sent, and loaded with Irons before their Trial, not to secure them, but to extort Money from them by a merciless Gaoler; for, if they have Money to bribe him, they may have the Irons as light as they please. The City have been so good lately as to introduce a Ventilator on the Top of Newgate, to expel the foul Air, and introduce fresh, to preserve the Prisoners Health; and the Prisoners are many of them kept in distant and more airy Prisons, till within a few Days before their Trials. Sweet Herbs also are strewed in the Court and the Passages to it, to prevent Infection; and the Snuffing up Vinegar, it is said, is the most likely Way to preserve the Healths of those that are obliged to attend such Trials. It were to be wished we imitated the Chinese, who allow Prisoners Field-room enough to preserve their Healths, and follow their Trades for the Support of their Families, till they are convicted.

Newgate, considered as a Prison, is a Structure of more Cost and Beauty than was necessary, because the Sumptuousness of the Outside but aggravates the Misery of the Wretches within; but, as a Gate to such a City as London, it might have received considerable Additions, both of Design and Execution, and abundantly answered the Cost in the Reputation of Building. The Gate of a City, which is erected rather for Ornament than Use, ought to be in the Stile of the antient Triumphal Arches; and it must be allowed, that hardly any Kind of Building allowed of more Beauty and Perfection.

(18.) The Antiquity, &c. of Black-friars may be collected from the following History: This Order some Time had their House in Old-borne, where they remained for the Space of fifty-five Years: And then, in the Year 1276, Gregory Rockley, Mayor, and the Barons of this City, granted and gave to Robert Kilwarby, Archbishop of Canterbury, two Lanes or Ways next the Street of Baynard's-Castle, and also the Tower of Mount-fitchit, to be destroyed; in the Place of which the said Robert built the late new Church of the Black-friars, and placed them therein. King Edward I. and Eleanor his Wife, were great Benefactors thereunto*. This was a large Church, and richly furnished with Ornaments; wherein divers Parliaments, and other great Meetings, have been holden; namely, in the Year 1450, the twenty-eighth of Henry VI. a Parliament was begun at Westminster, and adjourned to the Black-friars in London; and from thence to Leicester.

In the Year 1522, the Emperor Charles V. was lodged there.

In the Year 1524, the fifteenth of April, a Parliament was begun at the Black-friars, wherein was demanded a Subsidy of eight hundred thousand Pounds; to be raised of Goods and Lands, four Shillings in every Pound; and in the End was granted two Shillings in the Pound, of their Goods and Lands that were worth twenty Pounds, or might dispend twenty Pounds by the Year, and so upwards, to be paid in two Years.

This Parliament was adjourned to Westminster, amongst the black Monks, and ended in the King's Palace there, the fourteenth of August, at Nine o'Clock at Night, and was therefore called the Black Parliament.

In the Year 1529, Cardinal Campeius, the Legate, with Cardinal Wolsey, sat at the said Black-friars; where before them, as Legates and Judges, was brought in Question the King's Marriage with Queen Catharine, as to be unlawful; before whom the King and Queen were cited and summoned to appear, &c.

The same Year, in the Month of October, began a Parliament in the Black-friars, in the which Cardinal Wolsey was condemned in the Premunire.

This House, valued at one hundred and four Pounds fifteen Shillings and five Pence, was surrendered the twelfth of November, the thirtieth of Henry VIII.

King Edward VI. in the fourth of his Reign, of his special Favour, granted to Sir Thomas Cawarden, Knt. the whole House, Site or Circuit, Compass, and Precinct, of the late Friar-Preachers within the City of London, and divers other Lands and Tenements in London. The Patent was dated the twelfth of March; the yearly Value being reckoned at nineteen Pounds. But the Hall, and the Site of the Prior's Lodgings, within the Precinct of Black-friars, was sold, in the first of King Edward VI. to Sir Francis Brian, Knt. being valued at forty Shillings per Ann.

In this House of the Friar-Preachers of London, the antient Kings of this Land had their Records and Charters kept, as well as at the Tower of London, and other Castles in England; as appears by this Patent following, of the sixteenth of Edward II.

"Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Sal. Sciatis quod assignavimus dilectos Clericos nostros Robertum de Hoton, & Thomam de Sibthorp, ad scrutand. arraiand. & recto ordine ponend. Chartas nostras de Pontesfracto, Tutbury & Tonnebrug, [i. e. Tunbridge,] existentes; necnon illas quæ de novo venerunt, & sunt in Custodia Custodis Turris n'rae London. & etiam oia illa [scripta] quæ sunt in Domo Frum' Prædicatorum infra Civitatem London. In cujus Testimonium Rex apud Alderwerck xxiv Julii.

"Et mandatum est Custodibus & Constabulariis Castrorum prædictor. ac Priori Ordinis Frum' Prædicator. London. quod ipsos Robertum & Thomam Castra Turrim & domum doctor' Frum' ex causa prædict. ingredi permittant."

In Queen Elizabeth's Time this Black-friars was much inhabited by Noblemen and Gentlemen, as before. For the Spaciousness of it, Parliaments often sat there, and noble Personages were there harboured.

A Contest with the City about the Liberty of the Friars

In the Year 1586, the City and the Owners of Black and White-friars in London had a great Contest. The Cause was tried before the Lords Chief Justices. The City claimed the Liberties of both these Friars, upon such Arguments as these, which their Council urged: That the Precincts of the said Friars were in London, and therefore claimed the like Liberty in them as in the rest of the City; and that divers Felons, for Felonies within the two Precincts, were, in the Friars Times, indicted, arraigned, and tried in London. They claimed now to have from her Majesty all Waifs, Strays, Felons Goods, Amerciaments, Escheats, &c. the Execution of all Processes, the Expulsion of all Foreigners; the Assize of Bread, Beer, Ale, and Wine; the Wardmote-Quest, and such other Jurisdictions as they had within the rest of the City. But the Counsel against the City answered these Allegations, and produced some other Proofs for the better Confirmation of the said Liberties. They denied not the Friars to be in London, but they affirmed them to be not of London, no more than St. Martin's-le-Grand, Creechurch, St. Bartholomew's, &c.

But to understand the Pretences on both Sides, as they were pleaded by the Council of each, take this authentick Abstract, drawn by the Council on the Behalf of the Liberties of the Friars:

An Abstract of the Matters shewed before the Lords Chief Justices by the Council of the City, whereby they claim the Liberties of the Black and White-friars: With the Answer of our Council to their Allegations, and some other Proofs found since, for the better Confirmation of the said Liberties.

An Abstract of the Pretences on both Sides.

"Some Precedents they shewed, that the Precincts of the said Black and White-friars were in London, and therefore they claimed the like Liberties in them as in the rest of the City.

"Wee denie not the Friars to be in London; but we do affirme they be not of London, no more than St. Martin's-le-Grand, Creechurch, St. Bartholomew's, St. Ellen's, Paul's Church-yard, where the Preaching-Place ys, Salburie-court, the Great Wardrobe, Sir Thomas Heneage's House in Bevis-Marks, and divers other Places in London: In all which Places the Citizens of London, while the Houses of Religion were in being, nor since, had not, nor used, any such Liberties or Jurisdiction, as they do in the rest of the Citie.

"It was also shewed by some of their Precedents, that divers Felons, for Felonies within the said two Precincts, were, in the Friars Time, indyted, arrayned, and tryed in London.

"It myght be, that they were apprehended in London, with the Things stolen abowte them; the contrarie whereof was not shewed; and then ought they to be arraigned within the Citie. Besides, the same Felons were arraigned by the King's special Commission, Ad inquirendum, &c. tam infra Libertates, quam extra, infra Civitat. London. & Com. Middlesex. And so the Immunitie of the said Precincts thereby not impeached.

"The Citizens claim now to have from her Majesty all Waifes, Strayes, Felons Goods, Amerciaments, Escheats, &c. the Execution of all Processes, the Expulsion of all Foreigners, the Assize of Bread, Beere, Ale, and Wyne, the Wardmote Quest, and such other Jurisdictions as they have within the rest of the Citie.

"For these Matters there were no Precedents shewed, nor no sufficient Proof made. Wherefore we are humbly to beseech your Honours, that the Citizens of London may be enjoyned to shew auntient Precedents, to prove, that, in the Friars Time, they did execute the said pretended Jurisdiction, for the Execution of Processes, and had Waifes, Strayes, Felons, Fugitives, and outlawed Mens Goods, and other Things claimed by them in Generalitie; and that they may deliver unto your Honours true Copies of the said Precedents: And that the learned Counsell of the said Inhabitants may have a Sight of the Records and the said Precedents, with the Matters precedent and subsequent; whereto they will aunswer sufficientlie in Writing, for Preservation of her Majesty's Title in and to the Premisses, enjoyed by her Highness, and her Majesty's Progenitors, by the Space of forty Years, and more, against the Citizens of London, by Force of the Act of Parliament, made Anno 31 Henry VIII. which gave to his Grace the same Precincts, in the same Plight, Manner, and Forme, and as ample and largelie, as the Friars enjoyed the same; which then were exempt from the Jurisdiction of London, and, being now invested in her Royal Majesty, cannot be taken away without Graunt from herself. But, allowing their chief Objection, which hath not been proved, that the Precincts aforesaid were Parcel of the Citie, before the Foundation of the same; yet after, and at the Tyme of the Standing of the same Houses, the said Precincts were exempt Places from the Jurisdiction of the Citizens; and most of the Tenements within the Precincts were at that Tyme inhabited by Foreigners, that kept open Shop in the same: And the said Precincts were and be still nightlelie shut with Gates from the Citie, so that the Watch of the Citie could not enter into the same; which would not have been suffered, yf the Citizens of London had any such Jurisdiction, as they now pretend. Her Majesty may lose ten thousand Pounds in a Day by Lands within the said Precincts, which may escheat to her; which yf the Citie will have, it is Reason the Citie should give her Majesty a good Fyne for it. Beside, yf London should at any Tyme rebell, her Majesty should lose two Places of Strength to bestow her Force in their own Bosome, to annoy them; which now by Walls ys shut from them, and she hath by keeping the Liberties. They pretend to wyn Favour to their Cause, that they seek their Liberties onelie for Reformation of Disorders, when Gaine ys the Mark they shoot at.

"But the Black-friars, for good Order of Government, may be a Lanthorne to al the Citie, as shall be plainlie proved, and is now inhabited by Noblemen and Gentlemen.

"The

" The Burthen ys great alreadie of the Govern" ment of the Citie, born by such as for the most " Part are unlearned; as their late hard Dealing " with Bedlam, and many other Examples, may " declare. And therefore we pray most humbly
 " your Lordships, that they may not be further " troubled with us; submitting ourselves most " willinglie to be reformed and ordered by your
 " Honours Discretion, as most upright Judges,
 " free from Affection and Partialitie: And in " respect, that, when the Howses were dissolved,
 " the Records of them were lost and imbeciled,
 " which should give Light to our Interest; if yt
 " shall please your Honours to appoint some of " your Counsell to see their Records, we dowbt
 " not to fynd Matter out of their own Graunts to " preserve our Title, and overthrow their injuri" ous Claime.

" 1. Robert Kilwerbie, Cardinal, surrendered
 " unto King Edward I. the Scite of Baynard's-
 " Castle in London; whereupon the said Edward
 " did graunt the Graunt of the same to the " Friars-Preachers to build the Church there,
 " &c. and also graunted it in liberam & puram
 " Eleemosynam.

" 2. The Black-friars founded the seventh of

" 3. Thomas de Bussings, of London, surrendered
 " unto King Edward I. a Messuage next to Bay-
 " nard's-Castle; the which the said King Edward
 " graunted to the Prior, to the enlarging of the " said Baynard's-Castle, to hold of the said King
 " Edward and his Heirs.

" 4. King Edward I. did graunt to the Friars-
 " Preachers, that they might bring their Conduit-" Water thorowe Smythefield unto their Howse at " Baynard's-Castle.

" 5. King Edward I. did graunt unto the " Prior all the Tenements, &c. with Howses
 " thereon built, that came unto him by the Sur-" rendour of Will. Dale, to the enlarging of their " Howses.

" 6. King Edward I. did graunt unto the Prior,
 " that he should hold all the Tenements within
 " the Precincts bounding to the same, to him and " to his Successors.

" 7. King Edward II. did graunt unto the " Prior a Messuage called Okeborne, in the Ward
 " of Baynard's-Castle, to the enlarging of their " Howse, with a Confirmation of all the former " Graunts unto them. And further graunting " unto the Prior and Convent, that they and " their Successors should be discharged of Tenths,
 " Fifteenths, Subsidies, Quotas, Tallages, or o" ther Burthens whatsoever, graunted, or to be " graunted, to the Clergie or Commons, &c.

" 8. An Exemplification of an Indenture made " in French, between the Maior of London and
 " the Prior, in Henry III's Time.

" 9. The same incorporated by Parliament, in " the fifth of Henry VI.

" 10. In 1484 John Alford, of the Black-friars,
 " was executed for Felonie; whose Goods the She" riff of London would have had, but the Prior " answered the same to the Lord of S. Jobnes, of " whom the Scite was holden, and who did make
 " the Bridge at the Thames.

" 11. In the twenty-second of Henry VIII.
 " ten Sergeants would have served a Writ

" on six Priests in the Black-friars, and were " resisted.

" 12. The Prior was by Law constrained to " pave the Streets without the Wall joining to
 " the Precinct; whereupon a Cage being set " up by the Citie, he pulled it down, saying,
 " That, since the Citie forced me to pave the " Place, they shall set no Cage there on my
 " Ground.

" 13. Sir John Portynarie reported, in his Life,
 " that, immediatly after the Dissolution, the " Maior pretended a Title to the Liberties; but " King Henry VIII. informed thereof, sent to him
 " to desist from meddling with the Liberties, say" ing, He was as well hable to keep the Liberties as
 " the Friars were. And so the Maior no further
 " meddled, and Sir John Portynarie had the Keyes
 " of the Gates delivered to him, and a Fee for " keeping the same.

" 14. The Maior's Officers arrested no Person
 " within the Precinct in the Friars Time.

" 15. The fowre Gates, enclosing the Precinct " with Walls, were in the Friars Tyme, and " sithence to this present, kept shut from the Citie
 " by a Porter.

" 16. Malefactors found within the Friars were " examyned by Sir Will. Kingston, and others of " the Precinct, and not otherwise.

" 17. The Precinct never entred by the Citie,
 " nor Watch there kept.

" 18. Rogues, and such like, punished in the " Prior's Stocks, at his Commandment.

" 19. The Precinct inhabited by Artificers not " free, using their Arts without Controlment.

" 20. Carpenters, Masons, &c. have been " fetched out of the Countie, and worked there
 " without Impeachment.

" 21. The Inhabitants never charged with any " Imposition to the Citie.

" 22. If any be slaine there, the Coroner of the " Verge inquired the Deodands; which the Lord
 " of S. Jobnes have.

" 23. In King Edward VI's Tyme, five Citi" zens, committing a Riott within the Verge
 " within the Friars, were indicted before Sir Ni- " cholas Hare, then Justice of the same: And the " Maior then calling a Sessions to enquire thereof
 " in the Citie, was, by two several Letters from " the Council, inhibited to deal therein, to the in" fringing of the King's Liberties: Whereupon
 " he desisted.

" 24. In Queen Marie's Tyme the Maior " sought the Liberties by Act of Parliament; but " was rejected upon Argument, and not brought " to the Question.

" 25. The Felons Goods, Waifes, Blood-
 " sheds, Fynes, Forfeitures, Amerciaments,
 " and Eschets, are still due to her Majesty;
 " which she should lose, yf the Citie enjoy the " Liberties.

" 26. All Friars, and other Spiritual Pre" cincts, were privileged from Temporal Juris" diction thro' the Realme, by divers Statutes of " this Realme.

" 27. All Castles privileged; and the Black-
 " friars was the Scite of Baynard's-Castle.

" 28. Divers Statutes, confirming the Liber" ties of Religious Howses, especiallie in the twen" ty-eight of Henry VIII. cap. 16.

" 29. All Liberties of suppressed Houses vested in the King, by the Statutes of 31 Hen.
VIII. ca. 13. Hen. VIII. ca. 20.

" 30. Larger Liberties, then are now claimed, allowed, in King Edward VI's Time, to Robert Fitz-Waters, for the Black and White-friars.
Which was since the Liberties granted to the City.

" 31. The Black-friars were of the Fee of St.
Johnes, and thereby greatlie privileged."

friars, near Ludgate, in London.*

John Al-forde executed at Tyburn.

" 1. First, it appeareth, that on the twenty-fifth Day of November, 1484, John Alforde, Shoemaker, dwelling within the Black-friars in London, was apprehended, and put to Death, at Tyburn, for Felony; Thomas Newland, alias Nor-land, and William Martin, then being Sheriffs of London; who sought to have had the Goods of the said Felon. But the Prior of the said Black-friars withstood them, and possessed the same Goods to the Use of the Lord of St. John's, of whom the said Friars were then holden.

The Bridge at the Black-friars.

" 2. Item, The Lord of St. John's hath usually made the Bridge at the Thames, adjoining to the said Friars, and not the City of London, &c.

Incorporating of the Prior and Convent.

" 3. Item, The Prior and Convent were incorporated by Act of Parliament, in the Time of King Henry VI. whereby they might prescribe, and did always use and keep the Liberty inviolately, and clearly exempted from the Citizens.

No Arrest within the Friars
Precinct.

" 4. Item, The Precinct hath always been of such Liberties, as that no Man hath been arrested within the same by any of the Sheriffs Officers. And if, at any Time, any Officer of the City hath taken upon him to execute within the four Gates, he was rescued by the Friars and Inhabitants of Antiquity.

Foreigners traded in the Precinct freely.

" 5. Item, At all Times there have dwelt within the Precinct divers and many Persons, not free; and yet they have used their Occupations there, without Controlment of the City and Citizens.

Craftsmen come out of the Country.

" 6. Item, Always at sundry Times, of long Continuance, divers and many Carpenters, Masons, and such like, have been sent out of the Country, and have wrought within the Precinct aforesaid; which is not sufferable within the Liberties of the City, by their own Customs and Ordinances.

ry after

" 7. Item, Upon the View of any Person slain, the Coroner of the Verge did always make Inquiry thereof. And the Deodand is due to the Lord of St. John's, and not to the City. But now to the Queen's Highness due by Law, Equity, and good Conscience; whose right and lawful Title the Owners and Inhabitants of the said exempted Place and Precinct do seek with their Bodies and Goods to defend and maintain, against all pretended Title and Claim of the Citizens. Notwithstanding, divers of the said Precinct and Liberty have been greatly vexed and troubled with often Imprisonments within the Compters of the City.

" 8. Item, The Inhabitants within the said Precincts were never charged to watch or ward, or to be within the Compass of any Imposition;

such as the Citizens are used and accustomed unto by their Laws.

Freedom from Watching,
&c.

" 9. Item, In the Time of King Edward VI.
Sir Andrew Jude then being Mayor, there was a Riot committed in the Black-friars, in the House of one Master Lucas, by one Crouchman of the City, and other Persons with him. The Force whereof was soon overswayed by Sir Thomas Saunders and Sir Henry Jerningham, Knights,

Mr. William More, with other Gentlemen

inhabiting in the said Friars; and the Parties by Pursuit were twice indicted in the Marshalsea

Court holden in Southwark; Sir Nicholas Hare

then being Steward, and sitting at the Doing thereof. After which Time, the said Crouchman, with other Confederates with him, fought to indict the said Gentleman, by an especial Sessions in the said City: For Stay whereof, the Lords of the King's Privy Council, understanding the lewd Practices of the said Crouchman, and others, and that the Lord-Mayor had nothing to do within the Precinct, wrote their Letters unto the said Sir Andrew Jude, then Mayor, willing him not to disturb the said Gentleman for the said

Fact, to the Infringing the Liberties of the said Friars: The said Sir Thomas Saunders and Master William Moore being Bearers of the said

Letters to the said Lord-Mayor; who, upon

Deliberation, made Answer to the said Bearers

by Word of Mouth, That, forasimuch as there was a Complaint made to him of a Riot committed within the City, he must needs, within one Month after, inquire by Sessions of the same; which, he said, could not be prejudicial to them, being out of the Jurisdiction of the City: For that the same should be Non coram Judice, and yet they discharged of the Peril of the Statute. And so they proceeded with the said Letters. Whereupon, the said

Sir Thomas and Master William Moore making

Report of their Success with the Mayor to the Lords of the Council, they wrote eftsoones other Letters to the said Mayor, but of such Force, touching the Premises, which were also carried by the said Sir Thomas and Mr.

Moore. Whereupon, the said Mayor stayed from any further Proceeding therein, or any other, &c.

" 10. Item, That in Queen Mary's Time, the Counsel of the City put a Bill into the Parliament-House, seeking by the same to have the Liberties of the said Friars: Which Bill, with all their Surmises, was so utterly rejected, that their Bill never came to the Question;

but was so suppressed, by Argument openly in the same House.

" 11. Item, The Liberties granted to Master

Cawarden, by Letters Patents of King Edward

VI. the Goods of Felons therein not granted, and so due to the Queen's Majesty: Whose

Right and Title the City hath not had, nor can be suffered to enjoy, according to their Seeking;

Inhabitants within the Liberty and Precinct, clearly exempted from the City, by Metes and Bounds on every Side.

Walls and Gates belonging to the Precinct.

“ 12. Item, The said Precinct hath always been “ shut up and kept by Walls and Gates. So as “ there was no Egrefs that Way, but by Licence

The Curate of St. Peter’s in Cornhill, his Affirmation.

“ 13. Item, That James Norrice, Curate of St.
“ Peter’s in Cornhill, being some Time one of the “ Friars and Brethren of the Black-friars afore“ said, near Ludgate, in London, faith and affirm-“ eth, That one Robert Struddell, late Prior of “ the said Friars, was, by Order of Law, con“ strained to pave the high Street adjoining round “ about the Channel Walls, from the Fleur de “ Lis, towards the Hill at Creed-lane End. And “ a Cage at that Time standing on that Side the “ Street, adjoining to the foresaid Wall, within “ the Parish of St. Andrew; which Cage was “ plucked down by the said Prior, and not since “ set up again; the Prior aforesaid saying, Seeing
“ they of the City cause me to pave all this Side “ of the Street next my Wall, they shall have no “ Cage of others standing on my Ground, against “ mine own Wall. And so the City never builded “ Cage on that Side after.

The Liberties of the Precinct in the Prior’s Days.

“ 14. Item, Moreover, the said Master Norrice “ faith, That the Liberties of the Black-friars, in “ the said Prior’s Days, were such, that the Lord-“ Mayor of the City of London, nor the Sheriffs, “ did arrest any Man within the said Liberty for “ any Thing, as free, as he well remembreth, in “ all his Time.

Four Gates belonging to the Friars and Porters.

“ 15. Item, He remembreth, that four Gates “ were shut in, during the Friars Time, by the “ Commandment of the Prior: And one Father
“ Seager being then Porter, appointed by the said “ late Prior, Robert Struddell, with others after “ him, at the Appointment of other Priors then “ succeeding; and not by the Mayor of London,

An Order made for Black-friars, An. 1497, Purchase Mayor.

But yet it is certain the Citizens struggled long with Black-friars, moved by the many Inconveniencies they suffered by the pretended Freedom of the Place: Injuring such as had served their Times to Trades, by being underfold by these Tradesmen that here inhabited, and injuring Buyers by selling bad Commodities; whereof there was no Remedy; no City-Searchers, whether the Commodities made and sold here were good, being admitted within the Liberties of the Friars.
Here also, oftentimes, Harbour was given to Fellons; and Malefactors took Shelter here; so that an Order was moved and begun, Purchase Mayor, about the Year 1497, for Remedy of this. And, no Good coming of it, the Commons in a Common Council petitioned the Mayor, Sir John Per- cival, the next Year, for encouraging the said Order, and calling into Question such as opposed it.

Which Petition ran in these Words:
“ Also, for the Reformacyon of the Myschef “ growyng to the Cyte, by going to Friars, please
“ that my Lord-Mayr, Aldyrmn, and Common “ Counsayle to provyde, that the Ordre moved
“ and begonne before M. Purchase, late Mayr,
“ and other of his Predecessours, may be put in “ fyculte agaynst the said Ordre, be callyd afore

“ ed by theyr wyse Exhortacyons, under suche “ stroyers of the Common-Wele. And, yf the ston, of Garlickhithe, Officer to the Vintners of London, and some Time a Friar of the Black-friars. Taken before me Sir Thomas Saunders,

" the said Sheriff commanded the Gates to be

" That he was of greater Authority than the " Justices were: The Constable affirming him so “rather to be buried in the Bottom of the Earth, “never to rise again.

“In Consideration whereof, by these Presents,
“it is, for an infallible Truth, to be holden with “all Men, which shall hear or see this present “Writing: That Robert Flower, Taylor and Ho-“fier, dwelling within the Precinct and Liberties
“of the late Black-friars, near Ludgate, in London, “was, by Commandment of the whole Bench of “Aldermen, committed into one of the Compters
“of London, the 20th Day of May, 1582; for “that the same Robert Flower refused to be bound,
“according to Order taken, from the making “of monstrous great Hosen, according to the “Queen’s Proclamation in that Behalf; because “the said Robert Flower had, amongst other Per“sons, put in Bonds before the Honourable War“den of the five Ports and Sir Thomas Saun- “ders, Knt. Justices within the Liberty of the “Queen’s Verge. After which revealed and “known to the Honourable Earl of Arundel,
“Lord Steward of the Queen’s most Honour“able Household; who caused the Knight Mar“shal to go to the said Lord-Mayor, requiring “the Deliverance of the said Prisoner. The Lord-“Mayor, being sickly, made Answer, that he “knew nothing thereof; but desired him to speak “with Mr. Recorder: Who made Answer, that “the said Imprisonment was done by the whole “Bench of Aldermen; and he, as one particular “Person, could not deliver the Prisoner until the “next Court Day, which could not be till two “Days after, to the great Charges and Hindrance
“of the said Prisoner.

“Whereupon the Lord Steward sent for Ma“ster Cholmeley, he being then Recorder of Lon- “don, and commanded him to deliver the Pri“soner; or else he would imprison the Mayor of “London, and the said Recorder, and the fattest “Alderman in the City, which he could get “within the Verge. And declared, that the Queen’s “Liberties and Franchises should not be over“come by the Lord-Mayor and Bench of Al“dermen, so long as he was Officer; with many “other Words against the Citizens, which were “too long to write. Adding further, that the “Mayor did not meddle with St. Martin’s being “within the City, and a Parcel of Westminster “Deanery: Much less should he meddle with the “said Liberty of the Friars, bounded out by the “Walls and Gates from the City; being in the “County of Middlesex, and not within the City.
“And so commanded the Recorder to send home
“the Prisoner unto the Liberty presently; which “was so done accordingly; promising that, if “the Lord-Mayor could declare or shew any good “Title, whereby to break the Liberty, the Queen’s “learned Counsel should answer him and them “therein. And then the Recorder said, he never “heard, before that Time, that the Lord Steward “did claim the Precinct of the said Black-friars
“to be within the Liberty of the Queen’s Verge.
“Out of which Jurisdiction the City of London
“is exempted by the Statute of 32 Henry VIII.
“cap. 2. Under Colour of which Statute, the “Mayor would bring the said Friars to be in “London; which, in all the Friars Time, was free“ly exempted.

“All the which Matter was debated in the Pre-
No. 81.

“fence of Sir Thomas Saunders, Knt. Master Rö- “bert Hopton, one of the Knight Marshals, and “Mr. Bromeley, under Steward of the Marshalsea,
“the Day and Year above written.

“24. Item, That in Queen Mary’s Time, or “King Edward’s Time, her Brother, there was “a Man slain within the said Precinct of the “Black-friars. And the Goods of him that was “supposed to do the Deed were stayed within “the said Friars, and an Inventory taken by “the next Justice of Peace within the Verge, “Roger Cholmeley, Knt. by the Commandment of “Sir Thomas Cheyney, Knt. And afterward, one “Master Garrard, and the Recorder of London, “came unto the said Sir Thomas Cheyney’s House,
“within the same Precinct, and would have made “an Inventory of the Goods of the Party Of“fender aforesaid, now deceased. But the said
“Sir Thomas Cheyney would not permit nor suffer “them so to do; for that he had made Stay of
“the same Goods for the Queen before, if it “were lawfully found that the said Party had “slain the Man dead. Which afterward was “otherwise found, by a Quest of twelve Men, “sitting super visum corporis of the Dead, by the “Coroner of the Verge, within the said Liberty;
“where the Mayor of London and Bench of Al“dermen have not to do, nor intermit with the “Inhabitants thereof. Because the whole Friars “Liberties, and Franchises of the same, were “freely given unto King Henry VIII. by Act of “Parliament. Whereby the Lord-Mayor of “London, and Bench of Aldermen, are clearly “barred and secluded from the Friars Liberties,
“and the Inhabitants thereof franchised, and clean
“exempted from all the Citizens, and their Im“positions or other Taxations.”

Add to the rest this Testimony following:

The true Copy of the Vicar of Bromley’s Letter, in Kent, sent to Master Thomas Walsingham, of Scadborough, in the said County, Esquire:
Who sent the same Letter to Sir Thomas Saunders, Knt. he being also one of the Queen’s Justices of the Peace in the said County, to examine the several Particulars therein, concerning the Liberties of the said Friars, &c.

“Right Worshipful, you shall understand that “I have received your kind Letter; according “whereunto, these are to satisfy your Mind, that “I was dwelling in the Black-friars four or five “Years; and came thither from Oxford, where “I had been a Student of Divinity. I was also “Curate of the Parish within the Black-friars, “called St. Agnes. We had within us a Porter,
“who did shut all the Gates every Night, at nine “of the Clock in the Winter, and at ten of the “Clock in the Summer. No Sheriff, Bailiff, or “Constable, nor yet the Mayor of London, took “Interest there at any Time; nor foreign Porters “had to do within our Privilege. And the Friars “did pave both within the Turn-gate and with“out, unto St. Andrew’s Church, down by the “great Garden Wall. And without the Turn-gate
“there was a Cage, pulled down by the Prior in my “Time, which was set up by the Lord-Mayor of “London. The Inhabitants within the Friars ne“ver watched; neither the Constable of St. Mar- “tin’s Parish warned any Watch there, neither

Black-friars will not pay to the Must-ters.

Among other Privileges Black-friars and the other exempt Places claimed, one among the rest was, That they would not contribute to the Musters, when the Militia was raised in the City; as it was in the Year 1585, Sir Tho. Pullison, Mayor; who was therefore obliged to make a Complaint to the Court thereof; praying, that, by their Authority, Black-friars, and the other privileged Places, might also bear their Burthen in Musters, as well as other Inhabitants of the City. Adverting the Lord Treasurer, "That whereas the Black-friars, St. Martin's, White-friars, and other exempt Places, were appointed to be contributory to this Charge, they refused to be taxed, and would not yield to pay any Thing, unless they had Direction from the Lord Treasurer, or other the Lords of her Majesty's Privy Council, for the Doing thereof: Wherefore, and for that the Service fell out to be of far greater Charge than was expected, he humbly besought his Lordship's Order and Commandment to those exempt Places, for Contribution."

The antient Church belonging to the Black-friars, London, was, before the Dissolution of Religious Houses by King Henry VIII. one of the most spacious and fair Churches in London. But the Friars being put out, the Church, together with other fair Buildings, was utterly demolished.

He willed his Daughters, Catharine and Anne, to have 800 l. between them; except they proved to be his Heirs, or his Son's Heirs; and then they should not: But willed the said Monies to be laid out for Copes and Vestments, to be given to the House of Clervaux, &c. and 100 l. to be bestowed upon the Chantry of Kendal. He willed his Son William to have his great Chain, worth 140 l. which the King's Grace gave him. He made Maud, his Wife, and Dr. Tunstal, Master of the Rolls, his Executors. This Will was proved in the Year 1517. This Man was Father to Catherine Par, King Henry's last Wife.

Dame Maud Par, Widow to the abovenamed Sir Thomas, and Mother to Queen Catharine, by her Will, bearing Date May 20, the 21st of Henry VIII. bequeathed her Body to be buried in this Church. In this Will she mentioned her Son and Heir, William Par, for whose Preferment she had indebted herself, as she said, both to the King, for his Marriage, and to the Earl of Essex, for the Matching with the Lady Bourcher, Daughter and Heir apparent to the said Earl. She mentioned also Anne, her Daughter, and Catharine Borough, her Daughter, and Sir William Par, her Brother, and Thomas Pickring, Esq; her Cousin, Steward of her House. This Will was proved 1531, December 14.

Roger de Swillington, Knt. willed, whose Will was proved 1417, that the Friars Preachers at Ludgate, London, should have 40 l. pro anniversariis diebus annuatim tenend. of him the said Roger, and Joan, his Wife, for one Time, when it happened, to pray for their Souls, and for Robert Swillington, his Father. And that two Nuns, Sisters of Thomas de Swillington, should have 13 s. 4 d.

Before we take our Leave of Black-friars, I must mention a memorable Passage that happened after the Fire of London. Some Workmen digging in a Place there, where the Convent was, to clear it from the Rubbish, by the Appointment of Mr. William Bradford, in order to Building, they came to an old Wall in a Cellar, of great Thickness, where appeared a kind of Cupboard; which being opened, there were found in it four Pots or Cafes of fine Pewter, very thick, with Covers of the same, and Rings fastened on the Top, to take up or put down at Pleasure. The Cafes were flat before, and round behind. And in them were repositied four human Heads, unconsumed, reserved, as it seems, by Art; with their Teeth and Hair, the Flesh of a tawny Colour, wrapped up in black Silk, almost consumed. And a certain Substance, of a blackish Colour, crumbled into Dust, lying at the Bottom of the Pots.

Four Heads found in Black-
friars.

One of these Pots, with the Head in it, I saw in October, 1703, being in the Custody of Mr. Presbury, then Soap-maker, in Smithfield: Which Pot had inscribed, in the Inside of the Cover, in a scrawling Character, which might be used in the Times of King Henry VIII. J. CORNELIUS. This Head was without a Neck, having short red Hair upon it, thick, and that would not be pulled off; and yellow Hair upon the Temples; a little bald on the Top, perhaps a Tonsure; the fore Part of the Nose sunk, the Mouth gaping, ten found Teeth, others had been plucked out; the Skin like tanned Leather, the Features of the Face visible. There was one Body found near it buried, and without any Head; but no other Bodies found. The other three Heads had some of the Necks joined to them, and had a broader and plainer Razure; which shewed them Priests. These three Heads are now dispersed. One was given to an Apothecary; another was intrusted with the Parish Clerk, who got Money by Shewing of it. It is probable they were at last privately procured, and conveyed abroad; and now become Holy Relicks. Strype.

Strype.

Who these were, there is no Record, as I know of; nor had any of them Names inscribed but one. To me they seem to have been some zealous Priests or Friars, executed for Treason; whereof there were many in the Rebellion in Lincolnshire, Anno 1538; or for denying the King's Supremacy: And here privately deposited by these Black-Friars. Strype.

The ample Privileges, which the Inhabitants of Black-friars did enjoy, have been for many Years lost; so that now the Sheriffs Officers can arrest there; the Shop-keepers are obliged to be free of the City; and it is lately made Part of this Ward of Faringdon within; and two Common-Councilmen are annually elected out of it, and added to the Number that used to serve for this Ward.

Conduit. (19.) In the Place of the Old Crofs, which was taken down in the Year 1390, was erected a Water-Conduit at the East End of St. Michael's Quern Church in West-Cheap, near St. Paul's Gate; which was called the Little Conduit in West-Cheap: But this has been removed about twenty Years.

St. Ewen's Church and Parish. (20.) Near to the North-East Corner of Warwick-lane, formerly called Eldeneſe-lane, ſtood the Pariſh-Church of St. Ewen or Owen, called in old Records Sancti Audoeni juxta fratres minores, London, and ſometimes infra Newgate. Which Church had not its Name from Edwin, the firſt Chriſtian King of Northumberland, as Mr. Richard Smith ſuppoſed, but is the ſame Saint with Owen, or Audowen. The Remains of this Church are ſtill to be ſeen in the Cellars of the Houſe, late the Black-Swan, occupied by Mr. Edward Wickſteed, a Bookſeller, and of the next Houſe to the Weſt. This is one of the Churches given by Henry VIII. towards the erecting of Chriſt's-Church.

A Fraternity of St. Anne here. In this Church was founded a Fraternity of St. Anne, the Mother of Mary, from the Alms of the Pariſhioners; as it is expreſſed in a Certificate in the Tower, given in about it, by the then three Maſters of it, viz. John Shepye, Taylor, Nicolas Minet, Fletcher, and another: Who certified, that, in the ſame Church, every Year, ſeven Wax Candles quadrate, i. e. ſquare, were to be burnt before the Image of St. Anne, all the ſolemn Days in which a Light burnt before the Crucifix; and yearly to be renewed the ſaid Light, as long as the ſaid Fraternity could ſuſtain it. And that every Brother ſhould offer, at the high Maſs of the ſaid Day, in the Church, one Halfpenny. And four Torches of ten Pounds of Wax, to be cauſed to burn upon the Obſequies of any Brother of the Fraternity.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of FARINGDON WARD

Without.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State. Government. Aldermen. Common-Councilmen. Division. Remarkable Things. Parishes and Churches. The Temple and Temple Church. The Rolls Chapel. Barnard's-Inn. Thaves-Inn. Clifford's-Inn, Serjeant's-Inn, Six Clerk's-Office. Bridewell and Bartholomew's Hospital. Smithfield. Fleet-Market, and Priſon. Old-Bailey Sessions-Houſe. Surgeon's-Hall. Temple-Bar. Antiquities. White-friars.

Its Name.

THIS is the fartheſt Ward in the Weſt of this City, and was originally a Part of the Ward of Faringdon within, till divided by Act of Parliament, 17 Rich. II. as already obſerved in the firſt Book. From which Time this Part has been diſtinguiſhed by the Addition of without, i. e. without the City Walls.

Bounds.

It is bounded on the Eaſt by the Wards of Faringdon within, the Precinct of the late Priory of St. Bartholomew near Smithfield, and the Ward of Aldersgate; on the North, by the Charter-houſe, the Pariſh of St. John's Clerkenwell, and Part of St. Andrew's Pariſh without the Freedom; on the Weſt, by High-Holborn, and St. Clement's Pariſh in the Strand; on the South, by the River of Thames. So that,

The Extent of this Ward may be gathered from the Bounds without Newgate and Ludgate, which are theſe:

First, On the Eaſt Part thereof is the whole Precinct of the late Priory of St. Bartholomew; and a Part of Long-lane, on the North, towards Aldersgate-ſtreet; and all Smithfield, to the Bars in St. John's-ſtreet.

Then out of Smithfield, Chicken-lane, towards Turnmill-ſtreet. Back again by the Pens or Folds in Smithfield to Cow-lane, which turns towards Holborn; and Hoſer-lane out of Smithfield; alſo toward Holborn, till it meets with a Part of Cow-lane.

Cock-lane, out of Smithfield, over-againſt Pie-corner. Giltſpur-ſtreet, out of Smithfield to Newgate. Then from Newgate, Weſt by St. Sepulchre's Church, to Turn-again-lane. From the Place where the Conduit ſtood on Snow-hill to Holborn-bridge, up Holborn-hill, to the Bars, on both Sides.

On the Right-Hand, or North Side, at the Bottom of Holborn-hill, is Gold-lane, commonly called Feild-lane, ſome Time a filthy Paſſage into the Fields; now both Sides built with ſmall Tenements.

Then higher is Hatton-garden-ſtreet, and Litber-lane, and Brook-ſtreet, turning to the Fields.

On the Left-Hand, or South Side, from Newgate, lieth a Street called the Old-bailey; this ſtretches down by the Wall of the City to Ludgate. On the Weſt Side of which Street breaks out another Lane, called St. George's-lane, till you come unto the South End of Seacoal-lane; and then, turning towards Fleet-ſtreet, it is called Fleet-lane.

The next out of the High Street from Newgate, turning down South, is called the Little-Bailey, and runs down to the Eaſt of St. George's-lane.

Then is Seacoal-lane, which turns down into Fleet-lane.

Near unto this Seacoal-lane, in the Turning towards the Conduit on Snow-hill, is another Lane called in Record Wind-again-lane, for that it turned down to Turnmill-brook, and from thence back again, for there was no Way over.

Beyond Holborn-bridge is Shoe-lane, which runs out of Holborn, unto the Conduit which ſtood in Fleet-ſtreet.

Then is Fewtar's, now called Fetter-lane, which likewise ſtretches South into Fleet-ſtreet, by the Eaſt End of St. Dunſtan's Church; and from this Lane to the Bars are the Bounds without Newgate.

Now without Ludgate, this Ward runs up from the ſaid Gate to Temple-bar, and hath on the Right-Hand, or North Side, the South End of the Old-bailey. Then it proceeds down Ludgate-hill to Fleet-lane, over Fleet-bridge, and by Shoe-lane, and Fewtar's-lane, and ſo to New-ſtreet or or Chancery-lane, and up that Lane to the House of the Rolls. Which House is also of this Ward. And on the other Side to a Lane over-against the Rolls, which formerly entered Ficquete's Field.

Near the Bar is another Lane, called Shire-lane, because it divides the City from the Shire; and this turned into Ficquete's Field.

From Ludgate again, on the left Hand, or South Side, we have Fleet-bridge, Bride-lane, which runs South by Bridewell; and Water-lane, which runs down to the Thames. Then White-friars, and the Temple; so that the Bar is the Extent of this Faringdon Ward Without.

In these Parts, from Ludgate, and so Westward, the City, in the Saxon Times, was chiefly situate, if we may credit Fabian; who writes, That he had found in a very old Record, called Doomsday, belonging to the City, that in King Egelfred's, or Ethelred's Reign, which began in the Year 981, London had most Houses or Buildings from Ludgate towards Westminster, and little or none where the Chief or Heart of the City now is, except in divers Places, but they stood without Order; so that many Towns and Cities, as Canterbury, York, and others, surpassed London in Building in those Days.

We come next to the present State of this Ward.

Modern
State.

To begin at the South Parts, viz. Ludgate-hill and Fleet-street, taking Notice, as we pass along, of all the Lanes and Alleys through which there lie Passages, in and out of the said Streets; as on the North Side, beginning at Temple-bar, there is Bell-yard, Chancery-lane, Fetter-lane, Shoe-lane, the Town-ditch. Then on the South Side of the Street, White-friars, Water-lane, Salisbury-court, Bridewell Precinct. Then the Street beginning near Ludgate; and passing from South to North, called Old-bailey, which opens into the North Part of this Ward, as Snow-hill, down to Holborn-bridge. Then more North is Cow-lane, Hofier-lane, Cock-lane, Chick-lane, West-Smithfield, Long-lane, St. Bartholomew's Close, and Hospital, Pye-corner, &c. with all the smaller Courts and Alleys contained in these.

hill.

Ludgate-hill comes down from Ludgate, and runs Westward to Fleet-street; from which it is severed by a handsome large Stone Bridge, the Breadth of the Street, which gives a Passage over the new Canal where Fleet-ditch was; which since the Fire of London was made so deep and wide, cut from Holborn-bridge to the Mouth of the River Thames, that it received the Tides, and used to bring up Barges and Lighters to Holborn-bridge; but one Part of this, viz. from Fleet-bridge to Holborn-bridge, is now arched over, and made a complete Market-place for Butchers, Poulterers, Gardeners, &c.

This Street, as also Fleet-street, (into which it falls) and so to Temple-bar, is a great Thoroughfare for Coaches, Carts, Horse and Foot Passengers; being the great Way from London to Westminster, and the adjacent Parts. Both these Streets are therefore very spacious, graced with good Buildings of the first Rate, and well inhabited by Shop-keepers of the best Trades; as Woollen-Drapers, Linnen-Drapers, Grocers, Sadlers, Upholsterers, Booksellers, who drive a very considerable Trade: And for the Accommodation of this great Resort of People, here are divers noted Coffee-Houses and Taverns.

The Alleys, Courts, and Passages in Fleet-street, are, on the North Side, Shear-lane, or Shire-lane; which gives Passage into Little Lincolns-inn-fields, formerly called Ficquete's-field; but this Lane, being without the Freedom, will be spoken of under St. Clement's Parish. The like is Bell-yard, near adjoining, except some small Part on the East Side, against Crown-court, in Chancery-lane, which may be rather termed a Street for its Fairness and good Buildings: But there being but a little within the City Liberty, we shall speak of it in the Rolls Liberty, in which is the greatest Part. Flying-horse-court, but small, with a Free-stone Pavement; here is kept the Marshalsea Office, for the making out Writs, &c. Clifford's-inn-lane has on the West Side Houses, and on the East Side St. Dunstan's Church; it leads into Clifford's-inn, one of the Inns of Chancery; which Place, of late Years, is much enlarged in new Buildings, in the Garden, an airy Place, and neatly kept; the Garden being inclosed with a Pallisado Pale, and adorned with Rows of Lime-Trees set round the Grass Plats and Gravel Walks. It has the the Conveniency of three Doors; the one into Serjeants-inn in Chancery-lane, another into Fetter-lane, and a third into Fleet-street. The Hall yet wants new Building.

Clifford'sinn.

Adjoining to Clifford's-inn-lane, and fronting Fleet-street, is St. Dunstan's Church.

And adjoining thereto, Eastward, is a small Place of several Houses, which bears the Name of Hen-and-chicken-court; and near to this Court, Fetter-lane falls into Fleet-street, Fleuer-de-lis-court, or rather Alley, being long, narrow and ordinary, with a Free-stone Pavement; has three Outlets, two into Fetter-lane, and another into West-barding-street. This Court is of small Repute, being but meanly inhabited; the Buildings are on the East Side, the West being the Back-yards to the Houses in Fetter-lane.

Two-crane-court, a very handsome open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, and graced with good Buildings, well inhabited by Persons of Repute; the front House, larger than the rest, and ascended up by large Stone Steps, is in the Occupation of the Royal Society: In this House is kept their Museum, and here are the Meetings of the Fellows.

Crane-
court.

Red-lion-court, good and large, with a Free-stone Pavement, has a Passage into West-barding-street, in Goldsmith's-rents. Johnson's-court has but a narrow Entrance, but opens into a square Court, with a Free-stone Pavement and good Houses, well inhabited. Out of this Court is another, which bears the same Name, but smaller, with one Row of Houses, with pretty Gardens behind them, and this runs into Gough-square, a Place lately built with very handsome Houses, and well inhabited by Persons of Fashion. St. Dunstan's-court has a narrow Entrance, but towards the upper End opens into two Parts, and both indifferent as to Houses and Inhabitants. Bolt-court, very good and open, with a Free-stone Pavement, has good Houses, well inhabited. Three-king-court, but small, having two or three Houses. Hind-court, large, and broad at the upper End, where the Houses are much better built and inhabited; and to the Whole is a very good Free-stone Pavement, cleanly kept. Wine-office-court, long, with a Free-stone Pavement, has good Houses on the West Side, the East Side having a dead Wall, where there is a Passage into White-horse-court; and at the upper End is another Passage into Gough-square on one Side, and King's-head-court on the other, which leads into Shoe-lane on the Back-side of Gunpowder-alley. Three-falcon-court. White-horse-Inn, large, and of good Resort for Coaches and Horses, and has some private Houses in it. White's-court, but small. Peterborough-court indifferent broad at the upper End, with a Free-stone Pavement, and well inhabited. Racket-court, seated betwixt Shoe-lane and the Ditch-side, a very spacious and handsome Place, with good Houses, well inhabited; the front House takes up the Breadth of the Court. Popping's or Poppingey-alley has an open Passage, inhabited by Printers, Victuallers, Hatters, &c. Out of this Place is a Passage into Harp-alley, which leads to Fleet-ditch. Black-horse-alley, ordinary. Out of this Alley is a Passage to Fleet-ditch.

Beyond Fleet-bridge, on the North Side, and on Ludgate-hill, is Bell-savage-Inn, very large. The first Yard is an open Square, with several private Houses in it; the inner Yard, which is much larger, being taken up with Stabling, &c.

Fleur-de-lis-court, long and ordinary, having at the upper End a Passage into this Inn. Sword-and-buckler-court, also but ordinary, has a Passage into Fleur-de-lis-court. Adjoining to Ludgate is Half-moon-court, large, but none of the best; at the Entrance is a Coffee-house of a good Trade.

On the South Side of Ludgate-hill is Oxenden-corner, over-against the Old-bailey, well built and inhabited, with a Thoroughfare into Black-friars. Dolphin-court, small, having but one House, which is an Alehouse, and has the Sign of the Dolphin. Goat-alley, indifferent good, with a Free-stone Pavement. White-lion-court, long, narrow, and ordinary, with a dark Entrance. Hanging-sword-alley, so called from a House of that Name, which is but ordinary, and leads into a Court so called, which has two Passages into Water-lane, near adjoining. Bear's-head-court, but ordinary, has a Passage into Bolt-and-tun-Inn. Ram-alley, taken up by Publick Houses, being a Kind of privileged Place for Debtors, before the late Act of Parliament for taking them away: It has a Passage into the Temple, and into Serjeants-Inn in Fleet-street. Mitre-court, an open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement down into the Temple by Steps; a Place much taken up by Publick Houses: And this Place did pretend the like Privileges as Ram-alley before the said Act. Falcon-court, a good open Place, with a Free-stone Pavement, in which are about four or five Houses. Hercules-pillars-alley, but narrow, and altogether inhabited by such as keep Publick Houses for Entertainment.

The Temple.

On the South-West Side of Fleet-street are the two Temples, called the Inner and Middle; altho' the Buildings before the Fire were for the greatest Part of Timber, yet they wholly escaped the general Desolation: But since that Time have felt two great Fires, and both beginning within the Confines of the Houses, which destroyed almost all the Offices and Lodgings in the several Courts; but the Church and both the Halls escaped. Since which Fires the Property of some of the Courts, and most of the Buildings, have been altered, as to their former Position; but again rebuilt in a most beautiful uniform Manner, very lofty, and more substantial and convenient than before, and all of Brick. These two Temples take up a large Track of Ground backwards, having no visible Front to the Street, only the two Gates at the Entrance into the Middle-Temple-lane, and that leading to the Inner-Temple; in both which are Chambers for the Students in the Law; and backwards they are furnished with divers large and fair Courts, garnished with lofty Buildings, all of Brick, and uniform, viz. Exchequer-court, Tanfield-court, Cloisters-court, Hare-court, Vine-court, Figtree-court, Elm-court, Pump-court, Middle-Temple-ball-court, Brick-court, and Essex-court.

At the lower End of Middle-Temple-lane is a large and handsome Pair of Stairs of Free-stone, for taking Water at, much resorted to.

These Temples have a Passage into White-friars by a Gate; into Fleet-street through Mitre-court, Ram-alley, and Serjeants-Inn; into Essex-street, and into the Strand, through Palsgrave's-head-court; besides the two large Gates in the two Temple-lanes.

Upon the Dissolution of the Priory of White-friars, the Church and Buildings in Process of Time became ruinous, and were pulled down; afterwards converted into Buildings, and now contain several Courts, Lanes, and Alleys; as Dogwell-court, Essex-court, Aspen-tree-court. Davis's-yard, which is converted into a Glass-house for making Flint-glasses. Watermen's-lane, as leading to the River Thames, where there is a Pair of Stairs to take Water at; all Places of ordinary Account: Besides the long turning Passage out of Fleet-street into the lower End of Water-lane, which runs by the Back-side of the Temple Buildings, where there is a Gate into the Temple.

This Place was formerly, since its building into Houses, inhabited by Gentry; but some of the Inhabitants taking upon them to protect Persons from Arrests, upon a pretended Privilege belonging to the Place, the Gentry left it, and it became a Sanctuary to the Inhabitants, which they kept up by Force against Law and Justice; so that it was sufficiently crowded with such disabled and loose kind of Lodgers, and had the Nick-name of Alsatia: But however, upon a great Concern of Debt, the Sheriff, with the Posse Comitatus, forced his Way in to make a Search, and yet to little Purpose; for the Time of the Sheriff's coming not being concealed, and they having Notice thereof, took Flight, either to the Mint in Southwark, another such Place, or some other private Place, till the Disturbance was over, and then they returned.

In the latter End of King William the Third's Reign, the Parliament taking this great Abuse into Consideration, an Act was made to put down this, the Savoy, and many other pretended privileged Places.

The

The Inhabitants of White-friars maintain their own Poor, collect their Taxes, and chuse their own Officers among themselves.

Water-lane.

Water-lane severeth White-friars from Salisbury-court; it is a good, broad, and strait Street, which comes out of Fleet-street, and runs down to the Thames, where there is one of the City Lay-stalls for the Soil of the Streets; which is taken from thence by Barges and Dung-Boats, and made Use of by Gardeners and Farmers for the manuring their Grounds. This Lane is better built than inhabited, by reason of its being so pestered with Carts to the Lay-stall and Wharfs, for Wood, Coals, &c. lying by the Water-side, at the Bottom of this Lane; as also to White-friars, into which it has an open Passage; as likewise another into Salisbury-court. On the West Side of this Lane is Briton's-alley, as also Dove-court; both ordinary Places, with a Passage into the Friars.

Salisbury-court.

Dorset-court, commonly called Salisbury-court, was a large House inhabited by the Earls of Dorset, which was many Years ago pulled down and converted into Buildings; as was the Garden and Wilderness; there being a handsome well built Street, which comes out of Fleet-street, called Dorset-street, and runs Southward to the River Thames, where there are Stairs of Free-stone for taking Water at.

Near to which Place once stood the Theatre, or Play-House; a neat Building, having a curious Front next the Thames, with an open Place for the Reception of Coaches: On the other Side is a large Wood-yard Wharf belonging to the Company of Carpenters.

This Street, on the West Side passing down to the Thames, is a handsome, airy, open Square, all taken up with good Buildings, the best inhabited of any in the Court; for that Part towards the Thames, as also the Wilderness, with the small Courts, are not to be much boasted of. In this Place are these Courts and Places of Note, viz. Blue-ball-court, an indifferent good Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. Half-paved-court, but ordinary. Dorset-court, a small Place, handsomely built, and indifferently well inhabited; in which is the Charity-School for St. Bride's Parish, for fifty Boys and fifty Girls. Sugar-loaf-court, very small and ordinary. The Wilderness, so called, as being built in that Part of the Garden where the Wilderness was. Fisher's-alley, also ordinary, has a Passage into Water-lane. Near this Alley is George-yard, but mean; and Crown-alley, inconsiderable, has a Passage into Tuder-street, and so to the Ditch-side.

This Dorset, or Salisbury-court, claimed a peculiar Liberty to itself, and to be exempt from the City Government; and the Inhabitants would not admit of the City Officers to make any Arrest there. How far these Privileges reach, is uncertain; but many resorted hither, who fled from their Creditors, till the Act was made to suppress pretended privileged Places. Out of Dorset-court is a paved Free-stone Passage into St. Bridget's, the Parish-Church.

Bride-lane.

Bride-lane comes out of Fleet-street by St. Bridget's Church-yard, which, with a turning Passage by Bridewell and the Ditch-side, falls down to Woodmongers Wharfs by the Thames. It took its Name from St. Bridget's Church, to which there is a Passage up Stone Steps.

King Tuder's, King Edward's, and Water-streets, are on the Back-side of Bridewell, and have a Passage into Salisbury-court through Crown-alley; all Places inhabited by private People, and none of the meanest Rank; one Row, which fronts the Wood-yard, and regards the Thames, consists of good Buildings. Green's-rents falls into St. Bride's-lane, and is but mean; as is Bear-alley.

The Ditch-side, called Fleet-ditch, is a spacious Place, with good Buildings on both Sides of the Canal, so made since the Fire of London, and has on both Sides a broad Passage for Carts to the Wharfs next the Thames; this Canal is railed in, for fear of Danger of People's falling into it. The Part of this Canal, on the South Side, next the Thames, has the East Side in the Ward of Farringdon within; but all the rest, down to Holborn-bridge, on both Sides, is in this Ward. The West Side of the Part next to Holborn is the best inhabited; and much taken up by Upholsterers, Brasiers, and those that sell Second-hand Household Goods. The East Side of that Part from Fleet-bridge to the Thames has the best Houses, and best inhabited. On the West Side, from Fleet-bridge to Holborn-bridge, are several small Alleys which lead up to Shoe-lane. On the East Side is the Fleet-Prison.

In antient Times there was a Brook, called Turnmill-brook, which ran under Holborn and Fleet-bridges into the Thames. See P. 83 and 571.

On the East Side of Fleet-ditch, from this Prison to Holborn-bridge, are these Places: Fleet-lane, which comes down from the Old Bailey, over-against the Sessions-House, and falls into the Ditch-side, a Place of no great Account for Buildings or Inhabitants. In this Lane are several small Courts, as Cheshire-rents, Well-yard, Harrow-court, and Cock-alley; all Places but of mean Account.

On the North Side is Seacoal-lane. This Lane is very ordinary, both as to Houses and Inhabitants. Out of this Lane is a Passage to Snow-hill, and another into Green-arbour, and a third into Bishop's-court; the two last ascended up by many Steps, or a Pair of Stairs, made thro' London-wall. On the West Side of this Lane are these Alleys, which fall into the Ditch-side, viz. George-alley, or Yard; Bear-alley, on the South Side of which is another small Alley, called Little Bear-alley; Goose-alley, against which is a small Place called Ford's-rents.

Newcastle-street comes out of Seacoal-lane, and falls into the Ditch-side, an open Place, and pretty well built.

Turn-again-lane hath a Passage out of Town-ditch into Snow-hill, a Place tolerably well built. Crown-court, very small; and on the South Side is Queen's-head-court, indifferently built.

The Old Bailey, of which there are two, the Great and the Little. The Great Old Bailey is an open Street, with good built Houses, and well inhabited by Tradesmen, and others. In this Place was Justice-Hall, commonly called the Sessions-House, as well for the City and Liberty thereof, as for the County of Middlesex. And lower down, on the same East Side, is the new erected Theatre for the Surgeons.

The East Side of the Old Bailey runs down by the City Wall, upon the Ditch called Houndf-ditch, ditch, from Ludgate to Newgate. About the Middle of the great Street, on this Side, is Ball's-court, which is but small; also Red-cross-court, which is indifferent. On the West of this Street, from the Corner of Ludgate-bill to Fleet-lane, are these Places, viz. Ship-court, but small; Prideaux-court, large, with good Houses on the West Side, having an Entrance into it fit for Coach or Cart; Black-and-white-court, a large open Place, with handsome Buildings; at the upper End of which is Chequer-yard, out of which is a Passage into Fleet-lane.

Little Old
Bailey.

In the Little Old Bailey are these Places, viz. Dean's-court, long and narrow, with a Free-stone Pavement; Brown's-court, long, narrow, and ordinary; Elliot's-court, well built and inhabited; Bishop's-court, indifferently well inhabited, and hath a Passage down Steps into Seacoal-lane; Green-arbour-court, at the upper End is a very good Square, with tolerable good Houses, and Inhabitants answerable. Out of this Court is also a Passage down Steps into Seacoal-lane. And out of this Court is another Passage into Angel-court, seated on Snow-hill, against the Saracen's-head-Inn, being a very handsome Place, having at the upper End a very good large House, with a Garden before it; once made use of for the Farthing-Office, now for the Hand-in-Hand Assurance for Houses. St. Dunstan's-court, seated betwixt Bishop's-court and Elliot's-court.

Chancery lane.

Now back to the West Part of Fleet-street, on the North Side is Chancery-lane, a Street of a very great Refort, and well inhabited by Trademen in the Part next Fleet-street, and in that Part next to Holborn (into which it falls) by Lawyers, and those depending on them: And the rather, for that in this Lane is Lincoln's-Inn, Serjeants-Inn, the Rolls, the Examiners Office within the Rolls-yard, the Six Clerks Office, (to which belong twelve Masters in Chancery, and six Clerks); Symond's-Inn, where the Register's Office for the Court of Chancery is kept; the Curfitors Office; the Office for the Masters in Chancery, &c. All which Places are out of the City Liberty, except Serjeants-Inn, which is an antient Building. Opposite to this Inn is Crown-court, a square Place, but the Building old. The City Liberty goes not much farther.

Fetter-
lane.

Next, on the North Side, is Fetter-lane. For the Generality the Houses here are good, and well inhabited. It runs Northwards from Fleet-street into Holborn. Of this Lane, the Middle Part is the best. In this Lane are these Places: Bond's-stables, a large Yard, with some Houses in it, besides the Inn; the Part next Fetter-lane is new built with handsome Houses for Gentlemen, and is called the Rolls-Buildings. Red-bart-Inn, new built, and very large and handsome. Over-against the Rolls-Buildings is Stone-court, a small Place. Three-leg-alley, on the Back of East-barding-street, and falls into West-barding-street; also hath a Passage into Fleet-street through Red-lion-court. East-barding-street, indifferent good, falls into Goldsmiths-rents. Nevil's-alley, very handsome, and well inhabited. Churchyard-alley, very narrow, which after two Turnings falls into Curfitor's-alley. Magpye-yard, handsomely rebuilt, and hath a Passage into Castle-street. Dean-street, well built and inhabited, falls into Goldsmiths-rents.

Plough-yard, an open Place, well inhabited; over-against which is a Dissenting Meeting-house. Bewit's-court, a very handsome and large new built Court, with a Free-stone Pavement, and well inhabited. Not far from this Court is a Passage into Bartlet's-buildings in Holborn: This Passage hath a few neat and well built Houses on the South Side, with pretty Gardens before them, neatly kept. Horse-shoe-alley, small and ordinary. Over-against this Court is the White-horse-Inn, which is but small: Adjoining to which is the Back-door of Barnard's-Inn. King's-head-court, formerly called White-horse-alley, a handsome new built Court, well inhabited, having a Free-stone turning Passage into Holborn. Goldsmiths-rents, a large Place, containing several Streets and Places of Name, and all well built and inhabited, especially East-barding-street, which is more open. This Street falls into West-barding-street, as also into Three-leg-alley, which is but ordinary.

In this Street are New-court and Goldsmiths-court, both but small. Dean-street falls into Fetter-lane out of East-barding-street, as aforesaid. New-street, a handsome open Place, with indifferent good Buildings; of which there are four Streets, and all bearing that Name; one falling into Shoe-lane; another, which turns Northwards, receives the other two, which comes out of East-barding-street. Gun-powder-alley, long and narrow, falls into Shoe-lane, crossing Little New-street, which is but ordinary.

The next Lane in Fleet-street is Shoe-lane, very long, runs North from Fleet-street, over-against Salisbury-court, into Holborn, by St. Andrew's Church; a Lane of no great Note either for Buildings or Inhabitants: In it are a great many Alleys and Courts, though of little Account. The first is Plumtree-court, large and well built; it hath a Passage into another Court, so called, which falls into Holborn, that Part towards Shoe-lane being broad. Well-alley, very mean and ordinary. Molin's-rents, indifferent good, but hath a narrow Passage into it. Isaac's-rents, very ordinary. Near this is Spectacle's-rents, small and mean. Eagle-and-child-alley, narrow, hath a Passage into Fleet-ditch down Steps. Brewers-yard, so called from a Brew-house at the lower End: This hath a Passage into Fleet-ditch. Queen's-arms-alley, but narrow, with a Free-stone Pavement, which leads to the Ditch-side, down Steps. George-alley, but narrow, hath also a Passage down to the Ditch-side. Rose-and-crown-court, but indifferent, hath a Passage into George-alley. Stone-cutters-street, good and open: This leads down to the Ditch-side. Curriers-alley, very ordinary, runs also to the Ditch-side. Harp-alley, but narrow, runs down to the Ditch-side; a Place of great Trade for old Household Goods and Signs, but the Buildings are very mean. Angel-court, small and ordinary. Fountain-court, but ordinary.

Places on the West Side of this Lane: Robin-hood-court, broad and large, mean Houses, and hath a Passage up Steps into Goldsmiths-rents. Cockpit court, handsome, with Brick Buildings at the upper End, and hath a Free-stone Pavement. Brown's-court, but small and mean. Falcon-court, but ordinary, near the Corner of New-street. King's-head-court, a narrow, but well built and inhabited Place, which comes out of Wine-office-court, court, mentioned in Fleet-street, and leads into this Lane. Globe-court, but small.

Now more on the North is Holborn-hill, a very broad and spacious Street, a Place of good Trade, and a great Thoroughfare. And for the Accommodation of Carriages, this Street, as also Snow-hill, hath several considerable Inns. The Part of this Street in this Ward begins at the Bars, near Gray's-Inn-lane, and runs down to Holborn-bridge, where Snow-hill begins; and so with a turning Passage to St. Sepulchre's Church, and thence to Newgate.

Castle-street.

Castle-street, or Castle-yard, as it is commonly called, is a good handsome Place, well built and inhabited, which has these Inlets and Outlets, viz. It comes out of Holborn, and leads into Cursitors-alley, with an open Passage. On the East Side it has a Passage into Fetter-lane through Magpye-yard. And on the West Side Tuckers, or Duck-court, a large and well built Place, much inhabited by Lawyers, as seated amongst the Inns of Court and Chancery, and this has an open Passage into Cursitors-alley; besides, here is a narrow Passage on the South-East Corner through Church-yard-alley into Fetter-lane.

Cursitors-alley.

Cursitors-alley leads into Chancery-lane, over-against Lincoln's Inn; and this Place took its Name from the Cursitors Office, adjoining thereto: It is a Place well built and inhabited, and stands well for Lodging, for those that come up to the Terms. The West End of this Alley, from or near the Rose Tavern to Chancery-lane, is in the Rolls Liberty. Betwixt this Street and Bernard's-Inn is White's-alley, an indifferent Place, with old Timber Houses. Bernard's-Inn; the Buildings of this Inn are very old, and much want rebuilding; the Back-court has a Passage into Fetter-lane. King's-head-court, already spoken of. Bartlet's-buildings, a very handsome spacious Place, graced with good Buildings of Brick, with Gardens behind the Houses, and is a Place well inhabited by Gentlemen. Out of this Court, through a long Alley, wherein are some very good Houses, is a Passage into Fetter-lane. Adjoining to Bartlet's-buildings is a Court so called, which is but small. Thavie's-Inn, another of the Inns of Chancery, which is but small, and chiefly taken up by the Welsh Attorneys. St. Andrew's-court, indifferent, and the Houses old.

Bartlet's-buildings.

St. Andrew's Church, seated in a very spacious Church-yard, inclosed with a Wall.

Now to go back to Holborn-hill, North Side, beginning at the Bars, in which Side there are some Parts out of the Freedom, as Brook-street, Furnival's-Inn, Hatton-garden, Ely-house, &c.

The Places of Note are, Warton-court, very long, with a Passage into Brook-street; the Court is new built with good Brick Houses, has a Free-stone Pavement, and well inhabited. Furnival's-Inn, another of the Inns of Chancery.

Ely-court, very handsome and large, with new Brick Houses, and a Free-stone Pavement, and well inhabited. Out of this Court is a Passage into Field-lane. Dyer's-court, opposite to Shoe-lane, indifferent good. Sutton-court, over-against St. Andrew's Church, large and good. Plough-yard, ordinary, has a Passage into Field-lane.

Field-lane.

Field-lane, very narrow, but mean Houses, and the Place nastily kept, being inhabited by Tripedressers, on the East Side, by reason of the Benefit of the Ditch that runs on the Back-side of their Yards and Slaughter-houses to carry away their Filth. This Lane runs up to Saffron-hill, and receives Chick-lane: But the Part of this Lane in the Freedom goes but little beyond the Passage into Plough-yard.

Holborn-bridge and Snow-hill: This Part of Holborn goes to Lamb's-conduit, and there begins Snow-hill, which, in a winding Passage, runs up to St. Sepulchre's Church; and both these Places are graced with good Buildings, well inhabited by Tradesmen, and are Places of great Resort. The South Side, by the Bridge, lies open to the Canal already treated of. Here are these Places: Horn-alley, near the Bridge, but indifferent. Beehive-alley, long, narrow, and ordinary. Catherine-wheel-alley, indifferent good. King's-arms-inn, very considerable and large, having at the upper End of the Yard a Passage into Chick-lane. Betwixt this Inn and Swan inn is Hand-and-crown-alley, very small. George-inn, very large: The Passage to the Yard is through Cow-lane, and the Entrance to it in Holborn is through a paved Court, with indifferent good Houses on both Sides. Bell-alley, but ordinary. Cock-court, seated almost against the Obelisk for Lamps, where the Conduit once stood, by the Corner of Cow-lane, indifferent good, and has a Passage into Bell-alley.

St. Sepulchre's Church, or St. Sepulchre's-in-the-Bailey, seated on the Top of Snow-hill.

Church-lane, adjoining to this Church Eastward, which leads into Pye-corner, noted chiefly for Cooks-Shops, and Pigs dressed there formerly, during Bartholomew Fair.

Nag's-head-court, long and ordinary; and opposite to this is Green-dragon-court, which is but small.

Giltspur-street. In this Street are these Places: Ball-court, long, but ordinary. Horshoe-alley, long, narrow, and but indifferent. Rosemary-lane, large, but ordinary, and has a Passage into the Long Walk, betwixt the two Hospitals. Church-alley, so called as fronting St. Sepulchre's Church, and has a good Row of Buildings on the East Side, the West Side lying open, and only severed from the Church-yard by a Wall.

Giltspur-street.

Cock-lane, an ordinary Place; it comes out of Snow-hill, and falls into Pye-corner.

Cow-lane, a great Thoroughfare for Carts, &c. out of Snow-hill into Smithfield. In this Lane are several Coach-makers, and a Passage to Hofier-lane, which falls into Smithfield; and here are these Places: Foxe's-court, but ordinary, with a Passage into George-inn. White-lion-court, but small. Green-dragon-court, a large and open Place, but ordinarily built. Bull-head-court, very mean. St. John's-court, a large Place, indifferently inhabited, with old Buildings, and has a Passage into Chick-lane. Pheasant-court, near Smithfield sheep-pens on the South Side, which is but ordinary: And on the other Side is Red-crofs-court, but small.

Cow lane.

Hofier lane comes out of Cow-lane, and runs into Smithfield: A Place not over well built or inhabited, having chiefly Timber Houses. This Place is of great Resort during the Time of Bartholomew Fair. In this Lane is Bell-alley, as also Three-diamond-court, both small and ordinary Places.

Hofier-lane.

Chick-lane,

Chick-lane.

Chick-lane, an ordinary Place, both for Buildings and Inhabitants. It comes out of Smithfield by the Sheep-pens, and runs down to Field-lane. In this Lane are several Courts and Alleys; as, Newcastle-street or Durham-yard, open to receive Carts and Coaches, having at the lower End a Yard for Stabling, and at the upper End is a Passage into Catharine-wheel-yard, which is none of the best. Blue-boar-court, which is ordinary, and ascended up by Steps. Church-yard-alley, narrow and ordinary: At the upper End is a Church-yard, which belongs to St. Sepulchre's Parish. Hide's-rents, a small open Court, very ordinary. Over-against this Place is Cross-keys-court, also small and mean. St. Martin's court, an open Place, but ordinarily inhabited. White-horse-alley, narrow and ordinary. Out of this is a Passage into Sharp's-alley, which leads to Cow-crofs. Sun-alley, over-against St. John's-court, very small. Thatch'd-alley, narrow, small, and mean. Sharp's-alley, but indifferent, having turning Passages, and falls into the lower End of Cow-crofs, as aforefaid. Opposite to this Place is Old Brewers-yard, but indifferent, and has a Passage into Holborn through the King's-arms-inn.

Smithfield-pens.

Smithfield-pens, so called from the Sheep-pens placed in that Part for the Sale of Sheep every Market-day in Smithfield. The North, West, and South Sides having Rows of Buildings, most inhabited by Innholders, and such as keep Public-Houses; of which the North Side is the best, and has these two Inns of good Trade, viz. the Rose and the Ram. Near the Ram is Adam-and-Eve-alley, which is but ordinary, and has a Passage to Smithfield-bars through the Boar's-head Tavern.

Bars.

Smithfield-bars, so called from the Bars there set up, for the severing of the City Liberty from that of the County. This Place was generally inhabited by Butchers, who were great Dealers, as well by Retail as Wholesale, for Sheep and Lambs, to other Butchers. In this Place is Nag's-head-alley, both small and ordinary.

Long-lane

Long-lane may properly be so called for its Length, coming out of Aldersgate-street, against Barbican, and running into Smithfield. The Lane, or rather Street, is good; the Houses good, for Timber Buildings; and was once very well inhabited by Shopkeepers, who dealt in Apparel, Linen, and Upholsters Goods, both new and old; and for this Trade it was of very good Account.

This Lane goes in this Ward from Smithfield to the Red-lion-inn, the other Part being in Aldersgate Ward, but something further on the South Side, even to Golden-dragon-court. The Places in this Lane are, Three-fox-court, but ordinary. Charter-house-street, a neat new-built Place, with an open Passage into the Charter-house-yard, with neat and genteel Houses, well inhabited: This Place, before its new Building, was called Carpenter's-yard. Three-horse-shoe-court, but ordinary. Cat-alley has a narrow Entrance, but good; and on the Back-side of this is another Court so called. Red-lion-inn has a large Yard for Stabling and Coaches, and has a Passage into Charter-house-yard, and another into Goswell-street. Golden-dragon-yard, also for Stabling.

Bartholomew-clofe

Great St. Bartholomew's-clofe: This Clofe is open and large, with several good Houses, which generally are all well inhabited. Out of this Clofe are several Passages into Duck-lane, Little-Britain, and two into Aldersgate-street, of which one is thro' Northumberland-alley, and the other thro' Half-moon-alley, another Passage into Cloth-fair, and another into Long-lane.

Places of Note in this Clofe, and near it, are, Westmoreland-court, a square Place, formerly a large House, now converted into Tenements. Out of this Court is Westmoreland-alley, by some called Paved-alley, as paved with Free-stone, and leads into Aldersgate-street. Half-moon-alley, very narrow. Middlesex-house, an old large Building, now severed into Dwelling-Houses, with a Court-yard before it, inclosed within a Wall. Over-against this Place is Parker's-yard, indifferent good. Passing Northwards is a Gate-way, the Bounds of this Clofe, where beyond there are some Streets and Buildings; as, New-street and Middle-street, both indifferent; and Back-alley, which is but ordinary; all three falling into another Street, which has a Passage into Long-lane.

Cloth-fair comes out of Smithfield, a Place generally inhabited by Woollen-drapers and Merchants, and is of some Note.

Cloth-fair

Duck-lane comes out of Little-Britain, and falls into Smithfield, a Place once noted for Dealers in old Books, but at present quite forsaken by all Sorts of Dealers. Well-clofe, a very handsome, open Court, with good Houses, which are well inhabited; it has another Passage into King-street, by St. Bartholomew's Hospital. This Street is short, and goes from the said Hospital into the Long-walk, and so to Christ's Hospital.

Duck-lane

St. Bartholomew's Hospital, commonly called the Lame Hospital, because lame, wounded, and diseased People are hither sent for Cure.

From King-street, through this Hospital, is a Passage into Smithfield, and adjoining to this is the Parish-Church of Little St. Bartholomew.

There are to watch at the Gates and several Stands, every Night, in this Ward, three Constables, the Beadle, and an hundred and thirty Watchmen, and in the Precinct of White-friars eight; in all one hundred and thirty-eight.

Watch.

The Jurymen returned by the Inquest in this Ward are to serve in the several Courts held at Guildhall for the Month of June, yearly.

Jury.

This Ward has an Alderman and three Deputies, sixteen Common-Councilmen, fifteen Constables, fifteen Scavengers, and forty-four Inquestmen.

Government.

It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London at thirty-five Pounds, and in the Exchequer at thirty-four Pounds ten Shillings.

The Alderman of this Ward is Richard Beckford, Esq; one of the Representatives in Parliament for the City of Bristol; the Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Chr. Horsenail, Deputy, Mr. Robert Gamon, Mr. Samuel Beard, Mr. John Hughes, Mr. William Savage, Mr. John King, Mr. Thomas Nowell, Mr. William Hutton, Mr. John Coles, Deputy, Mr. Francis Fletcher, Mr. Samuel Wolley, Mr. Charles Gardner, Mr. William Cogan, Mr. John Burnett, Mr. Richard Nutt, and Mr. Stephen Preacher.

Alderman and Common-Councilmen.

This Ward is so extensive, that it has been thought proper, for its better Government, to part

part

Three Divisions. part it into three Divisions; as, St. Dunstan's, St. Bridget's, and St. Sepulchre's.

Remarkable Things. The most remarkable Things which at present are to be found in this large Ward are, Parishes and Churches. First, The Parishes and Parish-Churches (1.) of St. Bartholomew the Less; (2.) of St. Bartholomew the Great; (3.) St. Sepulchre's; (4.) St. Andrew's Holborn; (5.) St. Dunstan in the West; and (6.) St. Bridget, alias St. Bride; of which in our Parochial History.

The Temple. Secondly, The Temple, or, as it is recorded in History, the New Temple; so called, because the Templers, before building of this House, had their Temple in Oldbourn. This House was founded by the Knights Templers in England, in the Reign of Henry II. and the same was dedicated to God and our Blessed Lady by Heraclius, Patriarch of the Church called the Holy Resurrection in Jerusalem, in the Year of Christ 1185.

It contained all that Space of Ground from White-friars Eastward, to Essex-house without Temple-bar, and a Part of that too, as appears by the first Grant thereof to Sir William Paget, Knt. Secretary of State to King Henry VIII. Pat. 2. Edward VI.

The Original of the Knights Templers. These Knights Templers took their Beginning about the Year 1118, in Manner following: Certain Noblemen, Horsemen, religiously bent, bound themselves by Vow in the Hands of the Patriarch of Jerusalem, to serve Christ after the Manner of Regular Canons, in Chastity and Obedience, and to renounce their own proper Wills for ever: The first of which Order were Hugh Paganus, [i. e. Pain] and Jeffrey de S. Audomare. And whereas at first they had no certain Habitation, Baldwin, King of Jerusalem, granted to them a Dwelling-place in his Palace by the Temple; and the Canons of the same Temple gave them the Street, thereby to build therein their Houses of Office. And the Patriarch, the King, the Nobles, and Prelates, gave them certain Revenues out of their Lordships.

Their first Profession was for Safeguard of the Pilgrims, coming to visit the Sepulchre, and to keep the Highways against the lying in wait of Thieves, &c. About ten Years after they had a Rule appointed to them, and a white Habit, by Honorius II. then Pope: And whereas they had but nine in Number, they began to increase daily. Afterwards, in Pope Eugenius's Time, they bore Crosses of red Cloth on their uppermost Garments, to be known from others. And in short Time, because they had their first Mansion hard by the Temple of our Lord in Jerusalem, they were called Knights of the Temple.

Many Noblemen, in all Parts of Christendom, became Brethren of this Order, and built themselves Temples in every City or great Town. In England this was their chief House, which they built after the Form of the Temple near to the Sepulchre of our Lord at Jerusalem. They had also other Temples in Cambridge, Bristol, Canterbury, Dover, Warwick, and divers other Places. This Temple in London was often made a Storehouse of Men's Treasure, such as feared the Spoil thereof in other Places.

In the Year 1252, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, being Prisoner in the Tower of London, the King was informed that he had much Treasure laid up in this New Temple, under the Custody of the Templers; whereupon he sent for the Master of the Temple, and examined him strictly; who confessed, that Money being delivered to him and his Brethren to be kept, he knew not how much there was of it. The King demanded to have the same delivered; but it was answered, That the Money being committed to their Trust, could not be delivered, without the Licence of him that committed it to Ecclesiastical Protection. Whereupon the King sent his Treasurer and Justiciary of the Exchequer to Hubert, to require him to resign the Money wholly into his Hands; who answered, That he would gladly submit himself, and all his, to the King's Pleasure; and thereupon desired the Knights of the Temple (in his Behalf) to present all the Keys to the King, to do his Pleasure with the Goods which he had committed to them. Then the King commanded the Money to be faithfully told, and laid up in his Treasure by Inventory; wherein was found, besides ready Money, Vessels of Gold and Silver unprisable, and many precious Stones, which would make all Men wonder, if they knew the Worth of them.

This Temple was again dedicated in 1240, as also newly re-edified then.

In the Year 1245, Pope Innocent's Nuncio resided in the New Temple: And the said Pope commanded the Bishops of England to bring his Nuncio there six thousand Marks, to be raised from the English Bishopricks: Which King Henry forbade.

These Templers at this Time were in so great Glory, that they entertained the Nobility, foreign Ambassadors, and the Prince himself, very often; insomuch that Matthew Paris cried out on them for their Pride, who, being at first so poor as they had but one Horse to serve two of them, (in Token whereof they gave in their Seal two Men riding on one Horse) yet suddenly they waxed so insolent, that they disdained other Orders, and sorted themselves with Noblemen.

King Edward I. in the Year 1283, taking with him Robert Waleran, and others, came to the Temple, where, calling for the Keeper of the Treasure-House, as if he meant to see his Mother's Jewels that were laid up there to be safely kept, he entered the House, breaking the Coffers of certain Persons that had likewise brought their Money thither, and he took away from thence to the Value of a thousand Pounds.

Many Parliaments and great Councils have been there kept, as may appear by our Histories.

In the Year 1308, all the Templers in England, as also in other Parts of Christendom, were apprehended and committed to divers Prisons.

In 1310, a Provincial Council was holden at London against the Templers in England, upon Heresy, and other Articles whereof they were accused, but denied all except one or two of them: Notwithstanding, they all did confess that they could not purge themselves fully as faultless; and so they were condemned to perpetual Penance in several Monasteries, where they behaved themselves modestly.

Philip,

Philip, King of France, procured their Overthrow throughout the whole World, and caused them to be condemned by a General Council to his Advantage, as he thought; for he believed to have had all their Lands in France, and therefore seizing the same in his Hands, caused the Templers, to the Number of fifty-four, or, after Fabian, sixty, to be burned at Paris.

Edward II. in the Year 1313, gave to Aimer de la Valence, Earl of Pembroke, the whole Place and House called the New Temple at London, with the Ground called Fiquet's-croft, and all the Tenements and Rents, with the Appurtenances, that belonged to the Templers, in the City of London and Suburbs thereof; also the Land called Flete-croft, Part of the Possessions of the said New Temple.

After Aimer de Valence (some say) Hugh Spencer usurping the same, held it during his Life; by whose Death (he being attainted the first of Edward III.) it came again to the Hands of Edward III. But in the mean Time, viz. 1324, by a Council holden at Vienna, all the Lands of the Templers, lest the same should be put to prophane Uses, were given to the Knights Hospitalers, of the Order of St. John Baptist, called St. John of Jerusalem; which Knights had put the Turks out of the Isle of Rhodes, and also won upon the said Turks daily for a long Time.

The said Edward III. therefore granted the same to the said Knights, who possessed it; and, in the eighteenth Year of the said King's Reign, were forced to repair the Bridge of the said Temple. These Knights had their chief House for England at Clerkenwell, near West Smithfield.

The Temple granted to the Professors of Law.

And they, in the Reign of the same Edward III. granted, for a certain Rent of ten Pounds by the Year, the said Temple, with the Appurtenances thereto adjoining, to the Students of the Common Laws of England. In their Possession the same has ever since remained, and is now divided into two Houses of several Students, by the Name of Inns of Court, viz. the Inner-Temple and the Middle-Temple, who keep two several Halls, but they resort all to the said Temple Church:

Monuments

In the Round Walk whereof (which is the West Part, without the Choir) there remain Monuments of Noblemen there buried, to the Number of eleven; eight of them are Images of armed Knights, five lying cross-legged, as Men vowed to the Holy Land against the Infidels and unbelieving Jews, the other three strait-legged; the rest are coped Stones, all of grey Marble. The first of the cross-legged was William Marshall the elder, Earl of Pembroke, who died 1219. William Marshall, his Son, Earl of Pembroke, was the second; he died 1231. And Gilbert Marshall, his Brother, Earl of Pembroke, slain in a Tournament at Hertford, near Ware, twenty Miles from London; he died in the Year 1241.

After this Robert Rose, otherwise called Fursan, being made a Templer in the Year 1245, died, and was buried there.

Spoiled, &c. by Rebels.

In the Year 1381, the Rebels of Essex and of Kent destroyed and pulled down the Houses and Lodgings of this Temple, took out of the Church the Books and Records that were there in Hutches of the Apprentices of the Law, carried them into the Streets, and there burnt them: The House they spoiled and burnt, for Malice they bore Sir Robert Hales, Lord Prior of St. John's in Smithfield. (See Page 139.) But it was since again, at divers Times, repaired, namely, the Gate-house of the Middle-Temple, in the Reign of Henry VIII. by Sir Amias Paulet, Knight. The great Hall of the Middle-Temple was newly built in the Year 1572; in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Repaired.

This Hall is said to be built in Edward III.'s Reign; the Wall between the Thames and Garden about the Year 1550; the Hall ceiled in 1554. About that Time Mr. Packington, Treasurer, built Tanfield-court, so called from the Chambers of Sir Laurence Tanfield, Chief Baron, being there; till which Time it was called Packington-court.

Several Parts built.

Anno 1553 the Kitchen was built; Anno 1559 the Buildings near the Alienation-Office were erected; in 1573 the great carved Screen in the Hall was set up; Anno 1595 Cesar's-buildings, between the Church and the Hall, were erected, and so called, for that Sir Julius Caesar, Master of the Rolls, gave three hundred Pounds towards the Charge; Anno 1607 the Paper-buildings were erected, and, being consumed by Fire, were rebuilt a noble Pile of spacious pleasant Chambers, at the North End whereof are finely painted, appearing like so many Statues, the Figures of the four Cardinal Virtues, &c. and was finished Anno 1685, Sir Robert Sawyer, Treasurer; Anno 1609 the Inner-Temple-gate was built; about 1616 Part of the Inner-Temple-gate, Fig-tree-court, (the East Side in 1607) and Buildings near Ram-alley, and the King's-bench Office, were erected; Part of the Lane also in 1657; Chambers against the West End of the Church, built in 1679, and Anno 1681.

Paper-buildings.

In the Year 1684 was built the Middle-Temple-gate, next Fleet-street, which is a fine Structure, in the Style of Inigo Jones. It has a graceful Front of Brick-work, with four large Stone Pilasters of the Ionic Order, and a handsome Pediment, with a Round in the Middle of it, having these Words inscribed in large Capitals: Surrexit impensis Societat. Med. Templi, MDCLXXXIV. Lower, just over the Arch, the Figure of an holy Lamb, 1684.

Middle-Temple-gate.

Over the Colonade, at the End of Pump-court, is an Inscription in Memory of a Fire that happened there some Years ago, viz.

Vetustissima Templariorum Porticu igne consumpta Anno 1678. Nova hæc sumptibus Medii Templi extructa Anno 1681, Gulielmo Whitlock, Armig. Thesaurario.

The Temple Church, having narrowly escaped the Flames in 1666, was newly beautified, adorned, and the curious Wainscot Screen set up, Anno Dom. 1682, when Sir Thomas Robinson was Treasurer of the Inner-Temple, and Sir Francis Wilekens Treasurer of the Middle-House. The South-West Part was, in the Year 1695, new built with Stone, whereon appeareth this Inscription:

By the Workmen, at this Time, was broke down an Inscription over the little Door next the Cloister: It was in old Saxon Capital Letters within a Semi-circle; and was as follows:

Anno ab incarnatione Domini MCLXXXV, dedicata hæc Ecclesia in honorem beatæ Mariæ a Domino Eraclio, Dei gratia sanctæ Resurrectionis Ecclesiæ Patriarcha, II. Idus Februarii. Qui eam annatim petentibus de injuncta sibi pænitentia LX. dies indulgit.

In the Year 1706 the Church was wholly new white-washed, gilt, and painted within, and the Pillars of the round Tower wainscotted, with a new Battlement and Buttresses on the South Side, and other Parts of the Outside were well repaired; also the Figures of the Knights Templers were cleaned and painted, and the Iron-work inclosing them painted, and gilt with Gold.

It is an antient Gothick Building, the Walls Stone, covered with Finishing, and strengthened with Buttresses; has a treble Roof covered with Lead, and supported with neat Pillars of Suffex Marble, and the Floor of the whole is paved with black and white Marble; that of the Chancel two Steps higher than the middle, and one higher than the Side Isles. The Isles are five in Number, viz. three (as usual) running East and West, and one cross Isle near the Entrance into the Chapel, and another parallel with the last, between the West End of the Ranges of Pews and the Screen.

This Church is not only antique in its Order, neat in its Workmanship, and rich in its Materials, but very beautiful in its Finishing; Properties that seldom are found in one Structure. The Pillars and Floors are not only Marble, but the Windows are adorned with pretty small Columns of the same Species of Stone. It is well pewed, and wainscotted with right Wainscot above eight Feet high; the Altar-Piece is of the same Species of Timber, but much higher, finely carved, and adorned with four Pilasters, and between them two Columns with Entablature of the Corinthian Order; also Enrichments of Cherubims, a Shield, Festoon, Fruit, and Leaves, enclosed with a handsome Rail and Ballister. The Pulpit is also finely carved and finniere, placed near the East End of the middle Isle. The Sound-board is pendant from the Roof of the Church; it is enriched with several carved Arches, a Crown, Festoons, Cherubims, Vases, &c.

The Round Tower at the West End of the Church is supported with six Pillars, wainscotted with Oak six Feet high, and is also adorned all round (except the East Part) with an upper and lower Range of small Arches, and black Apertures.

The Screen at the West End of the Isles is, as the Altar-Piece, &c. of right Wainscot, adorned with ten Pilasters of the Corinthian Order, also three Portals and Pediments; and the Organ-Gallery over the middle Aperture is supported with two neat fluted Columns of the Corinthian Order, and adorned with Entablature and Compass Pediment, and also the King's Arms finely carved; the Intercolumns are large Pannels in carved Frames; and near the Pediment on the South Side is an Enrichment of Cherubims, and the carved Figure of a Pegasus, the Badge of the Society of the Inner-Temple; and on and near the Pediment on the North Side, an Enrichment of Cherubims, and the Figure of a Holy Lamb, the Badge of the Society of the Middle-Temple; for though these two Houses have but one Church, yet they seldom sit promiscuously there, but the Inner-Temple on the South, and the Gentlemen of the Middle-Temple Northward from the middle Isle.

Length of the Church, from the Altar to the Screen, eighty-three Feet, Breadth sixty, Altitude thirty-four, and that of the Round Tower at the West End forty-eight Feet; its Diameter at the Floor fifty-one Feet, Circumference one hundred and sixty Feet.

Monuments in this Church.

Sir Nicholas Hare, Master of the Rolls, was buried there in the Year 1557.

Monuments therein.

Here lieth the Body of Anne Littleton, Wife of Edward Littleton, of the Inner-Temple, Esq; Son and Heir of Sir Edward Littleton, of Henly, in the County of Salop, Knt. Daughter of John Littleton of Frankly, in the County of Worcester, Esq; by Meriel, the Daughter of Sir Thomas Bromley, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England. She died the sixth Day of February, 1623.

On whom was made this Epitaph:

Here she lies, whose spotless Fame
Invites a Stone to learn her Name.
The rigid Spartan, that deny'd
An Epitaph to all that dy'd,
Unless for War, or Chastity,
Would here vouchsafe an Elegy.
She dy'd a Wife; but yet her Mind
(Beyond Virginity refin'd)
From lawless Fire remain'd as free
As now from Heat her Ashes be.
Her Husband (yet without a Sin)
Was not a Stranger, but her Kin;
That her chaste Love might seem none other Unto a Husband than a Brother.
Keep well this Pawn, thou Marble Chest;
Till it be call'd for, let it rest.
For while this Jewel here is set,
The Grave is but a Cabinet.

Memoriæ Sacrum.

Here resteth the Body of Clement Coke, of Langford, in the County of Derby, Esq; youngest Sonne of Sir Edward Coke, Knt. late Chiefe Justice of England; and of Bridget his Wife, Daughter and Coheir of John Paston, of Paston, in the County of Norfolke, Esq; This Clement married Sarah, Daughter and Coheire of Alexander Redicbe, of Redicbe, in the County of Lancaster, Esq; and of Katharine his Wife, sole Daughter and Heire of Humphrey Detbick, of Newal, in the County of Derby, Esq; and had Issue by the said Sarah, living at his Death, Edward, Robert, Bridget, and Avise. Hee in the Inner-Temple, being a Fellow of the same, christianly and conformably, in his flourishing Age, yielded up his Soule to the Almighty the three-and-twentieth of May, Anno Dom. 1629.

Sir Will. Dugdale, in his Book intituled Origines Juridiciales, hath taken Notice of most of the Monuments, and set down their respective Inscriptions, viz. those of John Portman, Richard Wye, Wye, Tulfington, Blackmore, Selden, Roger Bishop, John Den, Quatreman Turner of Partington, John White, Bishop Browning, [some Time Preacher here, who was buried ascending towards the Altar; but his Grave-stone is now removed, and placed at the going into the Church; as also was the Stone for White removed to this round Chapel, where it now is.] Plowden, Roop, Cole, Newcourt, Heyboe, Richard Lemster, Chaplain, Tho. Maybull, Chaplain, Edmund Berford, Dirland, Tho. English, Chaplain, Robert Thorne, Willielmus Langham, some Time Custos of this Temple, 1437. For the Epitaphs and Inscriptions of all these, the Reader is referred to Dugdale's Book before-mentioned.

The Monuments and Grave stones more lately placed and laid in this Church are for the Remembrance of these Persons following:

South Isle: Johannes Witham, Baronettus, qui profapia in agro Eboracensi ortus inclyta & antiqua, &c. Nobilissimæ in Barbados insula Coloniae Præpositus, summo magistratu maxima cum laude functus est, &c. 1689.

Maſter of the Temple.

Since the Diſſolution of the Hopitalers in the Time of Henry VIII. there has been a Divine, by the Name of a Maſter or Cuſtos, belonging to this Church; who is conſtituted by the King or Queen's Letters Patents, without Inſtitution or Induction.

Reader.

Befides the Maſter, there is a Reader, who reads Divine Service twice a Day, at eight of the Clock in the Morning, and at four in the Afternoon. Formerly they had alſo a fixed Lecturer for Sundays in the Afternoon; who had the Allowance of 80 l. per Annum paid from each Houſe, and convenient Lodging, and his Diet at the Benchers Table; but of late the Lecture is carried on by various Preachers, appointed at the Will of, and paid by, the Treasuſers of the two Houſes.

In the Little Temple:

William Dane, Ironmonger, and Alderman of London.

John Allot, Knt. Alderman of London.

Michael Fox, of London, Grocer, Anno 1500.

Towards the latter End of King Charles the Ist's Reign, a terrible Fire happened in the Temple, whereby the Office of Chirographer of Fines of the Court of Common-Pleas, there kept, was so burnt, that several Records of Fines engrossed, of Trinity and Michaelmas Terms, were either consumed or lost; whereby an Act passed, 31 Car. II. for the re-ingrossing of those Records; and that Office is now built in an open wide Court of the Temple, near the Water Side, not adjacent to any other Edifices, for the better Security of those Records for all Time hereafter.

The Inner-Temple, consisting of divers magnificent Courts and Buildings, with beautiful Walks for the Recreation of the Inhabitants, is denominated from its having been the Eastern Part of the Monastery of the Knights Templers: But that Order being suppressed, Edward III. gave the Priory to the Knights Hospitallers, who soon after demised the same to certain Students of the Law for a Rent of ten Pounds per Annum; in whom, and their Successors, it has ever since continued.

No. 82.

This Society consists of Benchers, Barristers and Students; the former whereof, as Governors, at Commons, have their Table at the upper End of the Hall, and the Barristers and Students theirs in the middle. Antiently, at these Entertainments, their Bread served instead of Plates, and no other Vessels to drink out of than Wooden Cups; but at present they are allowed Trenchers for their Meat, and coarse green Earthen Pots for their Liquor. However, though the antient Custom of using mean Vessels still prevails, yet there are but few that fare better.

All the Members of the Society that have Chambers, are obliged to be in Commons a Fortnight in every Term, for which they pay about ten Shillings per Week. Sixteen of which Terms, with a regular Course of Study, qualifies a Student for the Bar.

The Fees of the House, upon the Admission of a Member, is three Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence; which, with other Disbursements, amount to four Pounds and two Pence.

The Parliament, wherein the Affairs of the Society are treated, is commonly held twice every Term.

The Officers and Servants of the House are, a Treasurer, Sub-Treasurer, a Steward, a Chief and three Under-Butlers, an Upper and Under-Cook, a Pannier-man, a Gardener, two Porters and two Wash-pots.

The Middle-Temple, which is an Inn of Court adjoining to the Inner-Temple on the West, is so denominated from its having been the middle or central Part of the antient Temple or Priory of the Knights Templers. The chief Officer of this House, like that of its Neighbour, is a Treasurer, who is annually elected from among the Benchers, and whose Office it is to admit Students, assign them their Chambers, and to receive and pay all the Cash belonging to the Society.

The Officers and Government of this Inn are, in all respects, like to that of the Inner-Temple, except the Charge of Admission, which is five Pounds; and the Time to qualify a Student for the Bar, instead of sixteen Terms in that, is twenty-eight in this.

Thirdly, In Chancery-lane is a Place for keeping the Records of Chancery, called The Rolls, or Chapel for the Custody of Rolls or Records in Chancery. This Chapel was antiently the House of the converted Jews, founded by King Henry III. in Place of a Jew's House to him forfeited in the Year 1233, and the seventeenth of his Reign; who built there for them a fair Church. It stood not far from the Old-Temple, but in the Mid-way between the Old-Temple and the New. In which House all such Jews and Infidels as were converted to the Christian Faith were ordained and appointed (under an honest Rule of Life) sufficient Maintenance. Whereby it came to pass, that in a short Time there were gathered a great Number of Converts, which were baptized, instructed in the Doctrine of Christ, and there lived under a learned Christian appointed to govern them.

If the Letter following to King Edward was sent from this House, as it seems to be, it appears from thence that they were of the Carthusian Profession, and that they received yearly Allowance from the Crown; and that this King, as

But in the Year 1290, all the Jews in England being banished out of the Realm, and the Number of Converts in this Place almost decayed; in the Year 1377 this House was annexed by Patent to William Brusill, Clerk, Custos Rotulorum, or Keeper of the Rolls of the Chancery, by Edw. III. in the fifty-first Year of his Reign, (or rather the fiftieth, which was the last Year of his Reign); and this first Master of the Rolls was sworn in Westminster-hall, at the Table of Marble Stone; since which Time that House has been commonly called the Rolls in Chancery-lane.

Confirmed by Parliament.

In the fifteenth of the said King Edward III.'s Reign, that King annexed by Letters Patents this House to the Office of Custos Rotulorum; and there was an Act, wherein it was said, "That the Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great Seal, after the Voidance of the said Office of keeping the Rolls, should institute, successively, the Keeper of the Rolls in the said House of the Convents." After which Act of Parliament John de Waltham, Guardian, or Keeper of the Rolls, obtained of Richard II. in the sixth of his Reign, Letters Patents, whereby the King granted to him, and his Successors, Keepers of the Rolls, the House of Converts. This John of Waltham was after Bishop of Salisbury, and after Treasurer of England.

Jews since relieved by this House.

Notwithstanding, such of the Jews, or other Infidels, as have in this Realm been converted to Christianity, and baptized, have been relieved there; for it is in Record, that one William Piers, a Jew, that became a Christian, was baptized in the fifth of Richard II. and had two Pence a Day allowed him during his Life by the said King.

In the Reign of Henry IV. there was one Elizabeth, Daughter of a Rabbi, (who was intituled, The Bishop of the Jews) that was a Convert; to whom, besides a Penny a Day paid her by the Keeper of this House of Converts out of a Branch of the Exchequer, appointed for that Purpose, the King of his Grace granted another Penny a Day for her Life, according to a Patent to this Tenor: Rex omnibus ad quos, &c. Salutem. Sciatis quod de gra' nostra speciali, concessimus Elizabethæ Filiae Rabi Moyse, Episcopi Judæorum, unum dena- rium per diem, ultra unum denarium, quem ead. Elizabetha, ut una Judæorum ad fidem Christianorum conversa, per manus Custodis Domus Converterorum London. de summa pro hujusmodi Conversis, ad Scaccarium precipienda, assignata, singulis diebus percipit. Habendum & percipiendum dictum Denarium diurnum per nos eid. Elizab. tenore præsentium concessum, una cum dicto altero Denario, &c.

The Building is of Brick, Boulder, and some Free-stone; the Doors and Windows are Gotbick; the Roof is covered with Slate; the Ornament of the Presses for Rolls on the Inside, is Columns and Pilasters of the Ionick and Composite Orders.

It is in Length 60 Feet, in Breadth 33.

In this Chapel of the Rolls, against the East Wall, is a venerable Monument for Dr. Yong, some Time Master of the Rolls. It is cut in the Figure of a well-wrought Stone Coffin, on which lies along a Man most artificially carved in Stone, with a Cap with Corners covering his Ears, and Scarlet Gown, his Hands lying upon his Breast a-cross. On the Wall, just above him, the Head and Shoulders of our Saviour appearing out of the Clouds, looking down upon him; and two Angels on each Side of our Saviour. Underneath this Figure is this Inscription in Capitals, viz.

Jo. Yong, L. L. Doctori, sacrorum scriniorum ac hujus Domus Custodi, Decano olim Ebor. Vita defuncto xxv Aprilis, sui fideles Executores hoc posuerunt M.D.XVI.

Upon the Base of the Coffin, Dominus Firmamentum meum.

On the North Side of this Chapel is a magnificent Monument, adorned with the Effigy of an old Gentleman in a long Robe, in full Proportion, cumbent on his right Side, his Head resting on his Hand; this is between two Columns (with gilded Capitals) and Entablature of the Corinthian Order; and lower, on the Front, are four smaller Figures in a kneeling Posture. The Inscription is,

His Arms: Or, a Saltire, Gules, a Chief of the second, on a Canton, Argent, a Lion rampant, Azure: These also impaled with Or, a Bend ingrailed, Azure.

Up the Chancel Steps, on the South Side of the Chapel, is a spacious Monument of the Corinthian Order, with the Figures of a Man, Woman, and three Children, in a kneeling Posture, and this Inscription:

Arms:

Arms: A Bend between six Billets, &c. ten Coats, Quarterly; but the Colours not discernible.

At the North-West Angle of this Chapel is a Bench, &c. where the Master of the Rolls hears Causes in Chancery.

The Minister is appointed by the Master of the Rolls, the Honourable Sir Thomas Clarke.

There are Prayers upon Sundays and Holidays, at about eleven and three. The present Preacher is the Rev. Dr. Terrick. His Salary is about 20*l.* each Term: It is reckoned a Place of great Credit.

Attendance is also given in this Chapel, from ten to twelve daily, for taking in and paying out Money, (according to Order of Court,) and for making Searches of Rolls, &c. by such as come for that Purpose.

All Records down to 1483 are kept in the Tower; and from that to the present Time in the Rolls Chapel. The present Clerk of the Rolls and Records there is Henry Rooke, Gent.

Inns of Court.

Fourthly, Besides these antient Foundations, there are several more Houses for the Law, commonly called Inns of Court: As,

Barnard's-Inn.

(1) Barnard's-Inn, situate on the South Side of Holborn, near to the North-West End of Fetter-lane, was antiently called Mackworth's-Inn, which is an Inn of Chancery, belonging to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, as says the Record of Henry VI. the twenty-third of his Reign; and was founded by Inquisition in the Guildhall of London, before J. Norman, Mayor, the King's Escheator. The Jury said, that it was not hurtful for the King to license Thomas Atkins, Citizen of London, and one of the Executors of John Mackworth, Dean of Lincoln, to give one Messuage in Holborn, in London, with the Appurtenances, called Mackworth's-Inn, but was commonly known by the Name of Barnard's-Inn, to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, to find one sufficient Chaplain, to celebrate divine Service in the Chapel of St. George, in the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, where the Body of the said John is buried; to have and to hold the said Messuage to the said Dean and Chapter, and to their Successors for ever, in Part of Satisfaction of 20*l.* Lands and Rents, which Edward III. licensed the said Dean and Chapter to purchase to their own Use; either of their own Fee, or Tenure, or of any other, so the Lands were not holden of the King in Capite.

This Society consists of a Principal and twelve Antients, besides other Members, who are obliged to be in Commons a Fortnight in two Terms, and ten Days in each of the other two, on Penalty of 5*s.* per Week.

Thavie's-Inn.

(2.) Near to the West End of St. Andrew's Church, in Holborn, is another Inn in Chancery, called from its Founder Thavie's-Inn. It is a Member of Lincoln's-Inn, who had a Grant thereof from Gregory Nichols, Citizen and Mercer of London, in the Year 1549; by virtue whereof, they soon after demised the same to the Principal and Antients thereof, for a certain Term of Years, at the Rent of three Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence per Annum.

This Inn appears to be of great Antiquity, by its having belonged to John Thavie, (from whom it is denominated) in the Reign of Edward III. by whose Will it appears to have been then an Inn for Students of the Law; some of whom, about the Year 1347, had the New Temple demised to them by the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, for a yearly Rent of ten Pounds; and removing thither, they and their Successors have continued there ever since.

The said Thavie, Anno 1348, left an Estate so considerable for the Support of St. Andrew's Church in Holborn, that it is said the present Church was built thereby about the Year 1670.

This House is governed by a Principal and eleven Antients, who, with the other Members, are to be ten Days in Commons in issuable Terms, and in each of the rest a Week.

(3) Adjoining to the North Side of St. Dunstan's Church, in Fleet-street, stands Clifford's-Inn, also an Inn in Chancery, and Member of the Inner-Temple. It did some Time belong to Robert Clifford, by Gift of Edward II. in these Words:

Clifford's-Inn.

"The King granteth to Robert Clifford, that Messuage, with the Appurtenances, next the Church of St. Dunstan in the West, in the Suburbs of London. Which Messuage was some Time Malculine's de Herley; and came to the Hands of Edward I. by Reason of certain Debts, for which the said Malculine was bound at the Time of his Death to our said Father, from the Time that he was Escheator on this Side Trent. Which House John Earl of Richmond did hold at our Pleasure, and is now in our Possession."

Patent the 3d of Edward II.

After the Death of this Robert Clifford, Isabel his Wife let the same Messuage to Students of the Law, as by the Record following may appear:

"Isabel, quæ fuit uxor Roberti Clifford, Messuagium unipartitum, quod Robertus Clifford habuit in Parochia S. Dunstani, West. in Suburbio Londini, &c. tenuit, & illud dimisit post mortem dict. Roberti Apprenticiis de Banco, pro 10*l.* Annuatim, &c. Anno 18 Edvardi tertii, inquitis post mortem Roberti Clifford."

This House fell afterwards into the King's Hands, but returned again to the Cliffords; and, in Stow's Time, was let to the said Students for 4*l.* a Year.

The Society is governed by a Principal and twelve Antients, who are chiefly Attornies and, Officers of the Marshal's Court, who, with the rest of the Members, are in Commons a Fortnight every Term, otherwise to pay four Shillings per Week.

(4) Adjoining to the Precinct of White-friars, and a little East of the Temple, is a Place called Serjeants-Inn, for that divers Judges and Serjeants at Law kept a Commons, and were lodged there in Term-Times.

Serjeant's-Inn, Fleet-street.

This Serjeants-Inn seems to have been some Time a Garden belonging to the New-Temple, and granted by King Henry III. to a Bishop of Chichester; for such a Patent is found, R. Chichester Epo. nov. Templ. Gardinum in vico ante novum Templum, London.

This, or some other Messuage of Serjeants-Inn, was in the Crown in the Reign of Edward VI. who, in his 3d Year, sold all the Messuage, Lordship, and Hereditaments thereof, to Sir Edward Montagu, and John Campanet.

Orig. Jur.
c. 74.
f. 326.

This honourable House of Judges and Serjeants, in Fleet-street, was sometime a Messuage, formerly (and still) belonging to the Dean and Chapter of York; and in it the Serjeants at Law (as some have observed) about the Beginning of King Henry VI.'s Reign, had their Residence; for it was demised about the 21st Year of King Henry VI. by the Dean and Chapter of York, to one William Auntrous, a Citizen and Taylor of London, for eighty Years, at the Rent of ten Marks Sterling, payable quarterly. And all that Time John Ellerbar (made Serjeant at Law in the 3d Year of Henry VI.) and other Serjeants did abide and live in it. And it is probable (saith Sir William Dugdale) that this William Auntrous did inhabit in Part of the House himself, and was in Nature of a Steward to them; as afterwards John Wikes, Esq; was, who had a Lease thereof, under the same Rent, and for the same Term, granted about the 14th of King Edward IV. and at the same Time inhabited therein. But in the 15th Year of King Henry VIII. it was demised by the Dean and Chapter of York to Sir Lewis Pollard, Knt. then (and till the 17th Year of the said King) a Justice of the Court of Common-Pleas, and to several Serjeants at Law, for the Term of twenty-one Years, at the Rent of fifty-three Shillings and four Pence, payable at the Feasts of the Annunciation of our Lady, and St. Michael the Archangel. Since which Time the Judges and Serjeants have, by other Leases from the Dean and Chapter of York, held it till this Day.

And in the great and terrible Conflagration and dreadful Fire, which broke out in London, the third Day of September, A. D. 1666, being the 18th Year of King Charles II. and continued about the Space of three Days, and destroyed the greatest Part of the City before it could be stopped, and laid the Honour of our Nation, one of the richest and choicest Cities in the World, in the Dust; and by so sudden and irresistible, so dismal and amazing Devastation, as in all Circumstances is scarce (says the late Learned and Reverend Lord Archbishop of Canterbury) to be paralleled in any History; and in so stupendous a Manner desolated the Glory of our Land, that no human Fury could have procured, or ever have wished, the like Devastation and Ruin; and that City, which was great among the Nations, and Princess among the Provinces, lay for some Time buried in her own Ashes, and was both funeral Pile and Urn to herself: And what neither foreign or domestick Enemies could in a Succession of many Ages effect, one Blast of the Breath of God's Displeasure did perform in a Moment; and so verifying, even in a literal Sense, the Apostle's Affirmation, that our God is a consuming Fire. And this Devastation of dead Tabernacles tripping close upon the Heels (as it were) of the raging Plague, which, the intelligent Turkish Intelligencer takes Notice, had destroyed such a vast Number of living Tabernacles: For he acquaints his Correspondent, that in the City of London, above an hundred thousand Souls, struck with invisible Darts from God, went off the Stage of human Life in less than six Months Revolution. Whereupon he makes this Observation: "Surely the Gods of the English are angry (saith he) with that People, and the Guardian Spirits of the Isle have forsook their Charge; for the whole Island may well be called at this Time the grand Infirmary of Europe, where baneful Sicknefs makes its publick Residence. The timorous Christians run from Place to Place, thinking to escape from Heaven's all-searching Pursuivants. They fly from populous Towns to Villages, and from these again to unfrequented Desarts, Woods and Heaths, carrying their Wives and Children with them, and all the Substance of their Houses. The Roads are covered with the Caravans and doubtful Passengers, who dread to think of going back to the contagious Seats they left behind, yet know not where to be received anew. So general is the Consternation, so strong is the Fear, of those who yet (saith he) survive, lest they should also catch the Infection and die. And besides this they have (says he again) felt the Stroke of another surprizing Calamity; London, the Capital City of England, being newly consumed with Fire. It is not certain (adds this cunning Intelligencer) whether Design or Chance first kindled the devouring Element: But it fell out at an unlucky Season, (saith he) when the Wind was high, and, from its Eastern Quarter, blew the Flames full West, which, spreading North and South, demolished all before them, laying the greatest Part of that rich and famous City in Ashes." Thus the Turkish Spy observes. And amongst other goodly and famous Structures and Piles of Buildings, that were devoured by the raging and merciless consuming Fire, this College of the honourable, learned and grave Judges, and famous Serjeants of the Law, had its Participation in the same dismal Fate.

But upon the renewing of the Lease by the said Dean and Chapter of York, in the Year 1670, it was rebuilt at the Charges of some of the Judges Barons of the Exchequer, and Serjeants at Law; together with the additional Supply of seventeen new Serjeants at Law, viz. Turner of Yorkshire, Barton, Bramston, Peckham, Hopkins, Goodfellow, Baldwin, Howell, Recorder of London, Goddard, Powes, Jones, Turner of Wales, Hards, Ellis, Wilmot, Flynt and Scroggs; who were called to that Degree in the 21st Year of King Charles II. and, making no publick Feast, did each of them deposite one hundred Pounds towards the rebuilding of this honourable Hostel, which now is far more glorious and stately, than formerly it appeared; having now a very fine Chapel, an Hall, and stately Court of tall Brick Buildings. And this College of the honourable, grave and learned Judges, and sage Serjeants of the Law, is situate on the South Side of Fleet-street, almost opposite to Fetter-lane End. And the principal Gate thereof opens Northward into Fleet-

The Buildings and Situation

Fleet-street; then there is another little back Gate or Door at the South End of the Court, that opens into a Passage leading into the Inner-Temple. The Officers belonging to this honourable Inn, are a Steward, a Master-Cook, a Chief Butler, with their Attendants and Servants, and a Porter.

This noble House beareth for its Ensign or Badge of Honour, Gules, two Garbs, in Saltire, Or, and a Bend, Azure.

(5) Near to the South-East End of Chancery-lane, and adjoining to the West Side of Clifford's-Inn, is another Inn, appropriated to the same Gentlemen of the Law.

This Serjeants-Inn in Chancery-lane was some Time a Messuage belonging to the Bishops of Ely, as by Record appears; and about the 12th of King Henry IV. it was called Faringdon's-Inn; and at that Time (as some hold) the Serjeants at Law had Lodgings there: For in the 2d Year of King Henry V. which was about three Years after, the Bishop's Bailiff gave in his Account for the Repair of Askam's Chamber, (who was made Serjeant at Law in the 12th Year of King Henry IV.) so that it seems the Lodgings were then let apart: But about two Years after, being the 4th Year of King Henry V. the House was intirely demised to the Justices, and others learned in the Law; for in that Year there is accompted to the Bishop six Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence, pro Faryndons-Inn in Chancelers-Lane, demisso Rogero Gorton, & Willielmo Cheyney, Justiciariis, et Waltero Askam, Apprentifio Legis. But it seems the Judges and Serjeants were not constant Tenants to the Bishop in those Days; for in the third Year of King Henry VI. it stood unlet for a Year; and then it was let to Justice Martyn, Justice Strangeways, and Justice Rolf, for five Pounds; and soon after, in the ninth Year of King Henry VI. it had the Name of Hospitium Justiciariorum, Justice-Inn. Then in the nineteenth Year of King Henry VI. it was demised to the Judges and Serjeants at five Pounds per Annum; and in the fourteenth Year of King Edward IV. to Sir Robert Danby, Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, and other Judges, at the same Rent; but, in the sixteenth Year of the said King, to Sir Thomas Gray, Knight, at four Pounds per Annum; and so in King Richard III.'s Time, doing all Repairs. Then in the eighth Year of King Henry VII. it was in the Bishop's Hands for want of Tenants; but it was but a while out of the Judges and Serjeants Tenancy: For in the last Year of King Henry VII. it was demised again, by the Name of Serjeants-Inn in Chancelers-lane, to Sir John Mordant and Humphrey Coningsby, then two of the King's Serjeants at Law, at the Rent of four Pounds per Ann. keeping all Repairs; and in the second Year of King Edward VI. Thomas Goodricke, Bishop of Ely, demised it to Christopher Fulnetby, his Brother-in-Law, for eighty-one Years; which Lease coming by mean Assignments to Sir Anthony Asbby, Knight, and then by Surrender to Nicholas Felton, Bishop of Ely, he granted it to the said Sir Anthony for three Lives, viz. Philippa, his then Wife, afterwards married to Carey Crawley, Esq; and two of his Servants; under whom (saith Sir William Dugdale) if the same be still in Being, the Judges and Serjeants do hold it.

This honourable Inn is situate on the East Side of Chancery-lane, near the South End thereof, leading into Fleet-street. It consists of two Courts, hath a pretty little Hall, and a convenient Kitchen; but the Buildings, for the most Part thereof, low Paper Buildings. The principal Gate thereof opens Westward into Chancery-lane; then there is a little back Gate or Door that opens Eastward into Clifford's-Inn, but is seldom open but in the Term Time. The Officers belonging to it are, a Steward, a Master-Cook, a Chief Butler, and their Servants, and a Porter.

This honourable Inn hath for its Cognizance or Arms, Or, an Ibis proper, which is a Bird near the Colour of a Jay.

Fifthly, On the West Side of Chancery-lane was some Time an House belonging to the Prior of Nelson Park, a House of Canons in Lincolnshire. This was commonly called Hereflete-Inn, and was a Brewhouse, but now built for the Six Clerks of the Chancery, and stands over-against the said House, called the Rolls; and near unto the Lane which entered Ficket's-cross, or Ficket's-field, now Carey-street.

There was an Act made for Assurance of a Tenement to the Six Clerks of the Chancery, called Hereflete-Inn, in Chancery-lane, and for making them a Corporation. See Acts of Parliament enrolled 32 Hen. VIII. And in the 37th Year of the same King, another Act passed for the same. Under these Six Clerks are sixty Clerks more, for the necessary Dispatch of Business. And the Lord Chancellor Jefferies added thirty Clerks more, in all amounting to the Number of ninety; which the other Clerks took great Offence at; and therefore there was afterwards an Endeavour to reduce them to the old Number, by not filling up the Vacancy by Death.

Sixthly, Ely-house, the City Mansion of the Bishops of Ely, on the North Side of Holborn-hill. Will. de Luda, Bishop of Ely, deceased 1297, and gave this House, by the Name of his Manor, with the Appurtenances, in Holborn, to his Successors; with Condition, that his next Successor should pay 1000 Marks towards the finding of three Chaplains in the Chapel there.

More, John Hotkam, Bishop of Ely, did give by the Name of six Messuages, two Cellars, and forty Acres of Land, in the Suburbs of London, in the Parish of St. Andrew in Holborn, to the Prior and Convent of Ely, as appears by Patent of the 9th of Edward III. This Man was Bishop of Ely twenty Years, and deceased An. 1336.

Thomas Arundel, Bishop of Ely, beautifully built anew his Palace at Ely; and likewise his Mansions in divers Places, especially this in Holborn; which he did not only repair, but rather new built, and augmented it with a large Port, Gatehouse, or Front, towards the Street, or Highway. His Arms are yet to be discerned in the Stone-Work thereof. He also sat Bishop of Ely fourteen Years, and was translated to York.

In this House, for the large and commodious Rooms thereof, divers great and solemn Feasts have have been kept, especially by the Serjeants at Law, whereof two are to be noted for Posterity.

The first: In the Year 1464, the 4th of Edward IV. in Michaelmas Term, the Serjeants at Law held their Feast in this House. To which, amongst other Estates, Matthew Philip, Mayor of London, with the Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Commons of divers Crafts, being invited, did repair. But when the Mayor looked to keep the State in the Hall, as it had been used in all Places within the City and Liberties, out of the King's Presence, the Lord Gray of Ruthen, then Lord Treasurer of England, unwitting the Serjeants, and against their Wills (as they said) was first placed. Whereupon the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons departed home; and the Mayor made the Aldermen to dine with him. Howbeit, he and all the Citizens were wonderfully displeased that he was so dealt with; and the new Serjeants, and others, were sorry (as they said) it had so happened.

One other Feast was likewise there kept in the Year 1531, the 23d of King Henry VIII. The Serjeants then made were in Number eleven, namely, Thomas Audeley, Walter Luke, J. Baldwin, J. Hinde, Christopher Jenny, John Dowsell, Edward Mervine, Edmund Knightley, Roper Chomley, Edward Montague, and Robert Yorke.

These also held their Feast in this Ely-house for five Days, viz. Friday the tenth of November, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. On Monday (which was the principal Day) King Henry and Queen Katharine dined there, (but in two Chambers) and the Foreign Ambassadors in a third Chamber.

In the Hall, at the high Table, sat Sir Nicholas Lambard, Mayor of London, the Judges, the Barons of the Exchequer, with certain Aldermen of the City. At the Board on the South Side sat the Master of the Rolls, the Master of the Chancery, and Worshipful Citizens. On the North Side of the Hall, certain Aldermen began the Board, and then followed Merchants of the City. In the Cloistery, Chapel, and Gallery, Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen were placed. In the Halls, the Crafts of London. The Serjeants at Law, and their Wives, kept in their own Chambers. See p. 230.

To this Ely-Place, in Queen Elizabeth's Time, belonged Grounds, consisting of an Orchard and a Pasture, all inclosed within a Wall. Cox, Bishop of Ely, upon the Queen's Solicitation, granted Mr. Christopher Hatton (who was Vice-Chamberlain of the Household, Knighted, and, lastly, Lord High Chancellor) a Part of this House for twenty-one Years, upon which he laid out much Cost; and upon that Pretence, afterward, he moved the Queen to require the said Bishop to alienate it to him, with the Garden; which to do, he made an humble Denial to the Queen, signifying to her, by a well-penned Letter in Latin, not only the Inconveniency that would hereby come to him and his Successors, viz. "That they should want an Orchard and Ground, and that they should be too much frightened; but that in his Conscience he could not do it, being a Piece of Sacrilege. That when he became Bishop of Ely, he had "received certain Farms, Houses, and other Things, which former pious Princes had judged necessary for that Place and Calling. These he received, by the Queen's Favour, from his Predecessors; and that of these he was to be a Steward, not a Scatterer. That he could not bring his Mind to be so ill a Trustee for his Successors, nor to violate the pious Wills of Kings and Princes, and, in effect, rescind their last Testaments. He put the Queen in Mind of that Rule of Nature, and of God, not to do that to another, which one would not have done to one's self; and that the Profit of one is not to be increased by the Damage of another. Nay, he told her, that he could scarcely justify those Princes, which transferred Things appointed for pious Uses into Uses less pious." But, however, Hatton failed of obtaining his Desire at present. After this good Bishop's Death, the Temporalities coming into the Queen's Hands, these Lands were made over to him, and now go under the Name of Hatton-garden. Of which, by Buildings, vast Improvements have been made.

This Ely-house, with the Bounds of it, claimed a Privilege of express Exemption from the Lord-Mayor's Jurisdiction. About this was a Contest. Anno 1567, Sir Roger Martin, being Lord-Mayor, came with his Company into the Parts about Ely-house, called Ely-rents, and attempted to weigh Bread, and do his Office among the Bishop's Tenants there: Which they refused to suffer him to do, as being exempt from the Rights and Franchises and Liberties of the Mayor; and that they belonged to the Jurisdiction of the Church and Bishoprick of Ely. This caused a great Dispute; and at length the Bishop and the Mayor chose certain honourable Arbitrators to determine this Business, submitting themselves to the Order and Direction of the Right Honourable Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper, Robert Earl of Leicester, Sir Rob. Catlyn, Kt. Lord Chief Justice of England, Sir Walter Mildmay, Kt. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir James Dyer, Kt. Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. And both the said Parties appeared at divers and sundry Times, with their Learned Counsel, before the said Lords and Arbitrators, and shewed divers and sundry Writings and Records, for the Maintenance of their several Titles and Claims; and also, severally, produced several Witnesses, which had been examined in the Court of Chancery, and their Examinations published; and also produced several Witnesses Viva Voce before the said Arbitrators, for Proof of their several Allegations.

The Consideration of all which Matters, after divers and sundry Debates, was agreed, should be referred to the two Chief Justices; and that they should make their Report, and give their Opinions touching the said Matter, and in whom the Right rested.

And the Chief Justices having advisedly weighed and considered the several Proofs, and afterwards being present in the Star-Chamber, together with the said Sir Nicholas Bacon, and Sir Walter Mildmay, the 9th of June, in the 12th of of Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1570, did make Report and Declaration of their Opinion, touching the said Controversy, viz.

That the Right of the Law, as far as they could yet discern, stood for the said Mayor and Commonalty: And that the said Tenements, called Ely-rents in Holborn, were and be within the Liberties, Franchises, and Jurisdiction of the said City, for and concerning the Matter in Controversy.

It was therefore by the Arbitrators (except the said Earl, who was then absent, and the said Bishop and his Counsel, being likewise absent) ordered and decreed, the said 9th of June, That the said Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London, and their Successors, should from thenceforth peaceably and quietly have, use, enjoy, and exercise, within the said Tenements, all and every such Liberties, Customs and Jurisdictions, as they may use within any other Place within the Liberty and Freedom of London, without any Trouble to their Servants, Tenants, and Officers, until such Time as the said Bishop, or his Successors, shew forth better Matter for their Parts and Defence in the Premises.

This House is, at present, a very old Building, and stands upon a large Piece of Ground; having a spacious Hall, a good Chapel, and several large Rooms, but old-fashioned, with a spacious Yard or Court before it, and a large Ground for Gardening behind it, which, for want of a Gardener's keeping, lay in a rude Condition; and were this Ground improved by Building, it would bring in a great Revenue to the Episcopal See, besides a good House for his City Abode. The present Possessor thereof is the Right Reverend Dr. Thomas Mawson, now Lord Bishop of Ely.

Hospitals. Seventhly, This Ward is also remarkable for two great Hospitals, viz.

Bridewell. (1) Bridewell, situate on the North Bank of the River Thames, near the East Extremity of Fleet-street, was in old Time a Royal Palace; for the Kings of this Realm have been there lodged, and their Courts of Law have been there kept, of old Time. And, 'till the 9th of Henry III. the Courts were kept in the King's House, where-soever he lodged, as may appear by antient Records.

King Henry VIII. built there a stately and beautiful House, new, for the Reception of the Emperor Charles V. who, in the Year 1522, was lodged himself at Black-friars; but his Nobles in this new built Bridewell, a Gallery being made over the Water, and through the Wall of the City, into the Emperor's Lodging at Black-friars. King Henry himself oftentimes lodged there also, as namely, in the Year 1525, a Parliament being then held in Black-friars. He created States of Nobility there, viz.

Henry Fitz-Roy, a Child, whom he had by Elizabeth Blunt, to be Earl of Nottingham, Duke of Richmond and Somerset.

Henry Courtney, Earl of Devonshire, Cousin-German to the King, to be Marquis of Exeter.

Henry Brandon, a Child of two Years old, Son to the Earl of Suffolk, to be Earl of Lincoln.

Sir Thomas Manners, Lord Ross, to be Earl of Rutland.

Sir Henry Clifford, to be Earl of Cumberland.

Sir Robert Ratcliff, to be Viscount Fitzwater.

Sir Thomas Boloine, Treasurer of the King's Household, to be Viscount Rochford.

In the Year 1528, Cardinal Campeius was brought into the King's Presence, being then at Bridewell, whither he had called all his Nobility, Judges, and Counsellors, &c. And there the 8th of November, in his great Chamber, he made to them an Oration touching his Marriage with Queen Katharine.

In the Year 1529, the same King Henry and Queen Katharine were lodged there, whilst the Question of their Marriage was argued in Black-friars, &c.

There being many poor distressed Persons in the City, who had neither House nor Harbour, but were forced to lie abroad in the open Streets, many worthy Citizens were thereby much affected, and especially Ridley, the good Bishop of London; who, considering that Bridewell, an old decayed House of the King's, situated in the City, being very large and capacious, might be extremely serviceable to this charitable Purpose, he endeavoured to find a way to beg it of the King, and had the better Opportunity at this Time, one being about buying it of the King to convert to his own Use. And to compass this Design, in the Month of May, in this charitable Year 1552, he wrote a very pathetick Letter to Sir William Cecyl, Knt. the King's Secretary, whom he knew to be of a pious Disposition, and much about the King's Person. His Letter was as follows:

"Good Mr. Cecyl, I must be a Suitor unto you in our Master Christ's Cause. I beseech you be good unto him. The Matter is, Sir, alas! he hath lien too, too long abroad; (as you do know) without Lodging, in the Streets of London, both hungry, naked, and cold. Now Thanks be unto Almighty God, the Citizens are willing to refresh him, and to give him both Meat, Drink, Cloathing, and Firing; but alas! Sir, they lack Lodging for him: For in some one House, I dare say, they are fain to lodge three Families under one Roof. Sir, there is a wide, large, empty House of the King's Majesty, called Bridewell, that would wonderfully well serve to lodge Christ in, if he might find such good Friends in the Court to procure in his Cause. Surely I have such a good Opinion in the King's Majesty, that if Christ had such faithful and hearty Friends that would heartily speak for him, he should, undoubtedly, speed at the King's Majesty's Hands. Sir, I have promised my Brethren the Citizens to move you, because I do take you for one that feareth God, and would that Christ should lie no more abroad in the Street."

Bishop Ridley's Letter to Cecyl to beg Bridewell.

He prayed him also, for God's sake, that he would stop the Sale of this House, in case any were about buying of it, as he heard there was, and that he would speak in our Master's Cause. The said Bishop wrote also to Sir John Gates, another great Man at Court, about this Business more at large; and he joined, he said, Cecyl with him, and all other that loved and looked for Christ's final

final Benediction on the latter Day; meaning that in the Gospel, Come, ye Blessed of my Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the Beginning of the World: For I was hungry, &c. He also sent Instructions by the Bearer of this Letter, to confer further with Cecyl in this Affair. So that that holy Martyr Ridley's Name must not be forgotten, as a great Instrument in the Procurement of Bridewell to the City.

Afterward this House being obtained to the City, it was employed for the Correction and Punishment of idle, vagrant People, and Strumpets, and for setting them to work, that they might in an honest Way take Pains to get their own Livelihood.

And here must not be omitted the Names of two good Mayors of London, Dobbs and Barnes; the former a main Instrument in procuring the Foundation of this and other Hospitals, the latter in furthering the good Estate of them; whom the good Bishop of London assisted in this Manner, in one of the Letters he wrote out of Prison a little before his Death:

"O Dobbs, Dobbs, Alderman and Knt. thou
 "in thy Year didst win my Heart for evermore,
 "for that honourable Act, that most blessed Work
 "of God, of the Erection and Setting-up of "Christ's holy Hospitals and truly religious "Houses, which by thee and through thee were "begun: For thou, like a Man of God, when
 "the Matter was moved, [perhaps by himself,
 "the Bishop] for Christ's poor silly Members,
 "to be holpen from extream Misery, Hunger,
 "and Famine, thy Heart; I say, was moved
 "with Pity, and, as Christ's high honourable "Officer in that Cause, thou calledst together
 "thy Brethren, the Aldermen of the City, be"fore whom thou brakest the Matter for the "Poor: Thou didst plead their Cause; yea, and "not only in thine own Person thou didst set "forth Christ's Cause, but, to further the Mat"ter, thou broughtest me into the Council-"Chamber of the City before the Aldermen
 "alone, whom thou hadst assembled there toge"ther to hear me speak what I could say, as an "Advocate by Office and Duty in the poor
 "Man's Cause. The Lord wrought with thee,
 "and gave thee the Consent of thy Brethren,
 "whereby the Matter was brought to the Com"mon Council, and so to the whole Body of "the City; by whom, with an uniform Con"sent, it was committed to be drawn, ordered
 "and devised, by a certain Number of the most "witty Citizens and politick, endued also with "Godliness, and with ready Hearts to set for"ward such a noble Act, as could be chosen in "all the whole City: And they, like true and "faithful Ministers, both to the City and their "Master Christ, so ordered, devised, and brought "forth the Matter, that thousands of poor silly
 "Members of Christ, that else, for extream "Hunger and Misery, should have famished and "perished, shall be relieved, holpen, and "brought up, and shall have Cause to bless the "Aldermen of that Time, the Common Coun"cil, and the whole Body of the City; but espe"cially thee, O Dobbs, and those chosen Men
 "by whom this honourable Work of God was "begun and wrought.

"And thoo, O Sir George Barnes, thou wast
 "in thy Year not only a Furtherer and Continuer
 "of that which before thee by thy Predecessor
 "was well begun, but also thou didst labour so
 "to have perfected the Work, that it should "have been an absolute Thing, and a perfect
 "Spectacle of true Charity and Godliness unto "all Christendom. Thine Endeavour was to have "set up an House of Occupations, both that all "Kind of Poverty, being able to work, should "not have lacked whereupon profitably they "might have been occupied, to their own Relief,
 "and to the Profit and Commodity of the Com"monwealth of the City; and also to have re"tired thither the poor Babes brought up in the "Hospitals, when they had come to a certain "Age and Strength; and also all those which in "the Hospitals aforesaid have been cured of their "Diseases. And to have brought this to pass,
 "thou obtainedst (not without great Diligence
 "and Labour, both of thee and thy Brethren)
 "of that godly King Edward, that Christian and "Peerless Prince, the princely Palace of Bridewell, and what other Things to the Perfor"mance of the same, and under what Condition,
 "it is not unknown. That this thine Endea"vour hath not had like Success, the Fault is "not in thee, but in the Condition and State of "the Time."

At the same Time that the Citizens were moved to these Charities, the King was excited to the same by good Sermons preached before him; such was that of Mr. Lever, a learned and pious Preacher in those Days, and Master of St. John's College, Cambridge; who, in a Lent Sermon before the King, had these Words:
 "O merciful Lord, what a Number of poor, fee"ble, halt, blind, lame, sickly, yea, with idle
 "Vagabonds and dissembling Caitiffs mixt among "them, lye, and creep, begging in the miry
 "Streets of London and Westminster? It is too "great Pity afore the World, and to utter Dam"nation before God, to see these begging as "they use to do in the Streets; for there is never
 "a one of these, but he lacketh either thy chari"table Alms to relieve his Need, or else thy due
 "Correction to punish his Fault, &c. These silly "Souls have been neglected throughout all England, and especially in London and Westminster:
 "But now I trust that a good Overseer, a godly "Bishop I mean, will see that they in these two "Cities shall have their Needs relieved, and their "Faults corrected, to the good Example of all "other Towns and Cities. Take heed that there "be such Grasse to sit down there, as ye [speak"ing to the King] command the People to sit "down; that there be sufficient Housing and
 "other Provision for the People there, as ye "command them to be quiet. The Men sat down about five thousand in Number: Which was Part "of the Gospel for the Day, out of which he "took his Text."

And Ridley, that zealous and charitable Prelate, and true Father of his Flock in London, was seasonably called also to preach before the King at Westminster; where he so closely and affectionately pressed Persons in high Place and Calling to be Instruments in helping and succouring the Poor, that the King was exceedingly moved

moved with his Discourse, and presently sent for him, taking Notice to him of his Sermon, and that he supposed he chiefly had him in his Eye, as being the highest of those in great Place and Calling, that he the Bishop spake to: Then the King assured him of his own Readiness to promote such good Purposes, desiring him to direct him therein, and what he would advise him to do on that Part.

The Bishop hereupon referred the King to the City; and the King presently caused a Letter to be wrote, and sent to the Mayor and his Brethren, to enter into Consultation about it: The Conclusion of which was, that, as the City had appointed the Grey-friars, now called Christ-Church, for poor Children; St. Bartholomew's, and likewise St. Thomas's in Southwark, for the Maimed and Diseased; and Bridewell for the Correction of Vagabonds, Strumpets, and idle Persons, and for finding them Work; so they obtained of the King to grant the Governors of those Places to be a Corporation, and to have Authority convenient for the Governing thereof: And he constituted himself Founder and Patron.

In June an Indenture bore Date and was made between the King, and the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, and their Successors for ever, towards the Maintenance of poor and impotent People; granting all the Manor-House, and Place of Bridewell, with the Appurtenances, lying and being in the Parish of St. Bridget in Fleet-street, with other Lands, and with a Licence to purchase four thousand Mark Lands for the Use aforesaid, besides the Lands given them by his Majesty in London, and elsewhere, and to purchase so much Land, besides Fees and Pensions granted to the Officers; and that the Lands given them by the King should be quit and discharged of all Tenths and First Fruits: That they might make godly and wholesome Ordinances, Statutes, and Rules, for the Government of the Poor: And that within the City of London, and County of Middlesex, they might search and examine all Manner of suspicious Houses, Taverns, Ale-houses, &c. and other suspected Places for Ruffians, Vagabonds, and idle Persons. This Gift of the King was computed to the yearly Value of four hundred and fifty Pounds.

And moreover, out of his meer Grace and Christian Charity, he gave out of the Hospital of the Savoy, now suppressed for the aforesaid charitable Use, a great Part of the Revenue thereof, which was seven hundred Mark Lands, together with the Bedding and Furniture; though, dying soon after, the Grant seemed not to be fully finished: But, for Fear it should not take Place, (so much it ran in the King's Mind) that in his last Will he caused this Clause to be inserted: The Grant made to the Mayor and City of London, touching the Savoy and Lands thereof, to be performed.

Though this House was granted in the Year 1553, yet it seems it was not till two Years after that the City entered and took Possession of it by Gerard their Mayor, having obtained Queen Mary's Confirmation.

Concerning the forwarding of this good Work of Bridewell, and bringing it to a desired Perfection.

No. 83.

tion, this Act of Common Council was made the last of February, in the second and third Years of Philip and Mary:

"Forasmuch as King Edward VI. had given "his House of Bridewell unto the City, partly "for the setting of idle and lewd People to work, "and partly for the lodging and harbouring of "the poor, sick, weak, and fore People of this "City, and of poor wayfaring People repairing "to the same; and had, for this last Purpose, "given the Bedding and Furniture of the "Savoy: Therefore, in Consideration that very "great Charges would be required to the "fitting of the said House, and the buying of "Tools and Bedding, the Money was ordered to "be gotten up among the rich People of the Companies of London, &c."

In the Time of Queen Elizabeth, about the Year 1570 and odd, one John Pain, a Citizen, invented a Mill to grind Corn, which he got recommended to the Lord-Mayor, for the Use of Bridewell. This Mill had two Conveniencies; one was, that it would grind a greater Quantity considerably than other Mills of that Sort could do; and the other (which would render it so useful to Bridewell) was, that the Lame, either in Arms or Legs, might work at it, if they had but Use of either; and accordingly these Mills were termed Hand-Mills or Foot-Mills.

This Mill he shewed to the Lord-Mayor, who saw it grind as much Corn with the Labour of two Men, as they did then at Bridewell with ten; that is to say, two Men with Hands; two Bushels the Hour; or two Men with Feet, two Bushels the Hour: If they were lame in their Arms, then they might earn their Livings with their Legs; if lame in their Legs, then they might earn their Livings with their Arms.

One Mill would grind twenty Bushels of Wheat in a Day; so that by Computation it was reckoned, that one of these would supply a thousand Persons.

In Bridewell, at the City's Charge, were built in those Times twelve new Granaries, sufficient to contain six thousand Quarters of Corn, and two Storehouses, which would hold four thousand Chaldron of Coals, for the Provision of the City, at the Charge of three thousand Pounds, or thereabouts.

The Use of this Hospital now is for a House of Correction, and to be a Place where all Strumpets, Night-walkers, Pick-pockets, vagrant and idle Persons, that are taken up for their ill Lives, as also incorrigible and disobedient Servants, are committed by the Mayor and Aldermen, who are Justices of the Peace in this City; and being so committed, are forced to beat Hemp in publick View, with due Correction of Whipping; according to their Offence, for such a Time as the President and Court shall see Cause: The Court-Day being generally every Friday in the Forenoon.

And to this Hospital are sent several Youths as Apprentices to Glovers, Flax-dressers, Weavers, &c. who there reside; and these are clad in blue Doublets and Breeches, with white Hats. Having faithfully served their Time of seven Years, they have not only their Freedom, but also ten Pounds each, towards carrying on their their respective Trades, and many of them have, from nothing, arrived to be Governors themselves.

Bridewell
burnt.

In the Year 1666 this House was burnt, and all the Apartments belonging to it; as also all the Dwelling-houses in the Precinct of Bridewell, which were about two Thirds of the Revenue of the House: But the Governors, till the Hospital could be rebuilt, made Provision for the several Arts-Masters and their Apprentices, in Places remote from the City. And now the Chapel, Court-house, Work-houses, and Dwelling-houses, within the said Hospital, by the Care and Pains of the worthy Governors at the Time of building them, are more convenient than ever. The Reparations, Rebuilding, and other incident Charges, occasioned by the Fire, amounted to above six thousand Pounds. Besides the great Loss that this House sustained by the Fire in 1666, their Revenue was much impaired by two other Fires that happened at Wapping, where a great many Tenements belonging to it were burnt; the one in June 1673, and the other in November 1682.

Its Chapel.

There is a Chapel belonging to Bridewell Precinct, which was enlarged and beautified at the proper Cost and Charge of the Governors and Inhabitants of this Precinct, in the Year of our Lord 1620; Sir Thomas Middleton being then President, and Mr. Thomas Johnson Treasurer of this Hospital.

The Enlargement was by taking in of a large Room, that, before the Date above-named, joined upon the Head of the Chapel: This Ground adding to the Length of it (at the full Breadth going with it) twenty-four Feet, and better.

This Room thus taken in, trimmed, beautified, and consecrated, was made a handsome Chapel, it being before a Room empty, waste, rude, and unsightly, though then in the Use deserving a fair Commendation; for then the Ground that is now a Chancel to the Prisoners of the House, was a Chapel, into which, every Sabbath, thro' a bye or backward Passage, they were brought from their several Lodgings to hear divine Service and Sermons.

This Edward of fair Memory the Sixt,
In whom, with Greatness, Goodness was commixt,
Gave this Bridewel, a Palace in old Times,
For a chastising House of vagrant Crimes.

In this Chapel also was Queen Elizabeth's Monument, with the common Verses:

Here lies her Type, &c.

But being destroyed by the Fire in the Year 1666, it was re-edified, and finished Anno 1668, in the Manner hereafter described.

It is a very pleasant Chapel, having a square Roof, and two Galleries at the North and West Sides, supported by Columns of the Tuscan Order; at which West End are Places for the Hospital Boys, and others for the Prisoners. The Walls are Brick; the Wainscot and Finishing very neat. The Altar-Piece consists of two Pilasters, with their Entablature and circular Pediment of the Corinthian Order; between which are the Commandments done in Gold on Black, and the Lord's Prayer and Creed in Gold on Blue, in gilt Frames, and farther enriched with gilt Cherubims, Leaves, Fruit, &c. carved in Relievo. The Chancel was paved with black and white Marble at the first Building, but now the whole Floor of the Chapel is paved in the same Manner. The last Part, with a handsome Pair of Iron Gates, were the Gift of Sir William Withers.

To this Chapel and Precinct belong the following Officers: The Rev. Mr. Gibbons, Preacher, chosen by the Governors; the Reader, the Rev. Mr. Jenkins; two Chapel-Wardens, one in the House, the other in the Precinct; and one Constable living within the House, generally the Porter thereof.

Here are Prayers Wednesdays, Fridays, and Holidays, at Ten in the Forenoon.

In the Court-Room is a Chair for the President, and convenient Seats for the Governors: It is adorned with Columns of the Composite Order, a Gallery, &c. but the most valuable Embellishments are the several handsome Tables, wherein the Names of the Benefactors are deciphered in Gold Letters.

Court-Room.

Over the Door, at the Entrance, is this Inscription:

"This Chapel, Court-Room, and Parlour,
"were repaired and beautified in the Year 1706;
"Sir Thomas Rawlinson, Lord-Mayor, then President; Thomas Gardiner, Esq; Treasurer."

And over the Gates going into the Chapel:

"These Iron Gates, and the Marble Pavement, were the Gift of the Right Worshipful
"Sir William Withers, Knt. and Alderman, President of this Hospital, Anno Dom. 1713."

The whole Management of the Affairs in this Hospital is by the Governors, who are above three hundred, besides the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen, all Gentlemen of the greatest Reputation and Substance in the City and elsewhere, and who are likewise Governors of the Hospital of Bethlem.

Govern-
ment.

The President is William Benn, Esq; Alderman.

The Treasurer, Robert Alsop, Esq; Alderman.

Court-Clerk, John Taylour, Esq;

There are, besides, the following Officers: A Steward, a Porter, a Matron, and four Beadles, the youngest of whom is to give Correction to the Criminals.

The Account of Bridewell, brought in for the Year 1704, was as follows:

Bridewell Hospital, the State of it Anno 1754.

Received this Year into the Hospital of Bridewell, Vagrants, and other indigent and miſerable People, all which have had Phyſick, and other Relief, at the Charge of the faid Hospital, as their Neceſſities required, three hundred and forty-one.

(2.) The Hoſpital of St. Bartholomew, ſituate on the South-Eaſt Side of Smithfield, which is incorporated by the Name of the Hoſpital of the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens of London, Governors for the Poor, called Little St. Bartholomew's, near Weſt Smithfield. It was erected for ſick and maimed People, where great Care is taken of them, and all Neceſſaries for Food, Lodging, Attendance, Phyſick, and Medicaments, proper for their Cure, adminiſtred; for they have good able Phyſicians and Surgeons provided, belonging to the Hoſpital, who give their conſtant Attendance as Occaſion requirés; and they have Matrons and Nurſes to look to them, and to ſee that they have what is convenient.

There belongs alſo to the Hoſpital an Apothecary, to provide and prepare what the Phyſicians direct: And the Diſeaſed are duly viſited by them in their Wards where they are lodged every Morning and Evening, as there is Need; every one having a Bed to himſelf; and, by the Care of the Matrons, the Wards are always kept clean and neat.

It formerly belonged to the Priory of St. Bartholomew in Smithfield, founded by one Rabere, the King's Minſtrel, a witty Gentleman, belonging to King Henry I. about the Year 1102; and he was himſelf the firſt Prior. See the Priory of St. Bartholomew.

It was governed by a Maſter and eight Brethren, and four Siſters, to take Care of the Poor of the faid Hoſpital.

Both Priory and Hoſpital were diſſolved under King Henry VIII. who, in the laſt Year of his Reign, founded the Hoſpital a-new; for the Relief of an hundred Poor and Sick of the City of London, endowing it with the yearly Revenue of five hundred Marks, conditionally, that the City alſo, for their Part, ſhould add other five hundred Marks by the Year; which Thing, with all due Thankfulneſs, they received at his Maſteſty's Hands, and embraced the Condition: But, when the City took a Survey of what was given by the King for this yearly Sum, they found the Raiſing of this five hundred Marks Rent to lie only in certain Houſes, ſome in great Decay, and ſome rotten and ruinous, and ſome, to whom better Tenants had happened, already leaſed out at Terms and Rent, ſcarce reaſonable for the Be- hoof of the Poor; ſo that to make them again worth the wonted Revenue, and then to continue in the ſame, was no ſmall Charge. Penſions alſo were iſſuing out of the five hundred Marks, and granted by Letters Patents of that King to the Hoſpitaller there, and to other Miniſters of the ſame.

In this Hoſpital itſelf was found only ſo much Furniture towards the ſuccouring of theſe hundred Poor, as ſerved three or four Harlots then lying in Childbed, and no more; ſo much had the godly Meaning of that King been abuſed in thoſe Days. The Citizens, nevertheless, were not diſcouraged with the evil Doings of others, and the great Fall of their Hopes, but provided with what Speed they could to the Redreſs of the Decays, Diſorders, and Defaults, and beſtowed thereabout not much leſs than a thouſand Pounds; whereby, whereby, in King Edward's Time, it came to such a Point that it was fit to receive the Number, and to succour them with all Necessaries requisite, and accordingly received them and maintained them: But, within five Years after the Citizens had the Care of this Hospital, they were, and even in Pulpits, exclaimed against, as if they had wronged this Charity, by this mistaken Supposition, that this Hospital should have made a general Sweep of all Poor and Afflicted; and so for their Care were rewarded with nothing but open Detraction.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

In this Season, notwithstanding, were healed of the Pox, Fistulas, filthy Blains, and Sores, to the Number of eight hundred, and thence safe delivered, that others having Need might enter in their Rooms; besides eight score and twelve that died there in their intolerable Miseries, which might have died and stunk in the Noses of the City.

Upon this Slander, so widely spread, it was thought good by the Lord-Mayor, as chief Patron and Governor of this Hospital, in the Name of the City, to publish at that Time who were the Overseers, and with the Orders by him appointed, and from Time to Time practised and used, by twelve of the Citizens most antient in their Courses, for the Redress and Stay of such Slanders, and that it might be an open Witness unto all Men how well Things were administered there, and by whom, and likewise to excite all well-disposed Persons more and more to bestow their Charity here.

And because these Men, that thus spoke against the Management of this Hospital, endeavoured to stop any further Charities and Gifts towards it, suggesting that there was enough already for this hundred of diseased People to be looked after, it was declared that the City, of their endless Good-will towards this most necessary Succour of their poor Brethren in Christ, altho' at the first they seemed bound to the precise Number of an hundred and no more, wished all Men to be most assuredly persuaded, that, if by any Means possible they might, they desired to enlarge the Benefit to a thousand.

At the first Erection, the Hospital was taken Care of by two Ranks of Persons, viz. Governors and Officers, which latter were hired for Wages, to have the necessary Doings in the Service of the House.

ment.

I. The Governors. Among them the Lord-Mayor was chief Patron; the others were so changed, that the one Half remained two Years in their Governance, and they were in Number twelve, who were placed there by the Lord-Mayor; whereof four were Aldermen, the Residue Commoners, thus named:

The President, always a senior Alderman.

Surveyors four, two Aldermen and two Commoners.

Almoners four, one Alderman and three Commoners.

The Treasurer, a Commoner.

Scrutiners two, both Commoners.

II. Officers continuable or removeable, as the Governors shall see Cause, were,

I. The Hospitaler.

II. The Renter Clerk.

III. The Butler.

IV. The Porter.

V. The Matron.

VI. The Sisters, twelve.

VII. The Beadles, eight.

There were also three Surgeons in Wages of the Hospital, giving daily Attendance upon the Cures, and a Minister, who was the Visitor of Newgate, according to his Office and Charge.

The Governors were always elected by the Lord-Mayor, and his Brethren the other Governors, who yearly elected six, that is to say, two Aldermen and four Commoners, who were admitted into the Hospital after this Manner: The whole Company of the twelve old Governors sitting in Assembly together, cause their Clerk to read unto the six newly elected their Charge. That done, and the new elected consenting and yielding themselves to the Charge, the Half of the Governors that had fulfilled their two Years Governance stood apart, and the other half that remained, with the new elected, took them by the Hands after their Degrees, and so admitted them, and before they parted all dined together, as well those that came a-new, as those that had governed their Time, and those that remained, every Man at his own Cost and Charge.

As for the Charges of St. Bartholomew's, in the Charges. Reign of King Edward VI, there were Certain Charges, and Uncertain: Under the Uncertain came the Monies laid out for Shirts, Smocks, and other Apparel for the Poor, for Sugar and Spices, for Caudles for the Sick, Flax for Shirts, and Weaving of the same Cloth for Winding-Sheets, Bowls, Brooms, Baskets, Incense, Juniper Ashes to buck their Cloaths; also Money given to them at their Departure, which was measured according to their Journey and Need; which Uncertain Charges amounted one Year to the Sum of sixty Pounds.

The Certain Charges rose from the yearly Wages and Fees of Officers and Servants, and the Charges of Household Reparations, &c.

The following is the Form of the Charge before-said, that was used to be given to the new Governors when they were admitted; which the whole Company of the twelve old Governors, sitting in Assembly together, caused their Clerk to read unto the six newly elected:

"It may please you to understand, that ye are "here elected and chosen, as Fellow-Governors
"of this Hospital, to continue by the Space of "two Years; by all which Time, according to "such laudable Decrees and Ordinances as have "been and shall be made by the Authority of the "Lord-Mayor, Chief Patron hereof, in the "Name of the City, and the Consent of the Go"vernors for the Time being, all your other "Business set a-part, as much as you possibly
"may, ye shall endeavour yourselves to attend
"only upon the needful Doings of this House,
"with such a loving and careful Diligence as "shall become the faithful Ministers of God,
"whom ye chiefly, in this Vocation, are ap"pointed to serve, and to whom, for your
"Negligences or Defaults herein, ye shall ren"der an Account; for truly ye cannot be blame"less before God, if, after you have set your "Hand to this good Plough, and promised your "Diligence to the Poor, ye shall contrariwise
"turn your Head backward, and not perform
"the Succour that Christ looketh for at your "Hands, and hath witnessed to be done to "himself, with these Words: *Whatsoever ye
"do to one of these needy Persons for my Name's
"Sake, the same ye do unto me: And otherwise, if ye "neglect and despise them, ye despise me.*

"We therefore require and desire every of "you, on God's Behalf, and in his most holy "Name, that ye endeavour yourselves, to the "best of your Wit and Powers, so to comfort,
"order, and govern this House, and the Poor
"thereof, that at the last Day ye may appear "before the Face of God, as true and faithful

No. 83.

"Stewards and Disposers of all such Things as "shall, for the Comfort and Succour of them,
"(during the Time of your Office) be commit"ted to your Credit and Charge. And this we "do require you faithfully to promise in the "Sight of God, and Hearing of your Brethren;
"and, in so doing, we here admit you into our "Fellowship."

And so likewise had all the Officers, superior and inferior, their respective Charges in a certain Form of Words given them, but too long to be here set down.

There was also a pious Form of Thankf-giving, which the Diseased, being cured, and to be discharged the Hospital, were to repeat upon their Knees in the Hall, before the Hospitaler and two Masters of the House at the least, having learned it without Book, according to the Hospitaler's Charge, which was as follows:

"We magnify and praise thee, O Lord,
"that so mercifully and favourably hast looked "upon us, miserable and wretched Sinners,
"which have so highly offended thy Divine
"Majesty, that we are not worthy to be num"bered among thy elect and chosen People.
"Our Sins, being great and grievous, are daily
"before our Eyes. We lament and are sorry
"for them, and, with sorrowful Heart and la"mentable Tears, we call and cry unto thee for "Mercy. Have Mercy upon us, O Lord,
"have Mercy upon us, and, according to thy "great Mercy, wipe away the Multitude of "our Sins: And grant us now, O Lord, thy
"most holy and working Spirit, that, setting
"aside all Vice and Idleness, we may in thy "Fear walk, and go forward in all Virtue and "Godliness.

"And for that thou hast moved, O Lord,
"the Hearts of godly Men, and the Governors
"of this House, to shew their exceeding Cha"rity towards us, in curing our Maladies and "Diseases, we yield most humble and hearty
"Thanks to thy Majesty, and shall incessantly
"laud and praise thy most holy and glorious
"Name, beseeching thee, most gracious and "merciful Lord, according to thy holy Word
"and Promise, so to bless thine own Dwelling-
"House, and the faithful Ministers thereof,
"that there be here found no Lack, but that
"their Riches and Substance may increase;
"that thy holy Name may thereby be the more
"praised and glorified: To whom be all Laud,
"Honour, and Glory, World without End.
"Amen."

Above an hundred Years ago this Hospital maintained about three hundred poor diseased
People, at the yearly Charge of two thousand Pounds.

Although the old Hospital then standing wholly escaped the dreadful Fire in 1666, yet a great Part of its Revenues being in Houses in London, suffered much thereby. Notwithstanding, such hath been the Care of the Governors, the Diligence and Industry of the Physicians and Surgeons, and the Supplies of several good Benefactors, that there have been yearly received in here many maimed and sick Seamen and Soldiers, with other diseased Persons, from divers

Parts of the King's Dominions, and some from foreign Parts, and many cured, and relieved with Money, and other Necessaries, at their Departure, besides their Diet and Lodging during their Cure.

Their Courts. This Hospital contains two spacious Courts, for the Harbour of these poor sick and maimed Persons.

Their Hospitals abroad. There is also a Building belonging to it, called The President's Building, for cutting of the Stone. They have also an House in Kent-street in Southwark; and another at Kingland in the Parish of Hackney. Besides, there are many other Patients on whom is bestowed the Charity of their Medicines.

The Numbers here harboured and cured. By comparing the Cures here done in several Years past one with another, and the constant Numbers that are harboured here, a new Estimate may be given of the annual Charges of this Hospital; for, one Year with another, there are seldom less than fifteen hundred Persons cured, and seldom are there less in it than two hundred and fifty Persons, says my Author in 1700. But Several new Wards built. The true Report in 1717 informed us, that this Hospital had been lately enlarged by several new Wards built; and so made capable of receiving a much greater Number of Patients than formerly, whereby the constant annual Charge thereof is much increased, and the ordinary Revenues thereof are much lessened by the dreadful Fire; and so becomes a very fit Object of the Charity of all good Men, towards preserving the Lives of many miserable People, who otherwise must perish.

Benefactors. To this Hospital divers honourable and other worthy charitable People have contributed their Benevolence; and to signalize the same, and to put others in Mind to follow so good an Example, the Governors did think fit to have their Names fairly wrote with a Pencil in Oil, on both Sides of the publick Passage, from Smithfield to Christ-Church Hospital, at a convenient Height from the Ground, to be read by Passengers.

The Governors, Anno 1691, repaired and beautified this Hospital, and in the publick Passage through the same caused the Names of their Benefactors to be fairly written.

In this Hospital of St. Bartholomew's, as also that of St. Thomas in Southwark, not only poor People of the City and Southwark, but the distressed of any other Parts of the King's Dominions, and from foreign Countries, are taken in, and taken Care of; and, when they depart, receive Money, and other Necessaries, to carry them to their respective Parishes, or Places of Abode.

In the Year 1704 there were 2264-Patients cured and discharged, 165 buried, and remained 363 under Cure.

In 1705 there were 2274 Patients cured and discharged, 160 buried, and remained 373 under Cure.

In 1706 there were 2282 Patients cured and discharged, 147 buried, and remained 370 under Cure.

In 1707 there were 2293 Patients cured and discharged, 141 buried, and remained 371 under Cure.

In 1711 there were 2397 Patients cured and discharged, 118 buried, and remained 366 under Cure.

In 1717 there were 2745 Patients cured and discharged, 207 buried, and remained 517 under Cure.

In 1718 there were 3088 Patients from different Parts of the Kingdom, and Foreigners, cured and discharged, 198 buried, and remained 513 under Cure.

The State of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in the Year 1754.

There have been cured and discharged from St. Bartholomew's Hospital during the last Year, six thousand seven hundred and three poor, wounded, maimed, sick, and diseased Persons; many of whom have been relieved with Money, Cloaths, and other Necessaries, to enable them to return to their several Habitations.

Trusses given by a private Hand, seventy-four. Trusses given by the Hospital, forty-three.

Buried this Year, after much Charge in their Illness, two hundred and eighty.

Remaining under Cure, at the Charge of this Hospital, six hundred and forty-nine.

So that there have been during the last Year, and now are, under the Cure of this Hospital, of poor, sick, and lame Persons, destitute of all other Relief, in all seven thousand seven hundred and forty-nine.

This Hospital being the most antient Hospital in the City of London, and the Suburbs thereof, and having escaped the great Fire in the Year 1666; the Buildings whereof were by Length of Time become so ruinous and dangerous, that in the Year 1729 there appeared to be an absolute Necessity to rebuild the same. And a Subscription was then entered into by many of the worthy Governors, and other charitable Persons, for defraying the Expence thereof, upon a Plan then prepared, containing four detached Piles of Building, to be joined by Stone Gateways about a Court or Area: Three Piles whereof have been erected and finished by the Money arising from the Subscriptions, and the Benefactions of the Governors, and other charitable Persons, given for that Purpose only. See the Plan.

One of the said Piles doth contain a large Hall for the Resort of the Governors at general Courts; a Compting-house for the Meeting of the Committees of Governors for the Dispatch of the Business of the Hospital; several Rooms for examining, admitting, prescribing for and discharging the Patients, and other necessary Offices. The other two Piles do contain Wards for the Reception of the Patients and their Nurses only; so that the Hospital, being so considerably enlarged, doth now entertain four hundred and twenty Patients within the same, besides sixty-six Patients in the Lock and King'sland Hospitals, and a great Number of Out-Patients.

But as the constant annual Charge of maintaining and relieving the great Number of Poor, now under the Care of this Hospital, much exceeds the Revenue thereof, which is likewise greatly lessened by the Fall of the Rents of the Houses belonging to the Hospital; the charitable Assistance of all Persons is therefore humbly desired to enable the Governors, not only to support the present Charity, but also to accomplish the further Enlargement thereof, there not being yet sufficient Room to admit all the Poor who daily apply for Relief: A Charity so necessary for preserving the Lives of many miserable Persons, who might otherwise perish, were it not for that Relief, which, by the Blessing of God, they daily receive from this Hospital, in 1755.

The Names of the President, Treasurer, and Officers belonging to this Hospital.

The Right Worshipful John Blackford, Knt. and Alderman, President.

John Tuff, Esq; Treasurer.

The Reverend Mr. Monro, Vicar.

Dr. William Pitcairne, Dr. Robert Pate, Dr. Anthony Askew, F. R. S. Physicians.

Markets.

Eighthly, Here are two Markets, one of which for Spaciousness and the Business transacted therein, and the other for its Neatness and Regularity, not to be equalled in any other Part of the Kingdom.

(1.) The former is that large Square of Smithfield, i. e. a plain or smooth Field, which, tho' it is much reduced in its Compass by the Buildings on the North and West Sides, is and was a most capacious Market for black Cattle, Sheep, Horses, Hay and Straw, even 500 Years ago. The antient state of this Field may be collected from the various Uses it served in those Times, and is as follows:

The rest of Smithfield, from Long-lane End to the Bars, is inclosed with Inns and large Tenements. On the West Side is Chicken-lane, down to Cowbridge. Then are the Pens or Folds, so called of Sheep there parted, and penned up, to be fold on the Market-Days.

Then was Smithfield-pond, which of old Time, in Records, was called Horse-pool; for that Men watered Horses there, and was a great Water. In the sixth of Henry V. a new Building was made in the West Part of Smithfield, betwixt the said Pool and the River of the Wells, or Turnmill-brook, in a Place then called The Elms; for that there grew many Elm-Trees, and had been the Place of Execution for Offenders. Since which Time the Building there hath been so increased, that, saith Stow in his Time, now not one Tree remaineth growing.

This Place was in Use for Executions in the Year 1219, and, as it seems, long before; by a Clause Roll 4 Henry III. wherein Mention is made of Furca facta apud Ulmellos Com. Middlesex, ubi prius facta fuerunt.

In Cowbridge-street, or Cow-lane, was the Inn or London Lodging of the Prior of Scrimpringham.

The rest of that West Side of Smithfield hath several large Inns, and other good Buildings up to Hesier-lane, which turns down towards Holborn, till it meets with Cow-lane.

Stow saith, by these Incroachments, and this Inclosure of Smithfield, there remained but a small Portion for the old Uses, viz. for Markets of Horses and Cattle; nor for military Exercises, as Joustings, Tournings, and great Triumphs, which had been there performed before the Princes and Nobility, both of this Realm and foreign Countries.

For Example: In the Year 1357, 31 Edward III. great and royal Jufts were then holden in Smithfield; there being present the Kings of England, France and Scotland, with many other Nobles and great Estates of divers Lands.

In the Year 1362, 36 Edward III. on the first five Days of May, in Smithfield were Jufts holden, the King and Queen being present; with the most Part of the Chivalry of England and of France, and of other Nations; to the which came Spaniards, Cyprians and Armenians, knightly requesting Aid of the King of England against the Pagans that invaded their Confines.

The 48th of Edward III. Dame Alice Perrers, or Pierce, (the King's Concubine) as Lady of the Sun, rode from the Tower of London, through Cheap, accompanied by many Lords and Ladies; every Lady leading a Lord by his Horse's Bridle, till they came into West-Smithfield; and then began a great Just, which lasted for seven Days. See Page 132.

Also

Smithfield.

The Elms in Smithfield the common Place of Execution.

Also the 9th of Richard II. was the like great Riding from the Tower to Westminster, and every Lord led a Lady's Horse's Bridle; and in the Morning began the Jufts in Smithfield, which lasted three Days. Henry of Darby, the Duke of Lancaster's Son, the Lord Beaumont, Sir Simon Burley, and Sir Paris Courtney, all behaved well.

In the 14th of Richard II. royal Jufts and Tournaments were proclaimed to be done in Smithfield; to begin on Sunday next after the Feast of St. Michael. Many Strangers came forth out of other Countries; namely, Valerian, Earl of St. Paul, that had married King Richard's Sister; the Lady Maud Courtney, and William the young Earl of Ostervant, Son to Albert of Baviere, Earl of Holland and Hainault.

At the Day appointed, there issued forth of the Tower, about the third Hour of the Day, sixty Courfers, apparelled for the Jufts; and upon every one an Esquire of Honour riding a soft Pace. Then came forth sixty Ladies of Honour, mounted upon Palfreys riding on the one Side, richly apparelled; and every Lady led a Knight with a Chain of Gold. Those Knights, being on the King's Party, had their Armour and Apparel garnished with white Harts, and Crowns of Gold about the Harts Necks; and so they came riding through the Streets of London to Smithfield, with a great Number of Trumpets and other Instruments of Musick before them. The King and Queen, who were lodged in the Bishop's Palace of London, were come from thence, with many great Estates, and placed in Chambers to see the Jufts. The Ladies that led the Knights were taken down from their Palfreys, and went up to Chambers prepared for them. Then alighted the Esquires of Honour from their Courfers, and the Knights in good Order mounted upon them. And after the Helmets were set on their Heads, and being ready in all Points, Proclamation made by the Heralds, the Jufts began; and many commendable Courses were run, to the great Pleasure of the Beholders. These Jufts continued many Days, with great Feasting, as ye may read in Froissard. See Page 178.

In the Year 1393, the 17th of Richard II. certain Lords of Scotland came into England to get Worship by Force of Arms; the Earl of Mar challenged the Earl of Nottingham to juft with him; and so they rode together certain Courses, but not the full Challenge; for the Earl of Mar was cast, both Horse and Man, and two of his Ribs broken with the Fall; so that he was conveyed out of Smithfield, and so towards Scotland, but died by the Way at York.

Sir William Darell, Knt. the King's Banner-Bearer of Scotland, challenged Sir Piercy Courtney, Knt. the King's Banner-Bearer of England; and when they had run certain Courses, gave over without Conclusion of Victory. Then Cookborne, Esq; of Scotland, challenged Sir Nicholas Hawberke, Knt. and rode five Courses, but Cookborne was borne over Horse and Man, &c.

In the Year 1409, the 10th of Henry IV. a great Play was played at Skinner's-well, which lasted eight Days; where were to see the same the most Part of the Nobles and Gentlemen of England. And forthwith began a royal Justing in Smithfield between the Earl of Somerset and the Se-neschal of Hainault, Sir John Cornwall, Sir Richard Arundel, and the Son of Sir John Cheyney, against certain Frenchmen. See Page 185. And the same Year a Battle was fought in Smithfield; the one called Gloucester, Appellant; and the other Arthure, Defendant; they fought valiantly, but the King took up the Quarrel into his Hands, and pardoned them both.

In the Beginning of Henry the Vth's Reign, another memorable Encounter happened here in Smithfield between Robert Carey, of the West, Son of Sir John Carey, Knt. and a foreign Knight, called Aragonese, one of the Kingdom of Aragon; who having performed many noble Atchievements in other Countries, at last visited England, where he challenged many Persons of his Rank and Quality to make Trial of his Skill in Arms. The said Robert Carey accepted his Challenge. Between them was waged a cruel Encounter, and a long and doubtful Combat; but at last he was vanquished by the English Gentleman, who was therefore knighted by the King, and restored to Part of his Father's Inheritance; who having been Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer in King Richard the IId's Time, and taking Part with him, had forfeited his Estate. And whereas by the Law of Heraldry (says my Author) whosoever fairly in the Field conquered his Adversary, might justify the wearing and bearing of his Arms whom he overcame; he accordingly took on him the Coat Armour of this Aragonese, being Argent, on a Bend Sable, three Roses of the first; which is ever since borne by the Name of Carey, whose antient Coat of Arms was, Gules, a Chevron, Argent, between three Swans proper; one whereof they still retain in their Crest.

In the Year 1430, the 8th of Henry VI. the 14th of January, a Battle was fought in Smithfield within the Lifts before the King, between two Men of Feversham in Kent, John Upton, Notary, Appellant; and John Downe, Gentleman, Defendant. See Page 189.

In the Year 1442, the 20th of Henry VI. the 30th of January, a Challenge was done in Smithfield within the Lifts before the King; one being Sir Philip la Beaufe, of Aragon, Knt. the other an Esquire of the King's House, called John Ansley, or Antsley. They came to the Field all armed; the Knight with his Sword drawn, and the Esquire with his Spear; which Spear he cast against the Knight, but the Knight avoided it with his Sword, and cast it to the Ground. Then the Esquire took his Axe, and smote many Blows on the Knight, and made him let fall his Axe, and brake up his Uniber three times, and would have smote him on the Face with his Dagger to have slain him; but then the King cried, Hold, and so they parted. The King made John Ansley a Knight, and the Knight of Aragon offered his Harness at Windsor.

In the Year 1467, the 7th of Edward IV. the the Bastard of Burgoine challenged the Lord Scales, Brother to the Queen, to fight with him both on Horseback and on Foot. The King therefore caused Lifts to be prepared in Smithfield, the Length of 120 Taylors Yards, and 10 Feet; and in Breadth 80 Yards, and 20 Feet; double barred, 5 Feet between the Bars, the Timber-Work whereof cost 200 Marks, besides the fair and costly ly Galleries prepared for the Ladies, and others: At which martial Exercise the King and Nobility were present. See Page 205.

All this Time this Square was used likewise for a Market-Place for Cattle, Hay, Straw, and other necessary Provisions; and (once in the Year) at Bartholomew-tide for a general Fair, commonly called Bartholomew-fair. But in Regard that it was continually subject to the Iniquity of Weather, and being a Place of good Extent, it pleased the King's Majesty (James I.) with the Advice of his honourable Lords of the Council, to write graciously to the Lord-Mayor, and the Aldermen his Brethren, in the Year 1614, that Smithfield might be sufficiently paved. See P. 295.

Besides the paving of this Place all over, and levelling it, (which being in such a rude foul Condition, it was before thought impossible to be done) it was greatly raised and mounted in the Middle, whereby it became a very fair, clean, and spacious Walk: And divers Conveyances were made for the Water from the new Channels, made by the Reason of the Pavement. It was also strongly railed on all Sides; and the Middle had also substantial Rails round about, for the better Safety of Passengers, and for the Security of such as should walk there, from the Danger of Coaches, Carts, Horses, Oxen, and other Cattle, of which Smithfield is seldom empty.

Bartholomew Fair.

King Henry II. granted to the Priory of St. Bartholomew the Privilege of a Fair to be kept yearly at Bartholomew-tide for three Days, viz. the Eve, the Day, and the Morrow; to which the Clothiers of England and Drapers of London repaired, and had their Booths and Standings within the Church-yard of this Priory, closed in with Walls and Gates, locked every Night, and watched, for the Safety of Men's Goods and Wares. A Court of Piepowders was daily, during the Fair, holden for Debts and Contracts.

The Custos of the City, Ralph Sandwich, Anno 1295, had a Contest with the Prior of St. Bartholomew's about the Customs and Benefits of this Fair, claiming all the Customs the Morrow after St. Bartholomew's Day, and Half of them on the Eve before the said Day. See Pages 107 and 712.

This Field, as it had antiently been (as was said before) a Place of honourable Exercises of Jufts and Tournaments, so loose Serving-Men would commonly meet here, and make Uproars and Quarrels; infomuch that it was many Years called Ruffians-Hall, being the usual Rendezvous of Ruffians and Quarrellers, during the Time that Swords and Bucklers were used: When every Serving-Man carried a Buckler at his Back, which hung by the Hilt or Pommel of his Sword, hanging before him.

The Fair kept here, instead of three Days, was at length prolonged to a Fortnight; and became of little other Use than for idle Youth and loose People to resort to, and to spend their Money in Vanity; and (that which was worse) in Debaucheries and Drunkenness, Whoredom, and in seeing and hearing Things not fit for Christian Eyes and Ears; many of the Houses and Booths here serving only to allure Men and Women to such Purposes of Impiety. Therefore the Magistracy often intending fully, at last resolved, in the Year 1708, to reduce the Fair to that Space of Time only, according to which it was at first granted, that is, to three Days; and accordingly an Order was made. And at a Court of Common-Council in June, the said Year, when some Petitions were offered for revoking the former Order, upon certain Inconveniencies, as the great falling of the Rents in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and of the great Losses that many of the Inhabitants in and about West-Smithfield must suffer; yet, upon the Consideration of the great Mischiefs and Disorders that had arisen by the long Continuance of the said Fair, the Petitions for prolonging the Time were rejected, and the Order confirmed. Whereby the Fair was to be kept for three Days only, for selling of Merchandizes, according to the original Grants from the Crown; which Regulation, though it has been sometimes broke, the chief Magistrate of late Years has strictly observed.

VOL. II. Numb. LXXIV.

The Business transacted in Smithfield Market may be partly collected from the several Estimates or Accounts of the Number of Cattle, Sheep, &c. sold therein, recorded in the Beginning of this second Book.

(2) The other is Fleet Market, situate on the Place where of late was the new Canal, between Holborn-bridge, and the Bridge commonly called Fleet-bridge, at the Bottom of Ludgate-hill. It is adapted to the Sale of Butchers Meat by Retail, Poultry, Fish, Herbs, Fruits, Butter, Cheese, Eggs, &c. The Stalls range in two Rows of an equal Height, with a handsome Walk between, the whole Length from North to South, and secured from the Weather. In the Centre is a neat Lanthorn with a Clock. The whole is paved with Rag Stones; and the Fruiterers Stands are made in the Form of Piazas, with proper Conveniencies to deposite their remaining Stock. See Pages 146 and 571.

Fleet Market.

Ninthly, A little to the South-West of Newgate, on the East Side of the Street called the Old-bailey, stands the Court-House for the Trial of Malefactors, for Crimes committed in the Cities of London and Westminster, and County of Middlesex. It is a Foundation of great Antiquity, as supposed to be a Corruption of Bail-hill, i. e. the Place of Trial for Prisoners; as now we retain the Name of the Bail-dock for a certain Part of this Court, in which the Malefactors are confined till called up to Trial, &c. The present Building is capacious. The Court-Room is a very large Square. There are many Apartments for the Entertainment and Conveniency of the Magistrates, &c. that attend the Court. Before it is a large Court-yard, and behind it a Garden-plot; and yet it has been known to be so offensive, by the Smell of the miserable Gaol-birds brought thither to be tried, and the Heat of the Breaths of the great Number of Spectators crowding on certain remarkable Trials in sultry Weather, that at one Time, a few Years ago, upwards of two hundred People caught such a Fever there, that they died in a few Days of a Disease that baffled the whole Art of Physick; amongst whom was a Judge, an Alderman, several of the Jury, &c.

Old-bailey Sessions-House.

On the East Side of Fleet Market, and a little to the South of Fleet-lane, stands the Fleet, a Prison-House, so called of the Fleet, or Water, running Fleet Prison.

running by it, and some Time flowing about it, but now vaulted over.

Richard I. in the first Year of his Reign, confirmed to Osbert (Brother to William Longshampe, Chancellor of England, and Elect of Ely) and to his Heirs for ever, the Custody of his House, or Palace, at Westminster, with the keeping of his Gaol of the Fleet, at London. Also King John, by his Patent, dated the third of his Reign, gave to S. Archdeacon of Wells, the Custody of the said King's House at Westminster, and his Gaol of the Fleet, together with the Wardship of the Daughter and Heir of Robert Leve-land, &c.

About the Year 1586, the Prisoners of the Fleet petitioned the Lords of the Council. The Warden had let and set to Farm the Victualling and Lodging of all the said House and Prison to one John Harvey; and the other Profits of the said Fleet he had let to one Thomas Newport, then Deputy there, under the Warden; and these two, being very poor Men, having neither Land, nor any Trade, to live by, nor any certain Wages of the said Warden; so that these, being also greedy of Gain, lived by Bribing and Extortion. And they did most shamefully extort and exact from the Prisoners, and raised new Customs, Fines and Payments, for their own Advantage; and cruelly used them, shutting them up in close Prisons, when they found Fault with their wicked Dealings, not suffering them to come and go within the said Prison, as they ought to do; nor permitting their Friends to come to them that should travel in their Causes for their better Relief; which, with other their abominable Misdemeanors, without Reformation, might be the poor Prisoners utter Undoing.

And for the doing these Wrongs with the greater Secrecy, they made away with a Book that was always ready to be shewed, containing all Orders and Constitutions of the said House; that all Men committed might see what they ought to have in the said Prison; and what every one ought to do, touching all Manner of Duties, Rights, Constitutions and Ordinances, to be observed and kept in the Fleet. The Customs of which Fleet were, that every Prisoner should have Meat, Drink, and other Necessaries and Commodities, and be well and decently used, as was meet for every Man's Degree.

All this the Prisoners set forth in their Petition; and therefore prayed their Lordships to appoint Commissioners to come to the Fleet, and examine Newport and Harvey; and to separate the one from the other, that they might have no Conference together; and so be examined severally, upon Interrogatories already prepared to be ministred to them; and that the Prisoners might be examined touching their Doings; and to take such good Order for the Redress thereof, as to their Lordships should seem convenient.

In the said Year 1586, a Commission was granted for the Relief of the Fleet. And for more convenient Use, the Recorder Fleetwood, by Commandment of the Archbishop of Canterbury, did abbreviate and explain it.

Further, in the Year 1593, the Prisoners of the Fleet preferred a Bill to the Parliament, touching the Orders and Reformation of the Fleet, which Joachim Newton, Deputy-warden, did all he could to hinder. They therefore petitioned the Lord Treasurer Burgbley to forward it; and to shew what Reason they had to exhibit this Bill, they sent a Paper of Articles, in Number twenty-eight, of the Murders and other Misdemeanors of the said Joachim.

In the Year 1729, great Complaints having been made of Abuses committed in this and other Prisons, a Committee of the House of Commons was appointed to make an Enquiry into the State of the Gaols; by whom such Enormities were discovered, that the Warden of the Fleet, John Huggins, Esq; and his Deputy, Thomas Bambridge, were turned out of their Offices, and committed to Newgate; and the former tried for the Murder of one of his Prisoners, by locking him in a Dungeon, without any Provision, either of Food or Raiment, where he perished in a deplorable Manner; but the Jury, upon the Trial, bringing in a special Verdict, he was afterwards acquitted. However, this occasioned an Act of Parliament for the better Regulation of Gaols for the future.

Near to the South Extremity of the Old-bailey, Hall. on the East Side, is lately erected by the Company of Surgeons a Hall or Theatre for transacting of Business, Dissections of human Bodies, and reading of Lectures in Anatomy. It is a very handsome Edifice of Brick and Stone; containing all Conveniences for such an useful and learned Body, and completed, as we are informed, by private Subscriptions among the free Surgeons of London. See the Elevation annexed.

The South-West Extremity of this Ward at the End of Fleet-street terminates with a very handsome Gate, called Temple-bar, Temple-bar. where in ancient Times were only Posts, Rails, and a Chain, such as now are at Holborn, Smithfield, and White-chapel-bars. Afterwards there was a House of Timber erected cross the Street, with a narrow Gate-way, and an Entry on the South Side of it, under the House. But, since the great Fire, there is erected a stately Gate, with two Posterns, one on each Side, for the Convenience of Foot-Passengers, with strong Gates to shut up in the Nights, and always good Store of Watchmen, the better to prevent Danger.

This Gate is built all of Portland Stone, of Rustick Work below, and of the Corinthian Order. Over the Gate-way, on the East Side, fronting the City of London, in two Niches are the Effigies, in Stone, of Queen Elizabeth, and King James I. very curiously carved, and the King's Arms over the Key-Stone of the Gate, the Supporters being at a Distance over the Rustick Work.

And on the West Side, fronting the City of Westminster, in two Niches, are the like Figures of King Charles I. and King Charles II. in Roman Habits. Through this Gate are two Passages for Foot-Passengers: One on the South, over which is engraven, Erected, Sir Samuel Starling being Maior. And another on the North, over which is engraven, Continued, Sir Richard Ford, Maior. Finished, Sir George Watterman, Maior.

The State, since the Erection of this Gate, has particularly distinguished it, by ordering the Heads of such as are executed for Rebellion or High-Treason to be fixed on the Top thereof.

Antiquities.
Smithfield Pond.

Between Hofier and Cow-lanes, in Smithfield, antiently was a large Pool of Water, called Smithfield Pond, or Horse-pool, from the Watering of Horses there: And to the South-West of which, in Cow-lane, where St. John's-court (the first Thorough-fare into Chick-lane, on the Right-Hand leading from Smithfield) is situate, stood the Gallows, or publick Place of Execution, denominated the Elms, from the great Quantity of such Trees growing in that Neighbourhood. But the Gallows being removed to the West End of the Suburbs, this Part of Smithfield was soon erected into Streets, Lanes, &c. among the first of which Buildings was that spacious and lofty wooden Edifice denominated Highball, lately standing in the said St. John's-court. This antient Structure of Wood and Stone was the City Residence of the Prior of Sempringham in Lincolnshire, as is evident by the Writings thereunto belonging in the Custody of Sir Harry Featherstone, wherein the said House is denominated Sempringham Head-house.

Elms.

In the Old-bailey, a little lower than the Sessions-house, was a large Cistern, with divers Cocks, which received the waste Water of the Prison of Ludgate, for the Use of the neighbouring Inhabitants.

New-Inn.

At the Corner of Seacoal-lane, in Fleet-lane, was situate an Inn of Chancery; but the same being found too remote from the Courts at Westminster, the Students removed to New-Inn near Drury-lane, in Wyck-street, for their greater Convenience. Part of the Stone Wall of this antient Inn is still to be seen, under the Houses of Bishop's and Green-arbour Courts in the said Seacoal-lane.

Conyer's MSS. in Bibl. Sir Hans Sloane.

In digging Fleet-ditch, in the Year 1670, between the Fleet-prison and Holborn-bridge, at the Depth of fifteen Feet, divers Roman Utensils were discovered; and a little deeper, a great Quantity of Roman Coins of Silver, Copper, Brasses, and all other Sorts of Metal, Gold excepted. Those of Silver were Ring-Money of divers Sizes; the largest about the Bigness of a Crown, but gradually decreasing; the smallest was about the Dimension of a Silver Two-pence, each having a yellow Snip in the Edge: And at Holborn-bridge were dug up two of their Brazen Lares, or Household-Gods, about four Inches in Length; which, by the Quality of the Soil they lay in, were almost incrusted with a petrifick Matter; one whereof was Ceres, and the other Bacchus. But the Coins lying at the Bottom of the Current, their Lustre was in a great measure preserved by the Water incessantly washing off the corroding Salt. 'Tis remarkable, that the Brasses Pins found in this Neighbourhood were mostly petrified; whilst those found at Fleet-bridge remained as bright as at first, notwithstanding their having lain many Ages in that Position.

I am of Opinion, that the great Quantity of Coin found in this Ditch was thrown in by the Roman Inhabitants of this City, (upon the Approach of Boadicea with her Army) for its Preservation: But all the Citizens, without Distinction of Age or Sex, being cruelly and barbarously massacred by the intraged Britons, it was not discovered till this Time:

Besides the above-named Antiquities, divers Things of a more modern Date were discovered, viz. Arrow-heads, Scales, Seals, (with the Proprietors Names in Saxon Characters thereon) Spurrowels of a Hand's Breadth, Keys, and Daggers, coated over with a livid petrifick Rust; together with a considerable Number of modern Medals, with Crosses, Crucifixes, and Ave-Maries engraven thereon; and Ship Counters, with large Saxon Characters.

Holborn, in the Conqueror's Survey, appears to have been a Village, situate in the Hundred of Osulvestane, or Osulston, denominated Holeburne, wherein the King had two Cotarii, or Cotagers, who paid to his Bailiff or Sheriff an annual Sum of twenty Denarii or Pence.

The Village of Holborn being erected on the Bank of the Brook or Bourn, (See Page 85) it gradually extended itself Westward, and communicated its Name to the long and spacious Street, which reaches from Holborn-bridge to St. Giles's.

Opposite St. Andrew's Church in Shoe-lane, was situate a large House denominated Holborn-hall; but when, or by whom erected, or why so denominated, I cannot learn, tho' by its Name it seems to have been the Manor-house.

Near to that House stood an Hospital, a Cell to the Monastery of Cluny in France; wherefore 'twas suppressed by Henry V. among other foreign Foundations.

Near the Church of St. Andrew, about the Year 1670, was discovered Part of a Roman Pavement tessellated, which is preserved in the Museum of the Royal Society.

Opposite the said Church in Holborn, where Scroop's-court is situate, antiently stood an Inn, denominated Scroop's or Serjeant's-Inn.

A little higher on the same Side of the Street stands the Bishop of Ely's City Mansion, which William de Luda, Bishop of that See, Anno 1297, bequeathed to the Use of his Successors, upon Condition, that his immediate Successor should give the Sum of one thousand Marks, as a Fund for the Support of three Chaplains to officiate in the Chapel there.

The Ground belonging to this House in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth consisted of an Orchard and Pasture of above forty Acres of Land, which was inclosed with a Wall; when the said Queen, at the Intreaty of Christopher Hatton, Esq; and Vice-Chamberlain of her Household, (and afterwards Lord Chancellor) prevailed upon Richard Cox, the then Bishop, to grant to the said Hatton the Western Part of his said House for the Term of twenty Years, on which he craftily laid out a considerable Sum of Money in repairing it after a sumptuous Manner; wherefore he applied to the Queen, to prevail upon the Bishop to alienate the same, with the spacious Garden behind it, to him; but Cox not being to be prevailed upon, that Affair was deferred till his Death; when the Temporalities devolving to the Crown, Elizabeth granted the said Apartments and Garden to the said Hatton and his Heirs for ever; which House being since pulled down, the long and spacious Street called Hatton-street, (vulgarly Hatton-garden) together with those of Kirby, the Great and Conduit.

Against the South End of Shoe-lane in ancient Time stood a Water-Conduit, whereof Will. Eastfield, some Time Mayor, was Founder. For the Mayor and Commonalty of London being possessed of a Conduit-Head, with divers Springs of Water gathered thereinto, in the Parish of Paddington, and the Water conveyed from thence, by Pipes of Lead, towards London from Tyburn, where it had lain for the Space of six Years and more; the Executors of Sir William Eastfield obtained Licence of the Mayor and Commonalty for them in the Year 1453, with the Goods of Sir William, to convey the said Waters, first in Pipes of Lead, into a Pipe begun to be laid beside the great Conduit-Head at Marybone, which stretches from thence to a Separal, late before made against the Chapel of Rounseval, by Charing-cross, and no further; and then from thence to convey the said Water into the City, and there to make Receipt or Receipts for the same, to the Common-weal of the Commonalty, viz. the Poor to drink, the Rich to dress their Meat; which Water was by them thus brought into Fleet-street, to a Standard which they had made and finished, 1471, near Shoe-lane.

Two Cisterns.

The Inhabitants of Fleet-street, in the Year 1478, obtained Licence of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, to make (at their own Charges) two Cisterns, the one to be set at the said Standard, the other at Fleet-bridge, for the Receipt of the waste Water. This Cistern at the Standard they built, and on the same a fair Tower of Stone, garnished with Images of St. Christopher on the Top, and Angels round about lower down, with sweet-sounding Bells before them; whereupon, by an Engine placed in the Tower, they, divers Hours of the Day and Night, with Hammers, chimed such an Hymn as was appointed.

This Conduit, or Standard, was again new built, with a large Cistern, at the Charges of the City, in the Year 1582.

This Conduit in Fleet-street, with some others built at the City's Charge, cost 2000 l.

Bishop of St. David's Residence.

At the East End of St. Bride's Church, and North Side of Bridewell, was situate the Bishop of St. David's Residence; and at the West End of the said Church stood the Bishop of Salisbury's City Mansion; which coming at last to the Earls of Dorset, was converted into Streets, Lanes, &c. now Salisbury-court, &c. At the lower End of Dorset-street, fronting the Thames, was erected a magnificent and spacious Theatre, wherein Plays were acted till the Abdication of King James II. A. D. 1688.

The White-friars, or the Friars of our Lady of Mount Carmel.

White-friars.

Before we treat of the House called White-friars in London, it will be requisite to say something of the Order of White-friars, or Carmelites, the Title of which Fraternity, is this, Fratres B. Mariæ de Monte Carmelo or Carmelite Friars.

This Order had its Original in Mount Carmel, in Syria, where Elias, and Eliseus, the Prophets, inhabited; there, in Process of Time, many Anchorets first settled themselves, who afterwards, by means of Almeric Bishop of Antioch, the Pope's Legate, were brought together; and having been there a long Time dispersed one from another, they were reduced to live together under one Government.

There was on that Mount, near to Elias's Fountain, a Church dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, where they laid the first Foundation of their Convent. There this Almeric built their first Monastery, Ann. 1121; for, before, they lived in Caves and Dens. Afterwards, this Order was brought into Europe, by Albert, Patriarch of Jerusalem, Legate to Pope Innocent III. about the Year 1216, who gave them a certain Rule to follow, taken much from the Rule of St. Basil.

Foundation of the Carmelites, or White-friars.

These Hermits of Mount Carmel first professed Begging in Europe, after the Dominicans and Minorites; and then they were permitted to preach and hear Confessions. Their Order was confirmed first by Pope Honorius III. or, as others say, Honorius IV. Pope Gregory IX. Innocent IV. and other Popes.

These Carmelites procured a Licence from the Pope to creep out of the Wilderness into the Cities, contrary to their first Institution; against which Course Nicholas Gallus wrote bitterly, deploring their State with pious Tears.

Pope Honorius (says Bale) granted to the Carmelites this Privilege, that they should be free from the Jurisdiction of all Princes and Bishops.

Tritheimius Abbas says, that the Colour of the Habit of this Order, at first, was White; whereby the inward Purity of the Brethren was signified, with such a Cloak, they say, as Elias was clad; and that Eliseus and the Children of the Prophets went in such a Habit. After many Years, when the Holy Land came into the Hands of the Infidels, the Brethren were forced to change their Habit, the Saracens compelling them thereunto, who held it lawful only for the Nobility to wear a white Garment; so, by Necessity changing their old Habit, they took to themselves Hoods streaked with two Colours, White and Black.

After many Years the Brethren were compelled, by the Malice of the Infidels, to depart out of the Holy Land; and then coming into Europe, that they might not seem ridiculous in a strange Habit, they resumed their old Habit, which is white, and which to this Day they use in their Convent, but wear a black Hood under it when they go abroad.

But some may desire to know why these Friars are called Brethren of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Mount Carmel; the Cause thereof is this: Not long after the Passion of our Lord, the Brethren of Mount Carmel built a Chapel on the Side of that Mount, to the Honour of the Mother of God, and chose her for the Advocate and Patron of their Order, and thereupon afterwards they were called her Brethren: As therefore they are called Carmelites, from Mount Carmel, so from the Chapel, which they built, they are, to this Day, called Brethren of the Blessed Virgin, the Mother of God. Thus Tritheimius.

However,

However, this is the more general and approved Opinion of the original Cause of this Title assumed by the Carmelites; yet some have affirmed that the Blessed Virgin Mary appeared to Simon Stock, one of their Order, and presented to him a Scapulary, saying, Receive, my Beloved, this Scapulary, which I give unto this Order, in Sign of my Fellowship; whereupon they usurped the Title of Fratres Ordinis beatæ Mariæ Virginis de Monte Carmelo.

This Scapulary is a narrow Piece of Cloth, which the Monks wear over their Habit, hanging down before and behind; and Mr. Fuller in his Church-History writes, that the Carmelites boast very much of this Stock; who, as he says, was a Kentish Man born, and being a Boy of twelve Years of Age, fed on Roots and wild Fruit in the Woods, and lived in the Trunk of an hollow Tree, from whence he had his Name Stock, who was afterwards Master-General of the Order of Carmelites, and is said to have been famous for Miracles; which, for Brevity sake, we omit, and only tell you what Bale (inter alia) says of him:

That this Simon Stock, hearing that the Carmelites were come into England, took a cheerful Journey to them, being then near eighty Years of Age; and, for the Fame of his Life and Doctrine, was entertained by them as one sent from Heaven; and in their next General Synod, which was held at Aylesford, in Kent, An. Dom. 1245, was made the universal President of their Order throughout Europe: Alen Amoric, who was their fifth President, resigning it to him, which, as General, he ruled about twenty Years, he went over into France, and in the hundredth Year of his Age died there, in Gascoigne, and was buried at Bordeaux, Anno 1265, or, as some say, 1266. After his Death, for his great Devotion and Holiness of Life, he was canonized a Saint, whose Festival is celebrated yearly, May 6.

Bale (who was a Carmelite Friar himself) says, that the Carmelites first began to be famous in Europe, Anno 1220. After that, Angelus Hierosolomit. (a Jew by Birth) an Hermit of that Order, had preached at Rome, that the Commonwealth of the Church should shortly be afflicted.

Moreover, Ralph Fresburne, a Carmelite Friar, says Bale, laid the first Foundation of the Society of the Carmelites in England, Ann. 1224; as Poet Mantuan, a Carmelite, writes, Lib. 8. and in his own Lordships founded the Priors near Alnwick in Northumberland, and in Aylesford in Kent, in 1240, which were the first Houses for these Carmelites in England. These Friars (says Bale) were not then shaven or anointed, nor did they observe single Life, nor Poverty, in England, for fourteen Years together after they had first built themselves Priors, or Convents, during which Time the said Ralph Fresburne was their Governor.

Fuller says, that Ralph Freeborn (so he names him) in the Reign of Richard I. brought over into England these Carmelite Friars, and placed them near Alnwick in Northumberland, in a Wilderness. Fuller, very probably, mistakes Rich. I. for Richard Duke of Cornwall, youngest Son of King John, under whom he had served as a Soldier against the Saracens.

The first Entrance of the Carmelites into England, says Lambard, was about the Middle of King Henry III. when they made their Nest at Newenden, in Kent; a woody and solitary Place.

When Milverton, the Provincial of the Carmelites in England, says Bale, was first imprisoned by Pope Paul II. about the Year 1460, both the School-Learning, and therewithal the Estimation of the Carmelites in England, which 'till then they upheld above all other Mendicants, fell to Decay.

This Order was vertical, and in the highest Exaltation thereof, in the Reign of King Edward IV. Under Nicholas Kenton, their twenty-fifth Provincial, they reckoned no fewer than fifteen hundred of their Order; but when John Milverton, his Successor, began, in Favour of Friery, furiously to engage against Bishops, and the Secular Clergy, the Carmelites good Masters and Dames began to forsake them, and they never recovered their Credit 'till they were utterly dissolved. They were very careful in keeping the Records of their Order, preserving the successive Series of their Provincials, from their Original here in England, 'till their Dissolution; a Catalogue whereof, made by John Bale, may be seen in Fuller's Ecclesiastical History, B. VI. p. 272.

This House of the Carmelites, or Whitefriars, stood on the South Side of Fleet-street, between the New Temple and Salisbury-court. The Priory.

The Priory, or Church, was founded by Rich. Gray, Knt. Ancestor to the Lord Gray of Codnor, in the County of Derby, in the Year 1241. King Edward I. gave to the Prior and Brethren of this House a Plat of Ground in Fleet-street, whereupon to build this House, which was afterwards re-edified by Hugh Courtney, Earl of Devonshire, about the Year 1350, being the 24th of Edward III.

The Curriers seemed formerly to live hereabouts. It is certain they had a Guild in this Church, founded Anno 1367, of which they brought in this Account into Chancery, about the 12th of Richard II. as did other Guilds in London at this Time:

“On litel Companie of a Light of on Taper in the Queer of the White-freers in Flete-street, of the Yomanrie of Curriers, whereof ben Maistres Geffry Tolyngdon and Robert Ster. It was begon 41 Edw. III. and now [about the Year 1389] the foreseid Brethered ys almost a falle. So that ther be no more at thys Tyme that payeth thereto, but x or xii Persones. And they han in Catel at thys Tyme xxiii Shyllings ii d. ob. And there be of Dettes the Summ of iii l. the whych the Maistres ne mold nought gete.”

INTERMENTS.

John Lufken, Mayor, and the Commonalty of the City of London, granted a Lane, called Crocker's-lane, reaching from Fleet-street to the Thames, to build the West End of that Church. Sir Robert Knolles, Knt. (Ancestor to the Earls of Banbury) was a great Builder here also, in the Reigns of Richard II. and Henry IV. who, though born of mean Parentage (in the County of Chester) was by his valiant Behaviour advanced from a common Soldier, in the French Wars, under Edw. III. to be a great Commander. He built the goodly, fair Bridge of Rockefter, over the River Medway, and founded a College of Secular Priests at Pontefract; and dying full of Years, at his Manor of Stone-Thorpe, in Norfolk, Ann. 1407, was brought to London, and honourably buried by the Lady Constance, his Wife, in the Body of this Church of White-friars, which he had newly built.

Here, some Time, lay intombed, in a goodly Monument of Alabaster, the Body of Robert Mascall, Bishop of Hereford; a Man, for his great Learning and good Life, admired and beloved of all Men. He was often employed by Hen. IV. (to whom he was Confessor) upon Embassies to foreign Princes, and was sent, with two other Bishops, to the Council of Constance. He built the Choir, Presbytery and Steeple of this Church, and gave many rich Ornaments to this Religious House, wherein he died, Dec. 21, 1416.

Stephen Patrington, Bishop of St. David's, who died Sept. 22, 1417, and Nic. Kenton, who died Sept. 4, 1468, and John Milverton, who died Jan. 30, 1486, all Provincials of the Order of Carmelites, and Men of great Eminence and Worth for their Parts and Learning, were buried in this Church.

There lay buried also, in the Middle of the new Choir, Sir John Mowbray, Earl of Nottingham, 1398. By him lay Sir Edward Courtney.

In the South Wall laid Sir Hugh Montgomery, and Sir John, his Brother. John Wolle, Son to Sir John Wolle. Thomas Baybolt, Esq; Elizabeth, Countess of Arhole. Dame Johan, Wife to Sir Thomas Say, of Alden. Sir Pence Castle, Baron. John Lord Gray, Son to Reginald Lord Gray, of Wilton, 1418. Sir John Ludlow, Sir Richard Derois, Richard Gray, and John Asbley, Knts. Robert Bristow, Thomas Perry, Robert Tempest, William Call, Esqrs. William Neddow.

In the old Choir, below the Altar, laid Dame Margaret, &c. This Dame Margaret, unknown, seems to be the Lady Margaret, Countess of Kent, who by Will, 1540, bequeathed her Body to be buried in the Church of the late White-friars in Fleet-street, under the Tomb where Richard Earl of Kent, her late Husband, lay, if it might be suffered. Eleanor Gristles.

Under the Lamp, Sir John Browne, Kt. and John, his Son and Heir. By him, Sir Simon de Berford, Knt.

In the Walk between the Choir and the Church: Peter Wygus, Robert Matthew, Esqrs. Sir John Shargell, Sir John Norice, Sir Geoffrey Rooze, Knts. Mathew Hadocke, William Clarell, John Aprichard, William Wentworth, Thomas Wicham, Esqrs. Sir — Terwit, Sir Stephen Popham, Knts. — Bastard de Scales. Hen. Blunt, Esq; Dame Elizabeth Blunt. Jo. Swan, Esq; Alice Foster, one of the Heirs of Sir Stephen Popham.

Also in the said Friars laid these that follow: Sir Robert Brocket, Knt. John Drayton, Esq; John, Son to Rob. Chanlowes, and his Daughter Katharine by him. John Salvin, William Hampton, John Bampton, John Winter, Edmond Oldball, Will. Appleyard, Thomas Dabby, Esqrs. Sir Hugh Court- ney, Knt. John Drury, Son to Robert Drury. Elizabeth Gernersey, Gentlewoman.

In the East Part of the Church: Sir Thomas Townsend, Sir Richard Greene, Knts. William Scot, Esq; Thomas Federingbey, J. Fulforde, Esq; Edward Elsemere, William Hart, Gent.

In the South Part of the Church: Dame Mary Senclare, Daughter to Sir Thomas Talbot, Knt. — Aucher, Esq; Sir Will. Moris, Knt. and at his Feet Dame Christian, his Wife. Sir Peter de Mota, Knt. Richard Hewton, Esq; Sir John Heron, Knt. Richard Eaton, Esq; Hugh Stapleton, Gent. William Copley, Gent. Sir Ralph Saint Owen, Sir Hugh Bromflete, Knts. Lord Vessey, principal Founder of that Order, the 6th of Edward IV. &c.

This Lord was Sir Henry Bromfield, who by his last Will (made May 21, 6 Edward IV. and proved 1468) bequeathed his Body to be laid in the Church of the White-friars, London.

And though William, Marquis of Berkley, was buried in the Church of Friars Augustines; yet he bore such Good-Will to these White-friars, that he appointed two Friars to sing perpetually in this Church for his Soul, and the Souls of his Ancestors.

And besides these, John Wollasel, Gent. Elizabeth, Wife of Rob. Tawfeld. — Ynglow, Esq;

In the Chapter-House, Henry Bedil.

In the Cloister, Ry. Beyton, Sir Rafe St. Owen.

Sir Richard Grene, by his Will, made die Dominica prox' post Festum S. Mich. Arch. A. D. 1386, bequeathed to the Prior and Convent of Carmelite Friars, London, pro Mortuario & Sepultura ibm. habend. twenty Marks. Item, Towards the new Work of their Church, ten Marks.

Here John Denham, Citizen and Draper of London, ordained, by his last Will (dated April the fifth, 1532,) to be buried, viz. "Within the Conventual Church of White-friars in Fleet-street, before the Awlter of St. Anne. I bequeth to the same Freors, for an Ornament to be used and occupied at the same Awlter of St. Anne, and not elsewhere, at every high Fest in the said Church, a Vestment of Crymson Velvet, powdered with a goodly Orpheme, and my Armes and Picture thereupon, lifting up my Hands, of six Pounds Sterling. Item, I wil, that there be said or song a Trental of Masses, in the Parish-Church of St. Dunstons in the West, of London, where I am now a Parishioner: For the which Trental I bequeathe 10 s. and for Brede, Wine, and Wax, 8 d. &c. Also I wil, that my Executors buy and provide for me a Stone of the Value of five Marks, to ly upon my Grave, with an Image of my self; and over the Hedde of the said Image, a Picture of the Assumption of our blessyd Lady; and at the two Corners, two Scotcheons, the one with my Armes, and the other with the Drapers Arms; and at the other Corners in like Manner."

This House was valued at 26 l. 7 s. 3 d. and was surrendered the tenth of November, the 30th of Henry VIII.

In the Place of this Friars Church were built many Houses, Lodgings for Noblemen and others. Among the rest, here lived Sir John Cheeke, Knt.

Knt. in King Edward VI's Time, his Tutor, and afterward his Secretary of State.

Anno 1608, the Inhabitants within the Compass of these White-friars, as also those of the Black-friars, within Ludgate, obtained divers Liberties, Privileges, and Exemptions, by a Charter of King James I.

In the Year 1662, a Legacy was given by one Mr. Brown to this Precinct, which will appear by what follows:

A Copy of so much of the last Will and Testament of Mr. John Brown, as relates to the Precinct of White-friars, London.

"In the Name of God, Amen. I John Brown, of the County of Middlesex, Gent. &c.

"Item, I give and bequeath unto the Poor of White-friars, where is most Need, according to the Discretion of my Executors, with the Advice of Mr. Fenshaw, five Pounds.

"Item, I give and devise to the Maior, Commonalty and Citizens of the City of London, Governours of the Possessions, Revenues, and Goods of the Hospitals of Edward, King of England, the Sixt, of Christ, Bride-well, and St. Thomas the Apostle, the Sum of 400*l.* of lawful Money of England; to be by them yearly employed and disposed of, for the Education and Bringing-up of poor Children in Christ's Hospital aforesaid: Upon Trust and Confidence, that the Governours aforesaid, and their Successors, shall maintain three Children from Time to Time, until their respective Age of fifteen Years; and as any of them die, or attain the same Age, to take in others in the Rooms or Places of such of them as shall so die, or attain the said Age or Ages of fifteen Years. One of the Children to be out of the Precinct of White-friars, London; and one out of the Parish of St. Dunstons in the West, London; and one out of the Lordship of Finbury, in the Parish of St. Giles without Cripplegate, in the County of Middlesex. The Parishioners of the said respective Parishes and Places, giving Caution to the Governours aforesaid, and their Successors, at their respective Admittances into the said Hospital, to take them out at the said Age of fifteen Years, if they be then living, and not otherwise disposed of.

"Item, I give and devise all the Messuage and Land, with the Appurtenances thereunto belonging, or therewith used, in Islington, in the County of Middlesex, commonly called or known by the Name or Sign of the Nag's-head, now in Lease to John Gregory, at the yearly Rent of sixty Pounds, to the Governours aforesaid, and to their Successors for ever; upon Trust and Confidence, that they and their Successors shall for ever hereafter pay towards the Maintenance of six Scholars, to be taken out of the Children admitted into Christ's Hospital aforesaid, into the University of Cambridge, three in Christ's College, and three in Emmanuel College. And my Will is, that none of the six Scholars shall continue any longer than seven Years. And

"my Will and Desire is, that the Children of the several Parishes and Places aforesaid, to be taken into the said Hospital, shall be from Time to Time preferred before any other, if capable, to go to the University, and to the Allowance before-mentioned.

"In Witness &c. the twentieth Day of October, the fourteenth of Car II. Annoq; Dom. 1662."

In Pursuance of this, Richard Charm, Orphan of Humphrey Charm, was first admitted into the said Hospital, the twenty-ninth of July, 1664, from White-friars Precinct.

The Precinct of White-friars is extraparochial, and the Inhabitants are at Liberty to bury and marry where they please; nor do they pay any Tithes, as appeared upon Trial about the Year 1700.

C H A P. XXIV.

Of LANGBOURN WARD, and Fenny about.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a New Survey.

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State. Government. Aldermen and Common-Councilmen. Parishes and Churches. Hudson's-Bay-Hall. Pewterers-Hall. General Post-Office. Antiquities. Discharge from Fifteenths.

THIS Ward of Langborne, or Langbourn, takes its Name from a Rivulet or long Bourn of sweet Water, which antiently broke out of a Spring near to the Place where Magpye-alley adjoining to St. Catharine Coleman's Church now stands, which ran down the Street Westward, and through Lombard-street as far as the West End of St. Mary Woolnoth's Church, where turning South, and dividing itself into several Shares, Rills or Streams, it gave Name to Sharebourn-lane, called also Scutbourn-lane, because it ran South to the River Thames; and by its spreading near the Spring-head, the contiguous Street became so swampy, moorish or fenny, especially about the Church, which stood in the broad Way between Mincing-lane and Rood-lane, that it was thence called Fen-church-street. The Ward also partook of the same Name, and was enrolled in the City Records by the Appellation of Langbourne and Fenny about.

It is encompassed on the East by Aldgate Ward; on the North by Aldgate and Lime-street Wards; on the South by Tower-street, Billingsgate, Bridge and Candlewick Wards; and on the West by Wallbrook Ward.

The East and West Limits of this Ward are taken at one hundred Feet from the West Corner of the North Side of Lombard-street to thirty-five Feet of the West Side of Gracechurch-street; and from Gracechurch-street to Smith's Buildings on the North Side of the East End. And at one hundred and twenty-five Feet from the West Corner of the South Side of Lombard-street, across Gracechurch-street, and up the South Side of Fenchurch-street, as far as the North West End of Mark-lane. The Antients measured it thus:

The South Side of this Ward begins in the East, at the Chain to be drawn across Mark-lane up into Fenchurch-street, and so West by the North End of Mincing-lane to St. Margaret-Pattens-street or Rood-lane, and down that Street to the Midway towards St. Margaret's Church; then by Philpot-lane (so called from Sir John Philpot, who dwelt there, and was Owner thereof) and down that Lane, six or eight Houses on each Side, is all of this Ward.

Then by Grace-church Corner into Lombard-street to St. Clement's-lane, and down the same to St. Clement's Church; then down St. Nicholas's-lane, and down the same to St. Nicholas's Church, and the same Church is of this Ward.

Then to Abchurch-lane, and down some small Portion thereof; then down Skerborn-lane, a Part thereof, and a Part of Bearbinder's-lane are of this Ward; and then down Lombard-street to the Sign of the Angel, almost to the Corner over-against Stocks-Market; and these are the Bounds of this Ward.

Present
State.

Besides these two main Streets, these following: St. Switkin's-lane, Abchurch-lane, St. Nicholas-lane, St. Clement's-lane; all which are on the South Side of Lombard-street; and on the North Side are Pope's-head-alley, Exchange-alley, Birchin-lane, and George-yard. Then in Fenchurch-street on the North Side, Lime-street, Cullum-street, and Smith's-buildings; and on the South Side, Philpot-lane, Rood-lane, Mincing-lane, and Mark-lane: In all which said Streets, Lanes and Alleys, there are several Courts; and of these in Order.

Lombard-
street.

Lombard-street is throughout graced with good and lofty Buildings, among which are many that surpass those in other Streets; and is generally inhabited by Goldsmiths, Bankers, and other eminent Tradesmen. At the East End near Gracechurch-street, on the North Side, is the Church of Albhalloes.

Ball-alley.

Ball-alley, not broad, but somewhat long, hath an Entrance by Albhalloes Church, and with some Turnings falls into the Cross-keys-Inn; from whence it hath a Passage into Gracechurch-street. Near this was the George-Inn; since the Fire rebuilt with very good Houses, well inhabited, and Warehouses; being a large open Yard, and now called George-yard: At the further End of which is the George-and-Vultur Tavern; which is a large House, with a Passage into St. Michael's-alley, and so strait forward into Cornhill; on the right Hand the Passage leads into Gracechurch-street; on the left into Birchin-lane through Castle-alley, and also through White-lion-court.

George-
yard.

Next on the North Side is the Church of St. Edmund Lombard-street, which fronts St. Clement's-lane on the South.

Birchin-
lane.

A little further West on the same Side of the Way is Birchin-lane, which runs into Cornhill, a great Thoroughfare to and from the Exchange. It is well inhabited, especially by Salesmen for Mens Apparel. In this Lane are several Courts and Alleys, viz. Exchange-alley, Castle-alley, and White-lion-court; but they are in Cornhill Ward.

White-
hart-court

On the South Side of Lombard-street, betwixt Gracechurch-street and St. Clement's-lane, is Whitehart-court, with a Passage through an Entry into another Court so called, that leadeth into Gracechurch-street; a Place well inhabited by Wholefale Dealers, and most by Quakers, where they have their Meeting-house; but of this Court the greatest Part is in Bridge Ward within, that which is in this Ward being next to Lombard-street. Plough-yard hath a good Free-stone Pavement, and the Houses well built and inhabited. Three-Kings-court, well inhabited by Wholesale Dealers and others. Out of this Court is a Passage into two others, the one leading into St. Clement's-lane, narrow and ordinary; but the other is large and open, and well tenanted; and this Court hath a Passage into Nag's-head-court, which is long and large, and another Passage into St. Clement's-lane. George-alley, but small.

Plough-
yard.

Three-Kings-
court.

Nag's-head-court.

Clement's
lane.

More West is St. Clement's-lane, well built and inhabited. The South Part, which is next Canon-street, is in Candlewick Ward, viz. from the North Side of St. Clement's Eastcheap Church. Adjoining to this is a handsome Place, called Church-alley; the North Side having a Row of Houses, the South Side lying open to the Church and Church-yard.

Nicholas-
lane.

The next is St. Nicholas-lane, well built, and inhabited by Merchants and Wholesale Dealers. The South End beyond Fox's Ordinary is in Candlewick Ward. On the West Side, near Lombard-street, is the Church-yard of St. Nicholas Acons; which Church was not rebuilt after the Fire of London, but the Parish united to St. Edmund the King's in Lombard-street. There is a narrow Alley on the South Side of it into Abchurch-lane.

More South, on the same Side of the Way, is Fox's-court, or Ordinary, so called from a publick Eating-house formerly there kept: It is a handsome Place, with good built Houses, well inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute. Near this Court is the Bell Tavern, which hath a Passage through Bell-alley into Canon-street.

Still proceeding Westward there is Abchurch-lane, which hath the greatest Part in Candlewick Ward, where it is treated of; but in that Part of it which is in this Ward is the famous Tavern called Pontack's, from one of that Name, who formerly kept it. This House has been always so noted for its Elegance in Entertainments, that it is not only made Use of by the rich Merchants, among whom it is seated, but very frequently by Persons of the first Quality from the Court End of the Town.

Abchurch-
lane.

Farther East is Fenchurch-street; a Street of good Account, being large, well built, and inhabited by Merchants and others. It is a Street of good Length, beginning near Aldgate, and running Westward into Gracechurch-street. In the Midst of this Street, before the Fire of London in 1666, stood the small Church of St. Gabriel Fenchurch, corruptly called Fanchurch, not rebuilt, but the Parish united unto St. Margaret's Pattens.

Fenchurch-
street.

St. Gabriel Fen-
church.

Here is an Entry called Fenchurch-alley; at the upper End of which is the Church-yard.

At the South-West Corner of this Street is the Church of St. Bennet Gracechurch, but not in this Ward.

The Courts, Alleys, and Places of Name in the Part of the Street in this Ward are as follow, beginning at the West End:

First is Ingram's-court, an open square Place, well built and inhabited, made into Buildings in

Ingram-
court.

the

the Place of Sir Thomas Ingram's House, the Owner thereof.

Bell-yard, but small.

St. Dionis
Back-
church.

St. Dionis Backchurch, seated at the turning into Lime-street.

Lime-
street.

By the Corner of this Church you turn into Lime-street, running Northwards into Leadenball-street against St. Mary Axe; at which End it is narrower than in the Midst. A Street taken up by several Merchants; but the Part in this Ward goeth not much farther than Cullum-street, the greatest Part being in Lime-street Ward.

But to return to Fenchurch-street:

Eastward of Lime-street is St. Paul's-alley; at the upper End of which are two or three good Houses.

Hartford court hath very handsome Houses, and a Free-stone Pavement.

Cullum-
street.

Cullum-street very open and large, with good new built Houses, well inhabited, which with a turning Passage Westward falls into Lime-street: It takes its Name from an antient Mansion or large House, the Property of the honourable Family of the Cullums, which took up the whole Site of this Street. In this Street is the Ipswich-Arms-Inn, well built, and of good Account.

Fen-court, very handsome and broad, with a Free-stone Pavement; the Houses are large and gracefully built, fit for Merchants and Persons of Quality, who there inhabit. It hath a good Air, as lying open to Gardens on the West Side.

Culver-court, but small, with a Free-stone Pavement; at the upper End is the Hall of Hudson's Bay Company.

Smith's Buildings.

Smith's-Buildings hath a narrow Entrance, with a Free-stone Pavement; but at the upper End the Court maketh an open Square, with very good new Buildings well inhabited: And this Court hath an open Passage into Billiter-lane East, and likewise a good handsome Passage into Lime-street West.

Ironmongers-hall.

Near to Smith's-Rents, or Buildings, is Ironmongers-Hall. See Aldgate Ward.

In the South Side of Fenchurch-street are these Places of Name, beginning Eastward:

Mark-
lane.

Mark-lane, or Mart-lane, over-against Billiter-lane; a long Street. But the Part in this Ward begins Southward of Alballows Staining Church, which it takes in, and all the West Side to Fenchurch-street, the rest being in Tower-street Ward.

This Alballows Staining is obscurely seated, lying backward from the Street, the Passage to it being through Star-alley, which hath a turning Passage into Fenchurch-street. This Alley hath old built Houses on the North Side, on the South whereof is the Church.

Mincing-
lane.

West of Mark-lane is Mincing, or Mincion-lane, which hath little or no Part in this Ward; it lieth in Tower-street Ward, where it will be described.

Mediford-court, a very handsome large Court, with graceful new built Houses of Brick, well inhabited, especially the upper Part or End, where the Houses are spacious for the Reception of Merchants.

From this Court to Rood-lane are several large Houses built backwards, with Court-yards before them, and great Gates to the Street to shut up, being the Seats of Merchants.

Rood-
lane.

Rood-lane hath also but a small Part in this No. 84.

Ward, the greatest being in Billingsgate Ward; but in this Part is Cullum's-court, which is but small.

Westward of Rood-lane is Cradle-court, which is but small, with a Free-stone Pavement.

Philpot-lane falleth into great Eastcheap, a Place pretty well supplied with Inhabitants; amongst which are several Merchants.

Philpot-
lane.

The South Part of this Lane, Northwards of Coopers-Hall, is in Billingsgate Ward. On the West Side is Braben-court, which is large, well built and inhabited; and on the East Side is Moses-court, which is but narrow and ordinary.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, the Beadle, and thirty-four Watchmen.

Watch.

The Jury returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of November.

Jury.

It hath an Alderman, his Deputy, ten Common-Councilmen, fifteen Constables, nine Scavengers, seventeen Men of the Wardmote Inquest, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth in the Exchequer at 20 l. 9 s. 8 d. In London at 21 l.

Govern-
ment.

The Alderman is Sir Joseph Hankey, Knt. and the Gentlemen of the Common-Council are, Robert Wilson, Deputy, John Pope, Edward Waldo, Richard West, John Box, Ingham Forster, John Scrivenor, John Springett, Thomas Griffin, Monkhouse Davidson, and Thomas Cole.

In this Ward there are several Things worthy of Observation, viz.

Remarkable Things.

First, Four Parishes with Churches; as, (1.) St. Dionis Backchurch. (2.) Alballows Lombard-street. (3.) St. Edmund the King. (4.) St. Mary Woolnoth. And three Parishes without Churches; as, (1.) St. Gabriel Fenchurch. (2.) Alballows Stanechurch. (3.) St. Nicholas Acons: Of which hereafter in our parochial History.

Parishes
and Churches.

Secondly, In this Ward stand the Halls belonging to the Hudson's-Bay Company, and to the Pewterers; as also some Part of Ironmongers-Hall.

Halls and other publick Buildings.

(1.) The Hall in which the Hudson's-Bay Company meet to transact Business is a handsome Brick Building, whose Front next the Street has been lately repaired and beautified, and carries the Appearance of one of the finest Pieces of Brick Work, with Pilasters, Architraves, &c. in the whole City. This Hall stands backward on the South Side of Fenchurch-street, and is about one hundred Feet West of Ironmongers-Hall. This Company was incorporated in 1670 under certain Conditions: Of which more particularly hereafter.

Hudson's-Bay-Hall.

(2.) Pewterers-Hall is a handsome large Building, with a Parlour and Court-Room, adorned with Wainscot, Hangings, and the Picture of Sir William Smallwood, who was Master of this Company 2 Hen. VII. who gave this common Hall, with a Garden and six Tenements thereunto adjoining, to the said Company. It is situate in Lime-street almost facing the West End of Cullum-street.

Thirdly, The General Post-Office for Country and Foreign Letters is also situate in Lombard-street, near its South-West Extremity, and facing the South End of Pope's-head-alley.

Act. Parl.
12 Car. II.

Of what Antiquity the Post in this Kingdom is, I cannot ascertain; but by the first Account I find thereof, it appears to have been managed by several private Offices, which had their respective Districts. But great Inconveniencies arising from their different Methods of Management, they were suppressed, and a certain Number of public Offices erected in lieu thereof: But these not answering the End proposed, a General Post-Office was erected by Act of Parliament, in the 12th of Charles II. Anno 1660, to be kept within the City of London, under the Direction of a Post-master, to be appointed by the King. The General Post-master was, by the said Act, empowered to appoint Post-houses in divers Parts of the Country hitherto unprovided, both in Post and By-Roads.

By the said Act of Parliament, the Postage of Letters to and from all Places therein-mentioned was not only ascertained, but likewise the Rates of Post-horses, to be paid by all such as shall ride Post.

Ibid.
9 Anne.

And upon the Union of the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, a General Post-Office was established by Act of Parliament in the Year 1710, not only for the united Kingdom of Great Britain, but likewise for that of Ireland, and her Majesty's Plantations in the West Indies and North America; by which the Postage of Letters being raised, I shall subjoin an Account of the present Rates, payable upon all Letters and Packets, to and from the several Places therein mentioned.

Antiently the foreign Post in this City was under the Direction of a Stranger, who, by Permission of the Government, was chosen by Foreigners, Inhabitants of London, who at last, by Prescription, pretended a Right of chusing their own Post-master. But in the Year 1568 a Difference arising between the Spaniards and Flemings of this City, each chose their separate Post-master. This Contest occasioned a Representation from the Citizens to the Privy-Council, for her Majesty to fill that Post of great Trust with one of her English Subjects. But how this Affair terminated, I cannot learn.

The Office of Post-master General is at present under the Direction of two Commissioners, assisted by a Secretary and Clerk, who have under their Management, for the Inland Office, a Comptroller, Receiver, Accomptant and Solicitor, seven Clerks of the Roads, and thirteen others, with three Window-men: And for the foreign Office, a Comptroller and Alphabet-keeper, and eight Clerks, including those of the Receiver and Accomptant. And the Number of Receiving-houses within the Bill of Mortality, where Letters are taken in for the General Post, amount to thirty; and that of Men who carry Letters to all Parts within the said District, to sixty-nine.

WARD

A Scale of 600 Feet.
100 200 300 400 500 600

This Plate is most humbly Inscribed to JOHN PORTER Esq. Alderman of Lime Street Ward. 1755.

To describe the modern State of this Ward, we begin with Leadenball-street, which is spacious, populous, and well inhabited; but the Houses escaping the great Fire Anno 1666, are not so slightly ightly and uniform. In this Street are these Places: Sharp's-alley, seated against the East-India-House, indifferent good. Tokenhouse-yard, but small, has a Passage into Leadenball. The East-India-House, on the South Side of the Street, formerly Sir William Craven's, a very large Building, with spacious Rooms, very commodious for such a publick Concern. It hath a large Hall and Court-yard for the Reception of People who have Business here, to attend on the Company on their Court-Days. There belongs to it also a Garden, with Warehouses in the back Part toward Lime-street; into which there is a back Gate for the Entrance of Carts to bring their Goods into their Warehouses. This House did belong to the Earl of Craven, and was lett by him to this Company at a yearly Rent.

The present State of this Ward.

Lime-street, a Place well inhabited by Merchants and others of Repute. About the middle of the Street is a Place called Queen's-square, or Queen's-square-passage, as leading into Leadenball-Market, a well built Place, with a Free-stone Pavement. On the Ground on which this Place is built was a large House, the Habitation of a Merchant, and antiently supposed to belong to the Kings and Queens.

St. Mary-ax goes out of Leadenball-street, and runs Northwards to Camomile-street by London-wall. It is a Street graced with good Buildings, and much inhabited by eminent Merchants. Out of this Street, and almost over-against St. Andrew's Undershaft Church, is a Passage into Great St. Helen's; and towards the North End is Sopers-yard, a very mean Place.

Camomile-street hath but a small Part in this Ward, not above two hundred Feet from St. Mary-ax, and the rest in Aldgate Ward.

To this Ward belong an Alderman and four Common-Councilmen, including the Deputy, four Constables, two Scavengers, sixteen Wardmote-Inquestmen, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth at one Pound nineteen Shillings and two Pence.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, the Beadle, and eleven Watchmen.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote-Inquest for this Ward are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts in Guildhall in the Month of November.

The Alderman of this Ward is John Porter, Esq; The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Samuel Southhouse, Deputy, Mr. William Burges, Mr. Launc. Shadwell, Mr. George Mason.

There is no Church in this Ward, but it runs through several Parishes.

The most remarkable Things in this Ward are,

(1.) Leadenball, which in 1309 belonged to Sir Hugh Nevil, Knt. And the Lady Alice, his Widow, made a Feoffment thereof, by the Name of Leadenball, with the Advowsons of the Church of St. Peter on Cornhill, and other Churches, to Richard Earl of Arundel and Surry, 1362.

More, in the Year 1380, Alice Nevil, Widow to Sir John Nevil, Knt. of Essex, confirmed to Thomas Cogshall, and others, the said Manor of Leadenball, and the Advowsons, &c.

In the Year 1384, Humfrey de Bohun, Earl of Hereford, had the said Manor: And, in the Year 1408, Robert Rikeden of Essex, and Margaret his Wife, confirmed to Richard Whittington, and other Citizens of London, the said Manor of Leadenball, with the Appurtenances, the Advowson of St. Peter's Church, St. Margaret Patens, &c.

And, in the Year 1411, the said Whittington and others confirmed the same to the Mayor and Commonalty of London, whereby it came to the Possession of the City.

Then, in the Year 1443, the twenty-first of Henry VI. John Hatherly, Mayor, purchased Licence of the said King to take up two hundred Fodder of Lead for the building of Water-Conduits, a common Granary, and the Cross in West-Cheap, more richly, for the Honour of the City.

In the Year next following, the Parson and Parish of St. Dunstan in the East of London, seeing the famous and mighty Man (for the Words be in the Grant, Cum nobilis & potens vir) Simon Eyre, Citizen of London, among other his Works of Piety, effectually determined to erect and build a new Granary upon the Soil of the same City at Leadenball, of his own Charges, for the common Utility of the said City; to the amplifying and enlarging of the said Granary, granted to Henry Frowicke, then Mayor, the Aldermen and Commonalty, and their Successors for ever, all their Tenements, with the Appurtenances, sometime called the Horse-Mill in Grass-street, for the annual Rent of four Pounds, &c.

Also certain Evidences (of an Alley and Tenements pertaining to the Horse-Mill adjoining to the said Leadenball in Grass-street, given by William Kingstone, Fishmonger, unto the Parish-Church of St. Peter upon Cornhill) do specify the said Granary to be builded by the said honourable and famous Merchant Simon Eyre, some Time an Upholster, and then a Draper; in the Year 1419. He builded it of squared Stone, in the Form as now it sheweth, with a fair and large Chapel in the East Side of the Quadrant, over the Porch of which he caused to be written, Dextra Domini exaltavit me, The Lord's right Hand exalted me.

Within the said Church, on the North Wall, was written, Honorandus famosus Mercator Simon Eyre, hujus operis, &c. In English thus: The honourable and famous Merchant, Simon Eyre, Founder of this Work, once Mayor of this City, Citizen and Draper of the same, departed out of this Life the eighteenth Day of September, the Year of the Incarnation of Christ 1459, and the thirty-eighth Year of the Reign of King Henry VI. He was buried in his Parish-Church of St. Mary Wolnoth in Lombard-street. He gave by his Testament, to be distributed to all Prisons in London, or within a Mile of that City, somewhat to relieve them.

More, he gave two thousand Marks, upon a Condition, which not performed, they were then to be distributed to Maids Marriages, and other Deeds of Charity. He also gave three thousand Marks to the Company of Drapers, upon Condition that they should, within one Year after his Decease, establish perpetually a Master or Warden, den, five secular Priests, six Clerks, and two Choristers, to sing daily Divine Service by Note for ever, in his Chapel of Leadenhall. Also three Schoolmasters, with an Usher, to wit, one Master with an Usher for Grammar, one Master for Writing, and the third for Song, with Housing there newly built for them for ever: The Master to have for his Salary ten Pounds, and every other Priest eight Pounds, every other Clerk five Pounds six Shillings and eight Pence, and every other Chorister five Marks. And, if the Drapers refused to do this within one Year after his Decease, then the three thousand Marks to remain to the Prior and Convent of Christ-Church in London, with Condition to establish as is aforesaid, within two Years after his Decease: And if they refused, then the three thousand Marks to be disposed by his Executors, as they best could devise, in Works of Charity.

Thus much for his Testament, not performed by establishing of Divine Service in his Chapel, or Free-Schools for Scholars; neither how the Stock of three thousand Marks, or rather five thousand Marks, was employed by his Executors, could I ever learn. He left Issue Thomas, who had Issue Thomas, &c. True it is, that, in the Year 1464, the third of Edward IV. it was agreed by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of London, that notwithstanding the King's Letters Patents lately before granted unto them, touching the Tronage or Weighing of Wares, to be holden at the Leadenhall, yet Suit should be made to the King for new Letters Patents to be granted to the Mayor of the Staple, for the Tronage of Wools to be holden there; and Order to be taken by the Discretion of Thomas Cooke, then Mayor, the Council of the City, Jeffrey Filding, then Mayor of the Staple at Westminster, and of the King's Council, what should be paid to the Mayor and Aldermen of the City, for the laying and housing of the Wools there, that so they might be brought forth and weighed, &c.

A Brotherhood of sixty Priests in the Chapel of Leadenhall.

Touching the Chapel there, I find, that, in the Year 1466, by Licence obtained of King Edward IV. in the sixth of his Reign, a Fraternity of the Trinity of sixty Priests (beside other Brethren and Sisters) in the same Chapel, was founded by William Rouse, John Risby, and Thomas Asby, Priests; some of the which sixty Priests, every Market-Day in the Forenoon, did celebrate Divine Service there to such Market-People as repaired to Prayer; and once every Year they met all together, and had solemn Service, with Procession of all the Brethren and Sisters. This Foundation was, in the Year 1512, by a Common Council, confirmed to the sixty Trinity Priests, and to their Successors, at the Will of the Mayor and Commonalty.

Leadenhall burnt.

In the Year 1484, a great Fire happened upon the Leadenhall, by what Casualty I know not, but many Houses were thereby destroyed, with all the Stocks for Guns, and other Provision belonging to the City; which was a great Loss.

R. Arnold.

In the Year 1503, the eighteenth of Henry VII. a Request was made by the Commons of the City, concerning the Usage of the said Leadenhall, in Form as followeth:

"Please it the Lord-Maior, Aldermen, and

"Common Council to enact, That all Frenchmen bringing Canvas, Linen Cloth, and other Wares to be sold, and all Foreigns bringing Wolstedes, Sayes, Stamins, Kiverings, Nails, Iron Work, or any other Wares, and also all manner Foreigns bringing Lead to the City to be sold, shall bring all such their Wares aforesaid to the open Market of the Leadenhall, there, and no where else, to be shewed, sold, and uttered, like as of old Time it hath been used, upon Pain of Forfeiture of all the said Wares shewed or sold in any other Place than aforesaid: The Shew of the said Wares to be made three Days in a Week, that is to say, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. It is also thought reasonable, that the Common Beam be kept from henceforth in the Leadenhall, and the Farmer to pay therefore reasonable Rent to the Chamber; for better it is that the Chamber have Advantage thereby than a foreign Person; and also the said Leadenhall, which is more chargeable now by half than profitable, shall better bear out the Charges thereof: Also the Common Beam for Wool at Leadenhall may pay yearly a Rent to the Chamber of London, toward the Supportation and Charges of the same Place; for Reason it is, that a common Office, occupied upon a common Ground, bear a Charge to the Use of the Commonalty: Also that Foreigns bringing Wools, or any other Merchandizes or Wares to Leadenhall, to be kept there for the Sale and Market, may pay more largely for keeping of their Goods, than Freemen."

In the Year 1519, the tenth of Henry VIII. the twenty-eighth of September, a Petition was exhibited by the Commons to the Common Council, and was by them allowed, concerning the Leadenhall, how they would have it used. It ran thus:

To the Right Honourable the Maior, and his Worshipful Brethren the Aldermen, and to the discreet Commoners in this Common Council assembled.

"Meekly beseeching, sheweth unto your good Lordship, and Masterships, divers and many Citizens of this City, which with your Favours (under Correction) think, that the great Place called the Leadenhall should, nor ought not to be letten to Farm, to any Person or Persons, and in especial to any Fellowship or Company incorporate, to have and hold the same Hall for Term of Years; for such Inconveniences as thereby may ensue, and come to the Hurt of the common Weal of the said City in Time to come; as somewhat more largely may appear in the Articles hereafter following:

A Petition of the Commons concerning the Use of the Leadenhall.

"First, If any Assembly, or hasty Gathering of the Commons of the said City, for oppressing or subduing of misruled People within the said City, hereafter shall happen to be called or commanded by the Mayor, Aldermen, and other Governors and Counsellors of the said City for the Time being, there is none so convenient, meet, and necessary a Place to assemble them in within the said City as the said Leadenhall, both for Largeness of Room, and for their sure Defence in Time of their coun-

"selling

“ felling together about the Premises. Also in Artillery and Guns in Leaden-hall. “ that Place hath been used the Artillery, Guns,
 “ and other common Armourers of the said City,
 “ to be safely kept in a Readiness, for the Safe“ guard, Wealth, and Defence of the said City,
 “ to be had and occupied at Times when Need
And Timber kept there. “ required: As also the Store of Timber, for the “ necessary Reparations of the Tenements belong“ ing to the Chamber of the said City, there “ commonly hath been kept.

“ Item, If any Triumph or Noblesse were to “ be done or shewed by the Commonalty of the “ said City, for the Honour of our Sovereign
 “ Lord the King and Realm, and for the Wor“ ship of the City, the said Leadenball is the most “ meet and convenient Place to prepare and “ order the said Triumph therein, and from “ thence to issue forth to the Places therefore “ appointed.

“ Item, At any Largeffs or Dole of any Money Largeffs and Doles distributed here. “ made unto the poor People of this City, by or “ after the Death of any worshipful Person within “ the said City, it hath been used to be done and “ given in the said Leadenball, for that the said “ Place is most meet therefore.

“ Item, The honourable Father that was Maker
Leaden-hall a Market-place for Victuallers and the People to stand dry. “ of the said Hall, had a special Will, Intent, “ and Mind, (as is commonly said) that the “ Market Men and Women that came to the “ City with Victuals and other Things, should “ have their free Standing within the said Leaden- ball in wet Weather, to keep themselves and “ their Wares dry, and thereby to encourage “ them, and all other, to have the better Will “ and Desire the more plenteously to resort to the “ said City to victual the same: And if the said “ Hall should be letten to Farm, the Will of the “ said honourable Father should never be fulfilled, “ nor take Effect.

“ Item, If the said Place, which is the chief Leaden-hall the chief Fortrefs of the City. “ Fortrefs and most necessary Place within all the “ City, for the Tuition and Safeguard of the “ same, should be letten to Farm, out of the “ Hands of the chief Heads of the same City,
 “ and especially to any other Body Politick, it “ might at length (by Likelihood) be Occasion
 “ of Discord and Debate between the said Bodies “ Politick. Which God defend.

“ For these, and many other great and reason“ able Causes, which hereafter shall be shewed to “ this honourable Court, your said Beseechers “ think it much necessary that the said Hall be “ still in the Hands of this City, and to be surely “ kept by sad and discreet Officers, in such wise “ that it may always be ready to be used and “ occupied, for the common Weale of the said
 “ City when Need shall require, and in no wise “ to be letten to any Body Politick.” Thus much for the Petition.

“ About the Year 1534 great Means were made Leaden-hall meant to have been a Burse for Merchants. about the Leadenball, to have the same made a Burse for the Assembly of Merchants, as they had been accustomed in Lombard-street. Many Common Councils were called to that End; but, in the Year 1535, John Champneis being Mayor, it was fully concluded, that the Burse should remain in Lombard-street, as afore, and Leadenball no more to be spoken of concerning this Matter.

In the Year 1546, when King Henry's Corpse lay in State in his Chapel at Westminster, in the Month of February, about twelve Days, here at Leadenball, Heath Bishop of Worcester, the King's Almoner, and other his Ministers and Assistants, did daily distribute to poor People of the City great Plenty of Money, as well as at Westmin- ster, and divers other Places in the several Wards, both in open Doles and by Way of Proclamation.

The Use of Leadenball in my Youth (says Stow) was this: In the Part of the North Quadrant, on the East Side of the North Gate, were the common Beams for weighing of Wool and other Wares, as had been accustomed. On the West Side of the Gate were the Scales to weigh Meal.
 The other three Sides were reserved, for the most Part, to the making and resting of the Pageants shewed at Midsummer in the Watch. The Remnant of the Sides and Quadrants was employed for the Stowage of Wool-Sacks, but not closed up. The Lofts above were partly used by the Painters, in working for the decking of Pageants and other Devices, for beautifying of the Watch and Watchmen. The Residue of the Lofts were lett out to Merchants, the Wool-winders and Packers therein to wind and pack their Wools.

Leadenball is a very large Building of Free-stone, containing within it three large Courts or Yards, all encompassed with Buildings; wherein is kept a Market, one of the greatest, the best, and the most general for all Provisions in the City of London, nay, of the Kingdom, and, if I should say of all Europe, I should not give it too great a Praise. The Building hath flat Battlements, leaded at the Top. And, for the Convenience of People's coming to this great Market, (which is kept every Day of the Weeek except Sundays, for one Thing or the other) besides the principal Entrance out of Leadenball-street, there are several others, three out of Lime-street, and the rest out of Gracechurch-street.

Of the three Courts or Yards that it consists of, the first is that at the North-East Corner of Grace- church-street, and opens into Leadenball-street.
 This Court or Yard contains in Length from North to South one hundred and sixty-four Feet, and in Breadth from East to West eighty Feet.
 Within this Court or Yard round about the same are about an hundred standing Stalls for Butchers for the selling only of Beef, and therefore this Court is called the Beef-market; many of which Stalls are eight, ten, or twelve Feet long, and four, five, or six Feet broad, with Racks, Hooks, Blocks, and all other Conveniences for the Sale of their Meat; all which Stalls are either under Warehouses above Head, or sheltered from the Weather by Roofs over them. This Yard is on Tuesdays a Market for Leather, to which the Tanners do resort. On Thursdays the Waggons from Colchester and other Parts come with Baize, &c. and also the Felmongers with their Wool;
 and on Fridays it is a Market for raw Hides, besides Saturdays for Beef, as also other Provisions.

The second Market-yard is called the Green- yard, as being once a green Plat of Ground; afterwards it was the City's Store-yard for Materials

rials for building and the like, but now a Market only for Veal, Mutton, Lamb, &c. This Yard is an hundred and seventy Feet in Length from East to West, and ninety Feet broad from North to South. It hath in it an hundred and forty Stalls for the Butchers, all covered over, and of the Bigness of those in the Beef-market. In the middle of this Green-yard Market, North to South, is a Row of Shops, with Kitchens or Rooms over them for Fishmongers; and also on the South Side and West End are Houses and Shops for Fishmongers. Towards the East End of this Yard is erected a fair Market-house, standing upon Columns, with Vaults underneath and Rooms above, with a Bell-Tower and a Clock, and under it are Butchers Stalls. The Tenements round about this Yard are for the most Part inhabited by Cooks, Victuallers, and such like; and in the Passages leading out of the Streets into this Market are Fishmongers, Poulterers, Cheesemongers, and such like Traders for Provision.

The third Market belonging to Leadenball is called the Herb-market, for that Herbs, Roots, Fruit, &c. are only there sold. This Market is about one hundred and forty Feet square. The West, East, and North Sides have Walks round them, covered over, for Shelter, and standing upon Columns; in which Walks there are twenty-eight Stalls for Gardeners, with Cellars under them.

Being rebuilt in the Year 1730, it is now called the New Market, or Nashe's Rents, and hath Shops in it chiefly for Butchers, and a new Passage into Lime-street. There is also in this Yard one Range of Stalls, covered over, for such as sell Tripe, Neats Feet, Sheeps Trotters, &c. And, on the South Side, the Tenements are taken up by Victuallers, Poulterers, Cheesemongers, Butchers, and such like. Beyond this are likewise some new Shops, built in the Year 1730, in that Part called the Old Bacon-market, which are chiefly occupied by Poulterers, and such as deal in Bacon: And, for the regular ordering of this Market, and those Numbers of People that resort thither with their Goods, see the Chapter of Civil Government.

The general Conflagration of this City in 1666 terminated in that Part of the City near adjoining to this Hall; all the Houses about it, and within the Yards belonging to it, being destroyed, there did of this Fabrick only remain the Stonework; since which, the Courts and Yards belonging to this Building, and some other adjacent Grounds, purchased by the City, are wholly converted into a Market for the City's Use: The Place for the Reception of Country Butchers and others, who brought Provisions before to the City, being then only in Leadenball-street, between Gracechurch-street and Lime-street, which was very incommodious to the Market-People, as well as to the Passengers.

The East-India-House, situate on the South Side of Leadenball-street, at about an hundred Feet West of Lime-street Corner, was antiently the Site of a City Mansion, belonging to the Earl of Craven and his Ancestors. The present House was built by the honourable East-India Company in the Year 1726.

The Front next the Street is very magnificent, being a strong Stone Building, with Pilasters and Entablature of the Dorick Order; the rest of it is very spacious, having large Rooms for the Directors, and Offices for the Clerks. It hath a large Hall and Court-yard, for the Reception of People who have Business here, to attend on the Company on their Court-Days, which are every Wednesday. There belongs to it also a Garden, with Warehouses in the back Part towards Lime-street, into which there is a back Gate for the Entrance of Carts to bring in their Goods. These Warehouses were rebuilt in a very handsome Manner in the Year 1725, and are now greatly enlarged, and not quite finished. The Company have likewise Warehouses in Seething-lane, the Steel-yard, and the Royal-Exchange, under the last of which they have Cellars entirely for Pepper.

While this new House was building, the Company transacted their Business in the old Custom-house in Fenchurch-street.

The first East-India Company was established by Charter in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, and since confirmed several Times, called, The Governor and Company of Merchants trading into the East-Indies.

Here were first subscribed seven hundred and thirty-nine thousand seven hundred and eighty-two Pounds ten Shillings; and a Year, or more, afterwards, by the additional Subscription of eight hundred and thirty-four thousand eight hundred and twenty-six Pounds, the Stock was made up one Million five hundred and seventy-four thousand six hundred and eight Pounds ten Shillings.

In 1698 another Company was established by Act of Parliament, called, The English Company of Merchants trading to the East-Indies, who, upon their Settlement, advanced to the Government two Millions Sterling; for which they had Interest given them at eight per Cent. per Annum: Of these two Millions the Members of the old Company subscribed three hundred and fifteen thousand Pounds; which, with forty per Cent. more advanced, made up their Share of two Millions upon the Union. Subscribers of five hundred Pounds, and upwards, have a Vote for choosing Directors, but none have more than one; none of which Directors are to have less than two thousand Pounds in the Capital Stock of the Company.

All Goods imported by the Company are to be sold openly by Inch of Candle, on Pain of Forfeiture, one Half to the King, and the other to the Prosecutor.

The Stock to be esteemed, in Law, Personal Estate, and the Shares exempt from Taxes.

No Member shall, in Respect to his Stock only, be judged a Bankrupt.

In the Year 1702, the twenty-second of July, for the mutual Advantage and Satisfaction of both Companies, an Expedient was found out for the uniting of them, and a Charter of Union was granted them. The new Company joined fifteen Pounds per Cent. with as much of the old Company, which, with several Sums paid in afterwards, the Stock of the united Companies amounted to one hundred and seventy Pounds per Share; and, upon the Return of the Effects of both Companies, the united Stock was to augment until they became one entire Company, which was to be in seven Years after the Union.

of

Green-

In Lime-street are divers fair Houses for Merchants and others: There was sometime a Mansion-house of the King's, called the the King's Artirce, whereof I find Record in the 14th of Edward I. but now grown out of Knowledge. I read also of another great House in the West Side of Lime-street, having a Chapel on the South, and a Garden on the West, then belonging to the Lord Nevill; which Garden is now called the Green-yard of Leadenhall.

This House, in the ninth of Richard II. pertained to Sir Simon Burley, and Sir John Burley his Brother: Which said House was taken down afterwards, and the fore Front thereof new builded of Timber, by Hugh Offley, Alderman.

Benbridge's-
Inn.

At the North-West Corner of Lime-street, was (of old Time) one great Messuage, called Ben-bridge's-Inn: Raphe Holland, Draper, about the Year 1452, gave it to John Gill, Master, and to the Wardens and Fraternity of Taylors, and Linen-Armorers of St. John Baptist in London, and to their Successors for ever. They did set up in place thereof a fair large Frame of Timber, containing in the high Street one great House, and before it, to the Corner of Lime-street, three other Tenements, the Corner House being the largest; and then down Lime-street divers proper Tenements. All which the Merchant-Taylors in the Reign of Edward VI. sold to Stephen Kirton, Merchant-Taylor and Alderman.

Next unto this on the high Street was the Lord Souch's Messuage or Tenement, and other. In Place whereof, Richard Wetbel, Merchant-Taylor, builded a fair House, with an high Tower, the second in Number, and first of Timber, that ever I learned (says Stow) to have been builded, to overlook Neighbours in this City.

Then was there a fair House, of old Time, called the Green Gate, by which one Michael Pisto, Lombard, held it, with a Tenement and nine Shops, in the Reign of Richard II. who in the 15th of his Reign, gave it to Roger Cropbull and Tho. Bromeflete, Esqrs, by the Name of the Green Gate, in the Parish of St. Andrew upon Cornhill, in Lime-street Ward: Since the which Time, Philip Malpas, sometime Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs, dwelled therein, and was there robbed and spoiled of his Goods, to a great Value, by Jack Cade, and other Rebels, in the Year 1449.

Sir Peter

Afterwards, in the Reign of Henry VII. it was seized into the King's Hands. And then granted first unto John Alston, after that unto William de la Rivers, and since by Henry VIII. to John Mutas, a Pickard, or Frenchman, who dwelled there, and harboured in his House many Frenchmen, that kalendred Wolfteds, and did other Things, contrary to the Franchises of the Citizens. Wherefore on evil May-Day, which was in the Year 1517, the Apprentices and other spoiled his House, and if they could have found Mutas, they would have stricken off his Head. Sir Peter Mutas, Son to the said John Mutas, sold this House to David Woodrofe, Alderman; whose Son, Sir Nicholas Woodrofe, Alderman, sold it over to John More, Alderman, that next possessed it.

Next to it was a House, called the Leaden Porch, afterwards divided into two Tenements, whereof one is a Tavern, and then one other House for a Merchant, likewise called the Leaden Porch.

In the Year 1576, partly at the Charges of the Parish of St. Andrew, and partly at the Charges of the Chamber of London, a Water-Pump was raised in this high Street of Lime-street Ward, near unto Lime-street Corner. For the placing of the which Pump, having broken up the Ground, they were forced to dig more than two Fathom deep, before they came to any main Ground. Where they found a Hearth made of Britain, or Roman Tile, every Tile half a Yard square, and about two Inches thick: They found Coal lying there also (for that lying whole will never consume.) Then digging one Fathom into the Main, they found Water sufficient, made their Prall, and set up the Pump; which Pump, with oft repairing and great Charges to the Parish, continued not twenty-four Years, but, being rotten, was taken up, and a new one set in the Place in the Year 1600. Thus much for the high Street.

In St. Mary-street was (of old Time) a Parish-Church of St. Mary the Virgin, St. Ursula, and the 11000 Virgins; which Church was commonly called St. Mary at the Axe, of the Sign of an Axe over-against the East End thereof, or St. Mary Pepillar, of a Plat of Ground lying on the North Side thereof, pertaining to the Skinners in London. This Parish, about the Year 1565, was united to the Parish-Church of St. Andrew Undershaft. And so was St. Mary at the Axe suppressed, and letten out to be a Warehouse for a Merchant. Here is now a Free-School kept. Against the East End of this Church was sometime a fair Wall, now turned to a Pump.

Also against the North End of this St. Mary-street, was sometime one other Parish Church of St. Augustine, called St. Augustine in the Wall, for that it stood adjoining to the Wall of the City; and otherwise called St. Augustines Papey, or the Poor, as I have read in the Reign of Edward III.

In this Parish an Earl of Oxford had his Inn: And the last Will of Agnes Lady Bardolph, Anno 1403, was dated from hence, in these Words; Hospitio, &c. from the Inn of the Habitation of the Lord, the Earl of Oxford, in the Parish of St. Augustines de Papey, London.

About the Year 1410, in the Reign of H. VI. the same Church was allowed to the Brethren of the Papey, the House of poor Priests, whereof I have spoken in Aldgate Ward.

The Donation of this Parish-Church, (about the Year 1430,) with the Church-yard, a Messuage and Garden thereunto belonging, may be worth the recording in this Place. And therefore I shall set it down, as I have met with it in the incomparable Library of the Honourable Robert Harley, Esq; late Earl of Oxford (the Copy whereof seems to have sometime belong to John Stow.) It is as follows:

On the other Side is an Instrument, shewing

 “ Evangelist, in whose Honour the foresaid Frater“ nity, by the King’s Licence given and granted,
 “ as is said, is founded and adjoined, we begin “ and proceed after this Order, &c.” And then follows the Instrument of the Donation of the Papey Church, as before.

The Parishioners of this Church were appointed to the Parish-Church of Allhallows in the Wall, which is in Broad-street Ward. This Brotherhood, called Papey, being suppressed, the Church of St. Augustine was pulled down; and in place thereof one Grey, an Apothecary, builded a Stable, and a Hay-loft. It is now a dwelling House, reserving the Church-yard for a Garden-plot. Those two Parish-Churches, both lying in the Ward of Lime-street, being thus suppressed, there is not any one Parish-Church or Place for Divine Service in that Ward; but the Inhabitants thereof repair to Churches out of their Ward, namely to St. Peter upon Cornhill in Cornhill Ward, St. Andrew in Aldgate Ward, Allhallows in the Wall in Broad-street Ward, and some to St. Dennis in Langborn Ward.

Now because of late there hath been some Question, to what Ward this Church or Chapel of St. Augustine Papey should of right belong; (for the same hath been challenged by them of Aldgate Ward, and (without Reason) taken into Bishopsgate Ward, (from Lime-street Ward) I am somewhat to touch it.

About thirty Years since, the Chamber of Lon- don granted a Lease of Ground (in these Words) Lying near London Wall, in the Ward of Lime-street, from the West of the said Church or Chapel of St. Augustine Papey, towards Bishopsgate, &c. On the which Plat of Ground, the Lessee builded three fair Tenements, and placed Tenants there: These were charged to bear Scot and Lot, and some of them to bear Office in Lime-street
Ward: All which they did willingly without grudging. And when any suspected or disordered Persons were by the Landlord placed there, the Officers of Lime-street Ward fetched them out of their Houses, committed them to ward, procured their due Punishment, and banished them from thence. Whereby in short Time that Place was reformed, and brought into good Order: Which Thing being noted by them of Aldgate Ward, they moved their Alderman, Sir Thomas Offley, to call in those Houses to be of his Ward. But I myself shewing a fair Ledger Book, sometime pertaining to the late dissolved Priory of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, wherein were set down the just Bounds of Aldgate Ward, before Sir Thomas Offley, Sir Rowland Hayward, the Common Council, and Wardmote Inquest of the said Lime-street Ward; Sir Thomas Offley gave over his Challenge, and so that Matter rested in good Quiet until the Year 1579, that Sir Richard Pype (being Mayor, and Alderman of Bishopsgate Ward) challenged those Houses to be of his Ward, whereunto (without Reason shewed) Sir Rowland Hayward yielded: And thus is that Side of the Street, from the North Corner of St. Mary-street almost to Bishopsgate, (wherein is one Plat of Ground, letten by the Chamberlain of London to the Parish of St. Martin Oteswich, to be a Church-yard or Burying-place for the Dead of that Parish, &c.) unjustly drawn from the Ward of Lime-street.

Divers other Proofs I could set down, but this one following may suffice. The Mayor and Aldermen of London made a Grant to the Fraternity of the Papey, in these Words:

“Be it remembered, that where now of late the Master and Wardens of the Fraternity of the Papey have made a Brick Wall, closing in the Chapel of St. Augustine, called Papey Chapel, situate in the Parish of All Saints in the Wall, in the Ward of Lime-street of the City of London: From the South-East Corner of the which Brick Wall, is a Scutcheon of twenty-one Foot of Assize from the said Corner Eastward: And from the same Scutcheon there to a Mesuage of fifty Foot and an half Westward: The said Scutcheon breaketh out of Line right Southward, betwixt the Measures aforesaid, three Foot and five Inches of Assize, upon the common Ground of the City aforesaid: Ralph Verney, Mayor, and the Aldermen of the same City, the twenty-second Day of October, the 6th Year of Edward IV. granted to John Hod, Priest, Mr. John Bolt, and Tho. Pachet, Priests, Wardens of the Fraternity of Papey aforesaid, and to their Successors for ever, &c. yielding 4d. Sterling yearling at Michaelmas.” And this is (saith my Book) inrolled in the Guildhall of London. Which is a sufficient Proof, the same Plat of Ground to be of Lime-street Ward.

On the South Side of this Street, stretching West from St. Mary-street, towards Bishopsgate-street, there was (of old Time, one large Mesuage builded of Stone and Timber in the Parish of St. Augustine in the Wall, now in the Parish of Allballows in the same Wall, belonging to the Earl of Oxford, (for Richard de Vere, Earl of Oxford, possessed it in the fourth of Henry V.) but in Process of Time, the Lands of the Earl fell to Females; amongst the which, one being married to Wingfield of Suffolk, this House with the Appurtenances fell to his Lot, and was by his Heir, Sir Robert Wingfield, sold to Mr. Edward Cooke, the Queen's Attorney General, who was afterward Lord Chief Justice Cooke.

It was ordered by the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, at a Court holden on Thursday the twenty-fourth of April, in the fourth Year of Edward VI. That the Chamberlain of London should yearly pay unto the Scavenger of Lime-street Ward 20 s. by even Portions, out of the Profit coming by the Butchers Stalls in Leadenball, toward the cleansing and sweet-keeping of the same Ward.

I find of Record, that in the Year 1371, the 45th of Edward III. a great Subsidy of 100000 Pounds was granted towards the King's Wars in France. Whereof the Clergy paid 50000 Pounds, and the Laity 50000 Pounds, to be levied in thirty-nine Shires of England, containing Parishes 8600. Of every Parish, 5 l. 16 s. the greater to help the lesser. This City (as one of the Shires) then containing twenty-four Wards, and in them 110 Parishes, was therefore assessed to 635 l. 12 s. whereof Lime-street Ward did bear 34 s. and no more; so small a Ward it was, and so accounted, as having no one whole Parish therein, but small Portions only of two Parishes in that Ward.

Of PORTSOKEN WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey.

Its Name. Bounds. Antient State. Extent. Modern State. Government. Aldermen and Common-Councilmen. Parishes and Churches. Priory of the Holy Trinity. St. Catharine's Trinity Church and Canons, East-Smithfield. New-Abby. Minorities. Goodman's-fields. Nunnery of St. Clare.

PORTSOKEN signifies a Franchise at the Gate: Of which below, under the Antiquities of this Ward.

It is bounded on the East by the Parishes of Spital-fields, Stepney, and St. George's in the East; on the South by Tower-hill; on the North by Bishopsgate Ward; on the West by Aldgate Ward.

In describing the Extent of this Ward, our best Direction is to follow the Order of the yearly parochial Perambulation, as follows:

Walking down Houndsditch, Northward, they cross the Way Eastward into Still and Hand-alley: Passing on along by the Garden-Wall, they proceed to Petticoat-lane, in the Middle of which is the Partition between the two Parishes of White-chapel and St. Botolph: There they go on to the Bars in the common Street, and, crossing the Way Southward, go through a Tavern, some Time the Castle; and then, turning Westward, pass on to the Minorities till they come to the Bars; where Ends the Ward and the Parish within the Freedom.

There, at the farther End, they turn down into an Alley, called Brown's-alley, and so as far as Goodman's-fields; then turn up the Street again, and go down Red-lion-alley, passing directly into Rosemary-lane, and thence down Nightingale-lane, lane, on the West Side, to the Hermitage-bridge, and so round St. Catharine's, and then passing over Tower-bill, they come again into the Freedom, and go directly up the Minories Northward till they come under Aldgate.

In this Ward the principal Streets and Places are Whitechapel, the Minories, and Houndsditch, together with the West Side of Petticoat-lane; in which Streets are divers Alleys, Courts, &c. of which in their Order.

White-
chapel.

Whitechapel is a spacious Street for Entrance into the City Eastward, and somewhat long, reckoning from the Lay-stall East unto the Corner of Houndsditch West. It is a great Thorough-fare, being the Essex Road, and well resorted to, which occasions it to be well inhabited, and accommodated with good Inns for the Reception of Travellers, Horses, Coaches, Waggon, &c.

Here on the South Side is a Hay-Market three Times a Week.

The South Side within the Bars, as well as a little Way without, is taken up by a great many Butchers, who carry on a great Trade, both Wholesale and Retail.

On the North Side are divers considerable Inns, much resorted to, as the Three Nuns, the Crown, the Black-bull, the Blue-boar; with several Shops which have great Trade out of the Country.

About the Bars ply a great Number of Stage-Coaches, for the Conveniency of carrying Passengers to Stratford, Bow, Low-layton, Layton-stone, West-ham, East-ham, Walthamstow, Woodford, Wansted, Barking, &c.

Places of Name in this Street within the Bars are as follow, beginning at St. Botolph's Church and so Eastward:

Alleys, &c.

First, Hatchet-alley, pretty well built, but hath a narrow Entrance White-Bear-alley, hath a long, narrow, and dark Passage into it, but within are good Brick Buildings. Sun-and-Trumpet-alley, very ordinary; near unto this Alley is the Bell Brewhouse, of a good Trade; and near unto the Blue-boar Inn, is the Boar's-head Tavern, being a House of pretty good Trade. Red-cross-court, well built, with new Brick Houses, hath a pretty large Passage into Petticoat-lane. Anchor-and-Harp-alley, both narrow and ordinary. Harrow-alley, containing two large Courts, and a long Alley that leads into Goodman's-fields; and at the upper End of this Alley, is a Place called the Blue-gate; all but indifferently built and inhabited. Chequer-yard, also but ordinary: And a new Street is lately built, which leads also into Goodman's-fields, and called Somerset-street.

Houndf-
ditch.

From Aldgate North-West to Bishopsgate, says Stow, lyeth the Ditch of the City, in that Part called Houndsditch, because that in old Time, when the same lay open, much Filth (conveyed forth of the City, especially dead Dogs) was there laid or cast.

Ditch.

Into this filthy Ditch King Canutus commanded Edrick, a noble Saxon, who had basely slain his King and Lord Edmund Ironside, to be drawn by the Heels from Baynard's-castle through the City, and cast in there, after he had first been tormented to Death by lighted Torches. Rich. of Ciciter.

Of later Time a Mud Wall was made, enclosing the Ditch, to keep out the laying of such Filth as had been accustomed.

Over-against this Mud Wall, on the other Side of the Street, was a fair Field, sometime belonging to the Priory of the Trinity, and since by Sir Tho. Audley given to Magdalen College in Cambridge.

A Field on the East Side.

This Ground contained a Messuage, a Dove-house, and a Garden of about seven Acres. There was also adjoining to this Garden a great Gate, and a Building over, and a Street or Lane leading from Houndsditch thither. For all this Sir Tho. Audley obtained of King Henry special Letters Patents, dated March 23, in the 25th of his Reign, as belonging to the Priory, to this Tenor:

Henricus Octavus, Dei gratia, &c. Omnibus ad quos, &c. Sciatis quod nos, &c. Dedimus & concessimus, &c. i. e. "Know ye, that we have given and granted to the said Thomas one Messuage, one Dovecoat, and one Garden or Parcel of Land, with the Appurtenances, containing by Estimation seven Acres of Land, whether more or less, as they lay and are in the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, London, viz. between a certain Street or Lane, called Heg-lane on one Part, and divers Messuages by the King's High-way, called Houndsditch, adjoining and built on the other Part. He gave also and granted to the said Thomas a certain great Gate, with an Edifice built upon it, and adjacent; and a certain Street or Lane, extending from the aforesaid King's High-way called Houndsditch, to, in and as far as the said Garden or Parcel of Land, containing seven Acres; with all Edifices, Walls, Ditches and Clofes, in and about the said Garden, or Parcel of the Lands there being: Which Messuage, Dovecoat, Garden, Gate, Street or Lane, and the other Premises, with their Appurtenances, lately belonged to the Prior and Convent of the Monastery or Priory of the Holy Trinity, London, by the Right of that Monastery; and which, among others, is come to our Hands by the Authority of Parliament, as well on the account of the Gift of Nicholas Hancock, late Prior, as on the account of the Dissolution of the said Monastery."

The next Year, that is, the 26th of the King's Reign, the same Sir Thomas Audley obtained of the King other Letters Patents, dated Decemb. 29. Wherein, among other Gifts, he granted to him Licence to give and grant lawfully the said Messuage, Dove-house and Garden, to Henry Parker, Knt. Tho. Barnardiston Kt. John Christmas, Esq. Tho. Pope, Arthur Clerk, and Tho. Spilman, Gentlemen. Yet it seems these Persons possessed not the Premises, at least not the Garden of seven Acres; since Mr. Stow (as above) writeth, that Sir Tho. Audley gave it to Magdalen College, of which he was Founder.

This Field (as all other about the City) was enclosed, reserving open Passage thereinto for such as were disposed. Towards the Street were some small Cottages, of two Stories high, and little Garden-plats backward, for poor bedrid People, (for in that Street dwelt none other) builded by some Prior of the Holy Trinity, to whom that Ground belonged.

In my Youth, (says Stow) I remember, devout People, as well Men as Women of this City, were accustomed oftentimes (especially on Fridays, weekly) to walk that way purposely, and there to bestow their charitable Alms, every poor Man or Woman lying in their Bed within their Window, which was towards the Street open so low, that every Man might see them; a clean linen Cloth lying in their Window, and a Pair of Beads; to shew that there lay a bedrid Body, unable but to pray only: This Street was first paved in the Year 1503.

About the latter End of the Reign of King Hen. VIII. three Brethren that were Gun-founders, surnamed Owens, got Ground there to build upon, and to enclose for casting of Brafs Ordnance. These occupied a good Part of the Street on the Field Side, and in short Time divers others also builded there; so that the poor bedrid People were worn out, and, in place of their homely Cottages, such Houses builded as do rather want Room than Rent; which Houses be for the most part possessed by Brokers, Sellers of old Apparel, and such like. The Residue of the Field was for the most Part made into a Garden, by a Gardener named Carwsway, one that served the Markets with Herbs and Roots. And in the last Year of King Edward VI. the same was parcelled into Gardens, wherein are now many fair Houses of Pleasure builded.

But as it is fatal to the Suburbs of every great City to be infected with some foul and unclean Birds, that there build their Nests, although not with professed and ignominious Stain of lewd Life; because (within the Limits of Houndf-ditch) dwell many a good and honest Citizen, that will never endure such scandalous Neighbourhood: Yet there are crept in among them a base kind of Vermin, well-deserving to be ranked and numbered with them, whom our old Prophet and Countryman Gyldas called Ætatis atramentum, the black Discredit of the Age, and of the Place where they are suffered to live; or rather (as St. Bernard thinks it more convenient to term them) Baptisatos Judæos; who take themselves to be Christians, when they are worse (indeed) than the Jews ever were for Usury.

Pawn-brokers.

These Men, or rather Monsters in the Shape of Men, profess to live by lending, and yet will lend nothing but upon Pawns; neither to any, but unto poor People only, and for no less Gain than after fifty or threescore Pounds in the hundred. The Pawn of the poor Borrower must needs be more than double worth the Money lent upon it, and the Time of Limitation is no longer than a Month; albeit they well know, that the Money needs not be repayed back until a Twelvemonth's End. By which Time the Interest grows to be so great, that the Pawn, which (at the first) was better than twice worth the Money borrowed on it, doth not (in the End) prove to be valuable to the Debt, which must be payed before the poor Party can redeem it. By which extorting Means of proceeding the poor Borrower is quite cheated of his Pawn, for less than the third part, which it was truly worth indeed.

Such Gains are the greedy
Usurers
Glory.

It is a great Error (in my poor Opinion) that in so antient and famous a City, abounding (other-wise) in most Christian Alms and Works of Mercy, that among so many worthy Liberalities bestowed on the Poor in divers and distinct Parishes, an Order is not taken for such a publick Stock for the truly Poor, that when in their urgent Necessity, either by want of Means, Sicknefs, and other Hindrances, their Pawns may not go to the Cut-throat Usurer; but remain to their own Good (living or dying) or to their Heirs, without any other Benefit, than that it may still serve for the like Relief.

A publick Stock

well for the Poor in every Parish.

And let me not here be mistaken, that I condemn such as live by honest Buying and Selling, and making a good Conscience of their dealing: No truly, I mean only the Judas Broker, that lives by the Bag, and (except God be more merciful to him) will follow him that did bear the Bag.

On the Ditch Side of this Street, the Mud Wall is also (by little and little) taken all down, the Bank of the Ditch being rased, made level Ground, and turned into Garden Plats and Carpenters Yards, and many large Houses are there builded. The Filth of which Houses, as also the Earth cast out of their Vaults, is turned into the Ditch: By which means the Ditch is filled up, and both the Ditch and Wall so hidden, that they cannot be seen of the Passers by.

Houndf-ditch is now built into Houses; and, besides the Street, which is taken up by Brokers, Joiners, Brafsiers, Salesmen, and such as deal in Cloaths, Linnen and Upholstery Ware, (for which, at present, it is a Place of considerable Trade) here are a great many Courts and Alleys. We shall only take Notice of these in this Ward, beginning at Still-alley; the others, which lie in Bishopsgate Ward, being there treated of.

ditch.

Still-alley hath a narrow Entrance, but is very large, containing several Turnings to other Places; as, the Lower Ground, which hath a Passage into Gravel-lane and Gutteridge-rents, which hath pretty good Buildings; and out of this Place is a Passage down Steps into a Court, which leads into Devonshire-square, treated of in Bishopsgate Ward. Greyhound-alley, small and ordinary. Fleur-de-lis-court, a square Place, with old decayed Buildings, ill inhabited. Wool-sack-alley leads into Gravel-lane, a large Place, with pretty good Buildings, and contains several Places; as Crab-court, where there is a large Brewhouse; and over-against this Place is Pine-apple-court, which hath a Free-stone Pavement, and contains four good Brick Houses. Here is also Star-court, with three or four indifferent Places without a Name. Hand-alley, small and ordinary. Skinner's-alley, also small and ordinary, with old Timber Houses. Castle-yard hath a long turning Passage with good Houses, indifferently well inhabited. Ball-and-Shear-court, small and mean; and adjoining to this is another small Place without a Name. Angel-alley, long and narrow, falls into Gravel-lane. Fire-ball-alley, big, but ordinary. Fire-ball-court, a handsome open Place, well built and inhabited, with a Passage into Gravel-lane. Cock-and-hoop-yard, a large open Place, with Buildings fit for good Inhabitants. Red-lion-court, a square Place, with indifferent good Buildings. Shepherd-and-dog-alley, both small and mean. Three-bowls-court, small and ordinary. Walnut-tree-yard, but small. Joiner's-court hath tolerable good Buildings, with a Free-stone stone Pavement. Harrow-alley, but small. Cock-and-wheat-sheaf-alley, likewise small, and separate each from the other by a Pale. Rose-and-crown-court, a neat Place with good Buildings, well inhabited, with a Free-stone Pavement. Seven-star-alley, indifferent good; and to some of these Houses there are Gardens.

Church-lane, very large and open, the North Side fronting St. Botolph's Church and Church-yard, hath a Row of good Buildings, of which two are large; and at the upper End is Mr. Smith the Carpenter's Yard, with Livery-Stables over-against it. Gun-yard, a very handsome square Court, with good large Houses very well inhabited, with an Entrance wide enough for Coach or Cart.

Gravel-lane.

Gravel-lane, very large, branching itself into several Parts, as Seven-step-alley, Blackamoor-court, which fall into Petticoat-lane. Skrewsbury-court, a pretty handsome square Place. Honey-lane, somewhat long, and falls into Petticoat-lane. Sutton's-Rents, small and ordinary. Wood-Green's-court, a pretty handsome open square Place, indifferently well inhabited. Harrow-alley, long and narrow, falls into Petticoat-lane. Clarke's-court, pretty handsome. Hand-and-crown-court, a good open Place. New George court hath indifferent good Brick Buildings, with a Free-stone Pavement. Vine-court, a handsome square Place, with new Brick Buildings, and a Free-stone Pavement. Pease-porridge-alley, small and ordinary. King's-head-court, pretty large. Almost over-against this Court is Oliver's-court, small and ordinary. Hand-alley hath a Passage into Bishopsgate-street.

Petticoat-lane.

Petticoat-lane, formerly called Hog-lane, is near Whitechapel-Bars, and runs North-ward towards St. Mary Spital. On both Sides this Lane, in antient Times, were Hedge-rows and Elm trees, with pleasant Fields to walk in; insomuch that Gentlemen used to have Houses there for the Air; and Mr. Strype saith, when he was a Boy, there was one commonly called the Spanish Ambassador's House, who, in King James's 1st's Reign, dwelt there, and whom he takes to be the famous Count Gondomar: And a little Way off this, on the East Side the Way, down a paved Alley, now called Strype's-court, from his Father's inhabiting there, was a large House with a good Garden before it, built and inhabited by Hans Jacobson, the said King James's Jeweller, wherein Mr. Strype was born.

But after, many French Protestants, who in the said King's Reign, and before, fled their Country for their Religion, and planted themselves here, viz. in that Part of the Lane near Spital-fields, to follow their Trade, being generally Broad Weavers of Silk, it soon became a contiguous Row of Buildings on both Sides of the Way.

In this Petticoat-lane are divers Courts and Alleys, most of which on the West Side, which are in this Ward, have their Passage into, or out of Gravel-lane; but those that have not are five. Inkborn-court, a pretty open Place, with indifferent Inhabitants. Near this Court is White-bart-court, which is but indifferent. Bates's-yard, very mean; and Red-cross-court, which hath a Passage into Whitechapel-street. This Part of the Lane coming out at the Bars is not mighty well inhabited; those of the most Account are Horners, who prepare Horns for other petty Manufacturers.

The Minories, of which there are the Great and the Little: The Great is a broad and spacious Street, the Entrance into which is out of Aldgate-street, over-against St. Botolph's Church, and runneth Southward into Little Tower-hill; having on the West Side London-Wall, where antiently the City Ditch went, as in Houndsditch, and was used to cast Filth in, and so lay open; which being found inconvenient, noisome and dangerous, it was filled up, and the Ground converted to other Uses; there being now a Row of Buildings next the Wall, and another on the Back of the Minories, it is become a Street, and bears the Name of the Vineyard, and hath a broad Passage into it out of the Minories, which is very well inhabited by considerable Tradesmen in most Branches, but chiefly noted for the Gunsmiths, who drive a considerable Trade.

The Little Minories are the Buildings erected upon the Site of the Abbey of Nuns, called Minorites, containing two or three Courts, all pretty well inhabited: And here also is the Trinity Minories Church. Out of this Place is a Passage into Heydon-yard.

Near this Nunnery, or Little Minories, was a large Field and Farm, at which, Mr. Stow saith, he himself, when a Lad, fetch'd many a Half-penny worth of Milk, and had never less than three Pints in the Summer, nor less than a Quart in the Winter, for that Money. This was kept by one Goodman, whose Son afterwards let it out, and lived like a Gentleman upon the Rent of it. It still retains the Name of Goodman's Fields, tho' it is now converted into Streets, with very good Brick Houses, inhabited by several Merchants and Persons of Repute; and about 15 Years ago had a Theatre or Play-House in one of them, built in a pretty good Taste.

To return therefore to this Street called the Minories; therein are several Courts or Alleys: Beginning towards Aldgate there is Black-boy-court, being long, narrow, and ordinary. Maiden-head-alley, small, nasty, and beggarly. Three-king's-alley, pretty large, containing two Courts, one within another, and both indifferent good. Fountain-alley, very mean. Ship yard, an indifferent large square Court, but very mean, with old Houses. Well-alley, but small, with a long and narrow Passage to it. Shippey's-yard, indifferent large, and pretty good, especially the upper Part. Heydon yard, being broad enough for Coach or Cart: At the upper End is a good large Square, or open Place railed about, with a Row of Trees, very ornamental in the Summer Season, having on the East Side Coach-Houses and Stables; on the West Side a very handsome Row of large Houses, with Court-yards before them, and are inhabited by Merchants and Persons of Repute; on the North, a Square of good Brick Houses. Out of this Yard, on the West, is a Passage into the Little Minories, on the East another into Goodman's-fields. Brown's-yard, indifferent good, with a Passage down Steps into some Part of it. Squirrel's-alley, pretty well built, with a narrow paved Passage that goes down Steps. Swan-alley, long and narrow, hath a Passage into Manfel-street.

Alleys, &c.

Goodman's-yard, very large, and leads into Goodman's-fields, almost over-against Peascod-street, hath pretty good Buildings, and well inhabited. Red-lion-alley, long and narrow, with old built Houses. Red-gate-court, but small, with a Passage down Steps into Heathen's-court. Wheeler's-yard, a pretty open Place. Bullock's-court, a pretty handsome open Place. Hammersmith-alley, very ordinary, with a Passage to it down Steps. Wall's-court, a handsome Place, with a Passage to it paved with Pebble Stones. Black-horse-alley, containing two small Courts, which are but ordinary. Eales's-court, pretty open, with a Passage for a Cart, and the Houses are indifferently well inhabited. Weeden's-rents, with a descending steep Passage, very mean. Gooding's-yard, a handsome open Place, indifferently well built. Bellows's-yard, indifferent, with a Passage to it down Steps. Star-alley, but ordinary: At the lower End is another Court down Steps, also very mean. Three-crown-court, also but ordinary.

Government.

This Ward hath an Alderman, and five Common-Councilmen, including the Deputy. It is assessed 4 l. 10 s. to the Fifteenth.

Watch.

The nightly Watch consists of a Constable, a Beadle, and sixty Watchmen.

Jury.

The Jurymen returned by the Wardmote Inquest for this Ward are to serve as Jurors in the several Courts of Guildhall in the Month of January.

Alderman, Common Council.

The Alderman is Sir William Calvert, Knt. LL. D. The Common-Councilmen are, Mr. Robert Pycroft, Deputy, Mr. Philip Grafton, Mr. Richard Bridgman, Mr. Richard Wilson, Mr. Lodowick Mansfield.

Remarkable Things.

We don't find any remarkable Buildings or Places in this Ward, except,

Parishes.

First, Two Parish-Churches: (1.) St. Botolph without Aldgate; and, (2.) Trinity Minories: Of which hereafter in our Parochial History.

Charity-Schools.

Two Charity-Schools: (1.) One founded in the Freedom for fifty Boys and forty Girls by Sir John Cuss, Alderman; of which already under the Account of Aldgate Ward, in which Gate the said School is taught at present. (2.) Another School for forty Boys and thirty Girls, founded by Sir Samuel Starling, Knt. and Alderman of the City of London; who, by his last Will and Testament, bearing Date the seventh Day of August, Anno Dom. 1673, gave certain Copyhold Lands and Tenements, lying in East-Smithfield, in the Parish of St. Mary Whitechapel, belonging to the Manor of Stepney in the County of Middlesex, the Rents amounting to the Value of 22 l. yearly, as a Foundation of a Charity-School, for the better Education of the poor Youths of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate; which Lands and Tenements he surrendered for the Use of his Will to Mr. Corfellis, Brewer; Mr. John Parsons, Brewer; and Thomas Heath, Scrivener; Trustees of the said Charity. The School-master to be a Bachelor of Arts of the University of Cambridge, and to teach School in a Brick House, which he, the said Sir Samuel Starling, built at his own Charge at the East End of the Town-House, or Quest-House, upon Little Tower-hill, in the Manor of East-Smithfield. The School-master to be chosen by the Inquest of the Ward of Portoken, and the Leet Jury of the Manor of East-Smithfield; and to be subject to such Rules and Orders as they shall, from Time to Time, establish for the due Government of the said School, on Pain of being removed and forfeiting his Right to receive the said Rents: The Rules and Orders so concluded on by the Wardmote Inquest and Leet Jury to be engrossed, and hung up in two Tables; the one in the Vestry-House of the Parish-Church of Aldgate, the other in the Quest-House upon Little Tower-hill, where the School is taught. This extracted from Sir Samuel Starling's last Will and Testament.

The ORDERS follow.

ORDERS made by the Wardmote Inquest of Portoken Ward, London, and the Jury of the Court Leet of the Manor of East-Smithfield, to be observed and kept by the School-master for the Time being, for the teaching of certain poor Boys of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, in Manner following; being the Gift of Sir Samuel Starling, Knt. by his last Will and Testament.

"Imprimis, The said School-master shall teach sixteen poor Boys of the Parish of St. Botolph without Aldgate, that is, eight of the upper Ward, and eight of the lower End, or more or less as the Estate will bear; such as shall be nominated and appointed by the said Trustees, whom the Wardmote Inquest and Leet Jury have chosen: And the said Master shall have for teaching the poor Boys twenty Shillings each Boy per Annum.

"II. The said Master shall teach the said Boys to read: And after they can read competently well, shall teach them to write, and the Grounds of Arithmetick, to fit them for Servants or Apprentices.

"III. The said Master shall, together herewith, instruct the said poor Children in the Knowledge and Practice of the Christian Religion, and teach them the Principles thereof, as they are laid down in the Church Catechism; and this shall be done twice a Week: And the said Master shall be obliged to bring the said Children, once in five Weeks, to Church to be catechized.

"IV. The said Master shall take particular Care of the Manners and Behaviour of the poor Children, and study all proper Means to discourage and correct the Beginnings of Vice; and particularly Lying, Swearing and Cursing, taking God's Name in Vain, and the Prophanation of the Lord's Day, &c.

"V. The said Master shall bring the said Children to Church twice every Lord's Day, and once on Holidays; and teach them to behave themselves with all Reverence in the House of God.

"VI. The Master shall constantly attend his proper Business in the School during the Hours appointed for teaching, viz. from seven to eleven in the Morning, and from one to five in the Afternoon, the Summer Half-Year; and from eight in the Morning to eleven, and from one to four in the Afternoon, in Winter.

"VII. The Names of the Children shall be called over every Morning and Afternoon, and if any be missing, they shall be taken Notice of: And the said Master shall go to Prayers with the said Children Morning and Evening, and

“and shall order the said Children so to do at Home.

“VIII. The said Master shall not teach above thirty Scholars, besides the said sixteen, without taking to his Assistance an able Person to be his Usher.

“IX. It is ordered, That no Boy shall be admitted into the said School under eight Years old; and also, that the said Schoolmaster shall not make any Demand, nor take Money of any Person, for any Boy's Entrance into the said School.

“X. As often as any of the sixteen Children shall be removed from the said School, that then the said Master shall give Notice to the Trustees of the said School, that another may be sent in his Place.

“XI. That the Parents of the said Children be put in Mind to take Care to send their Children clean washed and combed to School.

“XII. It is ordered by the aforesaid Inquest and Leet Jury, That the aforesaid Rules and Orders be set up in the said School, that the said Master may take Notice thereof, and govern himself accordingly.

“XIII. And Lastly, It is ordered, That there shall be a Copy of these Orders put up in the Vestry-house of the said Parish, and another put up in the Quest-House upon Little Tower-bill, in the said Parish; and that the Names of the present Trustees of the said Estate be underwritten:

Its Name.

This Portoken, which signifieth a Franchise at the Gate, was some Time a Guild, and had its Beginning in the Reign of King Edgar, between seven and eight hundred Years ago, when thirteen Knights, well beloved of the King and Realm, for Services by them done, requested to have a certain Portion of Land on the East Part of the City, left desolate and forsaken by the Inhabitants, by Reason of too much Servitude. They besought the King to have this Land, with the Liberty of a Guild, for ever. The King granted their Request on the following Conditions, to wit, That each of them should victoriously accomplish three Combats, one above the Ground, one under Ground, and the third in the Water: And after this, at a certain Day, in East Smithfield, they should run with Spears against all Comers; all which was gloriously performed: And the same Day the King named it Knigheten Guild, and so bounded it from Aldgate, to the Place where the Bars now are, toward the East, on both the Sides of the Street, and extended it towards the North, and the Gate, now since called Bishopsgate, unto the House then of William Presbyter, after of Jeffrey Tanner, and then of the Heirs of Colver; after that of John Euseby; but since of the Lord Bouchier, &c. And again, towards the South, unto the River Thames, and so far into the Water, as a Horseman, entering the same, might ride at Low-Water, and throw his Spear: So that all East-Smithfield, with the right Part of the Street that goeth to Dodding Pond into the Thames; and also the Hospital of St. Catharine, with the Mills that were founded in King Stephen's Days, and the outward Stone Wall, and the new Ditch of the Tower, are of the said Fee and Liberty: For the said Wall and Ditch were made in the Time of King Richard I. when he was in the Holy Land, by William Longshamps, Bishop of Ely.

These Knights had no other Charter all the Days of Edgar, Ethelred, and Canutus, until the Time of Edward the Confessor, whom the Heirs of those Knights humbly besought to confirm their Liberties, whereunto he graciously granted, and gave them a Deed thereof, as appeareth in the Book of the late House of the Holy Trinity: The said Charter was fairly written in the Saxon Letter and Tongue.

After this, King William, the Son of William the Conqueror, made a Confirmation of the same Liberties unto the Heirs of these Knights in these Words:

“William, King of England, to Maurice, Bishop, and Godfry de Magnum, and Richard de Parre, and to his faithful People of London, greeting: Know ye me to have graunted to the Men of Knigheten Guild the Guild that belonged to them, and the Land that belonged thereunto, with all Customs, as they had the same in the Time of King Edward, and my Father. Witness, Hugh de Buche, at Retbing.”

After him, King Henry I. confirmed the same by his Charter to the like Effect. After which Time the Church of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate being founded by Queen Matilda, Wife to the said Henry, the Multitude of Brethren praising God Day and Night therein in short Time so increased, that all the City was delighted in beholding of them; insomuch that, in the Year 1115, certain Burgeffes of London, of the Progeny of those Noble English Knights; to wit, Radulphus Fitzalgod, Wilmarde de Devereshe, Orgare le Rude, Edward Hupcornehill, Blackstanus, and Alwine his Kinsman, and Robert his Brother, the Sons of Leaffstanus the Goldsmith, Wizo his Son, Hugh Fitzvulgar, and Algare Secusme; coming together into the Chapter-House of the said Church of the Holy Trinity, gave to the same Church and Canons, serving God therein, all the Lands and Soke, called in English Knigheten Guild, which lieth to the Wall of the City without the same Gate, and stretcheth to the River Thames: They gave it (taking upon them the Brotherhood and Participation of the Benefits of that House) by the Hands of Prior Norman.

And the better to confirm this their Grant, they offered upon the Altar there the Charter of Edward, together with the other Charters which they had thereof; and afterward they did put the aforesaid Prior in Seisin thereof, by the Church of St. Botolph, which is built thereon, and is the Head of that Land. These Things were thus done before Bernard, Prior of Dunstable, John, Prior of Derland, Jeffrey Clinton, Chamberlain, and many other Clerks and Laymen, French and English. Orgare le Prude (one of their Company) was sent to King Henry, beseeching him to confirm their Gift, which the King gladly granted by this Deed following:

“Henry

" Henry, King of England, to R. Bishop of London, to the Sheriffs and Provost, and to all his Barons, and faithful People, French and English, of London and Middlesex, greeting: Know ye me to have granted and confirmed to the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity of London, the Soke of the English Knighten Guild, and the Land which pertaineth thereunto, and the Church of St. Botolph, as the Men of the same Guild have given and granted unto them: And I will and straightly command, that they may hold the same well and honourably and freely, with Sack and Soke, Toll and Thea, Infangthefe, and all Customs belonging to it, as the Men of the same Guild in the best Sort had the same in the Time of King Edward; and as King William my Father, and Brother, did grant it to them by their Writs. Witnesses, A. the Queen, Jeffrey de Clinton, the Chancellor, and William de Clinton, at Woodstock.

This Charter was afterwards confirmed by Gilbert, William, and Roger, Barons of London. Then by St. Alphage, Archbishop of Canterbury. Then by Alexander and Innocent, Popes. Innocent also granted to the Prior and Convent, that the afore-said Church and Parishioners of the same should be served by one of the Canons, to be removed at the Prior's Pleasure.

These Writings concerning this Knighten Guild registered in Guildhall.

All these prescribed Writings (saith my Book) which some Time belonged to the Priory of the Holy Trinity, are registered in the End of the Book of Remembrances of the Guildhall of London, marked with the Letter C. Folio 134. The King sent also his Sheriffs, to wit, Aubery de Vere, and Roger, Nephew to Hubert, which (upon his Behalf) should invest this Church with the Possessions hereof; which the said Sheriffs accomplished coming upon the Ground, Andrew Buchevite, and the forenamed Witnesses and others standing by; notwithstanding Othowerus, Acollivillus, Otto, and Jeffrey, Earl of Essex, Constables of the Tower by Succession, withheld by force a Portion of the said Land, as I have before delivered.

The Founding of Trinity Church. Book C. Fol. 135. and Dunthorn, Fol. 79.

All this History above related of the Founding of Trinity Church within Aldgate, and of the Beginning of the Canons Regular and Augustin Friars in England, is taken out of the Book C. in Guildhall, and out of an old Book there, called Dunthorn; where we read as follows:

" In the Year of Christ 1108, and in the 8th Year of King Henry, was the Church of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, London, founded by the venerable Lady Maud, Wife unto the said King, by the Persuasion of Archbishop Anselm. It was given unto Norman, who became the first Prior not only there, and first Canon Regular of the whole Kingdom: For by him was all England (saith my Record) adorned with the Rule of St. Augustin, and the Canonical Habit of that Order: Which Order, by the gathering together of many Friars into that Church, was the Number of those that praised God Day and Night, so much encreased, that the whole City was much delighted with the Sight of it: Infomuch that, in the Year of our Lord 1125, certain Burgeses of the City, descended of the antient Race of the English Knights, by Name Ralfe, the Son

Norman the first Prior, and the first of the Augustin Order.

" of Algode, Wolfard le Deverish, Orgar le Prude, Edward Upcornbill, Blacstan, and his Cousin Alwyn; Alwyn, and Robert his Brother, Sons of Leoffstan; Leoffstan the Goldsmith, and Wizo his Son, Hugh the Son of Wolgare, Algar Secusenne, Orgar the Son of Dereman, Osbert Drinckepin, and Adelardus Hornpate, meeting together in the Chapter of the Church of Christ, which is situate within the Walls of the City near Aldgate, freely gave unto the said Church, and unto the Canons serving God, all that Land and Soken, which was called Anglisch Cnithgilda; which lies by the Wall of the City without Aldgate, and reaches into the Thames. They gave it, I say, themselves becoming Friars, and partaking of the Benefits of that Place, by the Hand of Norman the Prior, who received them into the Society, as he had done others before them, by an Oath taken upon the Text of the Gospel.

" And to the Intent that this Gift of theirs might stand firm and unchangeable, they surrendered up (among other Writing which they had for it) the Charter of St. Edward: After which they gave the Prior Seisin and Possession of the said Land * by the Church of St. Botolph, which had been builded upon the same, and was the Head of it.

* That is, by giving him Entrance and Possession into the Church of St. Botolph, which was the Head, or, as it were, the Capital Messuage of the Manor.

" All this was done before these Witnesses, Bernard, Prior of Dunstable, John, Prior of Landa, and divers other French and English People.

" The said Donors hereupon sent one of their own Company, Ordgar le Prude by Name, unto King Henry with their Petition, that he would be pleased to give his Consent and Confirmation to their said Gift. Whereupon the King very willingly allowed the said Land and Soken unto the Church; and to be free and acquitted from all Service to himself, as frank Alms ought to be; which he thus confirmed by his Charter."

Henry, King of England, &c. as before.

To all this was added the sacred Confirmation of the Pope, without which nothing was firm enough in those Times. Innocent II. in the second Year of King Stephen, Anno 1137, directed this Bull to his beloved Son Norman, Prior of that Church, placed within the Walls of London, and to the Friars, &c. i. e. " We appoint, that whatsoever Possessions and Goods the said Christ-Church doth now justly and lawfully possess, or hereafter by the Concession of Popes, Grants of Kings and Princes, Offerings of the Faithful, or by other just Means may be gotten, do remain firm and inviolable to you and your Successors. Among which, these we thought convenient to express by their proper Names; to wit, two Parts of Issues of the City of Exon, the Lands of Letune, which Simon du Moulins, and Adeline his Wife, out of a Principle of Piety, granted to the same Place, the Land and the Soke of Anglische Cnithgild, the Church of Bix, with its Rents, the Church of Totenbam. Besides, whatever Churches or Lands, without the City of London or within, reasonably bestowed upon you by God's faithful People, or shall happen to be offered hereafter, we confirm to you, and

London.

The Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity being thus seized of the said Land and Soke of Knights Guild, (a Part of the Suburb without the Wall, but within the Liberties of the City) the same Prior was, for him and his Successors, admitted as one of the Aldermen of London, to govern the same Land and Soke. According to the Customs of the City, he did sit in Court, and rode with the Mayor, and his Brethren the Aldermen, as one of them, in Scarlet, or other Livery as they used, until the Year 1531; at the which Time the said Priory, by the last Prior there, was surrendered to King Henry VIII. in the twenty-third of his Reign; who gave this Priory to Sir Thomas Audely, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England, and he pulled down the Church: Since the which Dissolution of that House, the said Ward of Portfoken hath been governed by a temporal Man, one of the Aldermen of London, elected by the Citizens, as be the Aldermen of other Wards.

Ry. Feod.
vol. 1. p. 20

But to shew further what Countenance the Popes gave to this Priory of the Holy Trinity, I read this Bull of Pope Alexander, indulging Authority to the Prior over his Company, not to be controlled by the King himself, no not in his own Dominions: 8 Henry II. Anno Dom. 1162. "Alexander the Pope granteth the Prior, upon his Request, whereby the State of his Church may be preserved and reformed for the better, that the Persons of the said Church, under the Discipline of regular Observance, may give to God worthy and acceptable Service, we grant him free Power of Correction, as is expedient; as to him belongs of correcting of the Excesses of those under him, and recalling of Fugitives to the same Church, as it pertains to his Office; notwithstanding the King's, or any other secular Prohibition. Let no Man therefore infringe this Page of our Grant, or oppose it by any rash Boldness: But if any presume to attempt it, let him know that he shall incur the Indignation of the omnipotent God, and the blessed Apostles St. Peter and Paul. At Viterbium, the third of July, and the third of the Pontificate."

A Presentment by Portfoken
Ward.

I have met with an antient Presentment of certain Jurats of this Ward in the Reign of King Edward I. at an Inquisition of his Justices, wherein the said Alderman himself is presented: And presenting Things amiss out of the Ward as well as within, it may not be amiss to lay it before the Reader:

"The Prior of Christ-Church, London, holds his Wardmote of Portfoken of Aldgate, within the Priory, unjustly; because his Wardmote was wont to be held within the Portfoken, and not without.
"The Jurats say, that Sir Rafe de Berners, Knt. holds one Messé and two Water-Mills in St. Botolph without Aldgate, which are called the Knights Fees: Which Tenement ought to find for the King one Servant armed in one Turret in the Tower for forty Days, in the
VOL. II. NUMB. LXXXV.

"Time of War, at his proper Cost; and in the last War he made a Default.

"That Giles de Wodeham, Knt. made a Ditch upon the King's Way, called Kingsescesland.

"Philip Lands dwells in a House upon the common Pasture, called Camprichesheth, at Hackney.

"That the Prior of Christ-Church, London, hath applied to himself a Lane between his Priory and the City Wall, through which was wont to be a common Way.

"That the Nuns of St. Helen's within Bishopsgate apply to themselves a Lane from Bishopsgate-street unto St. Mary-at-Axe-street.

"That an Hermitage is placed in a Turret of the Wall of the City near Aldgate, and it is built four Feet without the Turret of the said Wall in the King's Highway."

To add a few more Remarks concerning this antient Monastery or Priory of the Holy Trinity: The afore said Queen Maud gave to the Prior and Convent the Church of Brackynge, [the same with Brangbing or Brawgling, in Hertfordshire] with the Appurtenances; also the Churches of St. Augustine Papey, near the Wall, and St. Eamund's Lombard-street, and of Allballows upon the Wall: To which Churches the said Prior and Convent presented. These three last Churches belonged to the Soke of Aldgate, which the said Queen Maud gave to this Priory; and from these Churches they received certain yearly Pensions; that is, from St. Augustine's twelve Pence, from St. Edmund's thirteen Shillings and four Pence, and from Allballows three Shillings. All-Saints Fenchurch pertained also to them, whence they received two Shillings yearly Pension. To this Priory also the Church of Bix or Bixil belonged, given them by William Corbil, Archbishop of Canterbury.

given to this Priory.

The Boundaries of the Scite of this Priory appear in the Instrument of the Grant made of it by King Henry VIII. to Sir Thomas Audely, viz. A magna porta civitatis nostre Lond. &c. i. e. "From the great Gate of our City of London called Aldgate, and so thence on the North Side of the King's Street, or high Street, called Aldgate-street, unto the Bell-house or Steeple of St. Katharine Christ-Church; and from thence by a certain Street reaching from the said King's Street by the said Bell-house unto the great Gate of the said late Monastery, and so by the said Street from the said great Gate of the said late Monastery unto the Stone Wall of our City of London; and so by the said Wall unto the said great Gate called Aldgate."

The Bounds of it.

The Monks of this Priory I find to be commended in a Charter of one Gualo, Cardinal of St. Martin, Legate of the Apostolick See, for their being such obedient Sons to the Holy Roman Mother Church in the late Disturbance in England, by Reason of the Discord between the King [John] and the Barons; wherein they underwent heavy Losses, and no small Wrongs: And, in Consideration thereof, the Cardinal confirmed to them the Church of Brackinges for their own Uses. This Grant was made in the Year 1211.

This Priory was once taken into the King's Hands for receiving a certain Thief that escaped from Newgate.

Surrendered to King
H. VIII.
A.D. 1531

Dr. Kennet, Lord
Bishop of Peterborough.

This Church was surrendered up into King Henry VIII's Hands on the fourth of February, 1531, 23 Regis, (as appears by the Copy of the Instrument communicated to Mr. Strype by the Rev. White Kennet, D. D.) Nicholas Hancock, the last Prior, and his Convent, assembled together in their Chapter-house, surrendering it by a formal Deed, sealed by their common Seal: And on the twenty-fifth of February, in the same Year, the said Prior and Convent did recognize the afore-said Surrender by their Names subscribed, viz. Hancock the Prior, George Grevyl, and seventeen more of the Convent, before Richard Watkyns, LL. B. Publick Notary, required hereunto by Rowland Lee and John Olyver, Clerks, or Masters of Chancery, before whom the Surrender was made in the Chapter-House; wherein is remarkable the Cause they assign for this Surrender,—Domus, que in suis fructibus, redditibus, proventibus, obventibus & emolumentis non mediocriter deteriorata est, & quasi in totum diminuta, ingentique ære alieno obruta, oppressa & gravata extitit, &c. i. e. "That their House was not a little sunk in its Fruits, Revenues, and Benefits, and in effect come to nothing, and over Head and Ears in Debt; and therefore that they maturely weighing and considering with themselves, that unless the King (being their Founder and Patron) did apply and provide some speedy Remedy, it must needs utterly perish, both in Spirituals and Temporals; they gave and granted it to his Majesty to all Effect of Law, and submitted and subjected themselves, their Monastery, and all their Rights, into his Hand, with free Power and Authority to alienate and dispose of them to what Uses he pleased."

The Grant thereof to Sir Tho. Audely.

The Grant of the Scite of this Priory thus in the King's Hands, with divers Messuages there and in Hertfordshire, the King granted to Sir Thomas Audely, Knt. Lord Chancellor of England, the Letters Patents bearing Date the ninth of April, in the twenty-fifth of Henry VIII. Anno 1533. And by another Charter the said King granted to the said Audely all whatsoever belonged to this religious House lying within Aldgate, or without; that is, in the Parish of St. Katharine Christ-Church within Aldgate, or in St. Botolph without; to be held in Soccage by Fealty only. This was dated the twenty-eighth of June, Anno Regn. 27. Not to be silent of other Letters Patents of the King, dated the twenty-ninth of December, the Year before, to the said Sir Thomas, Sir Henry Parker, and others, of the Manor of Brawling, alias Brawling-bury, and the Rectory of Brawling in the County of Hertford, Parcel of the Lands of the said Priory.

Thus much for the Out-Bounds of Knighten Guild, or Portsoken Ward, and for the Antiquity and Government thereof.

Hospital of St. Katharine.

Now of the Parts therein, this is specially to be noted: First, the East Part of the Tower standeth there; then an Hospital of St. Katharine, founded by Matilda the Queen, Wife to King Stephen, by Licence of the Prior and Convent of the Holy Trinity in London, on whose Ground she founded it. Elleanor the Queen, Wife to King Edward I. a second Foundress, appointed there to be a Master, three Brethren Chaplains, and three Sisters, ten poor Women, and six poor Clerks. She gave to them the Manor of Carleton in Wiltshire, and Upchurch in Kent, &c. Queen Philippa, Wife to King Edward III. 1351, founded a Chauntry there, and gave to that Hospital ten Pounds Land by Year. It was of late Time called a free Chapel, a College, and an Hospital for poor Sisters.

A second Foundress.

To this House belonged the Manor of Rissendon in the Isle of Shepy, and a Tenement in the Parish of Menstre [Minster] there; and another Manor of Chesingbery in Wilts; and Quarley [written also Owarley] in the County of Southampton; Parcel of the Priory of Okeburne, granted the nineteenth of Henry VI. Tenements in Reynham in Kent, accepted in Exchange; a Messuage in a Lane called Bow-lane, &c. Many Liberties were granted to this Hospital, and a Fair to be held upon Tower-hill the Day after the Feast of St. James, granted the twentieth of Henry VI. In this Church of St. Katharine was founded a Chauntry in Honour of St. Fabian and St. Sebastian, and ten Pounds yearly to be taken out of the Issues of the Hanaper, in the first of Richard II. Among the Records of the Tower there is also one, shewing that it belonged to the King to present to the Keeper there the Persons who shall be professed Sisters there.—Richard II. two Messes more came to them, situate in the Parish of Berking Church, heretofore founded for an Hospital of poor frantick People; now granted, in the second of Richard II. to this Hospital of St. Katharine's, for a Chauntry to be made by Robert Denton. Again, King Edward III. in the ninth of his Reign, granted to the Hospital of St. Katharine, de Bosco & Maremio capiend. in Bosco Roger. Wast de Leinton [Leyton certe] infra Forest. de Essex, pro focal. & pro reparatione Molendin. sui de Reynham; i. e. Wood and Timber to be taken in the Wood of Roger Wast of Leyton in the Forest of Essex, for Firing, and for the Repair of their Mill at Reynham. Farther, there was the Advowson of the Church of St. Peter in Northampton, with the Chapels of Kingsthorpe and Upton annexed, granted to this House by Isabel the Queen, in the third of Edward III. and the Church of Fretbensted in the Diocese of Canterbury.

Rec. Tur.
Gift and Grants to
St. Katharine's.

There belonged antiently to this Hospital a Mill and a Garden, which were both taken away for making the Tower Ditch, but for which Recompence was made them; for there is a Charter in the Tower, made in the eighteenth of Edward II. concerning five Marks six Shillings and nine Pence, granted heretofore by King Edward I. to be taken each Year at the Exchequer, in Recompence of a Loss which they sustained for the enlarging of the Ditch about the said Tower.

A Mill and to St. Katharine's.

Several Queens of England having been Foundresses, especial Benefactors to this Hospital, Queens became chief Patronesses of it, and had some special Jurisdiction in it. There is a Record of the seventh of Edward III. that makes Alianor the Queen, Grandmother of the King, the Founder, and determines the Power of the Queens of England there.

Guild of St. Bar-

There was a very noble Guild or Fraternity founded in the Church of this Hospital of St. Katherine, to the Honour of St. Barbara. It was governed by a Master and three Wardens. It had two Royal Founders, King Henry VIII. and Queen Katharine, his first Wife; and many very high and honourable Persons associated themselves as Members of the said Fraternity; one was the great Cardinal Wolsey, and many other eminent Dukes, Earls, and Knights, Queens, and Ladies. All this will more fully appear by the Beads to be bidden for this Guild; an old Print whereof, communicated to me by a diligent Collector of such Antiquities, is as followeth:

There lie buried in this Church the Countess of Huntington, Countess of the March in her Time, 1429; John Holland, Duke of Excester, and Earl of Huntington, 1447, and his two Wives, in a fair Tomb on the North Side of the Choir, under a stately Arch.

Dame Margaret, Duchesse of Exeter, bequeathed her Body to be buried in the Chapel within the Chancel of the College of St. Katharine, beside the Tower of London; whose Will was proved Anno 1458.

The said Duke of Excester's Monument here is one of the antientest remaining within or about the City, excepting those in the Temple Church:
And, for the preserving of the Memory of this great Peer, there hath been hung up, against a Pillar hard by, a Tablet expressing his Titles, his Offices, and who his Wives were, done by John Gybbon, Bluemantle. The Effigies of him lying on the right Hand, and his two Wives on his left, are engraven in Stone, each with their Hands together in a praying Posture. The Duke hath on his right Hand three Rings, one on his fore Finger, another on his fourth Finger, both worn under the second Joint, and a third on the middle Finger, worn under the first Joint. His first Wife's Hands are broken. On the Fingers of his second Wife appear likewise three Rings, (which seems to have been the Fashion of the Nobility in those Times) the Ring on the fore Finger, and that on the fourth, being on the first Joint, that on the middle Finger worn under the second. Coronets on all their Heads.

There be also in this Church buried Thomas Walsingham, Esq; and Thomas Ballard, Esq; by him, Anno 1465. Thomas Flemming, Knt. 1466, &c.

More Monuments, and more modern, in this Church

Against this North Wall in the Chancel are these Monuments more modern: For George Mountague, Son of Henry Earl of Manchester, and Master of this Hospital. He repaired this Church. Buried July 23, 1681.

Margaret Garret.

Against the South Wall hangeth a Table for Margaret Garret, Daughter of Robert Garret, senior Brother of this College, and Anne Mudd his Wife. A Virgin above those of her Age, comely, tall, agreeable, proportioned in her Limbs and Body, amiable in the Loveliness of her Face. All those exterior were exceeded by her internal excellent Parts, and the Sweetness of her Disposition; beloved and lamented by all.

This Jewel (so her Name signifieth) died the twenty-fifth of November, 1683, in the Morning, being sixteen Years and eight Months old, and was born the twenty-fifth of March, 1667.

Dear was she living, but being dead more dear;
The Grief of very many made this clear.

In this Hospital Raimundus Lullius, the famous Hermetic Philosopher, wrote his Testamentum Novissimum; as by the latter End of that Work appears. It may not be amiss to add, for the Honour of this antient House, that Richard Verstegan, that wrote the Restitution of decayed Antiquities, was born in St. Katharine's: Whose Grandfather, Theodore Rowland Verstegan, was of Guelderland, descended of an antient and worshipful Family, and, by Reason of the War, came into England the latter End of the Reign of King Henry VII. as the above-mentioned Gentleman, Mr. Gibbon, an Inhabitant of St. Katharine's Hospital, hath informed me.

Rich. Verstegan born in St. Katharine's.

The Choir, which of late Years was not much inferior to that of St. Paul's, was dissolved by Dr. Wylson, a late Master there, the Brethren and Sisters remaining. This House was valued at three hundred and fifteen Pounds fourteen Shillings and two Pence: Being now enclosed about with small Tenements and many Publick-houses, having more Inhabitants, English and Strangers, than are in some Cities in England.

Many of these Strangers had been Inhabitants of Calais, Hammes, and Guisnes; which Places being lost in the Reign of Queen Mary, the poor People, Tradesmen, and others, were glad to flee over into England; where, wanting Habitation, a Place belonging to St. Katharine's (now a Lane) was allowed them, which, from the Countries whence they came, were called Hammes and Guisnes, and is the same with that Place which at this Day, by a strange Corruption, is called Hangman's-Gains, as I was once told by Mr. Gibbon aforesaid, one of the College of Heralds, and a learned Antiquarian; and he had it from Mr. H. Sylliard, once a Brother of this Hospital.

Strype. A Place in St. Katharine's called Hangman's-Gains.

One Crokehay a Stranger in St. Katharine's.

Among other outlandish Men that lived here in St. Katharine's was one Crokebay, a Man of Credit and Substance, who inhabited here in Queen Mary's Days; whose Wife Gertrude, being a fast Protestant, was troubled upon her Death-bed by Dr. Mallet, then Master of St. Katharine's, because he could not persuade her either to receive the Unction or the Sacrament; excusing this last, in that she was subject to vomit, and so was sure, she said, to cast up their God again. He therefore refused her Christian Burial when she was dead, and said she should be buried in some Highway, and a Mark set upon her, in Token that she was an Heretick: But her Husband at last obtained Leave to bury her in his Garden, for there were Gardens then in St. Katharine's.

The Flemish Church-
yard.

Behind Hangman's-Gains is the Flemish Churchyard, which was appropriated for the Burial of those of Hammes and Guifnes, and other poor Flemings that came over afterwards under Queen Elizabeth; and is still a Churchyard for the poorer Sort.

The Jewry
in St. Katharine's.

Somewhere within the Liberties of the Tower, and, as it seems, in this Part of St. Katharine's, was a Place called Judaismus, the Jewry, which being a Place of Privilege, such as were Jews (as well as others) resorted thither for their Safety, who fell off from the Religion then professed and practised; and particularly Priests that had taken Wives, and so esteemed Apostates from the Unity of the Catholick Church. Among the Collections of the Tower Records taken by Mr. Prynne, we have this:

Rec. Tur.

A Place of Privilege.

"That, Anno 1279, the eighth of Edward I. upon the Archbishop's Request, the King issued a Writ to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London, to apprehend certain Apostates, qui recesserunt ab unitate Catholice Fidei. But they were in Judaismo, i. e. the Jewry, and so out of the Power and Jurisdiction of the Magistrates of London. Upon this the Archbishop wrote to the Bishop of Bath and Wells, that was Chancellor, signifying that those Enemies of the Faith were yet in Balliva Majoris & Vicecom. Lond. sed in Judaismo sub Custodia & Potestate Constabularii Turris, ubi ingredi non possunt, ut dicitur, sine speciali mandato." Some of these Enemies of the Faith, and Apostates from Catholick Unity, seem to be such Priests as had Wives; for in the same Letter it is added, that he would take away that Word Dudum in his former Writ, Quoniam nunc ipsorum Uxores sunt sicut prius.

Bounds of
rine's.

The Circuit of this Hospital, or Free Chapel of St. Katharine, is as follows: From the East Gate of the Tower by the Thames, unto the Bank beyond St. Katharine's Dock Eastward, and from thence through all the Lane which leadeth from the said Dock, and in and by every Part of the said Lane unto the King's Highway Northward; which Way lieth between the Abbey of Grace and the said Hospital or Free Chapel, and leadeth from the City of London unto Radcliff; and also from the said Way, against the same Lane, unto the Tower Ditch Westward, and from thence to the River of Thames Southward.

St. Katharine's was famous for Brew-houses in No. 86.

antient Times. One Geffrey Gate, in Henry VII's Days, spoiled the Brew-houses at St. Katharine's twice; either for brewing too much to their Customers beyond the Sea, or for putting too much Water into the Beer of their Customers that they served on this Side the Sea, or else for both.

There are divers very antient Records concerning this Knighthen Guild, or Portfoken, that afterwards came into the Possession of the Canons of Trinity Church; and likewise concerning the Hospital of St. Katharine; and many Charters of the Kings of England, setting out the Liberties, Extent, and Privileges of them; authentick Copies whereof are still remaining in certain old written Books in the Guildhall of London; which Records and Charters follow. And first, an antient Record concerning the Original of the Guild, and Confirmation of it:

"In the Times of King *Knowt (or Kanutus) the Dane, were there thirteen Knights, very well beloved both of King and Kingdom: These begged of the King's Grace a certain Piece of Land in the East Part of London, which the Inhabitants had lately forsaken by Reason of the Hardship and Service they there stood charged withal. The Knights Suit for to have this Land granted unto them for ever, with the Liberty of a Guild upon it, the King upon this Condition granted, namely, that every one of them should perform three Combats upon the Land and in the Water, and come off with Victory; and also, that upon a Day appointed, they should run at Tilt against all Comers, in the Field which is now called East Smithfield. This they having performed gloriously, the King gave them the Field, and the same Day named it Knytte Guilden, appointing these Boundaries unto it: First, that it should reach from Ealdgate to the Place where the Bars now are, Eastward, on both Sides the Town. He extended it another Way toward Bishopsgate, as far as the House of William the Priest. To the Southward the Liberties of this Guild reached so far into the Water of the Thames, as a Horseman, riding into the River at a dead low Water, could dart his Horseman's Staff from him: So that all East Smithfield, with Part of the right Hand Way, which stretcheth by Doding's Pond into the Thames, and also the Hospital of St. Katharine, with the Mills, (which Hospital was founded in the Reign of King Stephen) together with the outer Stone Wall, and the new Ditch of the Tower, stand and are within the Fee aforesaid: For the said Wall and Ditch were not as yet made, but were afterwards, in the very Time that King Richard I. was at Jerusalem; which was done by the Bishop of Ely, the King's Justice over all the Kingdom. The Occasion was a Difference betwixt Earl John, the King's Brother, and the Chief Justice. By the digging of this Ditch in the Ground of East Smithfield, did the Church of the Holy Trinity in London lose half a Mark a Year Revenue; and the Mill which belonged unto the poor Brotherhood of the Hospital of St. Katharine, and unto the Churches of St. Katharine, and of the Holy Trinity altogether, Recompence was often ſued for, but not made very ſpeedily, though promiſed faithfully. Afterwards, King Edward gave five Marks and an half unto the poor Brotherhood for that Part of their Garden which the Ditch had deſtroyed; and that Part which it had not, he reſtored unto them again, which they hold unto this Day. As for their Rent of five Marks and a half, he gave them his Charter, by which they receive it very duly either out of the Exchequer or the Hanaper, even until this preſent."

* Vicecomiti Lond.

This Guild was by divers Kings afterwards confirmed; and firſt by Edward the Confefſor, then by King William Rufus; of whoſe Charter I here give you this Abſtract:

"William, King of England, &c. to Biſhop M. G. de Magu, and R. de Boare, and to his faithful * liege People of London, ſendeth greeting. Know ye, that I have confirmed unto the Men of Cnyttengilda, their Guild, and Lands pertaining unto it, with all their Cuſtoms entire, even as they enjoyed them in the Time of King Edward, and of my Father. Witneſs Henry de Both at Rethyng."

Of K. Henry I's Charter this is the Abſtract:

"Henry, King of England, &c. to Biſhop M. to the * Sheriff of London, and to all his Barons and faithful People of London, as well French as Engliſh, ſendeth greeting. Know ye, that I have granted unto all the Men of the Cnyttengilda their Guild, and Lands pertaining unto it, together with all their Cuſtoms after the beſt Manner, even as they enjoyed the ſame in the Times of King Edward and my Father, and as the King my Brother by his Charter and Seal confirmed them. And I free it from any Forfeiture that might accrue unto myſelf; forbidding all Men, that upon Pretence hereof they preſume not to offer them any Moleſtation. Witneſſes, R. de Momford, R. de Bigot, and H. de Booth, at Weſtmiſter."

More concerning the Liberties and Extent of the ſaid Guild:

"Know ye, that the Soken of Knyttengilda reaches from Aldgate, with the Lands on both Sides the Street, even unto the outer Bar. On the South Side it reaches towards the Thames, joining with the Soken within the Bar ſixty-fix Feet of St. Paul's. On the North it goes within the Bar ſixteen Feet of St. Paul's. The Soken alſo extendeth towards Biſhopsgate, even unto the Houſe belonging ſometimes unto William the Prieſt, and after unto Geoffry Tanner; together with all Smithſfield, and ſo far into the Thames, as a Horſeman, at low Water, riding upon his * Deſtrier into the River, could dart his Lance from him; together with the right Hand Part of the Street which goes by Dodding's Pond to the Thames: But as for that on the left Hand, it is not of that Soken, but yet in the Pariſh of St. Botolph."

More concerning the Tower Ditch before-mentioned, and of the enclosing the whole City of London with a Ditch:

"Whilſt King Richard, in his Return from Jeruſalem, was kept Priſoner by the Emperor of Almayne, there fell out a Diſſention betwixt Earl John, the King's Brother, and the Biſhop of Ely, Lord Chief Juſtice of England; whereupon the Biſhop thought good to fortify the * King's Caſtle, which the Earl at that Time provided to beleaguer. It ſeemed good to the Biſhop therefore to encompass in the whole Bulwark with a Wall of a moſt wonderful Thickneſs, and to make a broad and deep Ditch about that, which the Thames flowing into, the whole Tower might both be encompassed and fortified by it. Upon Occaſion therefore of this Ditch, which was then made in Smithſfield, (and by Reaſon of that other Ditch, which the Citizens for the ſame Cauſe then began to make round about their City) did the Church of the Holy Trinity loſe half a Mark of yearly Revenue; and the Mill alſo belonging unto the Poor of the Hoſpital of Aldgate was taken away; whereupon there accrued no ſmall Damage both unto us *, and to thoſe poor People; for which, though Recompence hath been often promiſed, yet have we hitherto received no Satisfaction."

* The Tower.

* This is a Character of the Antiquity of this Writing, and alſo that it was done either by the Parſon, or ſome of the Pariſhioners of Trinity Pariſh.

More concerning this Matter out of a French Record in Book H. Folio 199, and in Book Dunthorn, Folio 88: Which is a Deſire of the Maſter of St. Katharine's Hoſpital to have Leave of the City to encloſe a certain Piece of Ground near the Tower of London:

"It was told unto the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty, how that John Herneſthorpe, Maſter of St. Katharine's Hoſpital by the Tower of London, had a certain Piece of Land which had ſomewhile been a Portion of the Garden of his Hoſpital, which Portion King Edward, Son to King Henry, had purchaſed of thoſe of the ſaid Hoſpital for the Enlargement of the Tower Ditch; for which he paid unto the Maſter, Brothers, and Siſters of the ſaid Hoſpital, three Pounds thirteen Shillings and four Pence yearly for ever; and that the ſaid Hoſpital had received the ſaid Rent ever ſince the Time of the Purchaſe. This Place indeed had heretofore lain void and waſte, and had been of no Profit to any, ſerving only for a Reſort or Meeting-place of Rogues and Women of ill Converſation. For the reſtraining of which Naughtineſs and Pilferies, the ſaid John had again purchaſed it of King Edward III. of whom he had received Licence to encloſe the ſaid void Piece for the Benefit of his Hoſpital; he paying to the King and his Heirs, into their Exchequer, ſix Shillings and eight Pence for ever: By Virtue of which Licence the ſaid Maſter had already begun to encloſe the ſaid void Plat of Ground. This the Mayor, &c. hearing of, ſent to forbid the Encloſure of, affirming, that the ſaid Plat belonged unto the Commonalty of the City of London: Whereupon the Maſter forbore to proceed farther for ſix or eight Years together."

A Garden of St. Katharine's.

A Place of ill Reſort near St. Katharine's.

"At the End of this Term the ſaid Maſter made Suit unto the Mayor and Commonalty, that they would pleaſe to give him Leave to encloſe the ſaid Place, were it but only to prevent “prevent and take away the Villainies which he affirmed to be there committed. For which Courtesy he then promised, that himself, and all the Brothers and Sisters of the said Hospital, would particularly, and in an especial Manner, pray for the good Estate of the City; and be willing moreover to pay some small yearly Rent unto the Chamber of Guildball, London, for ever. To this Suit the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty consented; and farther made Choice of some certain Aldermen and Commoners, who should take a View of this and other void Places belonging to the City, and make Report to them, &c.”

To prove that the Hospital of St. Katharine, with the Mills, and all that belong to it, together with the Tower Ditch, all East Smithfield without the Postern, before the Abbey of Grace, with the right Hand Part of the Street leading along by Dodding's Pond, are, and Time out of Mind have been, within the Liberty of the City of London, and Parcel of Portfoken Ward without Aldgate, in the Suburbs:

“The Mayor and Commonalty of the City of London affirm, that, in the Time of the Conqueror, and long before, the said Ward of Portfoken was called the Ward of Anglish Knightgilden; and that afterwards, about the eighth of King Henry I. Ralph the Son of Algoe, Wol-fard le Deverish, Orgar le Prude, with divers other substantial Citizens of London, descended of the antient Race of the English Knights, being Lords of the Liberty of the said Guild, in the Soken aforesaid, and were seized of all the Lands in the said Soken, (as by the Charter of the said King Henry it appeareth) did bequeath the said Soken and Lands unto the Church and Canons of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, London: Which Gift the said King Henry by his Charter (which the Mayor and Commonalty have here to shew) also confirmed. Upon Pretext of which Gift and Confirmation Norman, at that Time Prior, and the Convent of the Church aforesaid, as also their Successors, stood a long Time possessed. Afterwards, among other Things, Ralph the Prior, with the Canons of the said Church, did grant unto Maud Queen of England, Wife to King Stephen, a certain Parcel of Land in the said Soken, (the very same upon which the said Hospital of St. Katharine is now founded) together with all the Mill there in the *Shambles, in Lieu of six Yards Land in the Manor of Bracching, in the County of Hertford; even as by two Patents of the said King and Queen made upon that Occasion, it manifestly is declared. Moreover they affirm, that whereas the Lord Edward I. sometimes King of England, had not any Piece of Ground of his own proper Lands near enough unto his Tower of London, whereupon to build up his Wall, and to make his Ditch about the Tower, which he purposed to build a-new; he purchased of the Mayor, Brethren, and Sisters of the Hospital of St. Katharine by the Tower aforesaid, a certain Plat of Ground with the Appurtenances in East Smithfield, adjoining unto the Tower, both for the laying of the Sand, Gravel, and Marle which should be digged out of the Ditch, and that which should serve for the repairing of the Wall aforesaid; and that he paid unto the Master, Brothers, and Sisters aforesaid, five Marks, six Shillings, and nine Pence, both for the Purchase of the said Plat, and the Recompence of their Loss long since sustained by the Enlargement of the Ditch and Reparation of the Wall aforesaid, which he caused for himself and his Successors to be yearly payable out of the Exchequer; which five Marks, six Shillings and nine Pence, the Masters, Brothers, and Sisters for the Time being of the said Hospital, have ever since the said Grant received, and do actually at this present receive it by Virtue of the said Patent, which they now have by them, &c. the Copy whereof was entered upon Record in the Chamber of * Guildball, and acknowledged by them before Nicholas Brembre, then Mayor, and the Aldermen. They affirm also, that in the fourteenth Year of King Edward II. at such Time as he held Assizes in the said Tower, it was proved, that the said Ward of Portfoken (heretofore called English Knightgeld) was in and of the Liberties of London; and that, so often as any Tax was to be raised for the King, or to be assessed for the Commonalty of London, upon the Commoners of the said City, or that any other Assessment was to be made by the said Commonalty, either for the raising of some Wall, making of any Enclosure, or for the Defence of the City, that all the People inhabiting the said Ward were accustomed to pay the said Taxes, like other Freemen of the City, and the same Assessments were wont to be levied upon them as upon other Freemen of the City; like as by the Transcript of the Rolls of the said Assizes * of the Kings, now remaining in the Treasury of the Guildball of the same City, most clearly it appeareth.

“They farther affirm, that the Lord Edward III. late King of England, Progenitor of our Lord the King that now is, in the seventeenth Year of his Reign, directed by his Letter * unto John Hamond, at that Time Mayor of his City of London, and his Majesty's Escheator in the same; in which Letters he made Rehearsal of all the former Business concerning the Wall and Ditch of the Tower made in his Grandfather's Time. He rehearsed also, how Ralfe of Sandwich and John de Weston, late Constables of the Tower, did lett out the same Place by Parcels unto divers Men, without Leave or Licence had therefore, either from the King his Grandfather, Father, or himself; and that the said Place was then builded upon, and rented out for forty Shillings a Year, and that himself had given out Commissions to enquire upon the Reasons, Manner, Right, and Value of every Thing, &c. And that the said John Hamond, making Enquiry hereupon, made Return of all into the Chancery, &c.

“They affirm moreover, that all the Lands and Tenements upon the foresaid right Hand of the Way by Dudding's Pond, and about the said Places of East Smithfield, Tower-hill, and Rome-land, circularly situated, were and have been in the Time of the holding the Assizes of "the said King, impleaded and sued within the "said City, and not elsewhere; as by the Evi"dences of the said Lands and Tenements,

"appeareth.

"They farther say, that, in the Times of all "the former Kings and Assizes, (Time out of "Mind) so often as any Mishap or Casualty,
"such as Murther, Drowning, or other indirect
"Death of any Person, in any of the Places fore-
"mentioned, hath fallen out, upon which there "was any Enquiry to be taken, or any Summons,
"Attachment, or Execution to be made in any "of the said Places, yea, and which more is,
"even within the Tower it self, and at such "Time as the King (now and then) hath been "present, have the Sheriffs, Coroners, and other "Officers of the said City of London for the Time "being, and no other, used to make such Quests
"of Enquiry, Summons, Attachments, and "Executions, and had Right so to do; as it "is most manifestly to be proved by divers
"Rolls of the Crown, and other Records of "the Times aforesaid, now being in the said
"Treasury.

ties of the

"They say moreover, that, amongst other Li"berties granted by the King's Predecessors unto
"the Citizens of London, and ratified in divers
"Parliaments, this expressly is one: That no
"Arrest, Attachment, or Execution, be made
"by any Officers of the King within the said
"Liberty, either by Writ or without Writ, but "only by the Officers of the City. By all which "Charters, Letters Patents, Bills, Acts of As"size, Writs, Inquests, Returns, Rolls of the "Escheators, and Crown-Office, Assizes, Plead-
"ings, Enrollments, Freedoms, and most plen"tiful other Kinds of Records and Proofs, it may "easily and undoubtedly be concluded, that the "said Hospital of St. Katharine, with the Mills,
"and other its Appurtenances; as also the whole
"Tower Ditch, with all the Lands of East Smith-
"field without the Postern, before the Abbey of "Grace, together with the right Side of the Street
"going by Dudding's Pond; as also the whole "Ditch and Plain without the Tower within the "Postern, called Rome-land, with all the Houses "and Gardens round about them, have all the "Time aforesaid been within the Compass of the "Liberty of the City."

The self-same Copy of what is last above is something differently recorded also in Book Dun- thorn; the different Points whereof, not mentioned in this former, I have transcribed.

"hath no proper Court of its own, but only the "Court of the Baron, which is no Court of Re"cord, as by Records exemplified in the King's-

"or Drowning hath been within the said Hospital
"or Tower, the City Officers have attached the "Malefactors within the Tower, notwithstanding "that the King himself sometimes happened to "be present within the said Tower, and have car"ried the said Men so arrested into some of the "King's Prisons within the City. That when "the Justices Itinerant have used to come to keep

The Letter or Commission of King Edward unto John Hamond, Mayor of London, before-mentioned, is to be seen in Dunthorn, Fol. 87:
'Tis dated at Westminster, the twenty-first of October, in the seventeenth Year of his Reign over England, and over France the fourth. The Lord-Mayor's Return of the Inquisition is also there recorded.

More concerning the same Matter, and of the restoring to the Church a little Piece of Land encroached upon by the Constables of the Tower:

"Stephen King of England, to the Bishop of "London, and to the Justices, Sheriffs, Barons,
"Officers, and all his * Liege People of London, * Fidelibus
"French and English, greeting. Know ye, that I

At the same Time did Earl Geffrey resign up his Possession, as by this his Deed appeareth:

"Geffrey Earl of Essex, principal Constable of "the Tower, &c. to the Bishop of London, and "all that hold of holy Church *, greeting. Know
"ye, that I have restored unto the Church of

"Mills near unto the Tower, and all their Land
"without the Tower, belonging sometimes unto
"the Englisch Cnitten-gilda, with Smithfield, and
"the Tenants, and all other Things belonging
"thereunto. I also restore unto them half a Hide
"of Land of Brebelegia, with the Land and Mea"dows and Pastures, and all other Things, Li"berties, and Customs, as William Widois some"times gave it unto them, when as he took the "Habit of a Canon Regular upon him. And I "will and command, that they hold the said
"Lands from me and from mine Heirs, free,
"cleared, and acquitted from all Claim and se-

In the Transcript taken out of the Original which I used, I find her written King Stephen also restored something unto the said Church, as by this following Charter ap-peareth, which the Constables of the Tower had encroached. This was done after the Lands were proved by Oath to belong to the Church before the King's Chief Justice:

"London, the Justices, Sheriffs, Barons, Officers,
"and all his Liege People, both French and En-

"ye that I have given and granted unto the "Church of the Holy Trinity, and to the Canons "serving God there, T. S. of Land in the Ma-
"nour of Bracking in perpetual Alms, for the "Rest of the Souls, that is to say, of Baldwin
"my Son, and Maud my Daughter, which lie "buried there. I have farther also given and "granted unto the said Church and Canons six
"Yards of Land in the same Manor of Brack-

Notes upon the aforesaid Charters.

First, Observe the Time of the building of St. Batolph's old Church without Aldgate, which was about the Age of the Conqueror. So much we know by this, that it was built betwixt the Time of Canutus and Henry I.

Secondly, Whereas the Kings write to the Barons of London, know what Matthew Paris in his Henry III. says, viz. That the Citizens of London, both for their Antiquity and the Honour of the City, were called Barons: But they were only the principal Citizens that had this Title. The chief Men of the City, whom we now call Barons, were heretofore stiled Captains: They were the King's free Tenants, privileged all over Eng- land. Sometimes the King's Writs were directed to the Sheriff and Barons of London. The Church also had its Barons or free Tenants, and divers other Cities of England. See for this Word in Sir Henry Spelman's Glossary.

Thirdly, Observe London and Middlesex to be in those Days joined together, as in King Henry's Charter.

I add one Passage more concerning this Priory.

rine near the Tower, which had Dependence upon the said Priory, now in the Time of King Henry III. withdrew their canonical Obedience, having a Dispensation from a Bishop of London, and some Countenance also from the Queen so to do. Whereupon the Prior and Convent applied and complained of the Wrong done them, unto Pope Urban, who gave them his Bull in their Favour, which happened Anno 1264, 48 Henry III. Which Bull sets forth first the State of the Case, viz.

"That the Prior and Convent of the Church of the Holy Trinity of the Order of St. Augustine had shewn him that King H. and M. his Queen had granted the perpetual Custody, and whatsoever they had of Right in the Hospital of St. Katharine near the Tower of London, which they built of their own Goods, and endowed, freely conferred it upon the said Priory and Convent. That it was confirmed by Kings afterwards. And some Bishops of London, with the Consent of the Chapter, had granted the same to the Prior and Convent. And some Archbishops of Canterbury had confirmed the Collation and Donation of the said Place. That the Friars in that Hospital took their Profession, Habit, and Manner of Living, according to the Rule of St. Augustin, and promised by an Oath given upon this to live under Obedience to them, and fully to answer to them, as well in Temporals as Spirituals. But that a Bishop of London at that Time had spoiled them of the foresaid Hospital, and the Rights of it, and permitted not the Friars to yield canonical and due Obedience to them. The Pope therefore commanded the said Prior and Convent by his Apostolick Letter to require the said Bishop to restore to them their Privileges in the said Hospital."

The same Year the Pope directed a Bull to the Queen of England, who had also deprived the said Priory and Convent of the said Hospital; not suffering those of that Hospital to give their due and canonical Obedience to them, and for which they had interceded with him: Wherefore he sent her his Bull in their Behalf; since for an hundred Years the said Hospital belonged to them, &c.

And so return we back again to our Review of the Places in this Ward, not yet taken notice of.

New Abbey on East Smithfield Founded by K. Ed. III. Burial for the Dead, prepared in Time of Pestilence.

On the East, and by North of the Tower, lie East Smithfield and Tower-hill, two Plats of Ground so called, without the Wall of the City. And East from them both was sometime a Monastery called New Abbey, [and the Abbey of Graces] founded by King Edward III. in the Year 1359, upon Occasion as followeth:

In the Year 1348, 23 Edward III. the first great Pestilence in his Time began, and encreased so sore, that for want of Room in Church-yards to bury the Dead of the City, and of the Suburbs, one John Corey, Clerk, procured of Nicholas, Prior of the Holy Trinity within Aldgate, one Toft of Ground near unto East Smithfield, for the Burial of them that died, with Condition that it might be called the Church-yard of the Holy Trinity. Which Ground he caused, by the Aid of divers devout Citizens, to be enclosed with a Wall of Stone. Robert Elsing, Son of William Elsing, gave five Pounds thereunto; and the same was dedicated by Ralph Stratford, Bishop of London, where innumerable Bodies of the Dead were afterward buried, and a Chapel built in the same Place to the Honour of God: To the which King Edward setting his Eye (having before in a Tempest on the Sea, and Peril of drowning, made a Vow to build a Monastery to the Honour of God, and our Lady of Grace, if God would grant him Grace to come safe to Land) builded there a Monastery, placing an Abbot and Monks of the Cistercian or White Order. The Bounds of this Plat of Ground, together with a Decree for Tythes thereof, are expressed in the Charter; the Effect whereof I have set down in another Place.

Causing it to be named Eastminster.

This Abbey of St. Mary of Graces had a Charter from K. Edward III. in the 25th of his Reign: And another Occasion of the Foundation seems to appear thence.

The Occasion of founding this Abby of Graces.

"Rex dilectis sibi in Christo Abbati & Conventui de Bello loco Regis, Salutem. Quia ad invocationem omnipotentis Dei, & Domini Jesu Christi, ac gloriosissime matris sue Marie, pluries tam in terra quam in mari, in bellis & in periculis aliis, sensimus nos adjutos, Volentes provide in memoriam Graciarum hujusmodi, cultum ipsius Dei & genetricis sue, &c." The Substance of which Record is, That the King founded this House in Remembrance and Acknowledgment of the Goodness of Almighty God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ, and of the blessed Virgin Mary; whom he had often called upon, and found helpful to him by Sea and by Land, in Wars and other Perils; and therefore ordered this House to be called, The King's Free Chapel of the blessed Virgin of Graces, in memoriam Graciarum, i. e. in Memory of those Graces, or Favours, which he had received from her. Therefore, the more amply to dilate the Worship of the said God, and his Mother, he now began to found and endow this Free Chapel of the Cistercian Order, as a filial House to be subject to the Monastery of Beaulieu of the same King's founding; and appointed the Abbot, and his Successors, yearly to visit it, or as Need should require, and duly to correct what should require the Line of Correction. He ordered the said Abbot to send some of his Fellow-Monks of his Convent to serve God and the blessed Virgin in the said Chapel, under the regular Observance of the said Order. And he appointed Walter de Sta Cruce, i. e. Holy Cross, to be the first President of the said Chapel; whom he enjoined kindly to receive and treat the said Religious, that were to profess Religion at the said Free Chapel.

Record. Turr. 23 E. III. M. 34.

By a Patent of 19 R. II. it appears, that there belonged to this Monastery of St. Mary de Gracis the Manor of Gravesend, and several other Manors in Kent; also Rents in Woolwich, and the Manor of Popeler: And by a Patent 1 H. IV. it had divers Manors in the Counties of Devon and Cornwall and Somerset.

Manors belonging to this Abbey.

Joan Hull, Wife of Stephen Hull, Citizen and Pannarius [Draper] Lond. by her Will, dated Jan. 1425, gave a Tenement called Blacklesse, in the Parish of St. Bennet Fink, London, for ever, to John, Abbot of the Monastery of St. Mary de Gracis of the Cistercian Order, and the Convent of the same, to pray for her Soul.

This House, at the general Suppression, A. D. 1539, was valued at 546 l. 10 d. yearly. It was surrendered in the Year 1539, 30 Henry VIII. Since the which Time, the said Monastery being clean pulled down by Sir Arthur Darcy, Knt. and others, of late Time (in place thereof) is builded a Slaughter-house for Oxen and Hogs, and a large Storehouse for Victuals; and convenient Ovens are builded there, for baking of Bisket to serve his Majesty's Ships: The Grounds adjoining, and belonging to the said Abbey, are converted into small Tenements.

East
Smithfield
Fair.

K. Hen. III. in the 13th of his Reign granted, that a Fair should be held at East Smithfield for 15 Days; viz. from the Eve of Pentecost to the Octaves of Trinity: And the said King sent his Briefs to the several Sheriffs of Lincoln, Gloucester, Kent, Worcester, York, Norfolk and Suffolk, and to the Mayor and Sheriffs of London to proclaim the same. Et ideo tibi precipimus, quod predictam feriam, &c. i. e. "And therefore we command you, that you cause to be proclaimed the before said Fair throughout the whole Bailiffwick, as is afore said; causing all Merchants of your Bailiffwick to know, that they may securely come to the Fair. Witness the King at Westminster the eighth Day of February."

And 30 Edw. III. there was a Grant to the Master, Brethren, and Chaplains, and Sisters of St. Katharine's, that they, for ever, shall have one Fair upon Tower-bill [now called Little Tower-bill] over-against the Abbey of St. Mary of Graces. There was also a Charter for this 20 Henry VI.

For Tower-bill, as the same is greatly diminished by building of Tenements and Garden-plats, &c. so it is of late, to wit, in the Year of Christ 1593, on the North Side thereof, and at the West End of Hog-street [or Hog-lane] beautified by certain fair Alms-houses there, strongly builded of Brick and Timber, and covered with Slate, for the Poor, by the Merchant-Taylors of London, in place of some small Cottages given to them by Richard Hills, some Time a Master of that Company * certain Timber for that Use; being also given by Anthony Radcliffe, of the same Society, Alderman.

In these Alms-houses fourteen charitable Brethren of the said Merchant-Taylors yet living, says Stow, have placed fourteen poor sole Women, which receive each of them of their Founders 16 d. or better, weekly, beside 8 l. 15 s. yearly, paid out of the common Treasury of the same Corporation, for Fuel.

Eight Acres enclosed in Hog-lane
by Spino-

Presented.

In this Hog-lane, now mentioned, lying on the Back-side of Whitechapel, were eight Acres of Land, which about the Year 1574, were in the Possession of one Benedict Spinola, a rich Italian Merchant; whereof he made twenty Tenter-yards, and certain Gardens. These, some pretended, were first enclosed by him, being before open and common. And hence it came to pass, that in the Year 1584 it was presented as an Annoyance to the Archers, and all the Queen's Liege People. And a Precept was awarded to the Tenants and Occupiers of the Premises to remove their Pales and Fences, and all Buildings made thereupon: For now many Clothiers dwelt here, who hereupon applied themselves to the Lord Treasurer of England, and brought Witnesses to the contrary: Shewing, that the same Field, before it was so converted as then it was, was a Piece of Ground several, not common, nor never commonly used by any Archers, being far unmeet for Archers to shoot in, by reason of standing Puddles, most noisome Laystalls, and filthy Ditches in and about the same. Also the Way called Hog-lane was so foul and deep in the Winter-time, that no Man could pass by the same: And in Summer-time Men would not pass thereby for fear of Infection, by means of the Filthiness that lay there. So that the Presenters were utterly deceived, and not well informed in their Presentments. Afterwards Benedict Spinola bestowed great Cost and Charges upon levelling and cleansing the Premises, and made divers Tenter-yards; by means whereof the common Ways and Passages about the said eight Acres were greatly amended and enlarged, that all People might well and safely pass. And poor Clothworkers by the Tenter-yards were greatly relieved: For that of late time divers Tenter-yards in and about London were decayed and pulled down, and the Ground converted to other Uses. And because the Queen had lately by Proclamation restrained all future Buildings and Enclosures in the Suburbs, they shewed that these Tenter-yards and Gardens were made long before the said Proclamation.

From the West Part of this Tower-bill, towards Aldgate, being a long continual Street, amongst other smaller Buildings in that Row, there was sometimes an Abby of Nuns of the Order of St. Clare, called the Minories, founded by Edmund, Earl of Lancaster, Leicester and Darby, Brother to King Edward I. in the Year 1293; the Length of which Abbey contained fifteen Perches and seven Feet, near unto the King's Street, or Highway, &c. as appeareth by a Deed dated 1303. A Plague of Pestilence being in this City in the Year 1515, there died in this House of Nuns professed to the Number of twenty-seven, besides other Lay People, Servants in the House. This House was valued to dispend 418 l. 8 s. 5 d. yearly; and was surrendered by Dame Elizabeth Salvage, the last Abbess there, unto King Henry VIII. in the thirtieth of his Reign, the Year of Christ 1539.

Concerning this House of Nuns, I find these Particulars. The Licence for founding it bore Date 21 E. I. to the Abbess of St. Clare without Aldgate. There was a Charter granted 9 E. II. that the Sisters Minoreffes without Aldgate sint quiete de Tallagio, &c. i. e. be quit of Tallage on account of their Lands and Tenements in the City of London. In another Charter 14 E. II. it is called the Abbey of the Minoreffes of St. Mary of the Order of St. Clare without the Walls of the City: In which Charter are confirmed certain Messes of theirs in the Vintry, in Wood-street, Lad-lane, Old Fish-street, and one Mess and two Shops in Lombard-street, Christchurch-lane, and Shirburgh-lane; gotten of divers well-affected Persons: What the Charters and Liberties of these Minoreffes were, may be seen by the Confirmation thereof in 1 H. V. and anno 16, and 25, and 2 H. IV. which remain in the Tower Records.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of QUEENHITHE WARD.

With a PLAN, neatly engraved from a NEW Survey,

Its Name. Bounds. Extent. Modern State. Government. Alderman and Common-Councilmen. Parishes and Churches. Painter-stainers and Blacksmiths Halls. Lutheran Church. Queenhithe. Wharfs. Antiquities.

THIS Ward receives its Name from the Hithe or Harbour for large Boats, Barges or Lighters, and even for Ships, which in ancient Times anchored at that Place, as they do now at Billingfgate ; the Timber Bridge or Lock on London-bridge being drawn up for their Passage through ; Queenhithe being then the principal Key, Wharf or Strand for lading and unlading in the Heart of the City.

It is bounded on the East by Dowgate Ward ; on the North by Bread-street Ward and Cordwainer Ward ; on the South by the River of Thames ; and on the West by Baynard's-castle Ward.

This Ward beginneth in the East, in Knight-rider's-street, on the South Side thereof, at the East End of the Parifh-Church called the Holy Trinity ; and runneth West, on the South Side, to a Lane called Lambert-hill ; which is the Length of the Ward in Knight-rider's-street. Out of the which Street are divers Lanes, running South to Thames-street, and are of this Ward. The firft is Trinity-lane, which runneth down by the West End of Trinity Church. Then is Spuren-lane, or * Spooners-lane, now called Huggen-lane. Then Bread-street-hill. Then St. Mary Mount. Out of the which Lane, on the East Side thereof, is one other Lane, turning East through St. Nicholas Olave's Church-yard, to Bread-street-hill. This Lane is called Finimore-lane, or Five-foot-lane, becaufe it is but five Foot in Breadth at the West End. In the midft of this Lane, runneth down one other Lane, broader, South to Thames-street, called Desborne-lane. I read of fuch a Lane to have been in the Parifh of St. Mary Somerset, in the 22d of Edward III. Where there is faid to lie between the Tenement of Edward de Montacute, Knt. on the East Part, and the Tenement sometime pertaining to William Gladwine, on the West, one Plat of Ground, containing in Length towards Thames-street twenty-five Foot, &c.

Last of all, is Lambert-hill, fo called of one Lambert, an Owner thereof ; and this is the farthest West Part of this Ward.

The Town of St. Vintry

On the North Side, coming down from Knight-rider's-street, the East Side of Lambert-hill is wholly of this Ward; and the West Side, from the North End of the Blacksmiths-ball (which is about the midst of this Lane) unto Thames-street. Then Part of Thames-street is also of this Ward; to wit, from a Cook's House called the Sign of King David, three Houses West from the Old Swan Brewhouse in the East, unto Huntington House, over-against St. Peter's Church in the West, near unto Paul's-wharf:
And on the Lane Side, from the Blue-boar, to the West End of St. Peter's Church, and up
St. Peter's-bill, two Houses North above the said Church.

Modern
State.

The chief Streets, Lanes, and Hills, in this Ward, are Thames-street, Queenhithe, with the several Lanes which run down to the Thames, Lambert-hill, Fish-street-hill, Five-foot-lane, Bread-street-hill, Huggen-lane, Little Trinity-lane, with the South Side of Great Trinity-lane, Old Fish-street.

Thames-street runs through the Heart of this Ward, as it does through that of the Vintry; and the Lanes, Alleys, Hills, and Courts, as they lie on each Side, shall be specified, beginning at the West End, and on the South Side.

This Street enjoys a good Trade, and hath a great Resort, occasioned by the several Wharfs on the Water Side; and therefore much pestered with Carts. Black-boy-alley, long and narrow, having a great Dyer's at the lower End. Bofsalley, also long and narrow, with a Dyer's by the Thames Side. Betwixt this Place and Black-boy-alley, is a large Passage to a Wood-Wharf.
Robin-hood-court, but very ordinary. Trig-stairs,
so called from the Stairs on the Water Side, which is indifferently well supplied by Water-men. The Lane is open, reasonably well built and inhabited. Castle-lane, pretty broad for Carts, having a Wood-Wharf at the lower End;
the Buildings are but ordinary. George-yard, being good and large, and taken up by Timber-
Merchants and Wood-Wharfs at the lower End.
Broken-wharf; by this was a Water-House to convey the Thames Water in Pipes into this Quarter of the City.

Brookes's-wharf leads also to the River Thames, having a large Wharf, with Keys therein, for the landing of Corn, Malt, and other Goods, thither brought in considerable Quantities. For which it is of great Resort.

Eastwards from the Water-House, is High-timber-street, or Hithe, so called from the Timber or Boards there taken up and wharfed. The Place is but ordinary, and serves as a Passage to other Places which lead to the Wharfs; as Dunghill-lane, Broker's-wharf, and Hamond's-lane, formerly called Stew-lane, from a Stew or Hot-house there kept; all Places of ordinary Account. And from this Lane is a Passage to Queen-hithe, called the Dark-lane: And here is Boydens's-wharf.

Queen-hithe, a great Receptacle for Western Barges, Lighters, and Boats, which brings a considerable Resort and Trade to the Place.
Here is a great Meal-Market, having the Conveniency for Stowage of the Goods thither brought to be sold by the said Vessels. The Market-House is commodiously seated by the Water-side, and before it an open Yard for Carts to carry off the Goods there sold; and round about the Yard, except the South Side next the Thames, are Rows of Houses, well inhabited, besides good Store of Publick-Houses, for the Reception of People that resort thither about Business, next the Stairs.

Eastward of Queen-hithe, is Pump-court, or Yard, a small Place, which comes out of Queenhithe, and falls into Townsend-lane, an open Place for Carts to the Wharfs. And these are the Eastern Limits of this Ward.

Then on the North Side are these Places.
Bowling-alley, a small Place, which falls into Sugar-loaf-court, now taken up for a Brew-house.

St. Michael Queen-hithe Church, rebuilt since the great Fire, a handsome well built Church, of Free-stone, having on the Top of the Steeple a small Free-stone Spire, with a Ship upon a Ball all gilt with Gold. To this Church and Parish is that of Trinity united.

Little Trinity-lane comes out of Great Trinity-lane, and falls into Thames-street, by St. Michael Queen-hithe Church. This Lane is well built and inhabited.

Huggen-lane, formerly called Spooner's-lane, comes out of Great-Trinity-lane, and falls into Thames-street, a Lane of good Account. On the East Side is Fair-cloth-court, very small, with a Free-stone Pavement. Star-yard, very ordinary, hath a Passage into Bread-street-hill.

Bread-street-hill, a Place well built, and inhabited by good Tradesmen, mostly Wholesale.

On the West Side of this Hill was the Parish-Church of St. Nicholas Olave. The Church was destroyed in the dreadful Fire of London, and not rebuilt; but the Parish is united unto St. Nicholas Cole-abbey.

More Southward is a very handsome square
Court, with three large Houses, now called Mig-ley's-court, from one of that Name inhabiting
there.

Five-foot-lane, so called, for that the West End was but five Foot broad. It hath its chief Entrance out of Thames-street, and with a turning Passage leads into Fish-street-hill. It hath another Passage out of Bread-street-hill, by St.
Nicholas Olave's Church-yard; and another into Old-fish-street, through Star-court, which is but small.

Fish-street-hill, a well inhabited Place, comes out of Old-fish-street, and runs down into Thames-street. On the East Side is Five-foot-lane, as afore said.

More Southward was the Parish-Church of St. Mary Mountbaw, or Mountbaut. It was destroyed in the Fire of London, and not rebuilt, the Parish being united to St. Mary Somerset; and the Ground on which it stood being inclosed for a Burial-Place for the Inhabitants.

Labour-in-vain-yard, a large Place, having at the upper End, on the North Side, a handsome Court, with private Houses; the Southern Part being taken up with Stabling, where it hath a Passage into Lambeth, or Lambert-hill. Dove-court, a handsome Place, adjoining to Labour-in-vain-yard. Bell-alley, long and ordinary, adjoining to Fish-street-hill.

But in Thames-street, over-against Broken-wharf, is seated the Parish-Church of St. Mary Somerset.

Lambert-hill, a Place well built, and inhabited by private House-keepers. Of this Hill, the West Side, about half Way, viz. unto Green-dragon-court, is in Castle-baynard's Ward, and all the rest is in this Ward. In which is Green-dragon-court, being now a Timber-yard, and has a Passage into Thames-street. On this Hill is Blacksmiths Hall, a good handsome Building; and the Alms-houses are in Castle-baynard's Ward, and there spoken of.

St. Peter's-hill, spoken of in Castle-baynard's Ward. In this there are but two Houses and the Church, which, before the Fire of London, (and destroyed by it) was but small, and is not rebuilt; but the Parish is united to St. Bennet Paul's-wharf near adjoining.

Old-fish street, a good open broad Street, well built, and inhabited chiefly by Fishmongers, from whom it took its Name. The North Side is in Bread-street Ward, and the South in this.

Here is seated the Parish-Church of St. Nicholas Cole-abbey.

Near St. Nicholas Cole-abbey, is Moor's-yard, indifferent. And beyond Fish-street-hill is Star-court, which is but small, and hath a Passage into Five-foot-lane.

Great Trinity-lane comes out of St. Thomas Apostle's, and runs Westward to Old-fish-street, a Place indifferently well built and inhabited; the South Side is only in this Ward, the North Side in Bread-street Ward.

Adjoining to the Lutheran Church, is a small Place called Swedish-court. And now more Eastward is Jack's-alley, narrow and mean; but this is in Vintry Ward.

Watch.

There are to watch at the several Stands in this Ward, every Night, a Constable, the Beadle, and forty Watchmen.

Jury.

The Jurymen returned by the Inquest for this Ward are to serve in the several Courts at Guildhall in the Month of October.

Government.

This Ward hath an Alderman, and six Common-Councilmen, nine Constables, eight Scavengers, thirteen Inquestmen, and a Beadle. It is taxed to the Fifteenth in London 20 l. and in the Exchequer at 19 l. 6 s. 2 d.

Alderman,
Common-Council-
men.

The Alderman is Marsh Dickinson, Esq; and the Common-Council-men are, Mr. George Nelson, Deputy; Mr. Richard Peers; Mr. Richard Belfon; Mr. Samuel Turner; Mr. Richard Speed; and Mr. John Rily.

Remarkable Things.

Parishes
and Churches.

The remarkable Things in this Ward are,

First, Three Parishes with Churches; as (1) St. Nicholas Cole-abbey, (2) St. Mary Somerset, (3) St. Michael Queen-bithe; And four Parishes without Churches; (1) The Parish of Trinity the Less, (2) St. Nicholas Olave's, (3) St. Mary Mounthaw, and (4) St. Peter Paul's-wharf: Of which in the Parochial History.

Halls.

Painter-Stainers-
hall.

Secondly, Here are two Halls of Companies:

(1) Painter-stainers Hall, which is situate in Little Trinity-lane, and is adorned with a handsome Screen, Arches, Pillars and Pilasters of the Corinthian Order, painted in Imitation of Porphyry, with gilt Capitals. The Pannels of Wainscot, and the Ceilings are embellished with great Variety of History and other Paintings, exquisitely performed; as, 1. The Portraiture of King Charles II. and his Queen Catharine, by Howfman. 2. The Fire of London. 3. Endymion
